4. What ſoul can be ſo frozen, as not to melt into anger hereat? What heart, having the leaſt ſpark of ingenuity, is not hot at this indignity offered to literature? I deny not, but that in this heap of Books there was much rubbiſh. Legions of lying Legends, good for nothing but fewell, whoſe keeping would have cauſed the loſſe of much pretious time, in reading them. I confeſſe alſo, there were many volumes full fraught with ſuperſtition, which notwithſtanding might be uſefull to learned men; except any will deny Apothecaries the priviledge of keeping poiſon in their ſhops, when they can make antidotes of them. But beſides theſe, what beautifull Bibles? rare Fathers? ſubtile School-men? uſefull Hiſtorians, antient, middle, modern? what painfull Comments were here amongſt them? what monuments of Mathematicks? all maſſacred together; ſeeing every book with a croſſe was condemned for Popiſh; with circles, for conjuring. Yea, I may ſay, that then holy Divinity was prophaned; Phyſick it ſelf, hurt; and a treſpaſſe, yea, a riot committed on the Law it ſelf. And, more particularly, the Hiſtory of former times, then, and there received a dangerous wound, whereof it halts at this day; and without hope of a perfect cure, muſt go a cripple to the grave.

Learning receiveth an incurable wound by the loſſe of books.

5. Some

No Anabapti-ſticall humour, but down-right ignorance the cauſe thereof.

5. Some would perſwade us, that in all this there was a ſmack, or taſt of Anabaptiſtical fury, which about this time began in Germany, where they deſtroyed the ſtately Libraries of Munſter, and Oſnabrude. Indeed, as the wicked tenants in the Goſpel, thought themſelves not ſafe in, and ſure of the vineyard, till they had killed the heire, that ſo the inheritance might be their own; ſo the Anabaptiſts conceived themſelves not in quiet poſſeſſion of their Anarchie, and ſufficiently eſtabliſhed therein, whilſt any learning did ſurvive (which in proceſſe of time might recover its right againſt them) and therefore they bent their brains to the final extirpation thereof. But I am more charitably inclined to conceive, that ſimple ignorance, not fretted & emboſſed with malice, or affected hatred to learning, cauſed that deſolation of Libraries in England: though perchance ſome there were, who conceived theſe books, as the [c] garment ſpotted with ſin, had contracted ſuch a guilt, being ſo long in the poſſeſſion of ſuperſtitious owners, that they deſerved as an anathema, to be conſigned to a perpetual deſtruction.

[c] Jude v. 23.

Sullen diſpoſitions cauſleſly agrieved.

6. Some will ſay, that herein I diſcover an hankering after the onions, and fleſh-pots of Egypt, and that the bemoaning the loſſe of theſe monuments, is no better than Lot's wives looking back, with a farewell-glance to the filthy City of Sodome. To ſuch, I proteſt my ſelf not to have the leaſt inclination to the favour of Monkery. But enough. For, I know, ſome back-friends of learning there be, that take it ill, that we have jogg'd them in this diſcourſe, and therefore we will let them alone to be ſetled quietly on the lees of their own ignorance, praying to God, that never good Librarie may lie at the mercy of their diſpoſal; leſt having the ſame advantage, they play the like prank, to the prejudice of Learning and Religion.

Many good bargains, or rather, cheap penny-worths, bought of Abbey-lands.

The profuſe gifts & grants of K. Henry.

IF ever the Poets fiction of a golden ſhoure rained into Danae her lap, found a morall or reall performance, it was now, at the diſſipation of Abbey-lands. And, though we will not give hearing, or belief in full latitude of his ſlanderous pen, that reports, how King Henry (when antient and diſeaſed, cholerick and curious in trifles) was wont to rewards ſuch as [d] ordered His ſkrine, or chaire, in a convenient diſtance from the fire, ſo as to pleaſe Him, with the Church of ſome Abbey, or lead of ſome Church. Yet it is certain, that in this Age, ſmall merits of Courtiers met with a prodigious recompenſe for their ſervice. Not onely all the cooks, but the meaneſt turn-broach in the King's kitchin, did lick his fingers. Yea, the King's ſervants, to the third and fourth degree, taſted of His liberality, it being but proportionable, that where the Maſter got the Manour in fee, his man under him ſhould obtain ſome long Leaſe of a Farme of conſiderable value.

[d] Sanders de Schiſ. Angl.

King Henry his engagement to liberality.

2. Indeed K. Henry (beſides His own diſpoſition to munificence) was doubly concerned to be bountifull herein. Firſt, in honour; for, ſeeing the Parliament with one breath had blown ſo much profit unto Him, and had with their ſuffrage confer'd the harveſt of Abbey-lands on the Crown; it was fitting that ſome (eſpecially the principal Advancers of the buſineſs) ſhould, with [e] Ruth, glean amongſt the ſheaves. Secondly, in policie; to make many, and great men, effectually ſenſible of the profit of this diſſolution, and ſo ingaged to defend it. Wherefore, as He took the greater flowers to garniſh His own Crown: ſo He beſtowed the leſſe buds to beautifie His Noble-mens Coronets. But, beſides theſe, He paſſed Abbey-lands in a fourfold nature to perſons of meaner quality.

[e] Ruth 2. 16.

How Mr. Champernoun got the Priorie of Saint Germanes.

3. Firſt, by free Gift. Herein take one ſtory of many. Maſter * John Champernoun, Sonne and Heire apparent of Sir Philip Champernoun, of Modbery in Devon, followed the Court, and by his pleaſant conceits wan good grace with the King. It hapned, two or three Gentlemen, the King's ſervants, and

* Cary's Survey of Cornwall, fol. 109.

and Mr. Champernoun's acquaintance, waited at a door where the King was to passe forth, with purpose to beg of His Highnesse a large parcell of Abbey-lands, specified in their Petition. Champernoun was very inquisitive to know their suit, but they would not impart the nature thereof. This while out comes the King, they kneel down, so doth Mr. Champernoun (being assured by an implicit faith, that Courtiers would beg nothing hurtfull to themselves) they preferre their Petition; the King grants it; they render Him humble thanks, and so doth Mr. Champernoun. Afterwards he requires his share, they deny it; he appeals to the King, the King avows His equall meaning in the Largesse. Whereupon, his companions were fain to allot this Gentleman the Priorie of S. German in Cornwall (valued at [g] two hundred fourty three pound and eight shillings of yearly rent; since, by him, or his heirs, sold to Mr. Eliot) for his partage. Here a dumb beggar met with a blinde giver, the one as little knowing what he asked, as the other what He granted. Thus King Henry made cursorie Charters, and in transitu transacted Abbey-lands. I could adde, how He gave a Religious house of some value, to Mistresse [illegible] for presenting Him with a dish of Puddings, which pleased His palate.

[g] Sped. But quære, whether he had all the land, or onely the site of the Priory.

4. Secondly, by Play. Whereat He lost many a thousand pound per annum. Once being at dice, He played with Sir Miles Patridge, (staking an hundred pounds against them) for [h] Jesus Bells, hanging in a Steeple not farre from S. Paul's in London, and as great, and tuneable as any in the City, and lost them at a cast. I will not (with some) heighten the guilt of this act, equal to that which cast lots on Christ's garments; but sure it is no sin to say, that such things deserv'd more serious and deliberate dispose.

How Sir Miles Patridge got Jesus bells.

[h] Stows Survey of London in Farringtonward within

5. Thirdly, by Exchange. To make these chops, none were frighted with the Kings power, but flattered into them, by the apprehension of their own profit. For, many lands of subjects, either naturally bald, or newly shaven of their woods, were commuted for Granges of Abbeys, which like Satyres, or Salvages, were all overgrown with trees and timber: besides other disadvantages, both for quantity and quality of ground, as enhaunced for old rent. Oh! here was the Royall Exchange.

Glaucus, and Diomedes his exchange.

6. Lastly, by sale at Under-rates. Indeed, it is beneath a Prince (enough to break His state, to stoop to each Virgate and rod of ground) Pedlar-like to higgle for a toy by retail; and all Tenants, and Chapmen, which contract with Kings, expect good bargains; yet Officers entrusted to manage the revenue of the Crown, ought not to behold it abused out of all distance, in such under-valuations. Except any will say, He is not deceived who would be deceived, and King Henry (for the reason aforesaid) connived at such bargains; wherein rich Meadow was sold for barren Heath, great Oaks for Fewell, and Farms for revenue passed for Cottages in reputation. But for farther instruction, we remit the Reader to that information [i] presented to Queen Elizabeth by a man in authority (though namelesse) of the severall frauds and deceipts offered the Crown in this kinde. But the motion rather drew odium on the Authour, than brought advantage to the Crown: partly, because of the number, and quality of persons concerned therein; and partly, because (after thirty years) the owners of Abbeys were often altered. And, though the chamber be the same, yet if the guests be a new company, it is hard for the host from them to recover his old arrearages. Yea, by this time (when the foresaid information was given in) the present possessors of much Abbey-land were as little allied to those, to whom King Henry granted them, as they, to whom the King first passed them, were of kin to the first Founders of those Monasteries.

Unconscionable under-sale of Abbey-lands.

[i] Weever's funerall Mon. pag. 125.

Of the actions of policie, pietie, charitie, and justice, done by King Henry the eighth, out of the revenues of dissolved Abbeys.

Good, as well as bad, must be observed in mixt actions.

WE would not willingly be accounted like those called the μωμοσκοποι amongst the Jewes, whose office it was, onely to take notice of the blots or blemishes, the defects and deformities in sacrifices. We would not weed King Henry's actions in His dissolving of Abbeys, so as onely to mark the miscarriages, and misdemeanous therein. Come we to consider, what commendable deeds this King did raise on the ruines of Monasteries.

K. Henry augmented the Crown-revenues.

2. First, He politickly increased the revenues of the Crown, and Dutchie of Lancaster (on which He bestowed the rich Abbey of Furneß in that County) with annexing much land thereto, and erecting the Court of Augmentations (whereof largely hereafter) for the more methodicall managing thereof; though (alas!) what the Crown possessed of Abbey-land, was nothing to what He passed away. Surely, had the revenues of Monasteries been entirely kept, and paid into the Exchequer, there to make an Ærarium sacrum, or Publick treasurie, it is questionable, whether the same had been more for the ease of the Subject, or use and honour of the Soveraigne.

Founded five new Bishopricks.

3. Secondly, He piously founded five Bishopricks de novo (besides one at Westminster which continued not) where none had been before. For, though antiently there had been a Bishops Seat at Chester for a short time, yet it was then no better than the Summer-house of the Bishop of Lichfield (onely during the life of one Peter living there) which now was solemnly made a Bishoprick for succession, and four others, namely,

Bishops See.	Diocesse assigned it.	Taken from the Bishoprick of
1. Oxford.	1. Oxford-shire.	1. Lincolne.
2. Bristoll.	2. Dorset, and some part of Glocester-shire.	2. Sarisbury.
3. Peterborough.	3. Northampton shire, and Rutland.	3. Lincolne.
4. Glocester.	4. Glocester-shire, the rest.	4. Worcester.
5. Chester.	5. Chester, Lancaster, and Richmond shire.	5. Lichfield, and York.

Such who honour Prelacy must acknowledge these new Foundations of the King's, for a worthy work. Those also of contrary judgment, will thus farre forth approve His act, because had He otherwise expended these Abbey-lands, and not continued them to our times in these new Bishopricks, they had not been in being, by their late sale, to supply the Common-wealth.

Monks places turned into Prebends.

4. Thirdly, where He found a Prior and Monks belonging to any antient Cathedral-Church, there He converted the same into a Dean and Prebendaries; as in

1. Canterbury.	3. Elie.	5. Worcester.	7. Duresme.
2. Winchester.	4. Norwich.	6. Rochester.	8. Carlile.

I dare not say, that He entirely assigned (though a good [a] Authour affirmeth it) all, or the most part of those Priorie-lands, to these His new foundations. However the expression of a late [b] Bishop of Norwich, is complained of, as uncivil, and untrue, that King Henry took away the sheep from that Cathedral, and did not restore so much as the trotters unto it.

a Godwin in Henry the 8. Anno 1539. Nothing was taken away.
b Dr. Montague.

Grammar-schools founded by Him.

5. Fourthly, He charitably founded many Grammar-schools (great need whereof in that Age in this Land) as in Canterbury, Coventry, Worcester, &c. allowing lowing liberall salaries to the Masters and Ushers therein, had they been carefully preserved. But sometimes the gifts of a bountifull Master shrink in the passage thorough the hands of a covetous Steward.

Hospitalls by Him conferr'd on London.

6. Fiftly, He charitably bestowed Gray Friers (now commonly called Christ-Church) and the Hospital of S. Bartholomew in London, on that City, for the relief of the poor thereof. For the death of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolke, His beloved Brother-in-Law, happ'ning the July before, so impressed King Henry with a serious apprehension of His own mortality (such the sympathy of tempers, intimacie of converse, and no great disparity of age betwixt them) that He thought it high time to bethink Himself of His end, and to doe some good work in order thereunto. Hereupon on the 13 of January following, Anno 1546. He bestowed the said Hospitals on the City; a gift afterwards confirmed, and enlarged by King Edward the sixt.

c Stows Survey of London. pag. 417.

7. Sixtly, He built and endowed the magnificent Colledge of Trinity, finished Kings-Colledge Chappell in Cambridge, and founded Professours places for Languages, Physick, Law, and Divinity, in both Universities; as in the proper place thereof shall hereafter largely appear.

Trinity College in Cambridge, and Professors places by Him endowed.

8. Seventhly, He employed John Leland, a most learned Antiquary, to perambulate, and visit the ruines of all Abbeys, and record the Memorables therein. It seems, though the buildings were destroyed, King Henry would have the builders preserved, and their memories transmitted to posterity. This task Leland performed with great pains, to his great praise, on the King's purse, who exhibited most bountifully unto him, as himself confesseth in these his Latine verses:

Leland employed by Him to survey, collect, and preserve Antiquities.

Antè suos Phœbus radios ostendere mundo Desinet, & claras Cynthia pulchra faces:
Ante fluet rapidum tacitis sine piscibus æquor,
Spinifer & nullam sentis habebit avem:
Antè sacræ quercus cessabunt spargere ramos,
Floráq, sollicitâ pingere prata manu:
Quàm, Rex dive, tuum labatur pectore nostro
Nomen, quod studiis, portus, & aura, meis.

The Sun shall sooner cease his shine to show,
And Moon deny her lamp to men below;
The rapid seas shall sooner fishless slide,
And bushes quite forget their birds to hide;
Great okes shall sooner cease to spread their bowers,
And Flora for to paint the meads with flowers,
Than Thou, Great King, shalt slip out of my breast,
My studies gentle gale, and quiet rest.

Pity is is, that Leland's worthy Collections were never made publick in print; and some, justly to be praised for care in preserving, may as justly be taxed for envy in ingrossing such monuments of Antiquity. But let us a little trace Leland's Itineraries, after he in writing had finished the same. First, his Collections came into the hand of Sir John Cheek, School-master, then Secretary to King Edward the sixt, leaving the same to Henry Cheek, his eldest son, Secretary to the Counsell Counsell in the North. Here our great Antiquary, who afterwards described Britain, got a sight, and made a good use thereof, it being most true, Si Leland. non laborâsset, Camdenus non triumphâsset. From Mr. Cheek (by what transactions I know not) four of Leland's Works came into the possession of William Burton, as he confesseth in his Description of [d] Leicester-shire, and by him were bestowed on the Publick Library at Oxford, where the Original remaineth, and scarce so many Copies of them as properly may be called some, are at this day in private mens possessions.

[d] Pag. 39, & 40.

9. This Leland, after the death of King Henry the eighth, his bountifull Patron, fell distracted, and so died; uncertain, whether his braines were broken with weight of worke, or want of wages, the latter more likely; because after the death of King Henry, his endevours met not with proportionable encouragement. By the way, we may sadly observe, that two of the best Scholars in this King's Reign (loved, and preferred by Him) died both mad, and bereft of their wits; Richard Pacie, Dean of S. Paul's, and this Leland. Which I mark not out of ill will to the dead, to lessen their memory amongst men; but of good will to the living, to greaten their gratitude to God. Especially to Scholars, that God may preserve them in a sound minde, both in the Apostles high sense, and in the common acception thereof. The rather, because the finer the string, the sooner, if overstrained, is it broken.

Read, and be thankfull. Godwin in Henry the 8. Anno 1525.

[e] 2 Tim. 1. 7.

10. He maintained many learned youths on great cost and charges, in all forraigne Courts, and Countreys. For, this was the fashion in His Reign, to select yearly one, or moe, of the most promising pregnancies out of both Universities, and to breed them beyond the seas on the King's exhibitions unto them. Sir Thomas [f] Smith, bred in Queens-Colledge in Cambridge, and afterward principal Secretary to Queen Elizabeth, was one of the last, educated in this manner. These young men proved afterwards the pick-locks of the Cabinet-Counsels of forraigne Princes, no King having better intelligence, than King Henry, from beyond the seas.

Intelligencers bred by Him beyond the seas.

[f] Cambd. Eliz. in An. 1577.

11. Lastly, He justly paid a great yearly summe of money to many Monks, and Nuns, during their lives: the manner and condition of which Pensions we will now at large relate.

Of the many and large Pensions constantly paid by King Henry, to Monks and Nuns, during their lives.

The good nature of K. Henry herein.

IT was in those daies conceived highly injurious, to thrust Monks and Nuns out of house and home, without assigning them any allowance for their subsistence. Alas! many of them dig they could not, and, to beg they were ashamed. Their fingers were, either too stiffe (by reason of their old age) to begin now to bow to a manual trade; or hands too soft (because of their tender breeding) to take pain in a laborious vocation. And, although there wanted not some to perswade the King, to out them without any maintenance (it being but just they should practice reall, who had professed seeming poverty) yet the King, better natur'd herein than some Courtiers, allowed, and duly paid, to some large, to most competent, to all certain annuities.

High injustice to detain promised pensions.

2. Indeed, there cannot be an higher piece of unjustice, than for a King, or State, publickly to promise pensions to necessitous persons, and never perform the same; so that poor people shall have some hundreds in common report, and not one peny in reall and effectuall payment. For, first, the grant raiseth and erecteth the spirits of such Pensioners for the present, which soon after (tyranny so to torture them) sink, and settle down on the non-performance thereof. Secondly, such expectations often make people proportion their present expences, according according to those their hopes, to their great damage and detriment, yea, sometimes to their utter undoing. Thirdly, such noise of pensions granted, takes off from them the charity of their kinred and friends, as needlesse to persons presumed able to subsist of themselves. Not to speak, how much it lessens the reputation of a State, rendring them justly censurable, either of indiscretion in granting pensions where not deserved, or injustice in not paying them when granted.

3. Yet all persons were not promiscuously capable of the King's pensions, but onely those who were qualified accordingly. Namely, first, such as at the dissolution of their Abbeys, were not preferred to any other dignity, or Benefice. By the way, this was a temptation to the King, and Chancellor, oft-times to preferre mean men (which formerly had been Monks, and Friers) to no mean Livings, because (beside the generall want of able Ministers) such Incumbents being so provided for, their pensions ceased, and the Exchequer was disburdened from future paying them any exhibition.

The first qualification of His Pensioners.

4. These pensions of the King were confirmed to the Monks and Nuns by his Letters Patents under the Broad Seal, and Registred in the Court of Augmentations: One Copie whereof we here insert, having seen some hundreds of them, all the same in essentialls, not conceiving it impertinent to translate the same, desiring the Lawyers not to laugh at us if we misse the Legall terms, whilst we hit the true meaning thereof:

A Copie of the Kings Letters Patents for Pensions.

HENRICUS Octavus, Dei gratia Angliæ et Franciæ Rex fidei defensor Dominus Hiberniæ & in terra supremum caput Anglicanæ Ecclesiæ. Omnibus ad quos præsentes littera pervenerint Salutem. Cum nuper Monasterium de Carthus de Hinton in Com' nostro Somer. jam dissolvatur, unde quidam Edmundus Horde tempore dissolutionis illius et diu antea Prior inde fuit; Nos volentes rationabilem annualem pensionem sive promotionem condignam eidem Edmundo ad victum exhibitionem & sustentationem suam melius sustinendum provideri. Sciatis igitur quod nos in consideratione præmissorum de gratia nostra speciali ac ex certa scientia & mero motu nostris per advisamentum & consensum Cancellarii & consilii Curiæ Augmentationum reventionum Coronæ nostræ, dedimus & concessimus, ac per præsentes damus & concedimus eidem Edmundo quandam annuitatem sive annualem pensionem quadragint' quatuor librar' sterlingorum, habend', gaudendum & annuatim percipiendum easdem quadraginta quatuor libras præfato Edmundo & assignatis suis à festo Annuntiationis beatæ Mariæ

HENRY the Eighth, by the Grace of God, King of England and France, Defender of the Faith, Lord of Ireland, and supreme Head of the English Church on earth. To all to whom Our present Letters shall come Greeting. Whereas the Monastery of the Carthusians of Hinton in Our County of Somerset is now lately dissolved, whereof Edmond Horde was Prior at the time of the dissolution thereof, and long before; We are willing that a reasonable Pension annuall, or sutable promotion should be provided for the said Edmond, the better to maintain and sustaine him in diet and maintenance. Know therefore, that Wee, in consideration of the premises, out of Our speciall Grace and favour, certaine knowledge, and Our meere motion, by the advice and consent of the Chancellour, and Counsell of the Court of Augmentations of the Revenues of Our Crown, Have given and granted, and by these presents doe give and grant to the same Edmond an annuity or yearly Pension of forty four pounds sterling: that the said forty foure pounds may bee had, enjoyed, or yearly received by the aforesaid Edmond, and his Assignes, from the Feast of the Annuntiation of the blessed Virgin Mary last past to the term and for the term of the life of the said Edmond, or untill

Mariæ virginis ultimo praterito ad terminum & pro termino vitæ ipsius Edmundi vel quousq; idem Edmundus ad unum vel plura Beneficia Ecclesiastica, sive aliam promotionem condignam clari annui valoris quadragint' quatuor librarum aut ultra per nos promotus fuerit, tam per manus Thesaurarii reventionum augmentationum Coronæ nostræ pro tempore existentis de Thesauro nostro in manibus suis de reventionibus prædictis remanere contingen' quam per manus receptor. exituum & reventionum dicti nuper Monasterii pro tempore existen' de eisdem exitibus & reventionibus ad festum Sancti Michaëlis Archangeli, & Anuntiationis beatæ Mariæ virginis, per æquales portiones. Et ulterius de uberiori gratia nostra, Dedimus & pro consideratione prædicta per præsentes concedimus præfato Edmundo Horde undecim libras sterlingorum habend. eidem Edmundo ex dono nostro per manus Thesaurarii prædicti de Thesauro prædicto vel per manus dicti Receptoris de exitibus & reventionibus manciorum terrarum & tenementorum dicti nuper Monasterii solvend'. Eo quod expressa mentio de vero valore annuo, Aut de certitudine præmissorum, sive eorum alicujus aut de aliis donis sive concessionibus per nos præfato Edmundo ante hac tempora fact' in præsentibus minime fact' existit, aut aliquo statuto actu ordinatione provisione, sive restrictione in contrarium inde habit', fact', ordinat' seu provis', aut aliqua alia re causa, vel materia quacunque in aliquo non obstante. In cujus rei testimonium has Literas vestras fieri fecimus patentes. Teste Ricardo Riche Milite apud Westmonasterium vicesimo septimo die Aprilis, anno Regni nostri tricesimo primo.

Per Cancellarium & concilium Curiæ Augmentationum Reventionum Coronæ Regiæ virtute warranti Regii.

Duke

till the said Edmond shall be preferred by Us to one or more Ecclesiasticall Benefices or other sutable Promotion of the cleer yearly value of forty foure pounds or upwards, as well by the hands of the Treasurer of the Augmentations of the Revenues of Our Crown for the time being, out of Our treasure, which shall chance to remain in his hands, of the Revenues aforesaid; as from the Receiver of the profits and revenues of the said late Monastery for the time being, out of the said profits and Revenues at the feast of Saint Michael the Arch-angel, and the Anuntiation of the blessed Virgin Mary, by equall portions. And furthermore of Our more plentiful Grace, We have given, and for the consideration aforesaid by these presents doe grant to the aforesaid Edmond Horde eleven pounds sterling, that the said Edmond may have it from Our gift by the hands of Our foresaid Treasurer of Our foresaid Treasure, or by the hands of Our foresaid Receiver to be paid out of the profits and Revenues of the Manours, Lands, and Tenements of the said late Monastery.

any Statute, Act, Ordinance, promission, or restriction to the contrary, had, made, ordained, or provided, or any other matter, cause, or thing whatsoever in any wise notwithstanding. In testimony whereof We have made these Our Letters Patents, witnesse Richard Rich Knight, at Westminster, the twenty seventh day of April, in the one and thirtieth of Our Reign.

Duke

By the Chancellor and Councell of the Court of Augmentations of the Revenues of the Crown by virtue of the King's Warrant.

See we here the payment to this Prior consisted of two Summes of several natures or conditions: Namely,

1. The forty four pounds being properly the Pension paid yearly unto him.

2. The additionall eleven pounds, granted with an alterius, paid but once as advance-money, to fit him with necessaries at his departure out of the Covent.

This is observable in all the Parents I have seen, That constantly the King's gratuity for their vale (some small fractions excepted) bears the proportion of a fourth part of their yearly Pension.

What Church Livings were inconsistent with Pensions.

5. Suppose then this our Prior preferred to a Church Dignity, or Living, amounting very neer, but not to the full value of forty four pounds yearly, this did not avoid his Pension; but that he might hold it and his Living together. Wherefore, as it was the desire and endevour of every Monk so advanced, to beat down the value of his Church-Living as low as might be (thereby to render himself capable of it and his Pension) so was it the proper work of the King's Officers in the Augmentation Court truly to state the valuation of the Livings of such Pensioners, that the Crown might not be defrauded. Where, by the way, I conceive Livings were estimated not according to the favourable rates in the King's Book (where few of forty four pounds per annum) but according to the ordinary value as they were worth to be let and set in that Age.

A Quære propounded.

6. Here faine would I be satisfied from some Learned in the Lawes, That whereas provision is made in this Patent for the Prior to enjoy his Pension untill per nos by the King's self, or His under-Officers, he was preferred to promotion of equall value, whether or no this Pension determined, if not the King, but some inferior Patron provided such preferment for him. Seeing in a generall sense all may be said, presented by the King, as Patron Paramount of the Church of England, who by virtue of His Law have institution and induction into any Ecclesiasticall promotion.

Seniority in Covents an advantage.

7. That effectuall passage is inserted in all Patents of Abbots, Priors, and Monks, that they were in the Covent Diu antea, Long before the Dissolution thereof. Otherwise many young folk who lately came in, even barely went out, without any Pensions. Such Novices and Probationers, whose Coules came but yesterday out of the Drapers shop, having youth and strength to provide for themselves, were left to the choice of their own calling, without any other annuity allowed them.

Many Pensions mount to much money.

8. Their Pensions, though seeming but small, being many in number, made a deep hole in the King's revenue, insomuch that He received from some Houses but small profits de claro untill the said Pensions were extinguished: As will appear (guesse Hercules from his Foot) by comparing the Profits arising from, with the Pensions allotted to the Monks in the aforesaid Priory of Hinton in Somersetshire.

Edmond Hord Prior, his Pension 44 li. his Gratuity 11 li.

Monks.	Pensions. li.	s.	d.	Gratuities. li.	s.	d.	Monks.	Pensions. li.	s.	d.	Grat. li.	s.	d.
Thomas Fletcher	6	13	4	1	13	4	William Reynold	6	13	8	1	13	4
William Burford	6	13	4	1	13	3	Robert Savage	6	13	4	1	13	3
Hugh Laycocke	8	00	0	2	00	0	Will: Robinson	2	00	0	0	10	0
Robert Frye	6	13	4	1	13	4	Jo: Chamberlaine	6	13	4	1	13	4
Jo: Bachcroft	8	00	0	2	00	0	William Coke	6	13	4	1	13	4
Robert Russell	2	00	0	0	10	0	James Marble	6	13	4	1	13	4
Robert Lightfoot	2	00	0	0	10	0	Roger Legge	2	00	0	0	10	0
Robert Nolinge	6	13	4	1	13	4	Hen: Bourman	6	13	4	1	13	4
Henry Gurney	6	13	4	1	13	4	John Calert	2	00	0	0	10	0
Thomas Hellyer	6	13	4	1	13	4	Robert Stamerdon	6	13	4	1	13	4
Nicholas Baland	6	13	4	1	13	4

The total sum of yearly Pensions li. 163 s. 6 d. 8 The total sum of Grat. li. 40 s. 16 d. 9

Now whereas the Priory of Hinton, at the dissolution thereof, was valued at no more than two * hundred sixty two pounds twelve shillings; if the aforesaid summe of yearly Pensions be thence deducted, the clear remainder to the King was but ninety nine pounds five shillings four pence. But the Crown had a double advantage: One, that Priory-Lands were lasting, whilst Pensions expired with Monks lives: and the other, that the Pensions were but bare Penny-Rent, whilst Abbey-Lands were lowly rated farre beneath their true valuation.

* Speed in his Catalogue of religious Houses, pag. 707.

9. Now because our hand is in, and I for the present can make use of an Authentick Manuscript (once Henry Baron Hunsdon's, Lord Chamberlain) kindly communicated to me by a worthy * friend of all the Pensions in Somerset-shire, it will not be amisse to exemplifie such as were allotted to the severall Abbots and Priors therein.

The Pensions of the Abbots in Somerset.

* Mr. Edward Pepis of the Temple.

Place.	Abbot.	Pension. li.	s.	d.	Gratuity. li.	s.	d.
Athelnye.	R. Hamlyn	50	00	00	the Prebend of Sutton.
Briston.	Jo: Ely	80	00	00	20	00	00
Keynsham.	Jo. Stoneston	60	00	00	00	00	00

Place.	Prior.	Pension. li.	s.	d.	Gratuity. li.	s.	d.
Bath.	William Gibby	08	00	00	an House in Bath.
Montacute.	R. Whitlocke *	80	00	00	20	00	00
Taunton.	W. Williams	60	00	00	30	00	00
Witham	Jo. Michell	33	06	08	08	06	08

* Besides the Capitol Messuage in East Chynock.

Place.	Master.	Pension. li.	s.	d.	Gratuity. li.	s.	d.
Bridgwater.	Ro. Walshe	33	06	08	16	13	04
Wells.	Ric. Clarkeson	12	00	00	00	00	00

These two last were Hospitalls.

The aforesaid Book reacheth not Bristoll, because not properly in Somerset-shire, but a County Incorporate by it self. As for Whiting, late Abbot of Glassenbury, he was executed for a Traytour, and so his Pensions paid. No mention therein of the Prior of Muchelnye, whose place may be presumed void by his death, or he otherwise preferred.

Pensions go by favour.

10. We may observe great inequality in these Pensions, not measured as the Jewes Manna by one and the same Homer, but increased or diminished: 1. According to the wealth of the house dissolved. For where more profit accrued to the King by the suppressions, their larger Pensions were allowed to the Prior or Monk thereof. 2. According to the merits of the man. 3. According to his age and impotency needing relief. Lastly, and chiefly according as the Parties were befriended by the King's Officers in the Augmentation-Court; wherein as in all other Courts, favour ever was, is, and will be in fashion.

Largest Pensions allotted the Hospitallers.

11. But of all Pensions, the largest in proportion, and strongest in conveyance (as passed not as the rest by Letters Patents, but by Act of Parliament) were those assigned to the late Lord Prior, and those of the Order of the Knights Hospitalars. These being men of high birth and honourable breeding; The King no lesse politickly than civilly thought fit to enlarge their allowance (a main motive which made them so quietly to surrender their strong and rich Hospitals) as in the printed * Statute doth appear.

* An. 32 Hen. 8. cap. 24.

	li.	s.	d.
To Sir William Weſton Lord Prior	1000	00	00
To Sir Jo: Rawſon *	666	13	04

*He was Prior of Kilman in Ireland.

Confreres.	Penſions. li.	s.	s.	Confreres.	Penſions. li.	s.	d.
Clement Weſt	200	00	00	Edmund Huſe	066	13	04
Jo: Sutton	200	00	00	Ambroſe Cave.	066	13	04
Richard Poole	133	06	08	Rich: Brooke	066	13	04
Jo: Rawſon	133	06	08	Cuthbert Leighton	060	00	00
Gyles Ruſſell	100	00	00	Thomas Copledike	050	00	00
Geo: Aylmer	100	00	00	Edw: Brown	050	00	00
Edw: Belnigham	100	00	00	William Tirell	050	00	00
Thomas Pemberton	080	00	00

To Anthony Rogers, Oſwald Maſſingberd, &c. ten pounds a piece yearly to be paid, as all the former Penſions, during their naturall lives. In the ſame Statute it is provided, that John Mapleſden, Clerk, Sub-Prior of the ſaid Hoſpital; William Ermſteed, Clerk, Maſter of the Temple in London; Walter Limſey, and John Winter, Chaplains there, ſhould every one of them have, receive, and enjoy, (the ſaid Maſter and two Chaplains of the Temple doing their duties and ſervices there during their lives) all ſuch Manſion-houſes, ſtipends, wages, with all other profits of money in as large and ample manner as they were accuſtomed to doe.

12. No mention (as in other Patents) of any Gratuities in ready moneys given unto them, which probably caſt into their Penſions, made them mount ſo high. As for the thouſand pounds yearly allowed Sir Will: Weſton, not one peny thereof was paid, he dying the next day (the Houſe of his Hoſpitall * and of his Earthly Tabernacle being diſſolved both together) Soul-ſmitten with Sorrow, Gold, though a great Cordial, being not able to cure a Broken heart.

Stout hearts can bear the leſſe grief.

*Weever, Fun. Mon. p. 460.

13. We will here preſent a Female-Patent of the Penſion allowed to the Abbeſſe of Buckland, though in all eſſentials very like unto the Former.

The Patent for a Penſion to the Prioreſſe of Buckland.

HENRICUS Octavus, Dei gratia &c. Cum nuper Monaſterium de Buckland in Com' noſtro Som' jam diſſolvatur, unde quædam Katherina Bowſer tempore diſſolutionis illius & dicti antea Priorina inde fuit. Nos volentes rationabilem annualem Penſionem ſive promotionem condignam eidem Katherinæ ad victum exhibitionem & ſuſtentationem ſuam melius ſuſtinendum provideri. Sciatis igitur quod nos in conſiderationem premiſſorum de Gratia noſtra ſpeciali ac ex certa ſcientia & mero motu noſtris per adviſamentum & conſenſum Cancellarii & Concilii Curiæ Augment' reventionum Coronæ noſtræ. Dedimus & conceſſimus ac per præſentes damus & concedimus eidem Katherinæ quandam annuitatem ſive annualem Penſionem quinquaginta librarum ſterlingorum. Habendum, gaudendum & annuatim percipiendum eaſdem

HENRY the Eighth, by the Grace of God, &c. Whereas the late Monaſtery of Buckland, in Our County of Somerſet, is now lately diſſolved; whereas one Katherine Bowſer was Prioreſſe at the time of the diſſolution thereof, and long before. We are willing that a reaſonable Penſion annual, or ſutable promotion ſhould be provided for the ſaid Katherine, the better to ſuſtein her in diet and maintenance: Know therefore, that We in conſideration of the premiſes of Our ſpeciall Grace and certain Knowledge, and Our own meer motion by the advice and conſent of the Chancellor and Counſell of the Court of Augmentations of the Revenues of Our Crown, Have given and granted, and by theſe preſents doe give and grant unto the ſaid Katherine a certain annuity or annuall Penſion of fifty pounds ſterling, That the ſaid dem quinquaginta libr' præfat' Katherinæ & assignatis suis à festo Annuntiationis beatæ Mariæ virginis ultimo præterito, ad terminum vitæ ipsius Katherinæ tam per manus Thesaurarii nostri Reventionum augmentationum Coronæ nostræ prædict' pro tempore existen' de Thesauro nostro in manibus suis de reventionibus prædict' remanere contingen' quam per manus Receptor' Exituum & reventionum dict' nuper Maner' pro tempore existen' de eisdem exit' & reventionibus ad festum Sancti Michaëlis Archangeli & Annuntiationis beatæ Mariæ virginis per æquales portiones solvendum. Et ulterius de uberiori Gratia nostra, Damus & pro consideratione prædicta per præsentes concedimus præfatæ Katherinæ viginti quinque libr' sterlingor' Habend' eidem Katherinæ ex dono nostro per manus dict' Thesaurarii de Thesauro prædicto, vel per manus dict' Receptoris de exitibus & reventionibus Maneriorum terrarum & tenementorum dicti nuper Monasterii solvend'. Eo quod expressa mentio, &c. In cujus Rei testimonium, &c.

Teste Richardo Riche Milite apud Westmonasterium decimo die Maii, Anno Regni nostri tricesimo primo.

Katherine or her assigns, may have, enjoy, or yearly receive the said fifty pounds from the Feast of the Annuntiation of the blessed Virgin Mary last past for the term of the life of the said Katherine, as well by the hands of Our Treasurer of the Augmentation of the Revenue of Our Crown for the time being out of Our Treasure which shall happen to remain in his hands out of the Revenues aforesaid, as by the hands of the Receiver of the profits and revenues of the said late Monastery for the time being out of the said profits and revenues at the feast of S. Michael the Archangel, and the Annuntiation of the blessed Virgin Mary, to be paid by equal portions. And furthermore of Our more plentiful Grace, and for the considerations aforesaid, We give, and by these presents doe grant to the aforesaid Katherine twenty five pounds sterling for the said Katherine to have of Our proper gift by the hands of Our foresaid Treasurer out of Our Treasury aforesaid, or by Our said Receiver to be paid out of the profits & revenues of the Manours, Lands, and Tenements of the said late Monastery, because that expresse mention, &c. In witnesse whereof, &c.

Witnesse Rich: Rich Knight, at Westminster, the tenth of May, in the thirty first year of Our Reign.

There are but two considerable differences betwixt this and the former Patent: 1. Whereas Pensions allotted to Priors and Monks were conditionall, as determinable upon their preferment to Ecclesiasticall promotion of equall value; this to the Prioresse (as to all Nuns) was absolute for term of life, Women being not capable of any Church-advancement. Secondly, whereas the Gratuity allotted to Monks generally, amounted to a fourth part of their Pension; this to the Prioresse was double as much as a just moyety thereof. Whether this proceeded from the King's courtesie to the weaker Sex, or because Mundus Muliebris, there was such a world of Tackling required to Rigge and Lanch them forth to shift for themselves in a Secular life.

Youth and strength accompted a pension to it self.

14. But as for ordinary Nuns, we finde that four pounds Pension, and forty shillings Gratuity, was generally their provision, and that onely for those qualified with a Diu antea, that they had been in the Covent a long time before the dissolution thereof, otherwise I meet with no Portions to those that lately were entred into the Houses, being outed, and left at large, to practice the Apostles * precept, I will that the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, &c.

* 1 Tim. 5. 14.

15. The

15. The vivacity of some of these Pensioners is little lesse than a Miracle, they survived so long. For though none will say, they lived out of despite to anger the King to pay their Pensions, surely none so highly affected Him as to die in duty to exonerate His Exchequer of their Annuity. Isabell Sackvile, Lady Prioresse of Clarkenwell, is an eminent instance of longevity in this kinde. For, Methusalah-Pensioners.

1. In the one and twentieth of King Henry the seventh, she was a * Nun in Clarkenwell-Priory, when a Legacy was bequeathed her as Niece by William Sackvile Esquire, and must be then conceived fifteen years of age.
2. She was the last Prioresse of Clarkenwell, at the dissolution thereof.
3. She died in the twelfth of Queen Elizabeth, (as appears by her Epitaph in Clarkenwell-Church) and by Computation must be allowed Eighty years of age.

* To be seen in the pedegree of the Earl of Dorset, Weever fun. Mon. pag. 429.

But farre older was that Monk or Nun (I am * assured of the Story, not the Sex) to whom Living in or neer Hampshire, Mr. John Pymme, then an Officer in the Exchequer, paid the last payment of his Pension about the fift year of King James.

* Attested by Mr. Pymme's kinsman to Godfrey Bp. of Glocester. See his printed Paper.

SECTION VI.

DOMINO
THOMÆ TREVOR Juniori, Equiti Aurato.

MUlti sunt præproperi Hæredes, qui nimiâ parentum vivacitate cruciantur. Hi languidâ expectatione macrescunt, postquam Rura Paterna spe vanâ devoraverant.

At Tu è contra, Venerandi Patris tui Canitiem (si fieri posset) immortalem reddere conaris, cum eam perpetuo Obsequio, humilime colas, quo, efficacius Kardiacum, ad Senectutem ejus elongandam nequit confici.

Non in Patris, sed Mundi senescentis Annos inquiris, cum Historiâ plurimum delecteris, cujus ope, si Præterita cum Præsentibus conferantur, conjectura de Futuris statui potest, quo nomine, hoc opus nostrum tibi non ingratum fore confido.

Deus Te, Lectissimâmq; Conjugem beat prole patrizante, non tam privato commodo, quam Bono Publico, ne Respublica tantarum virtutum Hæredi destituatur.

Of the Erection, Officers, Use, Continuance, and Abolishing of the Court of Augmentation.

Augmentation Court when erected.

DUring the scuffling for Abbey-land, in the 27 year of King Henry the eighth, the Court of Augmentation was set up by Act of Parliament to be a Court of Record, and to have an authentick Great Seal besides a Privie Seal, and several Officers appointed for management thereof, with large fees allowed unto them. I finde the same exemplified in a fair Vellum Manuscript, which lately was Archbishop Parkers; since the Lord Cokes, whence I transcribed as followeth.

Sir Rich: Sackvile, Chancellor, three hundred pounds yearly Fee, forty pounds Diet, and six shillings eight pence for every Seale.

Sir Jo: Williams, Treasurer, three hundred and twenty pounds Fee.

Sir Will: Cavendish, Treasurer, of the King's Chamber, one hundred pounds Fee, one hundred pound Dyet, and ten pounds Boat-hire.

Sir

Sir Thomas Moyle } Generall Receivers, to each two hundred pounds Fee, and Sir Walter Mildmay } twenty pounds Diet.
Rich: Goodrich Attorney, one hundred pounds Fee, and twenty marks Diet.
Jo: Gosnall Solicitor, eighty pound Fee, Diet twenty marks.

Besides Masters, and Surveyors of the woods, Clerks, Keepers of Records, Ushers, Messengers, Assistants, Carpenter and Mason to the Court, Auditors, Receivers, Surveyors, Woodwards for every County, the totall summe of their Fees yearly amounting unto Seven thousand two hundred forty nine pounds ten shillings and three pence. This Catalogue by the persons mentioned therein, seems taken towards the end of Edward the sixt, when the Court began to decline.

The imployment of the Officers in this Court.

2. It belonged unto this Court to order, survey, and govern, sell, let, set all Manours, lands, tenements, rents, services, tythes, pensions, portions, advowsons, patronages, and all hereditaments formerly belonging to Priories, and since their dissolution to the Crown, as in the printed Statute * more largely doth appear. All persons holding any Leases, Pensions, Corodies, &c. by former grants from the Covents came into the Court, produced their Deeds, and upon examination of the validity thereof had the same allowed unto them. And although providence for themselves, and affection to their kindred, prompted many Fryers and Covents foreseeing their tottering condition to antedate Leases to their friends just at the dissolution, yet were they so frighted with fear of discovery, that very few frauds in that kinde were committed. The Court was very tender in continuing any Leases upon that least legall consideration.

* An. 27 Hē. 8. cap. 27.

Motives for the dissolution of this Court.

3. But after some continuance of this Court, the King's urgent occasions could not stay for the slow coming in of money from the yearly Revenues of Abbey-land, insomuch that He was necessitated to sell out-right a great part of those Lands for the present advance of Treasure, and thereby quickly was the Court of Augmentation diminished. The King therefore took into consideration to dissolve it as superfluous, wherein the Officers were many, their Pensions great, Crown profits thereby small, and Causes therein depending few, so that it was not worth the while to keep up a Mill to grinde that grist, where the Toll would not quit cost. It was therefore resolved to stop up this by-stream, that all causes therein should run in the antient channell of the former Courts of Westminster.

Finally, dissolved in the first year of Queen Mary.

4. Indeed in the 7 of King Edw. 6. a doubt did arise amongst the Learned in the Laws, whether the Court of Augmentation, the Commencement whereof was first had by authority of Parliament, would legally be dissolved, extinguished, and repealed by the King's Letters Patents? And the Officers thereof (wonder not if they stickled for their own concernments) did zealously engage on the Negative. Wherefore it was enacted by Parliament, That the King, during His naturall life, had present power by His Letters Patents to alter, unite, annex, reduce, or dissolve any of those new erected Courts by His own Letters Patents: And the same Act was confirmed in the first year of Queen Mary, when the short-lived Court of Augmentation was dissolved, as which, from the birth thereof 1535, to the extinguishing 1553, survived but eighteen years.

The Lands of Chanteries, free Chappels, and Colledges dissolved.

Prodigality alwaies wanteth.

King Henry the eighth his expences like sandy ground, suddenly suckt up the large shower of Abbey-lands, and little signe or shew was seen thereof: yea, such the parching thirst of his pressing occasions, that still they called aloud for more moysture, for whose satisfaction the Parliament in the 38 year of His Reign put the Lands of all Colledges, Chanteries, and free Chappels in His Majesties full dispositon.

King Henry's three meals on Abbey-lands.

2. This King made three meals, or (if you will) one meal of three courses on Abbey-lands, besides what Cardinal Wolsey (the King's Taster herein) had eat before-hand, when assuming smaller Houses to endow his two Colledges.

1. When Religious Houses under two hundred pounds a yeare — Anno 1535
2. When all greater Monasteries — 1538
3. When Colledges, Chanteries, and Freee Chappels — 1545 were granted to Him by the Parliament.

The first of these were most in Number; the second, richest in Revenue; the third, in this respect better than both the former, because they being spent and consumed, these alone were left to supply His occasions.

The Universities fears.

3. The Universities were more scared than hurt at the news of all Colledges put into the King's disposall. They knew that Barbarisme it self had mischievous naturall Logick to make those Generall words reach farre, especially if covetousnesse of some Officers might be permitted to stretch them: whereupon, they * made their humble and seasonable addresses to the King for His favour.

* Lord Herbert in H. 8. p. 537.

Happily turned into joy and thankfulnesse.

4. None ever robbed the Muses who were well acquainted with them. King Henry had too much Scholarship to wrong Scholars. Either Universfity was so farre from being impaired that both were improved by His bounty with Pensions for the places of their Publick Professors; yea, the faireſt Colledge in either University in effect acknowledges Him for its Founder.

What Chanters &c. were.

5. Such Colledges as were Hives of Drones (not of Bees, industriously advancing Learning and Religion) were now intended to be suppressed with free Chappels and Chanteries.

1. Chanteries consisted of Salaries allowed to one or more Priests to say daily Masse for the Soules of their deceased Founders and their Friends. These were Adjectives, not able to stand of themselves, and therefore united (for their better support) to some Parochial, Collegiate, or Cathedrall Church.
2. Free Chappells, though for the same use and service, were of a more substantiall and firm constitution, as independent of themselves.
3. Colledges were of the same nature with the former, but more considerable in bigneſse, building, number of Priests and endowments.

But the ensuing death of King Henry the eighth, for a time, preserved the life of these Houses, which were totally demolished by Act of Parliament in the first year of King Edward the sixt.

Two Statutes on different considerations.

6. One may observe, that the two Statutes made for the dissolving of these Houses, were bestowed on different considerations.

Statute 37 Hen. 8. cap. 4.

Chargeth Misdemeanors on the Priests and Governours of the aforesaid Chanteries, that of their own Authority without the assent of their Patrons, Donours, or Founders, they had let Leases for Lives, or term of years of their said Lands, and some had suffered Recoveries, levied Fines, and made Feoffments and other Conveyances: Contrary to the will and purposes of their Founders, to the great contempt of Authority Royall.

Wherefore in consideration of His Majesties great costs and charges in His present Warres with France and Scotland, the Parliament put Him and His Successors for ever, in the reall and actuall possession of such Chanteries, &c.

Statute 1 Edwardi 6. cap. 14.

Mentioneth the Superstitious uses of these Houses, considering that a great part of Errors of Christian Religion hath been brought into the mindes and estimation of men by reason of the Ignorance of their very true and perfect Salvation through the death of Christ, and by devising and fancying vaine opinions of Purgatory and Masses satisfactory for the dead.

Wherefore, that the said Lands might be altered for better uses, viz: Erecting Grammar-Schools, augmentation of the Universities, and provision for the Poor: the Parliament bestowed them on the King, by His Councell, to dispose of the same accordingly.

7. To

Forty seven Chanteries in Saint Paul's Church, London.

7. To begin with Chanteries, their exact number in all England is unknown. But, if Hercules may, by a Mathematician, be measured from his foot, a probable conjecture may be made of them, from those which we finde founded in the Cathedral Church of S. Paul's in London. For, on the nineteenth of April, in the second year of King Edward the sixt, a Certificate was returned by the Dean and Chapter of Paul's to His Highnesse Commissioners appointed for that purpose, affirming, That they had forty seven Chanteries within their Church. We will onely instance in the odde seven, enough to acquaint us with the nature of all the rest.

Chauntrie of	Founded by	For	To pray for	In S. Pauls Church,	Present Incumbents.	Revenue.
1. John Beauchamp Knight.	Himself in his life-time.	One Chaplain.	The said Sir Ia. and the souls of the Progenitors of the Earle of Warwick.	Next to the Founders Tomb.	Sir Richard Strange.	Sum. tot.	lib. 11	s. 08	d 08
						Deduct.	09	06	08
						Remain.	02	18	08
2. Sir John Poulney, Knight, Citizen of London.	His own last Will and Testament, in 23 of Edward the third.	Three Priests.	His own, and all Christian souls	In a Chappell by him built on the North side of the Church.	1. Sir Fulk Wiseny. 2. Sir John Richardson. 3. Sir John Blosse.	Sum. tot.	47	09	04
						Deduct.	39	17	08
						Remain.	07	12	06
3. John Duke of Lancaster.	Ralph Nevill, E. of Westmerland; the E. of Worcester, Executors to the Duke, licensed by King Hen. 4. in the 13 of His Reign.	Two Chaplains	King Henry the fourth then living, and the soule of the aforesaid Duke of Lancaster.	In a Chappel by them built on the North of the Church	1. Sir Rich. Smith. 2. Sir Roger Gherlton.	Sum. tot.	20	00	09
						Deduct.	16	06	08
						Remain.	03	13	01
4. Walter Sherington.	The Executors of his Testament licensed by Ki. Henry the sixt, in the 24 of his Reign.	Two Chaplains Englishmen, and Graduates.	The good estate of King Henry the sixt, the soul of Walter Sherington.	In a Chappel built for him at the North doore of the Church.	Mr. Thomas Bavenus. Senex. Mr. John Wyny.	Sum. tot.	20	00	00
						Deduct.	18	00	00
						Remain.	02	00	00
5. Thomas More, sometime Dean of the Church.	His Executors.	Three Priests.	The soul of the said More, and others.	In the Chappel of S. Anne.	Sir Richard Gates. Sir Robert Garret. Sir Morrice Griffith.	Sum. tot.	67	00	06
						Deduct.	55	00	11 ½
						Remain.	12	05	00 ½
6. Walter Thorpe.	His Executors.	One Chaplain	The soul of the said Thorpe.	At S. John's Altar.	Sir Richard Nelson.	Sum. tot.	11	16	00
						Deduct.	05	04	08 ½
						Remain.	06	11	03 ½
7. Richard Fitz James Bishop of London.	Henry Hill, Citizen and Haberdasher in the 13 of Henry 8.	One Chaplain.	Richard Fitz James, Bishop of London.	At S. Paul's Altar.	Sir John Hill.	Sum. tot.	14	06	08
						Deduct.	14	06	08
						Remain.	00	00	00

Know Reader, I am beholding for my exact intelligence herein, to my worthy friend Mr. Thomas Hanson, who not onely lent much light to my lamp, out of choice Records (some in his possession, moe in his custody) but also hath given much oyle thereunto, in his bountifull encouraging of my endevours. It seems the Chapter would not goe to the cost of true Arithmetick, some of the summes being not rightly deducted; whose mistakes I chose rather to follow, than to vary any whit from the Originall.

Chanteries when they began by Royall licenſe.

8. Observe in these Chanteries, some were not, some were licensed by the King. For, before the Statute of Mortmain, made by King Edward the third, to be able and willing was all the licence, requisite in any to found a Chantery. Since which time a Charter must be obtained from the King, to passe lands of such nature and and value, to Persons so qualified. Observe, (I call it the religious complement, or mannerly devotion of those daies) that the Chantery-Priests (whosoever their Founders were) prayed first for the good estate of that King living, and His soul after death, who first granted leave and license for that foundation.

The Altar in S. Paul's scarce to be seen for Altars.

9. See how the Church of Saint Paul was be-Altared in that Age, wherein we finde no fewer than fourteen, with their several dedications, viz.

The Altar of
1. The Trinitie.
2. The Virgin Marie.
3. Michael the Arch-angel.
4. The Apostles.
5. S. Andrew.
6. S. John.
7. S. Paul.
8. S. Thomas.
9. Mary Magdalene.
10. Martha, and Mary Magdalene.
11. S. Erkenwald.
12. S. Chad.
13. S. Radigund.
14. S. Silvester.

And it is observable, that almost every one of these forty and seven Chanteries, founded in S. Paul's Church, had their Priest officiating either in severall Chappels, or at severall Altars, probably not to disturb each other in their private celebrations. But finde not any Chantery-Priests affigned to doe service at the high Altar indeed; either, because that place was reserved as proper to the Dignitaries of the Cathedral, or because the solemnity and merit thereof was equally extensive to all souls in generall, unfit to be confined to any particular parties deceased, how great soever.

Moe Sirs, than Knights.

10. Such Priests as have the addition of Sir before their Christian-name, were men not graduated in the Universfity, being in Orders, but not in Degrees; whilst others entituled Masters, had commenced in the Arts. Note, that generally, Founders of Chanteries preferred Priests not beneficed to those places, as best at leisure constantly to attend the same. Nor did their dead Founders so ingrosse the devotion of those Priests, but that by general and special Obits for other men, Procession-pence, and other perquisites, they much bettered their maintenance. Single Priests commonly had the greatest Salaries (more in proportion than when others were joyned with them in the same Society) because tied to daily duty, having none by turns to relieve them, and the greater worke deserved the greater wages.

Deductions out of Chantery revenues.

11. Many Deductions and Resolutions were made by the Dean and Chapter, out of the lands wherewith every Chantery was endowed, besides the Salarie paid to the Chaplains, as for quit-rents, and tenths to the King, pensions to Choristers, &c. But one generall expence was for an Anniversary Potation (seldome exceeding ten shillings) founded, as it seems, on Job's words, Job 4. as Bellarmine * citeth the Chapter without Verse, Panem tuum, & vinum tuum super sepulturam justi constitue: Put thy bread, and thy wine upon the sepulture of the just man: But no such words appear in the place alledged, though some such like are found in the fourth of * Tobit: Where, notwithstanding, no mention of wine, which the Jesuite adds of his own, that it might not be a drie (as some since have added wax, that it might not be a dark) feast. Bread, wine, and wax, being the essentialls of every Potation. The charges of an Anniversary Obit was also deducted, whereof forty shillings the market-price; though some were so free they gave more, and some so favoured, they had them for lesse.

* De Purgator. lib. 1. cap. 3. pag. 1375. edit. Lugduni An. 1587.
* Ver. 17.

Charitable swallowed with superstitious use.

12. Some Deductions were made by the will of the Founders, to uses meerly charitable, and no whit superstitious, out of the surplusage of the Chantery-lands (the Priest, or Priests therein first paid) as to the necessary relief of many poor people, and breeding of Scholars in the Universities. But, as the Stork in the fable, found amongst the Cranes in destroying the corn of the husband-man, in vain pleaded his own piety to his parents, being kill'd for company-sake with those birds amongst whom he was caught: so it is more than suspitious, that these pious uses were utterly extinguished at the suppression of Abbeys; to teach mens charities hereafter, (if it be not a lesson now too late to be learn'd) to beware of too familiar converse with superstition. Nor doe I speak at guesse herein, but from the complaints of credible and unpartiall Authors, of which this one I will insert.

poor

The righteous destroyed with the wicked.

13. There was a Maid born in Cornwall, called Tomasin Bonaventure, and well did she brook the same, which from a keeper of sheep, came at last to be the Wife of Sir John Percivall Lord Major of London. In her widowhood, she laid out her estate, which was very great, in charitable Uses, and amongst the rest founded a Chantery, and a Free-school, at S. Mary * Weike in Cornwall (the place of her nativity) with fair Lodgings for the School-Masters, Schollars, and Officers, and twenty pound a year (beside their Salaries) to support incident charges. And here the best Gentlemen's Sons in Devon and Cornwall were virtuously trained up, under one Cholwell, a religious Teacher, untill the said School was suppreſt, in the Reign of King Edward the sixt, onely for a smack of Popery, the Chantery being annexed thereunto. And I suspect the like happened in other places; But to return to S. Paul's, all deductions discharged, the cleer remainder belonged to the Dean and Chapter of S. Paul's.

* Carew his Survey of Cornwall, fol. 119.

Gainfull contracting the number of the Priests.

14. Note, that the Dean and Chapter aforesaid, assumed this power to themselves, That in case (to use their own terms) the exility of the Lands or Rents, bestowed on any Chantery, were insufficient to maintain so many Chaplains, as were appointed in the foundation, then they would reduce them to a smaller number. For instance: The Executors of Adam Burie, sometimes Major of London, founded a Chantery wherein seven Priests should pray continually. This I may call a Colledge-Chantery (equalling Katherine-Hall in Cambridge for the number therein) but the means not holding out in full proportion, these seven were shrunk to four, at the time of their suppression.

Gainfull annexing of Chanteries.

15. Another help the Dean and Chapter had. When the maintenance of any Chantery fell short, by uniting two, or moe mean Chanteries together. Thus Margaret Bigod gave a Marish, called Richernesse in Essex, with a stock of eleven-score sheep thereon, to found a Chanterie with two Chaplains; which, not sufficient for the same, was annexed to a small Chantery of Richard Greene's, and one Priest (Sir Christopher Bricket by name) effectually (no doubt) discharged both.

There is a generation rich, and maketh themselves poor.

16. And yet, notwithstanding all these shifts, the Dean and Chapter of Paul's in giving up their accounts to the King's Commissioners, pretended themselves yearly losers by some of these Chanteries. For, generally they were founded on candle-rents (houses are London's land) which were subject to casualtie, reparations, and vacations. In such intervalls, though the house (wherewith the Chanterie was endowed) wanted a Tenant, yet the Chanterie must not want a Chaplain to officiate for the dead. Yea, so charitable was the Dean and Chapter in such cases, as sometimes to allow lands in augmentation of maintenance, and assigne houses of their own, for the habitation of such Chaplains as wanted a mansion. The King therefore may be said in some sort, to have done a courtesie to the Chapter of Paul's, when suppressing such poor Chanteries, formerly not beneficial, but burdensome unto them.

Nothing [pretended] gotten.

17. By other Chanteries they were only savers, no gainers, having only their labour for their pain, in seeing things performed according to the Will of the Testatour (as in Bishop Fitz-James, and many others) so that, the Priest paid, and other allowances deducted, remanet nil, as they brought in the reckoning of their receipts and disbursments. However, we may take notice, that herein the Dean and Chapter of Paul's, were both their own Accomptants and Auditors, and none could could disprove their reckonings therein. But grant, that among forty seven Chanteries, two or three of them were unprofitable servants, returning no emolument unto them: yea, suppose as many prodigall children, wasting the stock of their Parent (understand the Church wherein they were founded) yet, from the collective body of them altogether, she gained a grand revenue. And it is considerable, that in this their Audit, they onely brought in their bare annual rent of houses, their fines not being charged on their accompt, but swallowed in silence, to the great commodity of the Chapter.

* The great, though uncertain number of Chanteries.

18. Vast was the wealth accrewing to the Crown by the dissolution of Chanteries. Many a little (saith the Proverb) make a mickle. These foundations, though small in revenue, yet being many in number, mounted up a great bank. There was not a Cathedral, or Collegiate-Church in England, but some Chanteries were founded therein, as in many Parochial-Churches. Thus at Oldwincle in North hampton shire (the Village of my nativity) a Chantery in the Parish-Church of All-Saints, was endowed with house and lands for a Priest, at the cost of Sir John Oldwincle Knight, about the Reign of King Henry the sixt. Yea, let the model of Countrey-Churches be well observed, wherein such excursions of building as present themselves beyond the old fabrick (from which oft-times they differ as neater, and newer) were since erected, and added, as intended, and used for Chanteries.

Free Chappels and Colledges.

19. Free-Chappels succeed, not so called from the freenesse, and bounty of their Founders, but because subsisting of themselves, as children of full age, whose parents are still alive. For, though Chappell speaks a relation to a Mother-Church, yet free avoweth them sui juris, especially so farre forth that right of burialls belonged unto them. These were greater than Chanteries, having more room for Priests, and moe Priests for that room, to pray for the souls of their Founders, Colledges come the last (as the heaviest, and best laden with land) into consideration. These, though fewest in number, were richer than both the former: insomuch that the Colledge of Fotheringhay in North-hampton-shire, was yearly valued at Four hundred nineteen pounds eleven shillings ten pence halfpeny. And no wonder, since this * Colledge had the rare happinesse to be endowed by the Kings both of Yorke, and Lancaster, at deadly mutuall enmity, yet joyntly agreeing in their bounty to this place.

* See Speeds Catalogue in Northampton-shire.

A nemo scit of wealth accruing to the Crown.

20. How much the yearly revenue of all these Chanteries, Free-Chappels, and Colledges, amounted to, God knows, for the King knew as little as some in our Age. Indeed, some of His Officers did, but would not know, as wilfully concealing their knowledge herein. Yea, some of these Chanteries may be said in a double sense to be suppresst, as not onely put down, but also concealed, never coming into the Exchequer, being silently pocketed up by private (but potent) persons. True it is, the Courtiers were more rapacious to catch, and voracious to swallow these Chanteries, than Abbey-lands. For, at the first many were scrupulous in minde, or modest in manners, doubting the acceptance of Abbey-land, though offered unto them, till profit and custome (two very able Confessours) had, by degrees, satisfied their consciences, and absolved them from any fault therein. Now, all scruples removed, Chantery-land went down without any regreet. Yea, such who mannerly expected till the King carved for them out of Abbey lands, scrambled for themselves out of Chantery-revenues, as knowing this was the last dish of the last course, and after Chanteries, as after cheese, nothing to be expected. As for those, who fairly purchased them of the King, they had such good bargains therein, that thereby all enriched, and some ennobled both themselves, and posterity. But, for satisfaction herein, I referre the Reader to his * pen, who never spared any that came under it, and seldome such as came neer it; who speaks more bitternesse, than falshood, in this particular.

* Sir John Hayward in Edw.6. pag. 155.

Pensions assigned to Chantery-Priests.

21. The Chanterie-Priests, by this suppression outed at once of all their livelyhood, were not left to the wide world to shift for themselves, but had durante vita, pensions setled on them by King Edward His Letters Patents. I have seen in the the Auditor's Office for the North-part of the Dutchie of Lancaster; the *Account of William Mallet Esq. particular Receiver of the rents, Colledges, Chanteries, &c. in the Countie of Yorke, viz: of so many of them as were in that Shire annexed to the Dutchie of Lancaster, which parcell alone amounted yearly to Seven hundred ninety six pounds four shillings two pence halfpeny: Out of which summe was deducted, One hundred twenty six pounds two shillings four pence, for annuall pensions to Chantery Priests, and others (five pounds apiece the generall proportion) affigned them for term of life, by King Edward the sixt.

* Made in the 3 & 4 of Phil. and Mary.

22. The Parliament at the same time put Hospitalls also into the King's possession. Yet surely more tenderneſse was used to Hospitalls, and I finde very few of them finally suppressed. Indeed, that of the Savoy at this time was much *abused with Loyterers, Vagabonds, and Strumpets, which lay all day in the fields, and at night were harboured there. In which consideration King Edward dissolved the Hospitall, but gave the land thereof (worth six hundred pound per annum) to the City of London, to endow Bridewell therewith. Thus, He did not extinguish charity, but onely regulate, and remove it from the Strand to Fleet street: or rather, took away with one hand what was abused, and restored it with the other, to such as would better employ the same.

Some tenderneſse to Hospitalls.

* Stows Survey of London, pag. 344.

* Stow ut prius, p. 491.

Queen Mary on her own cost restoreth some Convents.

QUeen Mary, a Princesse more zealous (according to her devotion) than politick, resolved by way of Essay and Triall, to restore certain dissolved Convents, and endow them with competent maintenance: in order hereunto, She called four of Her principall Counsellours most interested in money-matters, viz: William Marquesse of Winchester, Lord Treasurer; Sir Robert Rochester, Controller of Her House; Sir William Peter, Secretary; and Sir Francis Inglefield, Master of the Wards: and by a long Speech acquainted them with Her intentions therein. Now though the Lord Pawlet as Treasurer (much being the want of money at this present) might dislike the motion, yet as Courtier he complied with the Queens desires, the rather, because it was in vain to withstand them, so really strong were Her resolutions: but it is worth our attention to hear Her Oration.

Qu. Mary imparts Her intents to four Counsellors.

'YOU[a] are here of Our Councell, and We have wil-
'led you to be called to Us, to the intent ye might
'hear of Me my Conscience, and the resolution of My
'minde, concerning the Lands and Possessions, as well of
'Monasteries, as other Churches whatsoever, being now
'presently in My possession: First, I doe consider, that
'the said Lands were taken away from the Churches a- 'foresaid, in time of Schisme; and that by unlawfull
'means, such as are contrary both to the law of God, and
'of the Church. For the which cause My Conscence
'doth not suffer Me to detain them; and therefore I
'here expresly refuse either to claim, or to retain the said

[a] Hollinshed in Q. Mary, Anno Dom. 1555. pag. 1127.

'Lands for Mine; but with all My heart freely and 'willingly without all paction or condition, here and be-'fore God, I doe ſurrender and relinquiſh the ſaid Lands 'and Poſſeſſions, or Inheritances whatſoever, and doe 'renounce the ſame with this minde and purpoſe, that 'order and diſpoſition thereof may be taken as ſhall ſeem 'beſt liking to our moſt holy Lord the Pope, or elſe his 'Legate the Lord Cardinall, to the honour of God, and 'wealth of this Our Realm.

'And albeit you may object to Me again, that conſi-'dering the ſtate of My Kingdome, the Dignity there-'of, and My Crown Imperiall cannot be Honourably 'maintained and furniſhed without the Poſſeſſions a-'foreſaid; yet notwithſtanding, I ſet more by the ſalva-'tion of My ſoul than by ten Kingdomes, and therefore 'the ſaid Poſſeſſions I utterly refuſe here to hold after 'that ſort and title, and give moſt hearty thanks to Al-'mighty God, which hath given Me an Husband like-'wiſe minded, with no leſſe good affection in this behalf 'than I am my ſelf. Wherefore I charge and command 'that My Chancellour, (with whom I have conferred 'My minde in this matter before) and you four, to mor-'row, doe reſort together to the moſt reverend Lord Le-'gate, and doe ſignifie to him the premiſes in My name, 'and give your attendance upon him for the more full 'declaration of the ſtate of My Kingdome, and of 'the aforeſaid Poſſeſſions accordingly, as you your ſelves 'doe underſtand the matter, and can inform him in the 'ſame.

Several Orders re-erected by Her.

2. In this matter the words of [b] Sanders ought to be obſerved, preſuming him beſt knowing in theſe Acts of reſtitution then performed by Her Majeſty, and that he would loſe nothing for the meaſuring, which might tend to the Queens credit.

[b] De Schiſ. Anglic. lib. 2. pag. 309.

Collegia nova ampliſſimâ dote fundantur. Cœnobia Benedictinorum, Carthuſianorum, Brigitenſium, Dominicanorum, Obſervantium, ac aliorum Ordinum à devotis perſonis re-ædificantur. Catholicis Regibus in hoc genere pietatis ſubditis omnibus prælucentibus.

New Colledges are founded with a moſt ample endowment. Convents of Benedictines, Carthuſians, Brigitteans, Dominicans, Obſervants, and other Orders are re-edified by devout perſons. The Catholick Princes out-ſhining all their Subjects in this kinde of piety.

Now

Now seeing this passage is the best torch we meet with to direct us in this dark subject, we will severally weigh his words, and impartially comment upon them.

1. Benedictines:] When Westminster Church was turned into an Abbey, and John Feckenham made Abbot thereof (installed therein on the 21 November, 1557.) But this was done without any cost to the Crown, onely by altering the property of the place, from a late made Cathedrall, to an Abbey, and turning the Prebendaries into sixteen black Monks, which were all at the present could be found having that Order, and willing to wear that Habit upon them.

2. Carthusians:] These were fixed at Shene nigh Richmond in Surrey, over against Sion.

3. Brigitteans:] At Sion in Middlesex. This indeed with the former, cut two good collops out of the Crown land, though farre short this second endowment, of what formerly they possessed. It was some difficulty to stock it with such who had been veyled before, (it being now thirty years since their dissolution) in which time most of the elder Nuns were in their graves, and the younger in the arms of their husbands, as afterwards imbracing a married life. However with much adoe (joyning some new ones with the old) they made up a competent number.

4. Dominicans:] These were seated in Smith field in London. The best was, they being Mendicants (little stock would serve to set up Beggars) their restoring could not be very expensive to the Queen, besides the site of an house for their dwelling, and some other necessary accommodations.

5. Observants:] These were Fryers like the former, being Franciscans reformed, and therefore not over-costly their restitution. Their house was at Greenwich, (founded by King Henry the seventh) plucked down by King Henry the eighth (as largely before) one of the first of all other Convents; because the Fryers therein were so obstinate against the King, and such sticklers for the legality of Queen Katherine's marriage. Ingratitude whereunto, and honour of Her own extraction, Queen Mary re-seated them in their habitations.

6. And other Orders:] Sanders (for the more credit of the matter) politickly winds up all these indefinite words, though in the remaining Orders were not so many as to make up a number: Of which the most eminent were the Hospitallers of St. John's of Jerusalem in Clerkenwell, a place in a pitifull plight when now they were first restored; for the Bell-Tower of the Church was undermined and blowne up with Gun-powder, that the stones thereof might build Somerset-house in the Strand. Now where the Steeple was shattered, the Church must needs be shaken; as here the body and [c] side-Iles thereof were by that fatall blow finally confounded; onely part of the Quire remaining (with some side Chappels) which Cardinall Poole caused to be closed up on the West-end, and repaired. And this served the Hospitallers for their devotions the short time they continued therein. The Queen made Sir Tho: Tresham Lord Prior of this Order (who the thirtieth of November, 1557, received the Order of the Cresse at Westminster) and was solemnly inducted into his place. He was of an antient family, and large estate, and had done the Queen Knights service, proclaiming Her in the highest contest with Queen Jane. If the dimension of his Body may be guessed by his finger, and his finger by his Ring (which have seen in the possession of his Kinsman William Tresham Esq. of Newton in Northampton-shire) he was a little Gyant, and farre greater than his pourtraicture on his Monument, almost demolisht in Rushton-Church, in the same County. But Alexander's souldiers were not in proportion so big as their shields left in India; and possible that Ring of State (serving for a Seale) c Stows Surv. of London, pag. 483.

Seale) was rather borne about him, than worn on his finger.

7. Re-edified by devout perſons:] It is out of doubt that Papiſts contributed many pretious Utenſils unto theſe Orders, as alſo that they were bountifull in repairing their decayed Houſes to fit them for their habitation; but by Sanders his leave. No viſible refunding of land doth appear. Which if he had known of, no doubt he would have told poſterity, as tending (according to his principles) ſo much to the credit of thoſe perſons. I ſay again (though Queens Examples carry a kinde of Mandamus in them) yet herein Her beſt Subjects and Servants were ſo unmannerly as to ſuffer Her Grace to go alone by Her ſelf in this Act without any attendants, as to the reſtitution of any entire Religious houſe to its former Order. No not Anthony Browne Viſcount Montacute (though formerly ſolemnly employed in an Ambaſſy to the Pope to reconcile the Church of England to Rome) would part with his rich Abbey of Battaile in Suſſex, or poor Priory of Barnewell, nigh Cambridge, &c. but kept all his pluralities in that nature, though otherwiſe we believe him moſt bountifull to thoſe of his own Religion.

8. The Catholick Princes:] Meaning Philip and Mary, and ſurely though we cannot inſiſt on the particulars, that Kings inclinations are ſufficiently known: zealous for the promoting of His own Religion.

However, it is almoſt incredible what a qualme on this occaſion came over the hearts of the ſtouteſt Abbey-land Mongers in England, fearing in proceſſe of time a reverting of them to their former uſe; the rather becauſe Cardinall Poole in that Act in this Queens Reign to ſecure Abbey-lands to their Owners (without the paſſing whereof to pacifie ſo many perſons concerned, Papiſtry could not have been reſtored in that Parliament) did not, as ſome think, abſolve their conſciences from reſtitution, But onely made a palliate cure, the Church but ſuſpending that power, which in due time ſhe might put in execution.

A generall jealouſie of Abbey-holders.

3. This made many ſuſpect that ſuch edifices of Abbeys, which ſtill were extant, entire, looked lovingly on their antient Owners in hope to be reſtord unto them. In prevention whereof ſuch as poſſeſt them for the preſent, plucked out their eyes, by levelling them to the ground, and ſhaving from them (as much as they could) all Abbey-Characters, diſguiſing them (as much as might be) in a Lay-habit, matching and mingling them with lands in another Tenure, becauſe on this very motion Abbey-lands ſunk two years purchaſe in the common valuation.

Nimia non curiæ non notes.

4. Nor muſt I forget one paſſage in Derby-ſhire, (a certain information whereof I have received from that skilful Antiquary and my reſpected Kinſman Samuel Roper of Lincolnes-Inne, how one Thacker being poſſeſſed of Repingdon-Abbey in Derby-ſhire, alarumed with this news that Q. Mary had ſet up theſe Abbeys again (and fearing how large a reach ſuch a precedent might have) upon a Sunday (belike, the better day, the better deed) called together the Carpenters and Maſons of that County, and plucked down in one day (Church-work is a cripple in going up, but rides poſt in coming down) a moſt beautifull Church belonging thereunto, adding, He would deſtroy the Neſt, for fear the Birds ſhould build therein again.

The beſt work of Q. Mary.

5. And now when a Papiſt have done commending Q. Mary, a Proteſtant may begin, I ſay, Her ſetting up the Hoſpitall of the Savoy was a better work than any inſtanced in by Sanders for the relief of poor people: Firſt, becauſe poor, qua poor may be ſaid to be Jure Divino: * The rich and poor meet together, and the Lord maketh them both. Not onely as Creatour of their perſons, but Aſſigner of their conditions. Beſides, the Poor is a continuall Order in the Church by the words of our Saviour, * The poor ye have alwaies with you: but more properly hereof in the Reign of Queen Mary.

* Prov. 22. 2.

* John 12. 8.

Queen

Queen Elizabeth demolisheth the new-erected Convents.

QUeen Elizabeth coming to the Crown, was not over-busie at the first, but for some moneths permitted all things to remain in statu quo prius. Insomuch, that in the first Parliament of Her summoning, She sent Her Writs to the aforesaid Lord Prior Tresham, and Abbot Feckenham to make their appearance with the rest of Her Barons in Her Great Councell. Whither they repaired, and wherein they took their places accordingly.

Violent alterations dangerous.

2. Sir Thomas (as Lord Prior) above, but the Abbot beneath all the [a] Temporal Lords, being the lag of the House, and placed under Oliver Lord S. John of Bletnesho, lately made the second Baron of Queen Eliz: Her creation. But they had hardly set down on their seats, before they were raised up, and dissolved, with all the rest of the late-restored Orders.

[a] See a List of them sitting in Sir Tho Cottons Library.

3. I have not met (to my best remembrance) with any Statute, enacted in the Reign of Queen Mary, whereby She was legally empowred for the re-erection of these Convents, done it seems by Her Prerogative, by connivance, not concurrence of the Parliament. Nor can I finde, in the first year of Queen Elizabeth, any particular Statute wherein (as in the Reign of King Henry the eighth) these Orders are nominatim suppressed, this probably being supposed needlesse, as I conceive, (with submission to the Learned in that Profession) their Houses having no Legal settlement: Or else, when the general Statutes against Superstition, were layed like the Ax to the root of the Tree, these Orders are under-branches, fell of themselves by virtue of the Queens Commission for the same.

A Quære to the learned in Law.

4. I intended by way of a farewell-Corollary to present the Reader with a List of the Lord Priors of S. John's, from Iordanus Briset, their first Founder. But their Records being all burnt in that fire, which was kindled by Straw in his commotion, it is impossible to compleat the Catalogue. At and since which disaster, such as we can recover, are not contiguous in times, and distanced with many years betwixt them, though perhaps not unusefull to be inserted.

A n imperfect List better than none.

1. Sir Robert Hales, Lord Treasurer of England, slain in the tumult of Tyler, Anno 1380, in the fourth of K. Richard the second. At which time,

2. Next him, Sir John Long-strother, I say next, proximus at longo qui proximus intervallo, siding with the House of Lancaster; he was taken prisoner in Tewxbury Battail, Anno 1471, and by King Edward the fourth put to death in cold blood, contrary to the promise of a Prince, who had assured his life unto him.

3. Sir Thomas Dockwray, is the next (not of all); but in our discovery. A person of much desert, expending himself wholly for the credit and profit of his Priory, as who re-edified the Church out of its ruine, finishing it Anno 1504, as appeareth by the Inscription over the Gate-house yet remaining.

4. Sir William Weston succeeds (of whom before) dissolved this List on the very day of the dissolution of this Priory.

5. Sir Thomas Tresham, was the first and last of Q. Mary's re-erection. There goeth a tradition, that Q. Elizabeth in consideration of his good service done to Her self in Her Sister Q. Mary, whom he proclaimed, and Their Titles being shut out of doors together, both were let in again at once, though to take place successively, allowed him to be called Lord Prior during his life, which was not long, and the matter not much, deriving no power or profit unto him.

Here I purposely omit Sir Richard Shelley, (which family I finde of remark for worship and antiquity at Michel-Grove in Sussex.) He bare a great enmity to Queen

Q. Elizabeth, especially after She had flatly denied Philip King of Spain, whither Shelley was fled) to consent to his abiding there, and to his quiet receiving his rents out of England. However, the Spanish King imployed him in an Honorable Ambassy unto Maximilian King [b] of the Romans, wearing the high title of Prior of the Order of St.[c] John's in England. A Prior without a Posterior having none under him to obey his power, nor after him to succeed in his place. We behold him only as the wry-streak given in by us out of courtesie, when the game was up before.

b Cambd. Eliz. Anno 1563.
c Idem in Anno 1560. p. 46.

5. The Site of the Priory of S. John's was lately the possession of William Earl of Exeter, whose Countess Eliz: Druery was very forward to repair the ruin'd Quire thereof. Doct. Ios: Hall preached at the solemn Reconciling thereof, on S. Stephen's day 1623, taking for his Text, Hag. 2. 9. The glory of the latter house, shall be greater than of the former saith the Lord of Hosts. At this day, though courtiated, having the side-Iles excluded, (yet so that their upper part is admitted, affording conveniencies for attention) it is one of the best private Chappels in England, discreetly embracing the mean of decency betwixt the extreams of slovenly profaneness and gaudy superstition, and belongeth at this present to the truly noble Thomas Earle of Elgin.

Cui the present owner of this Priory.

SECTION

SECTION VII.

To THOMAS DOCKWRAY of Bedford-shire, Esquire.

I finde Sir THOMAS DOCKWRAY one of the last Lord Priors of our English Hospitallers. To say you are descended from him would fix a stain on your Extraction, seeing none might marry, who were of his Order.

But this I will say and justifie, that you Both are descended from the same Ancestour, as by authentick Records doth most plainly appear.

Besides, some conformity may be seen in your commendable inclinations. He was all for * building of a fair Church according to the devotion of those dayes. Your bountifull hand hath been a great sharer in advancing of this Church-History.

Now, although his stately Structure of the strongest stone had the hard hap to be blown up almost as * soon as it was ended, this of yours (a frailer Fabrick, as but of Paper-walls) may by Gods blessing have the happinesse of a longer continuance.

* Stow Survey of London, pag. 483.

* Stows Surv. of Lond. in prin.

Of English Nunneries beyond the Seas.

THus were all Monks, Fryers, and Nunnes, totally routed by the coming in of Qu. Elizabeth. I finde not that any Pensions were allowed to those Votaries, who at this time were outed their Covents, though large Annuities were assigned to such who were ejected their Monasteries, Colledges, or free Chanteries, in the Reigns of King Henry the eighth, and Edward the sixt: whereof this may seem the reason, because now, caveat ingressor, He or She might beware who entred an Abbey, be it at their own perill, seeing they formerly had so fair a warning, though indeed some of them who had no friends to help them, were left in no very good condition, and died in much want and distresse.

Why no Pensions paid to outed Votaries by Qu. Eliz.

Detained pensions paid to old Fryers and Nunnes.

2. But now in the beginning of this Queens Reign, a complaint did arise, That Pensions were detained from many ejected out of Abbeys in her Father and Brother his Reigne, who being poor, old, and impotent, and repairing to the Queens Officers for their Pensions, were instead of money paid with ill language and affronts. Her Majesty possessed with the truth hereof, took strict order both that their Arrears for the time past should be satisfied, and their Annuities for the time to come effectually discharged, which much advanced her honour in pecuniary matters.

Chequer pay, the best of payments.

3. Hence grew the Proverb (crossed in the daies of her successours) As sure as Exchequer pay. For all, who in this Queens Reign had summes due unto them from the Treasurie, had no other trouble than to tell them there, and take them thence. Thus, it came to passe, that by Her maintaining of the Exchequer, the Exchequer maintained Her, having money at most, credit at all times on the reputation of so good a Pay-Mistresse: insomuch that She was not onely able to lay down Her stake, but also to vye ready silver with the King of Spaine, when He, notwithstanding both His Indies, was fain to go on Bare board.

The onely stump of an old tree.

4. As for Popish (Religious) persons flying out of England at the coming in of this Queen, our pen shall follow them as fast as it can with convenient speed. We begin with the Nunnes, partly because the courtesie of England alloweth the first place to the feeblest Sex; but chiefly, because they seem still to continue an entire body, and successively, an immortall corporation; being, with the Carthusians, the onely stump that remaineth of the huge tree which once overspread and shadowed our whole Nation.

The progresse of Nunnes from Sion to Lisbone.

5. May the Reader be pleased to remember, that King Henry the fifth founded one Abbey of Nunnes at Sion in Middlesex, peopling it with Brigetine Nunnes and Fryers, and another at Sheine in Surrey overagainst it, so ordering it that all the day long alternately when the Devotions of the one ended, the other should begin, that nothing should interrupt their Prayers, though the Thames did divide their Persons: Both those Covents dissolved by King Henry the eighth were, as aforesaid, restored by Q. Mary, and re-dissolved by Q. Elizabeth. The Sion Nunnes (though Clementia Thresham a principall amongst them, could not go with them for sickness (dying soon after, and buried at Rushton in Northampton shire) conveyed their persons and most portable Treasure beyond the Seas to Zurickzey in Zealand, thence to Macklin in Brabant, thence to Roan in Normandy, but found no certain place of abode till they came to Lisbone in Portugall.

The revenue and wealth of the Lisbone Nunnes.
* Every Milrey is twelve shillings six pence sterling.

6. For here they had a daily Pension of five Crowns from the King of Spaine, and wheat more than sufficient whilst Lisbone was His (and I doubt not but the present King of Portugall performeth the same) they have Vine-yards, Olive-fields, Corn-grounds, and Houses, to the value of four hundred * Mil-reis a year, which was the Portion of a Portugese (sole Heire to her wealthy Father) who becoming a Religious Sister in this Covent, conveyed her inheritance unto it. So that by their boxes in Indian and Brasilean ships, sale of Masses, and other perquisites, they are said yearly to lay up six hundred pounds.

A price of blood their first portion.
* Tho. Robinson, pag. 9.

7. Indeed, they began with a good bank, and hereon hangs a story worth reporting. When Doctor Lopez a Iew-Portugall undertook to poison Queen Elizabeth, he would not (to shew himself a Iew indeed) doe his work till in some sort secured of his wages. The summe * promised him was deposited with these Nunnes, whilst as yet they lived at Roan in Normandie. But Lopez his designe failing, the same halter which bereaved him of life, endowed these Nunnes with a livelyhood: For the King of Spaine either out of scrupulosity not to resume the same into his Treasurie as the price of blood, or out of liberality conferred those moneys on the Nunnes, which since they have well house-wived and increased.

Their Confessour and Abbesse.

8. We need not repeat what we have formerly said of the Brigetine Nunnes (first founded by Briget Queen of Swedeland) having Fryers permitted to live under the same roof (though disjoyned with walls) for their better consolation. Some thirty years since Father Ioseph Foster was their Confessour, having two other Priests and a Lay-Brother to assist him, whose names I am lesse carefull to insert, inſert, becauſe they change them as often as ſnakes their skins, both what they took at the font, and fetcht from their Fathers, truly called by what they are not known, and commonly known by what they are not truly called. Elizabeth Preſton about that time was Abbeſſe, who being outed as in diſgrace with Father Foſter, Barbara Wiſeman ſucceeded in her place.

9. Such as deſire further ſatisfaction herein, may conſult the Anatomie of the Engliſh Nunnerie at Lisbone, made by Thomas Robinſon, publiſhed by authority, and lately reprinted. I confeſſe, it may ſeem cruelty to cut up the living, and the beſt of mortalls would winch to purpoſe if diſſected alive. But very much of truth is believed in his Diſcovery, telling us of a grate betwixt thoſe Fryers and Nunnes, ſometimes ſo churliſh as to divide them, ſometimes ſo charitable as conſenting to be drawn up, and ſo to admit them to a mutuall ſociety: ſo that if the Fryer calleth, the Nunne cometh incontinently at his command. I have heard ſince that their Covent of late hath caſually been burned down, which, if ſo, I doubt not but they are able to rebuild it, as gaining more by water (the gratuities of Merchants) than they have loſt by fire.

The Anatomie of the Nunnes of Lisbone.

Bruxells Nunnerie.

THey are of the Order of S. Benedict, and yet ſolely under the inſpection of the Ieſuits, which ſeems improper, ſeeing it would ſound like truer conſtruction that Benedictine Nunnes ſhould be ſubject to Benedictine Monks. The truth is, that at the firſt founding hereof the Ieſuiticall activity got the ſtart of the Benedictine dulneſſe, and theſe men of laſting mettall (as good at length as at hand) keep the advantage which once they have gotten. Indeed, no Nunnes come hither but ſuch as are tranſported by the Ieſuits ſpeciall recommendation, and therefore it is but equall they ſhould dreſſe and prune the Vines of their own planting. I aſſure you, the place is too coſtly for my Daughter to be entred there, ſeeing they receive * none into their Abbey and habit unleſſe ſhe have a thouſand pound or two for her Portion.

Bruxells Nunnerie.

* Lewis Owen his running Regiſter, p. 102.

2. The Abbey is very rich, having purchaſed whole Manours, and Lordſhips in Brabant, with many thouſand of pounds at uſe in the Lombards and elſwhere, all which the Engliſh Ieſuits doe diſpoſe of. Father Gardiner, and Father * Walgrave alias Flower were Anno 1630, their Overſeers, being ſome ſixty Engliſh Damoſells under their Abbeſſe, then the Siſter of the (Aunt to the preſent) Earl of Northumberland.

Their great wealth.

* Engliſh-Spaniſh pilgrim, pag. 72.

Cambray Nunnerie.

DON Carlos de Colomna Governour of the City and Countrey of Cambray for the King of Spaine, and ſometimes Ambaſſadour for England, was ſo allured with the beauty, or affected with the piety of our Engliſh Women, that (as it is generally reported) he gave them a Cloyſter within this City, where now they live and have an Engliſh Congregation erected according to the Order of S. Benedict. Lately they had no lands purchaſed, though poſſibly ſince they may be endowed.

Cambray Nunnerie.

Gravelin Nunnerie.

THe Family of the Gages at Furle in Suſſex were their principall Benefactors (whereof John Gage Privie Counſellour, as I take it, to Q. Mary, deſerted the land and his own large eſtate at the beginning of Queen Elizabeth) as appears by certain Tablets to be ſeen in their Church. Yet are they the Gravelin Nunnerie.

the poorest of all Forraign Convents, being the discalceated Nunnes of the Order of S. Clare. Sine cinque, are sent to Bruxells, persons Nobly born, or richly dowried, Quatur tray to Lubone or Cambray, receiving those of a middle rank, whilst Duce ace, yea Ames ace, are sent to Gravelin the Almes-basket of other Covents; Cum nemini obtrudi potest, itur ad &c. Such who come over with empty hands must be Nunnes at Gravelin with naked feet.

Nunnes of Lovaine why omitted.

2. Here I purposely omit the Nunnes of Lovaine in Brabant, because not speaking pure English, and scarcely mediocratem linguæ, being a Hodge-podge of Dutch and English, and the former at this day most numerous. Yea, oftentimes the two Nations here strive for Superiority, and though nature inclineth me in this contention to favour my Countrey women: yet I conceive it better to leave them alone to agree with themselves, and proceed to the Jesuitesses.

Jesuitesses.

Jesuitesses.

THese began at Luke or Liege about thirty years since. Mistris Mary Ward, and Mistris Twitty being the first beginners of them. They are not confined, as other Nunns to a Cloyster, but have liberty to go abroad where they please to convert people to the Catholick Faith. They weare a Huke like other women, and differ but little in their habit from common persons. The aforesaid two Virgins, or rather Viragins travelled to Rome with * three the most beautifull of their society, endevouring to procure from his Holiness an establishment of their Order, but no Confirmation, onely a Toleration would be granted thereof. Since I have * read, that Anno 1629. Mistris Mary Ward went to Vienna, where she prevailed so farre with the Empresse, that she procured a Monastery to be erected for those of her Order, as formerly they had two Houses at Liege. Since I have heard nothing of them, which rendreth it suspitious that their Order is suppressed, because otherwise such turbulent spirits would be known by their own violence, it being all one with a storm not to be and not to bluster: For, although this may seem the speediest way to make their Order to propagate when Jesuita shall become hic & hæc of the common gender, yet conscientious Catholicks conceived these Lady Errants so much to deviate from feminine (not to say Virgin) modesty, (what is but going in Men being accounted gadding in Maids) that they zealously decried their practice, probably to the present blasting thereof.

* Mistris Vaux Fortescue.

* English-Spanish pilgrim, p. 31.

The forraign Covents of English Monks and Fryers.

Jesuits gapeing for the Benedictines lands in England.

WE will not so farre distrust the Readers memory as to repeat our premised distinction betwixt Monks and Fryers: Onely know that the Papists themselves report, that towards the end of Queen Elizabeth there was but one English Monk (Mauro by name) living in the whole world. A thing not incredible to such who consider Monks generally grown men before admitted into their Order, and that more than sixty years were passed from the dissolution of Abbeys to the end of Queen Elizabeth. Hereupon, several Catholicks of the Anti-Jesuiticall faction (as Doctor Gifford, Bagshaw, Stevens, Smith) fearing the Jesuits on Father Mauro's death, would (for want of lawfull successours to the old English Benedictine Monks) enter upon all the Abbey lands they had here, solicited many English Students then living in their Colledges and Seminaries to become Monks of the Order of S. Bennet, perswading them that hereby they should intitle themselves to a large Patrimony of land now likely to fall unto them.

Defeated by Father Roberts and others.

2. Here am I put to a double wonder. First, whereon this Papisticall confidence was grounded of the speedy restitution of Abbey land at Queen Elizabeth her death, finding no visible probability for the same. Secondly, I admire how Jesuits ſuits could pretend (in default of Benedictine iſſue) themſelves Heires to theſe lapſed or vacant lands, ſeeing other Orders, farre more antient, might lay a better claim thereto. Except they conceive ſuch Engliſh Abbey-lands held in Burrough-Engliſh, wherein the youngeſt, according to the cuſtome of ſome Manours, is to inherit; and ſo by the ſame advantage this laſt and neweſt of all Orders poſſeſſed themſelves thereof.

3. However, to prevent them, at the inſtance of the aforeſaid ſecular Prieſts many Engliſh ſtudents got into forraign Covents of Benedictines, and took on them the habit of S. Bennet. John Roberts firſt a Lawyers Clerk in London, then a ſtudent in the Engliſh Colledge at Vallydolid firſt led the dance, running away to a neighbouring Covent of Spaniſh Benedictines. More of the flock followed this Bell-weather thick and threefold, leaving the Colledge of the Ieſuits in deſpight of all the care and caution of their Father Prefects. Father Auguſtine (if that his true and not aſſumed name) was the ſecond Monke of note at this time, a name very active, I am ſure, in propagating ſuperſtition in England, and Roberts and Auguſtine, the two revivers of the new Benedictines. Theſe obtained leave of Pope Pius quintus, and the King of Spaine, to build them a Covent at Doway. And though Roberts coming over into England to procure the Catholicks contribution thereunto, had the hard hap to meet with Tyburne in his way; yet the deſigne proceeded, and was perfected.

Doway Covent in Artois.

Doway Covent.

FOr the Lord Abbot of S. Vedaſtus (anglicè S. Forſters) in Arras, a wealthy man, and great favourer of the Engliſh (yea, generally good to all poor people) built them a Cloyſter, and fine Church adjoyning, on his own proper coſt. To whom, and his ſucceſſours, the Engliſh Monks are bound to pay yearly on the firſt of February a wax-Candle weighing threeſcore pound by way of homage and acknowledgement of their Founder.

S. Mallowes Covent in Bretaigne.

S. Mallowes Covent.

DOctor Gifford Dean of the Collegiate Church of S. Peter's in Ritſell (aliàs Inſula in Flanders) erected a ſmall Congregation of Engliſh Monks at S. Mallowes in France, whereof he himſelf became Prior. Here he remained ſome years, till at laſt reſigning it to another Monke, he removed unto Paris Covent.

Paris Covent.

Paris Covent.

WHich the aforeſaid Doctor (but now advanced and augmented with the honour and profit of the Archbiſhoprick of Rheams) built and endowed on his own expences, conferring thereon whatſoever he can get from his Archbiſhoprick, on the profits whereof the Duke of Guiſe was ſuſpected too heavily to quarter.

The Carthuſians Covent at Machlin.

2. Paſſe we now from our Engliſh Monks to the Fryers, and begin with the Carthuſians. Theſe being outed of Sheine in Surrey at the coming in of Queen Elizabeth, wafted themſelves over the Seas with ſo much wealth as bought them a Cloyſter with lands to maintain it at Machlin. Theſe take themſelves to be the moſt viſible Church of Engliſh Fryers as continuing an uninterrupted ſucceſſion, and ſo puffed up with hopes of regaining their old lands, that when Prince Charles went to Spaine they ſent two of their Fryers into England to take poſſeſſion both of Charter-Houſe and Sheine. Say not one of thoſe places had been fair at firſt, seeing to save double pains and charges, they did well to claim them both together, as likely to possess them both together, as no doubt they had done long ago, had not the rightfull Owners then, and ever since, detained the same.

Doway.

Doway.

SOme report this erected by Count Gondamor: others, more probably, by the charity of English Catholicks for recollect Fryers of the Order of S. Francis. They have a strong fancy, that Christ-Church in London, shall one day be theirs, at the next return of times. The best is, being to goe bare-foot by the rules of their Order, they are well provided to wait for dead-mens shooes. Here I omit the little Cloyster of Benedictine Monks in the Dukedome of Loraine near Ponto-Mouson, as also some other Nunneries and Fryeries since erected at Paris, and elsewhere: for surely, these Orders have spawned much since our late Civil Warres, Protestant confusions multiplying Popish foundations.

Two Covents reported in London.

2. Yet I cannot believe what * one reports of two Covents in London, set up about the year 1640. One, at the Lord Gages neer Queens-street: the other, at Westminster. For, finding no person who is properly tearmed the Lord Gage, I suspect all the rest. And though I confesse Catholicks then arrived at such boldnesse, as rather to dare, than dread any discovery; yet it seemeth improbable any should abide there save onely to wait conveniencie of transportation. And so much for English Covents beyond the Seas, which discourse let none censure as alien, and not pertaining to the History of England. For, I would willingly be condemned for a needlesse excursion on the condition that they belonged not at all unto us who daily fetch over too much money hence, and doe mutually bring back too much mischief hither.

* Mr. Prin.

To whom the Sites of Mitred Abbeys were granted, and by whom they are possessed at this day.

A possible designe preferred, impossible declined.

IT were a work almost impossible for our pen to pursue the Lands of each Religious house from the time that they parted from the Crown to the present Owners thereof. Yea, such a task when ended, were endlesse, of no other use, than the satisfaction of curiosity. As therefore the best Anatomists cannot hunt out the deviations of every petty vein (embracing severall courses in sundry bodies) but abundantly acquit their skill and industry if truly discovering the trunk-veins (observing the same chanels in all people) Kephalicall, Basilicall, &c. So we conceive our duty discharged to any rationall expectation, if instancing onely (out of the Originall Records) in the Sites of the Mitred Abbeys marking their fluctuation since passed from the Crown, into the possession of severall subjects.

2. Here I intended to present the Reader with the particulars of all those Owners through whose hands these Mitred Abbeys have passed, from those to whom King Henry granted them, to those who at this day are possessed thereof. A thing with very much difficulty (such the frequencies of the exchange) collectible out of the severall fines payd at their alienation: but having tyred out mine own modesty, (though not my good friend Mr. John Witt's officious industry) in being beholden to him above my possibility of requitall for perusing so many Records, I desisted from so difficult a design.

Abbey

Abbey	Granted by	Unto	In consideration	Tenure and rent	After alien'd to	Present owner,
Tavestock in Devon.	K. [a] Henry the 8, in the 31 of his Reign, July 4.	John Lord Russel, Anne his Wife, and their Heires, &c.	of his faithfull service and counsell.	in Capite, by Knights service, of [cum aliis] one Knights fee, paying 36 li.	none, but still possessed by their Heirs.	William Russell Earle of Bedford.	a 1 parte retulo 29. (formerly Osborns) Remembrancers Office.
Middleton in Dorsetshire.	K. [b] Henry the 8, in the 31 of his Reign, 23 of Febr.	John Tregonwell Kn^t, Doctor of Law.	of a Pensiō of 40 l. per ann. surrendred, 1000 l. paid down, & his good service.	in Capite, by Knights service, of the tenth part of a Knights fee, paying 12 l. 4 s.	none, but still possessed by his Heirs.	John Tregonwell Esquire.	b 1 par. rot. 95.
Malmesbury in Wiltsh.	K. [c] Henry the 8, in the 31 of his Reign.	William Stampe Gentleman.	of the payment of 1516 l. 15 s. 2 d. ob.	in Capite, by the tenth part of a Knights fee, paying 8 l. 8 s. ob.		Thomas Ioy Esquire.	c 7 par. rot. 147.
Ramsey in Huntingtonshire.	K. [d] Henry the 8, in the 31 of his Reign, 4 of March.	Richard Williams, alias Cromwell, Esq.	of his good service, and the payment of 4663 l. 4 s. 2 d.	in Capite, by the tenth part of a Knights fee, paying 29 l. 16 s.	none, possessed by his Heir.	Sir Oliver Cromwell, the most aged Gent. and Knight in England.	d 2 par. rot. 193.
Selby in Yorkshire.	K. [e] Henry the 8, in the 32 of his Reign, 28 of August.	Ralph Sadleir of Hackney, Knight.	of 736 l. paid.	in Capite, by the tenth part of a Knights fee, paying 3 l. 10 s. 8 d.		Charles Walmesley Esquire.	e 1 part. rot. 140.
Tuxbury in Glocestershire.	K. [f] Henry the 8, in the 36 of his Reign.	Tho: Stroud, Wal: Earle, and Iam: Paget.	of 2283 li. 19 s. 3 d.	in capite, by the 20^th part of a Knights fee, paying 1 l. 18 s. $0\frac{3}{4}$			f 2 part. rot. 26.
Hyde juxta Winton.	K. [g] Henry the 8, in the 37 of his Reign, 11 of Janu.	Rich: Bethel Gent. after a Lease of the Lord Wriothesly was expired.	of 110 li. 17 s. 1 d.	in free Soccage of the King's Manour of Rumsey, paying 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. to the Vic. of St. Barthol: Wint:			g 7 part. rot. 44.

	Abbey	Granted by	Unto	In consideration	Tenure and rent	After alien'd to	Present owner, h 4 part. rot. 13.	S. Johns juxta Colchester.	K.[h] Edward the sixt, in the first of his Reign, June 22.	John Dudley Earle of Warwick.	of his service in Scotland and France, whereby he had much impair'd his own estate.	in Capite, [cum aliis] by service, of one Knights fee, paying 16 s. 11. d. ob.		Sir John Lucas L[d] Lucas.
i 1 part, rot.	Cirencester in Glocestershire.	K.[i] Edward the sixt, in the first of his Reign, 19 of August.	Thomas Lord Seymer, high Admiral.	of his service, and kindred, being the Kings Uncle.	in Capite, with land in 15 Shires, by the service, of one Knights fee, paying 11. 1 s. 8 d.		Sir William Masters.
k 3 part. m. 95.	Bardney in Lincolnshire.	K.[k] Edw: 6[t]. in the second of his Reign.	Thomas Heneage, Katherine his Wife, and their Heirs.	of an exchange for the Manour of Overton.	in Knights service.		Francis Lord Willoughby of Parham.
l 3 part. rot. 17. and againe 4 part. rot. 77.	Glaston in Somerset.	K.[l] Edward the sixt, in the 4[th] year of his Reign, 4 of June.	Ed: Seymer Duke of Somerset.	of his Petition, and the advise of the Counsel, to support his dignity.	in Capite, by the 40[th] part of a Knights fee, sine reditu.
m Ibidem.	Reading in Berkshire.	K. [m] Edw. the sixt, in the 4[th] year of his Reign, 4 of June.	Ed: Seymer Duke of Somerset.	of his Petition, and the advise of the Counsel, to support his dignity.	in Capite, by the 40[th] part of a Knights fee, sine reditu.		Francis Knolles Esquire.
	Crowland in Lincolnshire.	K. Edward the sixt, in the 4[th] year of his Reign, Decemb. 1.	Edw. Fines Knight, L[d]. Clinton and Say, high Admiral of England.	of the exchange of other lands with the Crown.	to be held in Soccage as of the Kings Manour of Louth by fealty only.		till lately in the Crown.
	Winchcomb in Glocestershire.	K. Edward the sixt, in the fift year of his Reign, June 24.	William Par, Marquesse of Northampton.	of his faithfulness and valour against the Rebels in Northfolk.	in free Soc. to be held as of the Manour of East Greenwich, sine reditu.		George Bridges Lord Shandois.

Abbey	Granted by	Unto	In consideration	Tenure and rent	After alienated to	Present owner
St. Edmunds-Bury in Suffolke.	Q. Elizabeth in the second year of her Reign, Feb. 14.	John Eyer Esquire.	of the payment of four hundred pound.	in free Soccage to be held as of the Queens Manour of East Greenwich, sine reditu.			o 2 pars rot. 13.
St. Albans in Hertfordshire.	Q. Elizabeth in the sixt of her Reign, May 6.	Christopher Smith Esq. Thomas Broughton Gent.	of the payment (for it and other lands in the Grant) of 1703 li. 1 s. 4 d.	in free and common Soccage, sine reditu.			p 4 pars rot. 32.

Hitherto we have proceeded on the most authentick authority out of Records. And although we are confident of the truth of such as follow; yet, wanting the like assurance in the Dates, Tenures, and Considerations, we thought fit to rank them by themselves.

2. Battel-Abbey in Sussex was bestowed by King Henry the eighth on Sir Anthony Browne, Knight of the Garter, and Master of His Majesties Horse, enjoyed by his heir-male in a direct line at this day.

3. Thorney-Abbey in Cambridge shire, was conferred by King Henry the eighth, on John Lord Russell, and is possessed by his Abnepos, William Earle of Bedford, in a lineall descent.

4. S. John's Priory in Coventry, was given by King Henry the eighth to Hales Esquire, Clerk of the Hanaper, at this day in possession of one of his name, and lineage.

5. Eversham-Abbey in Worcester-shire, I finde not to whom first granted, but by a long Lease it was in the possession of one Mr. Andrewes, father and son, whose Grandchilde living now at Berkhampsteed in Hertford shire, hath better thrived by God's blessing on his own industry than his Father and Grandfather did with Eversham-Abbey. The sale of the stones whereof, he imputeth a cause of their ill successe. Lately it was Sir William Curteens, and I know not to whom his Sonne sold it.

6. The Abbey of S. Bennet's in the Holme in Norfolke was never sold, but onely changed in the two and thirtieth of King Henry the eighth with the Bishop of Norwich, as appeareth by the printed Statute, which affirmeth, That the lands setled by the King on the Bishoprick were of a greater yearly value than the Lordships and Manours given to his Grace. Which might be so, seeing all profit consists not in annuall revenue; but much in casualties of Fines. Indeed, generally Coronets did gain, but Miters lose in their exchanges with the Crown.

Bennet in the Holme changed with the Bishop of Norwich.

7. S. Maryes in Yorke (with Selby, the onely Mitred Abbey beyond Trent) was kept in the Crown to be the Kings Palace, when repairing into those parts. Since called the Manour, where the Lord President of the Councell in the North held his residence. At this day it is in the hands of the States, as excepted by name in the Act for the sale of Kings lands, and one was allowed a Fee for the carefull keeping thereof.

S. Maryes in Yorke how disposed.

8. My enquirie cannot attain, to whom S. Maryes in Shrewsburie was passed. As for for Augustine's in Canterbury, I conceive it never aliened from the Crown, reading in my worthy * friend, that the remaining ruines thereof are made subject to publick uses. And thus we have a perfect account of all the Mitred English-Abbeys. The Reader well remembring, what we have formerly written at large, of S. John's of Ierusalem, and Waltham; as also of Gloceſter, Peterborough, and Weſtminſter, advanced into Cathedrals, ſave that the laſt was afterwards altered into a Collegiate-Church.

* Will: Somner in his Antiq. of Canterbury, pag. 60.

Countrey Abbeys largeſt in profit.

9. We may obſerve that the greateſt Abbeys (founded in Cities) were of the leaſt profit, becauſe ſo ſtreight-laced with ſtreets and houſes round about them that they could not grow to any extraordinary bulk for ground continued thereunto: ſo that the Sites were but Shes, as in S. Albans, S. Edmunds-Bury, Hyde, &c. Whereas Monaſteries in Countrey-Towns let looſe at more liberty to dilate themſelves, had generally a large Manour and ample Demeſnes annexed unto them.

Preſent gaine future loſſe.

10. Wiſe men have informed me, that had ſucceeding Princes followed King Henry's pattern, generally granting Abbeys only in Capite, that ſuch lands (though paſſed gratis from the Crown under ſmall rents) would notwithſtanding in ſome part have returned thither again, as affording Reſpit of Homage, Reliefs, Wardſhips, Fines for alienation for a conſtant revenue. Whereas being afterwards granted in free Soccage whilſt the tenure onely advanced the preſent ſale; the Crown was deprived of much Emolument, and more obligation.

A ſolemn Tilting proclaimed.

11. Richard Williams (alias Cromwell) Eſquire, (to whom Ramſey Abbey was partly given, partly ſold) was one of the five, who in the thirty ſecond year of Henry the eighth, made the bold challenge at Juſts to all comers that would, in France, Flanders, Scotland, and Spain. Here it was expected that ſome of our Knights Hoſpitallers (whoſe Houſe by Act of Parliament was diſſolved but a month before) ſhould appear valiantly in their vindication, if conceiving any injuſtice offered unto them. But they kept themſelves cloſe, probably not ſo much for fear of all the Challengers as of one of the Spectatours, viz: King Henry Himſelf, aſſure, if Conquerours of the King's anger, and others envy, it worſted, of their own diſgrace. Beſides, by the laws of their Order, they were not to Tilt againſt Chriſtians, but onely to ſpend their ſpears againſt Pagans and Infidels. Laſtly, the challenge ſeemed only confined to forraigners.

The noble atchievements of Rich Cromwell. * Stow in the reign of Hen. 8. pag. 580.

12. This Richard Williams (alias Cromwell) came into the place an Eſquire, but departed a Knight, dubbed by the King for his valour, clearly carrying away the credit: overthrowing Mr. Palmer * in the field at Juſts one day, and the next ſerving Mr. Culpepper at Barriers in the ſame manner. Hereupon, there goeth a Tradition in the Familie, that King Henry highly pleaſed with his proweſſe, Formerly, (ſaid He) thou waſt My Dick, but hereafter ſhalt be My Diamond, and thereat let fall His Diamond Ring unto him. In avowance whereof, theſe Cromwells have ever ſince given for their Creſt a Lyon holding a Diamond Ring in his Fore-paw.

Cenſure on Abbey Lands.

13. Some conceive theſe Abbey Lands more unſucceſsfull than any other, and infectious to the third Generation: Yea, Papiſts would perſwade us, that as Bucephalus caſt all his Riders till backed by Alexander his Lord and Maſter, ſo theſe thiefiſh Lands will diſmount all that beſtride them, untill forſooth they be (as they hope) reſtored to their proper Owners. And this they impute to the curſe of their Founders denounced to ſuch who ſhould alienate them from their firſt inſtitution. Others maintain, that no certainty can be concluded from ſuch caſualties, but that all things come to paſſe alike to all. As dye Abbey-lands, ſo dye other lands when in the hands of a vitious perſon. Thus lands as well as goods and chattels are moveables, though not from their Center, yet from their Owner. Yea, our draught lately preſented, doth prove, that many Mitred Abbeys have ſurvived the dangerous Climacterical of the third Generation.

Sir Hen. Spelman's Obſervations on Abbey-lands.

14. For mine own part, my tongue is ſo farre from beſpeaking ſuch lands with any ill ſucceſſe, that I wiſh to all lawfully poſſeſſed of them (either by the bounty of their Prince, their own, or Anceſtors fair purchaſe) that peaceably and proſperouſly they may enjoy them: Et nati natorum, ut qui naſcuntur ab ipſis. However, it will not be amiſſe to inſert the obſervation of a moſt worthy Antiquary in the County wherein he was born and beſt experienced: Who reporteth, That in Norfolke there were an hundred houſes of Gentlemen before the Diſſolution of Abbeys, poſſeſſed of fair eſtates, of whom ſo many as gained acceſſion by Abbey-lands, are at this time extinct, or much empaired; bemoaning his own familie under the latter notion, as diminiſhed by ſuch an addition.

not

15. Hear alſo what his ſon ſaith to the ſame purpoſe, * King Henry exchanged Abbey-lands, and by this means (like the duſt flung up by Moſes) they preſently diſperſe all the Kingdome over, and at once become curſes both upon the Families and Eſtates of the Owners; they often vitiouſly ſpending on their private occaſions, what was piouſly intended for publick devotion; inſomuch, that within twenty years next after the Diſſolution, moe of our Nobility, and their children, have been attainted, and died under the ſword of Iuſtice, than did from the Conqueſt, to the Diſſolution, being almoſt five hundred years; ſo as if thou examine the Liſt of the Barons in the Parliament of the 27 of Henry the eighth, thou ſhalt finde very few of them, whoſe Sons doe at this day inherit their Fathers titles and eſtates, and of theſe few, many to whom the King's favour hath reſtored, what the rigorous Law of Attainder took, both Dignity, Lands, and Poſterity. And doubtleſſs the Commons have drunk deep in this cup of deadly wine; but they, being more numerous and leſſe eminent, are not ſo obvious to obſervation.

His Son's on the ſame. *Clement Spelman in his Preface to his Father's Book, De non temerandis Eccleſiis.

16. As for the report of Reynerus *, the Reader may believe the leſſe thereof for his known ingagement to Rome, thus expreſſing himſelf, At the Diſſolution, Henry the eighth divided part of the Church-ſpoils among two hundred and ſixty Gentlemen, of families in one part of England; and at the ſame time Thomas Duke of Norfolk rewards the ſervice of twenty of his Gentlemen, with the grant of forty pounds a year out of His own inheritance; and while not ſixty of the Kings Donees had ſons owning their fathers eſtates, every one of the Dukes hath a ſon of his own loines, flouriſhing in his fathers inheritance, and I could have ſet down their ſeveral names, had conveniencie required it.

A Papiſt his obſervation. * Apoſtolatus Benedict. in Ang. fol. 227, & 228.

17. But it is high time for me to put a period to this ſubject; leſt, as the Abbeys were complained of to grow ſo great, that they engroſſed the third part of the Land: ſo my diſcourſe of them (infected with the ſame fault) will be condemned by the Reader, for the tedious prolixity thereof. The rather, becauſe this old and trite ſubject is now grown out of faſhion, men in our Age having got a new object to fix their eyes, and obſervation thereon, taking notice how ſuch Church-lands doe thrive, which ſince hath been derived into the hands of new poſſeſſors.

The Concluſion.

The end of the Sixt Book.

THE Church-Hiſtory OF BRITAIN.

THE SEVENTH BOOK.

CONTAINING THE REIGNE OF KING EDWARD THE SIXT.

THE SIXTH
KINGDAVARD
OF
THE REICHE
OF BRITAIN
OF CHRISTOPHOR
THE

To the Right Honourable,

LEICESTER DEVEREUX, VISCOUNT HEREFORD,

Lord FERRARS of Chartley, &c.

My Lord,

GReat was the difference betwixt the breeding of Adonijah and Solomon, though ſons to the ſame father. The former taſted not of Reproof, much leſſe of Correction; it being never ſaid unto him, Why[a] haſt thou done ſo?

a 1 Kings 1.6.

Solomon had his education on ſeverer Principles. He was his Parents Darling, not their[b] Fondling. It was after ſounded in his ears, What[c] my Son, and what the Son of my womb?

b Prov. 4. 3.

c Prov. 31. 2.

Our Engliſh-Gentry too often embrace the firſt courſe in breeding their Children, whereby they become old-Men, before they are wiſe-Men, becauſe their Fathers made them Gentlemen, before they were Men, making them too ſoon to know the great Means they are born to, and too long to be ignorant of any good quality, whereby to acquire a main- a maintenance, in caſe, their Eſtates, (as all things are uncertain) ſhould faile, or forſake them. Hence it is, they are as unable to endure any hardſhip as David to march in Sauls armour, (for he[f] had never proved it) utterly unacquainted therewith.

[f] 1 Sam. 17. 39.

But your diſcreet Parents, though kinde, were not cockering unto you, whom they ſent (very young) into the Low-Countreys, where in ſome ſort you earned what you eat in no leſſe honourable than dangerous employment. This hath ſetled the ſinewes of your Soule, and compacted the joynts thereof, which in too many hang looſe, as rather tackt than knit together.

Since being returned into England, partly by your Patrimony, partly by your Matrimony, an antient and fair Eſtate hath accrewed unto you. Yet it hath not grown, (as S. Baſil fancieth roſes in Paradiſe before Adams fall) without thorns and prickles. Many moleſtations attended it, through which you have waded in a good meaſure, having had TRIALS indeed, wherein on what ſide ſoever the Verdict went, you gained Patience and Experience.

Indeed, there is an experience the MISTRESSE of FOOLS, which they learn by their loſſes, and thoſe cauſed by their own careleſneſs, or wilfulneſs, in managing their affairs. But alſo there is one, the MASTER-PIECE of WISE-MEN to attain, wherein they obſerve the events of all things, after their utmoſt endevours have ſubmitted the ſucceſs to Divine Providence. Yours is of the laſt and beſt kind, whereby you are become a skilfull Maſter of Defence, knowing all the advantageous poſtures and guards in our Lawes, not thereby to vex others, but ſave your ſelf from vexation.

to

Thus having born the Yoke in your youth, you may the better afford eaſe and repoſe to your reduced age; and having ſtudied, many Men in Armes, more in Gowns, you now may ſolace your ſelf, and entertain the time, with peruſing of Books, amongſt which, I humbly requeſt, this may have the favour of your Honours eye, to whom on a double motive it is Dedicated; Firſt, becauſe containing the Life of that PRINCE, who for His Piety may be exemplary to all perſons of quality. Secondly, becauſe it was He, who conferred the higheſt (ſtill remaining) Honour, on your Family, advancing it (formerly very antient amongſt the Barons) to the degree and dignity of Viſcounts: wherein that it may long flouriſh in plenty and happineſſe, is the daily prayer of

Your Honours moſt obliged Servant,

THOMAS FULLER.

FULLER

Ann. Reg. Eliz. 1. Ann. Dom.

THE Church-History OF BRITAIN.

1546. 7 Jan. 31.

KING HENRY the eighth, though dying excommunicate in the Church of Rome, had notwithstanding His Obsequies solemnly performed at Paris in France, by the command of Francis the French [a] King, presuming so much on His own power, and the Pope's patience, otherwise such courtesie to His friend might have cost Him a curse to Himself. Then began King Edward His Son, to reign, scarce ten years old, full of as much worth, as the model of His age could hold. No pen passeth by Him without praising Him, though none praising Him to His full deserts. Yea, Sanders himself, having the stinch of his railing tongue, over-sented with the fragrant ointment of this Prince's memory, though jeering Him for His want of age, which was God's pleasure, and not King Edward's fault; and mocking Him for His Religion, the others highest honour, alloweth Him in other respects large commendations.

The hopefull beginning of King Edward.

a Godwin in Edwardo sexto, pag. 158.

2. No sooner was He come to the Crown, but a peaceable dew refreshed Gods inheritance in England, formerly parched with persecution: and this good Angel struck off the fetters from many Peters in prison, preserving those who were appointed to die. Onely Thomas Dobbie, Fellow of S. Johns in Cambridge, committed to the Counter in Bread-street, and condemned for speaking against the Masse, died of a naturall death, in respect of any publick punishment by Law inflicted on him: but, whether or no, any private impression of violence hastened his end, God alone knoweth. His speedy death prevented the [b] pardon, which the Lord Protectour intended to send him; Divine Providence so ordering it, that he should touch, not enter; see, not taste; behold, not reap benefit on earth of this Reformation. Other Confessours which had fled beyond sea, as John Hooper, Miles [c] Coverdale, &c. returned with joy into their Countrey: and all Protestants, which formerly for fear had dissembled their religion, now publickly professed the same. Of these Archbishop Cranmer was the chiefest; who, though willingly he had done no ill, and privately many good offices for the Protestants, yet his cowardly compliance hitherto with Poperie, against his conscience, can-

Peace and prosperity to the Protestants in England.

b Fox, Acts & Mon. Vol. 2. pag. 655.

c Sanders de Schis. Anglic. lib. 2. pag. 230.

Ann. Dom. 1547. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 1. Jan. 28.

not be excuſed; ſerving the times preſent in his practice, and waiting on a future alteration in his hopes, and deſires.

Commiſſioners ſent into ſeveral Counties with Inſtructions to reform.

3. Edward Semaure, the King's Uncle, lately made Lord Protectour, and Duke of Somerſet, ordered all in Church, and State. He, by the King's power, or, if you pleaſe, the King, in his protection, took ſpeedy order for Reformation of Religion. And being loth that the people of the Land ſhould live ſo long in errour, and ignorance, till a Parliament ſhould be ſolemnly ſummoned (which for ſome Reaſons of State could not ſo quickly be call'd) in the mean time, by His own Regall power and authority, and the adviſe of His wiſe, and honourable Counſell, choſe Commiſſioners, and ſent them with Inſtructions into ſeverall parts of the Kingdome, for the rooting out of ſuperſtition: the ſubſtance whereof (thirty ſix in number) we have here preſented:

The King's Injunctions.

1. That all Eccleſiaſticall perſons obſerve the Lawes for the (aboliſhing the pretended and uſurped power of the Biſhop of Rome, and confirmation of the Kings authority and ſupremacie.

2. That once a Quarter at leaſt they ſincerely declare the Word of God, diſſwading their people from ſuperſtitious fancies of Pilgrimages, praying to Images, &c. exhorting them to the works of faith, mercy, and charite.

3. That Images abuſed with Pilgrimages, and offerings thereunto, ſe forthwith taken down and deſtroyed, and that no more wax-Candles or Tapers be burnt before any Image; but onely two lights upon the high Altar before the Sacrament ſhall remain ſtill, to ſignifie that Chriſt is the very light of the world.

4. That every Holy-day, when they have no Sermon, the Pater noſter, Credo, and Ten Commandements ſhall be plainly recited in the Pulpit to the Pariſhioners.

5. That Parents and Maſters beſtow their Children and Servants either to learning, or ſome honeſt occupation.

6. That ſuch who in Caſes expreſt in the Statute are abſent from their Benefices, leave learned and expert Curates.

7. That within three Months after this Viſitation, the Bible of the larger volume in Engliſh, and within twelve Months Eraſmus his Paraphraſe on the Goſpel be provided, and conveniently placed in the Church for people to read therein.

8. That no Eccleſiaſticall perſons haunt Ale-houſes, or Taverns, or any place of unlawfull gameing.

9. That they examine ſuch who come to confeſſion to them in Lent, whether they can recite their Creed, Pater noſter, and ten Commandements in Engliſh before they receive the bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, or elſe they ought not to preſume to come to Gods board.

10. That none be admitted to preach, except ſufficiently licenſed.

11. That if they have heretofore extolled Pilgrimages, Reliques, worſhipping of Images, &c. they now openly recant and reprove the ſame as a common errour groundleſſe in Scripture.

12. That they detect and preſent ſuch who are Letters of the Word of God in Engliſh, and Fautours of the Biſhop of Rome his pretended power.

13. That a Regiſter-Book be carefully kept in every Pariſh for Weddings, Chriſtnings, and Burialls.

14. That all Eccleſiaſticall perſons not reſident upon their Benefices, and able to diſpend yearly twenty pounds, and above, ſhall in the preſence of the Church-Wardens, or ſome other honeſt men, diſtribute the fourtieth part of their revenues amongſt the poor of the Pariſh.

15. That every Eccleſiaſticall perſon ſhall give competent exhibition to ſo

many

Ann. Dom. 1546, 7 | Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 1.

many Schollers in one of the Universities, as he hath hundred pounds a year in Church promotions.

16. That the fift part of their Benefices be bestowed on their Mansion-houses, or Chancells, till they be fully repaired.

17. That he readeth these Injunctions once a Quarter.

18. That none bound to pay Tithes detain them by colour of Duty omitted by their Curates, and so redoub one wrong with another.

19. That no person henceforth shall alter any Fasting-day that is commanded, or manner of Common Prayer or Divine Service (otherwise then specified in these Injunctions) untill otherwise ordered by the Kings authority.

20. That every Ecclesiasticall person under the degree of Batchelour of Divinity, shall, within three Months after this Visitation, provide of his own the New Testament in Latine and English, with Erasmus his Paraphrase thereon. And that Bishops by themselves, and their Officers shall examine them how much they have profited in the study of holy Scripture.

21. That in the time of High Masse he that sayeth or singeth a Psalm, shall read the Epistle and Gospel in English, and one Chapter in the New Testament, at Mattens, and another at Evensong, and that when nine Lessons are to be read in the Church, three of them shall be omitted with Responds. And at Evensong the Responds, with all the Memories.

22. That to prevent in Sick persons the damnable vice of Despair, They shall learn, and have alwaies in readinesse such comfortable places and sentences of Scripture, as doe set forth the mercy, benefits, and goodnesse of God Almighty, towards all penitent and believing persons.

23. To avoid all contention and strife which heretofore have risen amongst the Kings subjects, by challenging of Places in Procession, no Procession hereafter shall be used about the Church, or Church-yard, but immediately before high Masse the Letany shall be distinctly said or sung in English, none departing the Church without just cause, and all ringing of Bells (save one) utterly forborne.

24. That the Holy-day at the first beginning, Godly instituted and ordained, be wholly given to God, in hearing the Word of God, read and taught in private and publick prayers, in acknowledging their offences to God, and amendment, in reconciling themselves to their Neighbours, receiving the Communion, visiting the sick, &c. Only it shall be lawfull for them in time of harvest to labour upon Holy and Festival daies, and save that thing which God hath sent, and that scrupulosity to abstain from working upon those daies, doth grievously offend God.

25. That no Curate admit to the Communion such who are in rancher and malice with their neighbours, till such controversies be reconciled.

26. That every Dean, Arch Deacon, &c. be[illegible]st, preach by himself personally twice a year at least.

27. That they instruct their people, not ob[illegible]olate the Ceremonies of the Church by the King commanded to be o[illegible], and not as yet abrogated. And on the other side, that whosoever doth superstitiously abuse them, doth the same to the great perill of his souls health.

28. That they take away and destroy all Shrines, covering of Shrines, Tables, Candlesticks, Trindills, or rolls of Wax, Pictures, Paintings, and other Monuments of fained Miracles, so that no memory of them remain in Walls, or Windows, exhorting their Parishioners to doe the like in their severall houses. And that a comely Pulpit be provided in a convenient place.

29. That a strong Chest be provided with a hole in the upper part thereof, (with three Keyes thereunto belonging) be provided to receive the charity of people to the poor, and the same at convenient times distributed unto them in the presence of the Parish.

30. That Priests be not bound to go to visit Women lying in Child-bed, except except in times of dangerous ſickneſſe, and not to fetch any Coarſe except it be brought to the Church yard.

Ann. Dom. 1546. 7

31. That to avoid the deteſtable ſin of Simonie, the Seller ſhall loſe his right of Patronage for that time, and the Buyer to be deprived, and made unable to receive Spiritual promotion.

32. That becauſe of the lack of Preachers, Curats ſhall read Homilies, which are or ſhall be ſet forth, by the Kings Authority.

33. Whereas many indiſcreet perſons doe uncharitably contemn and abuſe Prieſts, (having ſmall learning:) his Majeſty chargeth his Subjects that henceforth they be reverently uſed, for their Office and Miniſtration ſake.

34. That all perſons, not underſtanding Latine, ſhall pray on no other Primmer but what lately was ſet forth in Engliſh by K. Henry the eighth, and that ſuch who have knowledge in Latine uſe none other alſo, and that all Graces before and after meat be ſaid in Engliſh, and no Grammer taught in Schools but what is ſet forth by Authority.

35. That Chantery Prieſts teach you to read and write.

36. That when any Sermon or Homily ſhall be had, the Prime and Houres ſhall be omitted.

The form of bidding the Common Prayers.

YOu ſhall pray for the whole Congregation of Chriſts Church, and ſpecially, for this Church of England and Ireland: wherein, firſt, I commend to your devout prayers, the Kings moſt excellent Majeſty, Supreme Head immediately under God, of the ſpirituality and temporalty of the ſame Church: And for Queen Katharine Dowager, and alſo for my Lady Mary, and my Lady Elizabeth, the Kings ſiſters.

Secondly, You ſhall pray for my Lord Protectors grace, with all the reſt of the Kings Majeſties Councell: for all the Lords of this Realm, and for the Clergie, and the Commons of the ſame: beſeeching Almighty God, to give every of them in his degree, grace to uſe themſelves in ſuch wiſe, as may be to Gods glory, the Kings honour, and the weal of this Realm.

Thirdly, You ſhall pray for all them that be departed out of this world in the faith of Chriſt, that they with us, and we with them at the Day of Judgment may reſt both body and ſoul, with Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, in the kingdome of heaven.

Obſervations on the Kings Injunctions.

The wiſdome of our Reformers.

Let us here admire the wiſedome in our firſt Reformers, who proceeded ſo moderately in a matter of ſo great conſequence: To reform all at once, had been the ready way to reform nothing at all. New wine muſt be gently powred into old bottles, leſt the ſtrength of the liquor, advantaged with the violence of the infuſion, break the veſſel. Iacob could not keep peace with Eſau (preſumed fleet or fore as uſed to hunting) whileſt he had in his company, the * under children and flocks with young, which if over-driven one day, would die. And though no doubt he himſelf was foot-man enough to go along with his Brother, yet he did lead on ſoftly according as the cattle and children were able to endure. Thus our wiſe Reformers reflected diſcreetly on the infirmities of people, long nouzled in ignorance and ſuperſtition, and incapable of a ſudden and perfect alteration.

*Gen. 33. 13.

Onely two lights left.

On this account (in the third Injunction) they reduced Candles formerly ſans number in Churches to two, upon the high Altar, before the Sacrament; theſe being termed lights, ſhews they were not lumina cæca, but burning. Know alſo that at

Ann. Reg. 6. Ann. Dom. 1546, 7

at this time there was an universall dilapidation of Chancells, and men had seen so many Abbey Churches plackt down, that they even left Parish Churches to fall down on themselves; now to repair them all at once, would have stopt the holes in the Chancells, and made one in the states of the Ministers. It was therefore in the sixteenth Injunction ordered, That a fift part of their means should be imployed therein, whereby the work was effectually done without any great dammage to the Repairers.

What meant by Memories.

By Memories appointed to be omitted, [Injunction 21.] we understand, the Obsequia for the dead, which, some say, succeeded in the place of the [Heathen] Roman Parentalia.

Good policie.

The abolishing Processions is politickly put on a civil account, [Injunction 23.] to avoid contention about places. Indeed, peoples pride herein, consisted in pretended humility, which the Injunction at large, termeth a fond Courtesie. For in a mock-practise of the Apostles * precept, in honour preferring one another, they strained courtesie to goe last. Where, by the way, I conceive that accounted the highest place, which was next the Crosse bearer, or next the Priest carrying the Host.

* Rom. 12. 12.

Quare, whether in the 24 Injunction, labouring in time of Harvest on Holy-daies, and Festivals, relateth not onely to those of Ecclesiasticall constitution, (as dedicated to Saints) or be inclusive of the Lords day also. Solemnly of the Sunday. In Joh. 5. & Colos. 6. c. 3.

Mr. Calvin in his Letter to the Lord * Protector, disliketh the praying for the dead: and this is one of those things, which he termed, tolerabiles ineptias, Englished by some, tolerable fooleries; more mildly by others, tolerable unfitnesses. In requital whereof, Bishop Williams was wont to say, That Master Calvin had his tolerabiles morositates.

Mr. Calvin dissenes. * pag. 187, & 188.

Moderation goeth farre.

And thus moderately did our first Reformers begin, as the subject they wrote on would give them leave; for as carefull Mothers and Nurses on condition they can get their Children to part with knives, are contented to let them play with rattles: So they permitted ignorant people still to retain some of their fond and foolish Customes, that they might remove from them the most dangerous and destructive Superstitions.

The Protestant Library.

Come we now to give in a List of such principall Books which in the Reign of this King and His Father, as Preparatory to, and Introductive of Reformation; and to bring them high enough, we will begin with Hen: 7th.

Prayers printed by the Commandements of the moost hye and vertuous Princesse our lyege Lady Elizabeth by the grace of God Quene of England and of France, and also of the right hye and moost noble Princesse Margarett mother to our Sovtraign Lord the King, &c. without the year when printed.

V. Herbert p. 255.

Hen: 8th.

The Institution of a Christian man containyng the Exposition of the Commune Crede, of the seaven Sacraments, of the ten Commandements, and of the Pater noster, and the Ave Maria, Justification and Purgatory.

London, by Tho: Barthelet, 1537.

A necessary Doctrine and Erudition for any Christen man, set furthe by the Kynges Majestie of England, &c.

London, by Tho: Barthelet, 1543.

Henry

Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 1. Ann. Dom. 1547.

Hen: 8th.

Henry the eighth his Epiſtle to the Emperour, Chriſten Princes, and all true Chriſten men, deſiring peace and concord amonges them. Againſt the power of the Pope, and concerning a Generall Councell.
London, by Tho: Barthelet, 1538.

A Proteſtation made for the moſt mighty and moſt redoubted King of England, &c. and his hole Counſell and Clergie, wherein is declared, that neither His Highneſſe, nor His Prelates, neyther any other Prince or Prelate is bound to come or ſend to the pretended Councell, that Paul Biſhop of Rome, firſt by a Bull indicted at Mantua a Citie in Italy, and now alate by an other Bull, hath preroged to a place no man can telle where.
London, by Tho: Barthelet, 1537.

Articles deviſed by the Kinges Highnes Majeſtie to ſtabliſhe Chriſten quietnes and unitie amonge us, and to avoyde contentious opinions, which Articles be alſo approved by the conſent and determination of the hole Clergie of this Realme.
Lond: Tho: Barthelet, 1536.

Injunctions to the Clergie.
1536. M. Sc.

Articles deviſed by the holle conſent of the Kinges moſt honourable Counſayle, His Graces licence opteyned thereto, not only to exhorte, but alſo to enforme His loving Subjects of the trouth.
London, Tho: Barthelet, 1533.

Orarium ſeu libellus Precationum per Regiam Majeſtatem & Clerum Latinè editus.
Ex officina Richard Graftoni, 1545.

Pia & Catholica Chriſtiani hominis inſtitutio.
Londini apud Thomam Barthelet, 1544.

Reformatio Legum Eccleſiaſticarũ ex authoritate primum Regis Hen: 8. inchoata, deinde per Regem Edw: 6. provecta &c.
Londini, ex officina Jo: Day, 1571.

Edw: 6th.

Injunctions given by the moſt excellent Prince, Edward the ſixt, by the grace of God King of England, France, and Ireland: Defendor of the Fayth, and in yearthe under Chriſt, of the Church of England and of Ireland the Supreeme Hedde, to all and ſinguler His loving Subjects, aſwell of the Clergie as of the Laietie.
By R. Grafton, 1547.

Articles to be enquired of in the Kynges Majeſties viſitation.
By Rich: Grafton, Cum privilegio.

Prayer Communion book tranſlated into French for Jerſey and Garneſey.
1553.

The

Ann. Dom. 1547. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 1.

Edw: 6th.

The Booke of Common-Prayer and Administration of Sacraments, &c.
London, 1549. & 1552.

The forme and manner of making and consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons.
1552, & 1549.

The Copie of a Letter sent to all those Preachers which the Kings Majestie hath licensed to preach, from the Lord Protectors Grace, and others of the Kinges Majesties most Honourable Councell.
The 23 of May, 1548.

Catechismus brevis, Christianæ disciplinæ summam continens, omnibus ludimagistris authoritate Regiâ commendatus.
Londini, 1553.

Articuli de quibus in Synodo Londinensi, 1552. ad tollendam opinionum dissensionem & consensum veræ religionis firmandum, inter Episcopos & alios eruditos atque pios viros convenerat: Regia similiter authoritate promulgati.
Londini.

The Primer or Booke of Prayers, (translated out of Hen: the 8ths Orarium.)
London by Rich: Grafton, 1547.

Certain Sermons, (viz: the first part of the Church Homilies) appointed by the Kinges Majestie to be read everie Sonday and Holy day, &c.
1549, & 1547.

A Primer or Booke of private Prayer, &c. in the 7 yeare of Ed: 6.
Ex officina Wilhelmi Seres, 1552.
1553

The order of the Communion, with the Proclamation.
London, by Rich: Grafton, 1548.

Q. Marie.

The Primer in Latin and English, after the use of Sarum.
London, 1555.

Edm: Bonners Catechisme, 1555. with Homelies composed by H. Pendleton, and Jo: Harpesfield.
London, 1555.

These are the principall State-books which that Age produced, (not mentioning such, (as numberlesse) which private persons set forth) onely I cannot as yet recover the Lord Cromwell's Catechisme, except it be concealed under another name, amongst the Books aforementioned.

4. Come we now to the Liturgie, which in the Reign of K. Henry the eighth, was said or sung all in Latine, save only the Creed, Pater noster, and ten Commandements, put into English by the Kings command, Anno 1536. Nine years after, viz: 1545, the Letanie was permitted in English, and this was the farthest pace which which the Reformation ſtept in the Reign of King Henry the eighth. But under His ſon King Edward the ſixt, a new form of Divine worſhip was ſet forth in the vulgar Tongue, which paſſed a threefold purgation.

Ann. Dom. 1547. Ann. Reg. Edw. 1.

The firſt Edition of the Liturgie or Common-Prayer.

In the firſt year of King Edward the ſixt, it was recommended to the care of the moſt grave Biſhops, and others, (aſſembled by the King at His Caſtle at Windſor) and when by them compleated, ſet forth in Print, 1548, with a Proclamation in the Kings name to give authority thereunto; being alſo recommended unto every Biſhop by eſpeciall [c] Letters from the Lords of the Councell to ſee the ſame put in execution. And in the next year a penalty was impoſed by Act of Parliament on ſuch which ſhould deprave or neglect the uſe thereof.

1549

[b] 5 & 6 of Edward the ſixt, cap. 1.

[c] See a form of them in Fox's Acts & Mon. fol. 1491.

The 2d Edit. of the Liturgy or Common-Prayer.

Some exceptions being taken by Mr. Calvin abroad, and ſome Zealots at home, at the former Liturgie, the Booke was brought under a review, and by a [b] Statute in Parliament it was appointed, That it ſhould be faithfully and godly peruſed, explained, and made fully perfect.

The 3d Edit. of the Liturgy or Common-Prayer.

In the firſt of Qu. Elizabeth, 1559, it was committed by the Queen to the care of ſome learned men by whom it was altered in ſome few paſſages, and ſo preſented to the Parliament, and by them received and eſtabliſhed.

Perſons imployed therein.

1. Tho: Cranmer Archbiſhop of Canterbury.
2. George Day Biſhop of Chicheſter.
3. Tho: Goodrich Biſhop of Ely.
4. John Skip Biſhop of Hereford.
5. Hen: Holbeach Biſhop of Lincolne.
6. Nicholas Ridley Biſhop of Rocheſter.
7. Tho: Thileby Biſhop of Weſtminſter.
8. Doctor May Dean of S. Pauls.
9. John Tailer then Dean (afterwards Biſhop of Lincolne.
10. Doctor Haines Dean of Exeter.
11. Doctor Robertſon afterwards Dean of Durham.
12. Doctor John Redman Maſter of Trinity Colledge in Cambridge.
13. Doctor Richard Cox then Almoner to the King, afterwards Biſhop of Ely.

Perſons imployed therein.

Wee meet not with their particular names, but may probably conceive they were the ſame with the former, for the main, though ſome might be ſuperadded by Royal appointment.

Perſons imployed therein.

1. Maſter Whitehead once Chaplaine to Queen Anna Bullen.
2. Matthew Parker afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury.
3. Edmund Grindall afterwards Biſhop of London.
4. Richard Cox afterwards Biſhop of Ely.
5. James Pilkinton afterwards Biſhop of Durham.
6. Doctor May Deane of St. Pauls, and Maſter of Trinity Coll: in Cambridge.
7. Sir Tho: Smith principall Secretary of Eſtate.

As for the fourth and laſt Edition of the Liturgie, in the firſt of King James, 1603, with ſome ſmall alterations in the Rubrick, after the Conference at Hampton-Court, thereof (God willing) in due time hereafter.

5. The

Ann. Dom. 1547. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 1.

5. The Book of Books ſtill remains, I mean, the Bible it ſelfe. Know then that ſome exceptions being taken at Tindalls Tranſlation, the Biſhops (then generally Popiſh) complied ſo farre in a * Conference with the deſires of King Henry the eighth, that on condition the people would give in Tindalls [pretended falſe] Tranſlation, they would ſet forth another, better agreeing with the Originall. And although this took up ſome time to effect, the work being great in it ſelf, and few workmen, as yet, Maſters of the Myſterie of PRINTING; yet at laſt, it was accompliſhed, but more purely and perfectly done in after-Ages, as by the enſuing parallels will appear.

* ſet down at large in the Regiſter of Archbiſhop Warham.

The firſt Traſlation of the Bible.	The ſecond Tranſlation of the Bible.	The third Tranſlation of the Bible.
Set forth in the Reigne of K. Henry the eighth, An. 1541. countenanced with a grave & pious Preface of Archbiſhop Cranmer, and authoriz'd by the Kings Proclamation, dated May the 6. Seconded alſo with [c] Inſtructions from the King, to prepare people to receive benefit the better from ſo heavenly a treaſure, it was called, The BIBLE of the greater Volume, rather commended than commanded to people. Few Countrey-Pariſhes could go to the coſt of them, though Biſhop Bonner cauſed ſix of them to be chained in the Church of S. Pauls, in convenient places.	Set forth in the Reign of K. Edward the ſixt, and not onely ſuffered to be read by particular perſons, but ordered to be read over yearly in the Congregation, as a principall part of Divine Service. Two ſeverall Editions I have ſeen thereof, one ſet forth 1549, the other 1551, but neither of them divided into verſes.	Set forth in the ſecond of Qu. Elizabeth, the laſt Tranſlation, was again review'd by ſome of the moſt learned Biſhops (appointed thereunto by the Queens Commiſſion) whence it took the name of the Biſhops BIBLE: and by the Queens ſole commandement reprinted, and left free and open to all Her well affected Subjects.

[c] Extant in Sir Thomas Cottons Library.

As for the laſt and beſt Tranſlation of the Bible in the Reign of King James, by a ſelect company of Divines imployed therein, in due time, (by Gods aſſiſtance) largely thereof.

6. And now we ſhall come to ſmall game, rather than ſhut out, not caring how low we deſcend, ſo be it we may ſatisfie the Reader, and inform poſterity, preſenting a Catalogue of ſuch Proclamations which the King ſet forth in the foure firſt years, having any tendency or relation to Eccleſiaſticall matters.

1. A Proclamation concerning the effectuall payment of Penſions, due out of the Court of Augmentations, to any late Abbot, Prior, &c. which it ſeemeth lately were detained. Anno 1° Edvardi ſexti, Septem. 18.

2. A Proclamation concerning the irreverent Talkers of the Sacrament: For, after the Tranſubſtantiation, and the ſuperſtition of the Corporall preſence was removed, many perſons (no leſſe ignorant than violent) fell from adoring to contemning of the holy Elements, till retrenched by this Proclamation, ſet forth, 1° Edvardi ſexti, Decemb. 27.

Ann. Dom. 1547. Ann. Reg. Edw. 6.

3. A Proclamation for abſtaining from fleſh in Lent-time, Anno 1° Edvardi ſexti, Januarii 16.

4. A Proclamation againſt ſuch as innovate a Ceremony, or Preach without licence, Anno 2° Evardi ſexti, Febr. 6. 1548. 2.

5. A Proclamation inhibiting Preachers, Anno 2° Edvardi ſexti, April. 24. Whereof this was the occaſion: certain Popiſh Preachers diſaffected to the Kings Government, endevoured in their Sermons to poſſeſſe people of ſcandalous reports againſt the King, as if He intended to lay ſtrange exactions on the people, and to demand Half a Crown a piece of every one who ſhould be Married, Chriſtned, or Buried. To prevent further miſchief, the King ordered by Proclamation, That none ſhould Preach except licenſed under the Seals of the Lord Protector, or Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

6. A Proclamation for the Inhibition of all Preachers: the ſecond of Edward the ſecond. Sept. 23.

Becauſe this Proclamation is ſhort, hard to be come by, and (if I miſtake not) conducing much to acquaint us with the character of thoſe times, it may be acceptable here to exemplifie the ſame.

WHereas of late, by reaſon of certaine controverſious and ſeditious Preachers, the Kinges Majeſtie, moved of tender zeale, and love, which He hath to be quiet of His Subjects, by the adviſe of the Lord Protectour, and other His Highneſſe Councell, hath by Proclamation, inhibited and commanded, That no manner of perſon, except ſuch as was licenced by His Highneſſe the Lord Protectour, or by the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, ſhould take upon him to preach in any open audience, upon pain in the ſaid Proclamation contained; and that upon hope and aſſurance, that thoſe being choſen and elect men, ſhould preach and ſet forth onely to the people ſuch things as ſhould be to Gods honour, and the benefit of the Kinges Majeſties ſubjects. Yet nevertheleſſe, His Highneſſe is advertiſed, that certain of the ſaid preachers, ſo licenced, not regarding ſuch good admo-

Ann. Dom. 1548. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 2.

admonitions as hath been by the ſaid Lord Protectour and the reſt of the Councell on His Majeſties behalf by Letters, or otherwiſe given unto them, hath abuſed the ſaid authority of preaching, and behaved themſelves irreverently, and without good order in the ſaid preachings, contrary to ſuch good inſtructions and advertiſements, as was given unto them, whereby much contention and diſorder might riſe and inſue, in this his Majeſties Realm: wherefore his Highneſſe, minding to ſee very ſhortly, one uniforme order, throughout this his Realm, and to put an end to all controverſies in Religion, ſo farre as God ſhall give grace (for which cauſe at this time, certain Biſhops, and notable learned men, by his highneſſe commandement are congregate) hath by th' adviſe aforeſaid thought good, although certain and many of the ſaid preachers ſo before licenced, have behaved themſelf very diſcretly and wiſely, and to the honor of God and his highneſſe contentation, yet at this preſent, and untill ſuch time, that the ſaid Order ſhall be ſet forth generally, throughout this His Majeſties Realme, to inhibit, and by theſe preſents doth inhibit generally as well the ſaid Preachers ſo before licenced, as all manner of perſons whoſoever they be, to preach in open audience in the pulpit or otherwiſe, by any ſought colour or fraud, to the diſobeying of this commandement, to the intent that the whole Clergie in this mean ſpace, might apply themſelf to prayer to Almighty God, for the better atchieving of the ſame moſt Godly intent and purpoſe, not doubting but that alſo His loving Subjects in the mean time will occupie themſelf to Gods honour, with due prayer in the Church, and patient hearing of the Godly Homelies, heretofore ſet forth by His Highneſſe Injunctions unto them, and ſo endevour themſelf, that they may be the more ready with thankefull obedience to receive a most quiet, godly, and uniform order, to be had throughout all His said Realms and Dominions. And therefore, hath willed all His loving Officers, and Ministers, as well Justices of peace, as Majors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Constables, or any other His Officers, of what estate, degree, or condition soever they be, to be attendant upon this Proclamation and commandement, and to see the infringers or breakers thereof to be imprisoned; and His Highnesse, or the Lord Protectors grace, or His Majesties Councell, to be certified thereof immediately, as they tender His Majesties pleasure, and will answer to the contrary at their perill.

Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 1.

Ann. Dom. 1548.

A Pannick silence of Pulpits.

16. Some Preachers perusing the aforesaid Proclamation, will complain of persecution, that all the Pulpits in England should be universally silenced at once, and will conclude it summum jus, That the Righteous should be condemned with the Wicked: the mouthes of good Ministers stopt with Railers. Well might the souls of weak Christians be faint and feeble, having no warm meat, but the cold Homilies allowed them. But Statesmen easily excuse the matter, finding the juncture of time falling out when many Popish Pulpits sounded the Alarum to Ket his Rebellion, and the Devon-shire Commotion, whereof hereafter. Besides, this prohibition of preaching lasted but for few weeks, and we read of a silence for about * the space of half an hour even in heaven it self.

* Revel. 1. 8.

7. A Proclamation for the payment of the late Incumbents of Colledges, and Chanteries, lately dissolved, Anno 3° Edvardi sexti, Octob. 31.

A Proclamation against Stage-plaies.

17. The Pulpit thus shut and silent by Proclamation, the Stage was the more open and vocall for the same, the Popish Priests (which though unseen) stood behinde the hanging, or lurked in the tyring-house, removed their invectives from Sermons to Playes, and a more proper place indeed for the venting thereof. Here it made old sport, to see the New Religion (as they term it) made ridiculous, with the prime Patrons thereof, which caused the insuing Proclamation for the prohibition.

8. A

Ann. Dom. 1549. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 3.

8. A Proclamation for the inhibition of Players, Anno 3 Edvardi 6. Aug: 6. And ſome perchance will not grudge the time to read the form thereof.

FOr*aſmuch, as a great number of thoſe that be* common Players of Enterludes and Plaies, as well within the City of London, or elſwhere, within the Realm, doe for the moſt part play ſuch Interludes, as contain matter, tending to ſedition, and contemning of ſundry good orders and laws; whereupon are grown, and daily are like to grow and enſue much diſquiet, diviſion, tumults, and uprores in this Realm: the Kings Majeſtie, by the adviſe and conſent of his deareſt Uncle, EDWARD Duke of Somerſet, Governour of His Perſon, and Protectour of His Realms, Dominions, and Subjects, and the reſt of His Highneſſe privie Councell, ſtraitly chargeth and commandeth all, and every His Majeſties ſubjects, of whatſoever ſtate, order, or degree they be, that from the ninth day of this preſent Month of Auguſt, untill the Feaſt of All-Saints next comming, they, nor any of them, openly, or ſecretly, play in the Engliſh Tongue, any kinde of Interlude, Play, Dialogue, or other matter, ſet forth in form of play, in any place, publick or private, within this Realm, upon pain that whoſoever ſhall play in Engliſh any ſuch Play, Interlude, Dialogue, or other matter, ſhall ſuffer impriſonment, and further puniſhment, at the pleaſure of His Majeſtie.

For the better execution whereof, His Majeſty, by the ſaid adviſe and conſent, ſtraitly chargeth and commandeth all and ſingular Majors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Conſtables, Headboroughs, Tything-men, Juſtices of Peace, and all other His Majeſties head Officers, in all the parts throughout the Realm, to give order, and ſpeciall heed, that this Proclamation be in all behalfs, well and truly kept and obſerved, as they and every of them tender His Highneſſe pleaſure, and will avoid His indignation.

18. The

Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 3. Ann. Dom. 1549.

18. The Proclamation being but temporary, did not take down, but only clear the ſtage for a time, reformed Enterludes (as they term them) being afterward permitted; yea, in the firſt of Queen Elizabeth, Scripture-plaies were acted even in the Church it ſelf, which in my opinion, the more pious, the more profane, ſtooping faith to fancy, and abating the majeſtie of Gods Word. Such Pageants might inform, not edifie, though indulged the ignorance of that Age: For, though children may be played into Learning, all muſt be wrought into Religion, by Ordinances of Divine inſtitution, and the means ought to be as ſerious, as the end is ſecret.

REx omnibus ad quos præſentes &c. ſalutem. Sciatis quod nos de gratia noſtra ſpeciali, ac ex certa ſcientia & mero motu noſtris dedimus & conceſſimus ac per præſentes damus & concedimus dilecto ſervienti noſtro Thomæ Barthelet Impreſſori noſtro quandam annuitatem ſive quendam annualem redditum quatuor librarum ſterlingorum; Habendum & annuatim percipiendum prædictam annuitatem ſive annualem redditum quatuor librarum eidem Thomæ Barthelet à Feſto Paſchæ, Anno Regni noſtri viceſimo primo, durante vita ſua de Theſauro noſtro ad receptum Scaccarii noſtri per manus Theſaurarum & Camerarii noſtrorum ibidem pro tempore exiſtendo ad Feſta Sancti Michaelis Archangeli & Paſchæ per equales portiones &c. quod expreſſa mentio &c.

In cujus &c. teſtimonium rei apud Weſtminſterienſem viceſimo ſecundo die Februarii, Anno Regni HENRICI Octavi viceſimo primo.

Per Breve de privato Sigillo.

Oxford Library reformed of all its ancient Manuſcripts.

19. An ample Commiſſion was granted to John Dudley Earl of Warwick, and eight more, any ſeven, ſix, five, four, three, two, or one of them, to viſit in capite & membris, the whole Dioceſſe, but eſpecially the Univerſity of Oxford. The effects of this Viſitation doe not appear, ſave onely that they ſo clearly purged the Univerſity from all Monuments of ſuperſtition, that they left not one Book of many goodly Manuſcripts, wherewith it was furniſhed by the munificence of ſeverall Benefactors. Thus covetouſneſs and ambition are ſuch active vices, they are ſeldome off the Theatre, though not appearing with their own faces, but the borrowed masks of publick good of Church or State. Such Robbers deſerve not the benefit of the Clergie to be ſaved by their book, who feloniouſly, (not to ſay ſacrilegiouſly) purloined a publick Library from an Univerſity.

I oath to believe.

20. The blame is commonly caſt on Doctor Cox, who, as one ſaith (but it is but one who ſaith it) being then Chancellour of the Univerſity, ſo * cancelled the Books thereof, they could never ſince recover them. Indeed, I finde b another Author charging him therewith, but with this Parentheſis (tù ſaid) and my charity would fain believe Fame a falſe report therein, finding him otherwiſe a deſerving perſon, very well qualified; and it is ſtrange to me, that he who at this preſent, was the Kings Almoner to diſpenſe his charity in giving to others, ſhould be ſo cruell and covetous, and to deprive an Univerſity of ſo pretious a treaſure ſo long and juſtly belonging unto them.

* Sir Jo Haring, in the Biſhops of Ely.

b In his Preface to the Life of Sir Io Cheek, printed at Oxford, An. 1641.

21. The

Ann. Reg. Edw. 6. 3 Ann. Dom. 1549.

21. The King's affairs both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil ſtood now in a probable poſture of ſucceſs, gliding on with a faire and full current, when both on a ſodain were unexpectedly obſtructed with domeſtical diſſentions of his own Subjects. Diſtempers not conſiderable, if ſingly conſidered in themſelves, but very dangerous in their concurrence, as if all in ſeverall Counties, at one inſtant were acted with the ſame Spirit of Rebellion. My Author imputeth it to Midſommer-Moon, and the Sun now in Cancer, though ſurely it proceeded from a deeper cauſe, as will appear to the peruſers of theſe two contemporary Treaſons:

An Epidemical diſtemper of diſloyalty.

Devon Commotion.

June 10.

1. It began on Whiteſon-monday at Sampford-Courtney, where the People tumultuouſly compelled the Prieſt (whoſe ſecret compliance is ſuſpected by ſome covertly to court their compulſion) to ſay Maſſe, and officiate in Latine, as beſt pleaſed with what they leaſt underſtood.

2. Henry Arundle Eſquire, Governor of the Mount in Cornwall (one whoſe abilities might have been better imployed) Winnſlade a man of worſhip, and one Coffin a Gentleman, were their principall Conducters. Otherwiſe (though aſſuming to themſelves the high ſtyle of the Commons of Devonſhire and Cornwall) they were but an heap of mean Mechanicks, though many in number, and daily increaſing, ſo that at laſt they were reputed to exceed ten thouſand, all ſtout and able perſons.

3. Sir Pierce Courtney Sheriffe of Devonſhire appear'd very loyal and active for their ſeaſonable ſuppreſſing. But others of the County Gentry, (whoſe names I had rather the Reader ſhould learn from my Authors pen, than mine own) by their privie connivance, and in effect concurrence, much advantaged their proceedings. Many were taken Priſoners by them, becauſe they would be taken, and found favour thereupon. And now the ſeditious march in a full body to Exeter, and on the Citizens refuſall to admit them in, reſolve ſuddenly to beſiege it, boaſting they would ſhortly meaſure the Silks and Sattins therein by the length of their Bowes.

July 2.

4. Exeter is a round City on a riſing Hill, moſt capable of fortification both for the ſite and forme thereof. Her walls (though of the old Edition) were competently ſtrong and well repaired. John Blackaller Major of Exeter, though a meer

Norfolk Rebellion.

1. It began about the 20th of June at Attilborrough about the laying open of Commons, pretended lately incloſed to the prejudice of the Poor. Much increaſed on the 6. of July at Windham Play, where there was a great confluence of idle people repairing from all parts of the County.

The beginning of two Rebellions.

2. Robert Ket, Tanner of Windham, one of more wealth than common folk of his craft, yet of more wit than wealth, confidence than either, was choſen their Captain. He with two Aſſiſtants, choſen out of every hundred, kept his Kings Bench, Chancery, and all other Courts, under a Tree, termed the Oake of Reformation, where he did juſtice, (be it wrong or right) to all ſuch as were ſummoned before him. In ſhort time they increaſed to be more than twenty thouſand.

Their Ringleaders, and number.

3. Sir Edmond Windham Sheriffe of Northfolke, commanded them in the King's name peaceably to depart. But had not his Horſemanſhip been better than his Rhetorick, himſelf had not departed the place. Yea now the * Rebels began to play their pranks, threatning to burn the Houſe, and defacing the Dovecoat, (formerly a Chappel before it was turned of an Houſe of Prayer into a Den of Thieves) of Maſter Corbets of Sprowſton, and committing many outrages, layed all Paſtures rather waſte than open, where they came. Yea, now they march towards Norwich the chief place in the County.

The ſheriffs endevours ſucceed not.

* Hooker (aliàs Vowell) in Hollingſhed, p. 1015, & 1017.

Idem p. 1029.

4. Norwich is like a great volume with a bad cover, having at beſt but parchment walls about it. Nor can it with much coſt and time be effectually fortified, becauſe under the frowning brow of Mouſhold Hill, hanging over it meer Merchant, little skilled in Politick, leſſe in Military affairs, had wiſdome to know, who were wiſer than himſelf, and willingly to be directed by them. And now the Seditious having taken ordnance at Topſham, ſet down before Exeter, preſuming quickly to conquer the ſame.

The deſcription of Exeter and Norwich.

The Rebels ſend proud demands to the King.

5. But firſt they are conſulting about Articles to be ſent to the King. Some would have no Juſtices (can you blame Offenders if deſiring to deſtroy their enemies?) others no Gentlemen, all no Engliſh ſervice: Maſſe muſt be reſtored, the ſix Articles (lately repealed) they would have put in execution, and Popery re eſtabliſhed. Concluding all with this cloſe, (the gilded paper to wrap up poiſonous Treaſons at the beginning thereof) We pray God ſave King EDWARD, for we be His, both body and goods. Whoſe unreaſonable demands were juſtly rejected by the King, yet pardon proclaimed to ſuch as would accept thereof: which the Seditious (miſtaking the Kings favour, to be His fear) utterly refuſed.

Exeter reſiſteth; Norwich yeildeth to the Rebels.

6. Mean time Exeter was not ſo much frighted with her foes without, as with famine and faction within the walls thereof. Great was the want of victuals and bread eſpecially. Now

Plebs neſcit jejuna timere.

Where there is the barking of the belly, there no other commands will be heard, much leſſe obeyed. But this was in ſome ſort qualified by proportioning all proviſions in the City to all alike, and mean folke will be the better pleaſed with courſe and ſhort diet, when eating out of the ſame diſh with their betters. When in ſucceſſfull ſallies they recovered any cattle from the Rebels, the poor had the principall ſhare thereof.

7. Faction in the City was of moſt dangerous conſequence, the generality thereof favouring Popery, and cordial Proteſtants but few in compariſon of the other party. However, this was a good help to the Proteſtants, that ſuch who ſevered from them in the Church, joyned with them in the Town houſe. Rich Papiſts feared their goods would be condemned as heretical even by the Rebels of their own Religion, which made them perſiſt in their loyalty to their Soveraign.

8. John

it. The River Yete ſo wanton, that it knoweth not its own minde which way to goe, ſuch the involved flexures thereof within a mile of this City, runneth partly by, partly through it, but contributeth very little to the ſtrengthning thereof. Ann. Dom. 1549.

5. The Rebels encamped, or rather enkennelled themſelves on Mouſhold-Hill, (whereon Mount-Surry a fair Houſe of the Dukes of Northfolk) whence they had free egreſſe and regreſſe into Norwich as oft as they pleaſed. One Coigniers, a Vicar in the City, they had for their Chaplain, and were ſo religiouſly rebellious, that prayers Morning and Evening were read amongſt them. Mean time, ſo intolerable was their inſolence that now they ſent up ſuch Demands to the King, to which He neither would in honour, nor could in juſtice condeſcend. Yet the King conſtantly chequered His comminations with Proclamations of pardon, which the Rebels ſcorn'd to accept.

6. As for Thomas Cod Major of Norwich, and others of the Gentry, detained priſoners in Ket's camp, they were admitted to the counſels of the Rebels for the better credit thereof. If Ket were preſent, they were no better than herbe John in the pottage, and had no influence on their conſultations. But if he happily chanced to be abſent, then they were like S. Johns wort, (ſo ſoveraign for ſoars, and againſt the plague it ſelf) and did much mitigate the fury of their miſchievous Decrees. Mean time great plenty was in Kets camp, (where a fat ſheep was ſold for a groat) but penury and miſery in all other places.

7. Doctor Matthew Parker (afterwards Archbiſhop of Canterbury) getting up into the Oake of Reformation, preached to their Rebels of their duty and allegiance. But the Oake as ſoon as the Auditory would embrace his Doctrine, yea his life was likely to be ended before his Sermon (Arrows being ſhot at him) had not Coigniers, Kets Chaplain, ſeaſonably, yet abruptly, ſet the Te Deum, during the ſinging whereof the Dr. withdrew to ſing his part at home, and thank God for his great deliverance.

8. William

Ann. Reg. Ed. 6.

Ann. Dom. 1549.

8. John Russell, Lord privie Seal, was sent down with small Forces to suppresse the Commotion. A person very proper for that service, as of a stout spirit, and richly landed in this County. He stayed some time at Honyton in vain expecting promised supplies, either because this Lord was lookt on as of the Protectors party, whose Court-interest did much decline, or because Norfolke Rebellion, as nearer London, engrossed all warlike provisions. Thus was this Lord in deep distresse, having nothing (save his Commission) strong about him, and his few forces, for fear, and want of pay, began daily to forsake him.

9. And now following the advice of the Dorset shire Gentry, he was ready to return, when three Princely Merchants (for so may I term them, both for great interest, and loyal intention:) viz: Thomas Prestwood, Thomas Bodly, and John Periam, so improved their credits with Bristoll, Lime, and Taunton, that they furnished the Lord Russell with necessaries to march forward. Animated herewith, they advance, and gave the Rebels such a blow at Fenington-bridge, that they left three hundred of their bodies dead on the place.

10. Soon after the Lord Gray of Wilton, (whose slowness may be excused, as busied by the way in suppressing Tumults in Buckingham and Oxford shire) came with a company of Horsmen, and 300 Italian Shot, under Baptist Spinola their Leader, to recruit the Lord Russell. Here one would wonder to behold the native English fighting in the maintenance of the Masse, opposed by Italians, untill he considereth, that these foraigners, being Souldiers of Fortune, consulted the Coine, not the Cause of such as entertained them. And now the Kings Army advanceth towards Exeter, a word or two of which Cities sad condition.

11. The Rebels had often attempted to fire the Gates of the City, till at last the Citizens found the Paradox true, that the onely way to keep their City shut was to set their Gates open, making rampires more defensible behinde them. As for the Enemies intent to undermine and blow up the Walls, it was first discovered, then defeated by John Newcombe

8. William Par Marquesse of Northampton, but more acquainted with the witty, than the warlike part of Pallas, (as compleat in Musick, Poetry, and Courtship) with many persons of honour, as the Lords Sheffield, and Wentworth, Sir Anthony Denny, Sir Ralph Sadlier, Sir Thomas Paston, &c. is sent to quell this Rebellion. They were assisted with a band of Italians, under Malatesta their Captain, whereof the Rebels made this advantage to fill the Countrey with complaints, that these were but an handfull of an armfull to follow driving on the designe, to subject England to the insolence of Foraigners.

Aide sent to suppresse the Rebels.

9. Now, though neither wisdome nor valour was wanting in the Kings Souldiers, yet successe failed them, being too few to defend Norwich, and oppose the Rebels. Insomuch that the Lord Sheffield was barbarously butcher'd, Sr Tho: Corwallis taken prisoner, and the City fired by the Rebels: which probably had been burnt to ashes, had not the clouds commiserating the Cities calamity, and melting into tears, quenched the flames: and thus the Marquesse fain to quit the service, returned to London.

The Lord Russell conqueror. Lord Marquiss conquered.

10. Then was John Dudley Earle of Warwick, with such Forces as were intended for Scotland, sent to undertake the Task. The Marquesse of Northampton attended him to trie whether he could be more fortunate in following than he had been in leading. Coming to Norwich he easily entred the City, and entertained the Rebels with many sallies with various successe, here too long to relate, but generally the Earle of Warwick came off with the better.

The Lord Gray and Earle of Warwick come with new supplies.

11. Now the Rebels impregnable in some sort, if still keeping Mousehold-Hill, (whereon the Earles Horse could doe small service) deserted it of their own accord, and came down into Dussindale. Here their superstition fancied themselves sufficiently fenced by the virtue of an old prophecie.

Philip Comines.

combe a Tinner of Teingmouth. For taking advantage of the declivity of the City on that side, he countermin'd the Rebels work, and then deriv'd into it all the kennels and water-courses (falling down with a great precipice) and so drowned the vault intended with powder to blow up the Walls. Besides, at the same instant set an impetuous showre which added to the Deluge. Thus in vain doth Hell seek to kindle that Fire, when Heaven intendeth to poure water for the quenching thereof.

12. Famine raged most extremely, insomuch as they were fain to bake bran and meal moulded up in cloathes, for otherwise it would not stick together. Nor must the worthy resolution of a loyall Citizen be forgotten, publickly professing, That rather than he would surrender the City to the Rebels, he would fight with one arm, and feed on the other. And now were they reduced to utmost extremity when the seasonable approach of Lord privie Seale put a period to their Miseries. For at the winde-mill of S. Mary Clift after a bloody Battle, (wherein Sir William Francis was slain on the King's side) the Rebels were routed and forced to flie, leaving a thousand of their corps dead on the place. Miles Coverdail gave publick thanks to God for the victory in the view of Exeter, and soon after was made the Bishop thereof.

13. Then the Lord caused S. Mary Clift to be burnt to the ground, though it was his own Town, as knowing full well, Traytours to their King, would never make good Tenants to their Landlord. And on Clift-heath a second fight was begun, where the Rebels were finally overcome. The Lord privie Seal marched into Exeter, and was there (as he well deserved) welcomed with all possible expressions of joy. Sir William Herbert with 1000 Welsh came too late to fight, but soon enough to be an honourable Witnesse of the victory.

* 2 Sam. 11. 25.

Two solemne yearly festivals;

14. This sixt of August, the day of their deliverance, is an high festival in the Almanack of Exeter. Good cheer, and

Hob, Dick, and Hick, with clubs and clouted shoon, Shall fill up Dusin-dale with blood of slaughtered bodies soon.

Ann. Dom. 1549.

It hath ever been charged on the English, as if they alwaies carried an old Prophesie about with them in their pockets, which they can produce at pleasure to promote their designes, though oft mistaken in the application of such equivocating Predictions, as here these silly folke were deluded. For, it being believed, that Dusin-dale must make a large and soft pillow for Death to rest thereon, these Rebels apprehended themselves the Upholsters to make, who proved onely the stuffing to fill the same.

12. The Earle glad that the enemy had quitted the Hill, fell with all his forces upon them, and here happened a most bloody Battle. The Rebels disputed the ground, with their naturall Logick (as I may term it) down-right blows, without much military Discipline. Here one might have seen young Boyes (timely Traytours) plucking the arrows wherewith they were wounded out of their own flesh, and giving them to those of their owne party to shoot them back againe. Here some thrust through with spears, wilfully engaged their Bodies the deeper thereon, onely striving to reach out their revenge on those who wounded them. But at last rage was conquered by courage, number by valour, Rebellion by Loyalty, and in the fight and pursuit two thousand at the least were slain.

13. Remarkable was Divine Providence in preserving the captive Gentlemen of the Countrey, whom the Rebels coupled together and set them in the front of the Fight. Now, although it be true what David saith, The sword devoureth one as well as another*: yet so discreetly did Captaine Drury charge the Van of the Rebels, that most of these innocent Prisoners made their escape. The last litter of Kets kennell stifly standing out and fortifying themselves, accepted of pardon on the Earls promise it should be assured unto them.

14. On the nine and twentieth of August a solemn Thanks-giving was made in Norwich for their deliverance, and is annually and (thereby I juſtly gueſſe) their great gratitude being annually obſerved, with a publick Sermon to perpetuate the memory of Gods mercy unto them. Yet ſuch Solemnities doe daily decay, every new Generation being removed one degree farther from the deliverance. The King conferred the Manour of Exetland, (formerly belonging to the City, but wreſted from it by the Earls of Devon-ſhire) on their Corporation, in reward of their loyalty and valour.

Ann. Reg. Edw. 6.

Ann. Dom. 1549.

15. Humphrey Arundle, Winſlade, Bery, and Coffi were executed, and as this Commotion began, it ended at Sampford-Courtney, where their laſt remnant was defeated. Six Popiſh Prieſts were hanged, with Welſh the Vicar of St. Thomas, though all this was but mercy to the cruelty of Sir Anthony Kingſton Provoſt-Marſhall in truſſing up many mean offenders.

annually continued. Indeed, this City being betwixt weakneſſe and ſtrength, is taxed for wavering at the time betwixt Loyalty and Revolt, though to give the Citizens their due, many expreſſed their fidelity to their Prince as farre as they durſt for fear of deſtruction. Yet better had it been had Norwich been weaker to be quitted, or ſtronger to be defended, whoſe mongrell ſtrength expoſed it to the greater miſery.

15. Robert Ket was hanged on Norwich Caſtle, William his brother on Windham Steeple, Nine others on the Oake of Reformation, which never till then brooked the name thereof. Amongſt theſe, Miles, a cunning Cannoneer, was much lamented, becauſe remorſe kept him from doing much miſchief to which his cunning did enable him.

The legal execution of the Rebels.

Thus by Gods bleſſing on Mans endevours both theſe Rebellions were ſeaſonably ſuppreſt. That of Devon-ſhire did openly avouch the advancing of Popery; the other was ſuſpected ſecretly fomented by ſome Papiſts, who ſtood behinde the curtain, but ready to ſtep on the ſtage, had Succeſſe of the Deſigne but given them the Cue of Entrance. As for the Rebellion at the ſame time in York ſhire, which from a ſmall puſtle might have proved a painfull bile, yea, a fiſtulated ulcer if neglected, it was quickly quelled on the execution of Omler and Dale, the chief promoters thereof.

1550.

22. By the favour of Sir Thomas Cotton, having obtained to make uſe of his Library (our Engliſh Vatican, for Manuſcripts) I ſhall tranſcribe King Edwards Diurnall, written with His own hand, of the tranſactions in His Reigne. True it is His Obſervations, for his two firſt years, are ſhort, and not exactly expreſſing the notation of time, but His Notes as the Noter, got perfection with His age. They moſt belong to Secular affairs, out of which we have ſelected ſuch as reſpect Eccleſiaſticall matters. May the Reader be pleaſed to take notice, that though my obſervations, as printed, goe a-breaſt in parallel Columes with thoſe of His Highneſſe, it is my intention they ſhould obſerve their diſtance, in their humble attendance thereupon.

Abſtracts of Church-matters out of K. Edwards own Diary.

Text Royall.

THe Lord Protectour by his own [a] agreement, and ſubmiſsion, loſt his [b] Protectourſhip, Treaſurerſhip, Marſhalſhip, all his Moveables, and neer 2000 li. Land by Act of Parliament.

Obſervations thereon.

[a] Thus the Pilot to ſave the Ship from ſinking, caſts out the rich lading into the Sea.

[b] This lay void ever after, whilſt the Treaſurerſhip was preſently conferred on Will: Powlet Marqueſſe of Wincheſter, and the Marſhalſhip on John Dudley Earle of Warwick.

The Bp. of [c] Chicheſter before a vehement affirmer of Tranſubſtantiation, did Preach againſt it at Weſtminſter in the Preaching-place.

My Lord Somerſet taken into the Counſel.

Order taken, that whoſoever had [d] Benefices given them, ſhould preach before the King, in or out of Lent, and every Sunday there ſhould be a Sermon.

Maſſe for the Lady Mary denied to the Emperours [e] Ambaſſadour.

It is granted that my Lord of Somerſet ſhould have all his moveable Goods, and Leaſes, except thoſe that be already [f] given.

Joane [g] Bocher, otherwiſe called Joane of Kent, was burnt for holding, that Chriſt was not incarnate of the Virgin Mary, being condemned the year before, but kept in hope of converſion. The Biſhops of London and Ely were to perſwade her, but ſhe withſtood them, and reviled the Preacher that preached at her death.

The Lord Cobham and Sir William Peter came home from their journy, delivering both the Oath, and the Teſtimonial of the Oath, witneſſed by divers Noblemen of France, and alſo the [b] Treaty ſealed with the great Seal of France, and [c] Namely, George Day, who (notwithſtanding this Sermon) remained a zealous Papiſt, and on that ſcore, was deprived of his Biſhoptick.

[d] Underſtand it, not by Private Patrones, but either preſented by the King, or Lord Chancellour.

[e] Theſe ingaged Archbiſhop Cranmer, and Biſhop Ridlye, to preſſe the King with politick Reaſons for the permiſſion thereof. He unable to anſwer their Arguments fell a weeping.

[f] Courtiers keep what they catch, and catch what ever they can come by.

[g] An obſtinate Heretick, maintaining, That Chriſt aſſumed nothing of the Virgin Mary, but paſſed through Her, as a Conduit-pipe. She with one or two Arians were all, who (and that juſtly) died in this Kings Reign for their Opinions.

[b] Advantageous enough for the French, and diſhonourable too much to the Engliſh, whoſe covetouſneſſe was above their ſenſe of Honor, ſelling Bologne, bought with blood, for a ſumme of money.

Ann. Dom. 1549. Ann. Reg. Edw. 6.

The

Ann. Reg. Eliz. 3.

Ann. Dom. 1550.

and in both was confeſſed that I was [i] ſupreme Head of the Church of England and Ireland.

The Duke of Somerſet, Marqueſſe of North-hampton, Lord Treaſurer Bedford, and the Secretary Peter, went to the Biſhop of Wincheſter to know to what he would ſtick. He made Anſwer, that he would obey, and let forth all things ſet forth by Me, and My Parliament; and if he were troubled in conſcience, he would reveal it to the Councell, and not reaſon openly againſt it.

The Books of My Proceedings were ſent to the Biſhop of Wincheſter to ſee whether hee would ſet his hand to it, or promiſe to ſet it forth to the people.

The Duke of Somerſet, with five others of the Councell, went to the Bp. of Wincheſter; to whom he made this Anſwer: I having deliberately ſeen the Book of Common-Prayer, although I would not have made it ſo my ſelf, yet I finde ſuch things in it as ſatisfieth my conſcience, & therefore both I will execute it my ſelf, and alſo ſee other my [l] Pariſhioners to doe it. This was ſubſcribed by the aforeſaid Counſellours, that they heard him ſay theſe words.

The Earl of Warwick, the Lord Treaſurer, Sir William Herbert, and [i] The Controverſie about this Title lying not betwixt the Crowns of England and France, but betwixt England and Rome, no wonder if the French yeilded to any Style in a Treaty ſo gainfull to themſelves.

[k] For as yet this ſubtile-Statiſt ſcarce knew his own mind, often receding from his Reſolues, whoſe inconſtancy in this kinde, incenſed the King and Councell againſt him.

[l] Pariſh in the Dialect of a Biſhop is notoriouſly known to be his Dioceſe. Yet I deny not but that the numerous Pariſhioners of Saint Mary Overies, (wherein Wincheſter-Houſe) are herein particularly intended.

If

and Secretary Peter, went to the Bishop of Wincheſter with certain Articles, ſigned by Me and the Councel, containing the Confeſſing of his Fault, the Supremacy, the eſtabliſhing of Holy-daies, the aboliſhing of the ſix Articles, &c. whereunto he put his hand, ſaving to the Confeſsion.

Sir William Herbert, and the Secretary Peter, were ſent to him to tell him, That I marvelled that he would not put his hand to the Confeſsion: To whom he made Anſwer, That he would not doe it, becauſe he was [m] innocent.

The Biſhop of London, Secretary Peter, Mr. Cecil, and Goode-rich, were commanded to make certain Articles according to the Laws, and to put them in the Submiſsion.

It was appointed that under the [n] ſhadow of preparing for Sea matters, there ſhould be ſent 5000 lib. to the Proteſtants to get their good wills.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter denied the [o] Articles, which the Biſhop of London and others had made.

The Biſhop of Wincheſter was [p] ſequeſtred from his fruits for three months.

The Lady Mary, after long Communication was content to come

Ann. Dom. 1550.

[m] If conſcious of no crime, he is not to be condemned for juſtifying his own integrity.

[n] Such Umbrages of Simulation preſumed lawful by all Politicians. Quare, whether the Proteſtants in the Netherlands, or France, (thoſe of High Germany being beyond the line of probability) were here intended.

[o] They were drawn up in ſo punctual expreſſions, the other had neither compaſſe for evaſion, nor covert for equivocation.

[p] A Rod formerly in faſhion, but never ſo ſoundly layd on, as of late.

She

Ann. Dom. 1549. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 3.

come to Lees, to the Lord Chancellours, and then to Hunsdon, but She utterly denied to come to the q Court, or Oking, at that time.

Aug. 13. The Lord Chancellor fell sore sick, with 40 more of his r house, that the Lady Mary came not thither at this time.

Nov. 19. There were Letters sent to every Bishop to pull downe the Altars.

Dec. 15. Edw. excl. 4. There were Letters sent for the taking of certain s Chaplains of the Lady Mary, for saying Masse, which She denied.

Febr. 16 Whaley was examined for perswading divers Nobles of the Realm to make the Duke of Somerset t Protector at the next Parliament, stood to the Denial, the Earle of Rutland affirmed it manifestly.

17. The Bishop of Winchester after a long triall was deposed his Bishoprick.

q She loved to deale with the King her Brother eminus by Letters, but in no wise comminus by discourse. Besides, she hated coming to the Court, suspecting some harsh usage to her Person, and jealous of being put into Restraint.

r Lees in Essex, a County [generally] not very healthfull, where Agues sit as close (and sometimes last as long) as a new suit.

s Of these Francis Mallet (last * Master of Michael-House in Cambridge) was the chief. He having leave from the Councell to officiate Masse, onely in the presence of the Lady Mary, presumed on the same liberty in her absence. Whereupon, he was (notwithstanding his Ladies refusall to surrender him) fetcht from her by force and committed to prison.

* Scelats Cant. MS.

t Now where the seeds sown, and the foundation laid, of the Protectours overthrow, which ensued not long after.

It seems some legall formalities were pretended wanting in Gardiner his deprivation. For in my memory a Suit was commenced, to overthrow a long Lease made by Bishop Poinet (Gardiner's successour in Winchester) on this point, that Gardiner still remained lawfull Bishop, but nothing therein was effected.

23. Come we now to the saddest difference that ever happened in the Church of England, if we consider either the time how long it continued, the eminent persons therein ingaged, or the dolefull effects thereby produced. It was about matters of conformity. Alas! that men should have lesse wisdome than locusts; which, when sent on God's errand, *Did not * thrust one another*: whereas here such shoving, and shouldring; and hoising, and heavings, and justleing, and thronging, betwixt Clergie-men of the highest parts, and places. For now nonconformity in the daies of King Edward was conceived, which afterward in the Reign of Queen Mary (but beyond Sea at Frankford) was born; which in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth was nursed, and weaned; which under King James grew up a young youth, or tall stripling; but towards the end of King Charles His Reign, shot up to the full strength, and stature of a man, able, not onely to coap with, but conquer the Hierarchie its adversary.

The conception of non-conformity.

* Joel 2. 8.

The favourers and opposers thereof,

24. Two opposite parties now plainly discovered themselves, driving on different interests, under their respective Patrones; Ann. Dom. 1550. Ann. Reg. Edw. 6.

Founders of Conformity.	Founders of Non-conformity.
1. Such as remained here all the Reign of King Henry the eighth, and weathered out the tempest of His tyrannie at open Sea, partly by a politick compliance, and partly by a cautious concealment of themselves.	1. Such as fled hence beyond the Seas, chiefly into Germany, where, living in States, and Cities of popular Reformation, they suck'd in both the aire, and discipline of the place they lived in.
2. These, in the daies of King Edward the sixt, were possessed of the best preferments in the land.	2. These, returning late into England, were at a losse for meanes, and maintenance, onely supported with the reputation of being Confessors, rendring their patience to the praise, and their persons to the pity of all conscientious people.
3. And retained many ceremonies practiced in the Romish Church, conceiving them to be antient, and decent in themselves.	3. And renounced all ceremonies practiced by the Papists, conceiving, that such ought not onely to be clipt with the sheers, but to be shaved with a raizor; yea, all the stumps thereof to be pluckt out.
4. The authority of Cranmer, and activity of Ridley headed this party; the former being the highest, the latter the hottest in defence of conformity.	4. John Rogers, Lecturer in S. Pauls, and Vicar of S. Sepulchres, with John Hooper, afterwards Bishop of Gloucester, were Ring-leaders of this party.

This John Hooper was bred in Oxford, well skill'd in Latine, Greek, and Hebrew, (a little of the last would go farre in this Age) and afterwards travelled over into Switzerland. Yea, he seemed to some to have brought Switzerland back with him, in his harsh, rough, and unpleasant behaviour, being grave into rigour, and severe into surlinesse. Yet to speak truth, all Hoopers ill nature consisted in other mens little acquaintance with him. Such as visited him once, condemned him of over-austerity; who repaired to him twice, onely suspected him of the same; who conversed with him constantly, not onely acquitted him of all morosity, but commended him for sweetnesse of manners: which, saith my Author, (Godwin in the Bishops of Gloucester) endeared him to the acquaintance of Bullinger. This Hooper was preferred to be Bishop of Gloucester, by the special favour of his Patrone, John Earl of Warwick, afterward Duke of Northumberland.

Hooper refuseth to wear the Episcopal habit.

25. The worst was, when Hooper came to be consecrated Bishop of Gloucester, he scrupled the wearing of certain Episcopall ornaments (Rochet, Chimere, Square-cap, &c.) producing a Letter from the Earl of Warwick (omniprevalent then at Court, in the declining of his Corrival, the Duke of Somerset) that he might be favourably dispensed with therein, according to the tenour ensuing, to Archbishop Cranmer.

After

Ann. Reg. Edw. 6. Ann. Dom. 1550.

After my moſt hearty commendations to your Grace, theſe may be to deſire the ſame, that in ſuch reaſonable things, wherein this bearer, my Lord Elect of Gloceſter craveth to be born withall at your hands, you would vouchſafe to ſhew him your Graces favour; the rather at this my inſtance. Which thing partly I have taken in hand by the Kings Majeſties own motion. The matter is weighed by His Highneſſe, none other, but that your Grace may facilely condeſcend thereunto. The principall cauſe is, that you would not charge this ſaid Bearer with an Oath burdenous to his conſcience. And ſo for lack of time I commit your Grace to the tuition of Almighty God.

Your Graces moſt aſſured loving friend.
John Warwick.

What this Oath was, (becauſe not expreſſed) is variouſly conjectured. Parſons, to render Hooper more odious, will have it the Oath of Supremacy; which, in my opinion, is improbable, it being utterly unlikely, that the King would diſpenſe with any from taking that Oath, wherein His owne Dignity was ſo neerly concern'd. I conceive it the Oath of Canonical obedience to the Archbiſhop; which conſequentially commanded ſuch ceremonies, which Hooper was willing to decline. For, in the Kings next Letter, wrote thirteen daies after to the ſame purpoſe, there is mention onely of offenſive Rites, and Ceremonies, and of no Oath at all, as coincident with the former, and obligatory to ſuch Canonical obſervances. But ſee the Letter.

Right Reverend Father, and right truſty, and well-beloved, We greet you well. Whereas We, by the advice of Our Councel, have called & choſen Our right well-beloved, and well-worthy Mr. John Hooper, Profeſſor of Divinity, to be Our Biſhop of Gloceſter, as well for his great learning, deep judgment, and long ſtudy, both in the Scriptures, and other profound learning; as alſo for his good diſcretion, ready utterance, and honeſt life for that kinde of vocation, &c. From conſecrating of whom, We underſtand you doe ſtay, becauſe he would have you omit, and let paſſe certain Rites and Ceremonies offenſive to his conſcience, whereby ye thinke, you ſhould fall in Præmunire of Laws: We have thought good by adviſe aforeſaid, to diſpenſe, and diſcharge you of all manner of dangers, penalties, and forfeitures you ſhould run into, and be in any manner of way, by omitting any of the ſame. And theſe Our Letters ſhall be your ſufficient warrant, and diſcharge therefore.

¶ Given under Our Signet, at our Caſtle of Windſor, the fourth year of Our Reign.

All would not doe. Reſolute Ridley ſtood ſtifly to his tackling, and here was old bandying of the buſineſſe betwixt them, and Arguments urged on both ſides. Ann. Dom. 1550. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6.

Pro.	Con.
1. The Ornaments were indifferent of themſelves, and of antient uſe in the Church.	1. The beſt thing that could be ſaid of them was, that they were uſeleſſe, being otherwiſe ridiculous, and ſuperſtitious.
2. Being enjoyned by lawfull authority, they became neceſſary, not to ſalvation, but to Church-unity; and it was ſcandalous to decline them.	2. Curſed be he that removes the bound-marks. Grant them indifferent in themſelves, and left ſo by Divine Wiſdome, it was preſumption in man to ſtamp neceſſity upon them.
3. It would bring the Papiſt over to our Church, beholding all things by them uſed, not totally aboliſhed by a ſpirit of contradiction, but ſome decent correſpondencies ſtill moderately continued.	3. Too much of the Serpent, nothing of the Dove herein, to offend thoſe within, to invite thoſe without to the Church, driving Proteſtants thence, to draw Papiſts thither.
4. It would caſt a ſlurre on the credit of ſuch Biſhops, who formerly had uſed thoſe Ornaments, as more remiſſe in Religion, than ſuch as refuſed them.	4. The credits of ſome good men were not to be preſerved, by deſtroying the conſciences of others.
5. Thoſe that have ſtubborn wills, pretend too often to tender conſciences; nor ought a private perſon to be indulged, with the diſturbance of the publick uniformity of the Church.	5. Hooper put himſelf upon the triall of the Searcher of hearts, that no obſtinacie, but meer conſcience made him refuſe thoſe Ornaments.

In a word, all thoſe Arguments, which later Ages have more amply enlarged, more clearly explained, more cunningly improved, more violently enforced, were then and there firſt ſolidly propounded, and ſolemnly ſet down on both ſides. Poſterity in this matter having diſcovered no new Mine, but onely refined, what formerly was found out in this Controverſie.

But is forced at laſt.

26. At laſt the great Earl of Warwick deſerted his Chaplain in open field, to ſhift for himſelf. Indeed, he had higher things in his head, than to attend ſuch trifles: not ſo much to procure a Mitre for his Chaplain, as a Crown for himſelf, even then ſecretly laying a deſign to derive the Scepter into his own family. Yea, Hooper was ſent to priſon, and kept ſome daies in * durance, till at laſt he condeſcended to conform himſelfe in his habit, to the reſt of his brethren, and ſo was conſecrated Biſhop of Gloceſter.

* His impriſonment not mentioned in Mr Fox, but in the Troubles of Frankford, pag. 35.

27. But that, which moſt opens the mouthes of Papiſts, and other adverſaries againſt Hooper, is, becauſe he, who ſcrupled the poor Biſhoprick of Gloceſter, afterward held the wealthy Biſhoprick of Worceſter in Commendam with it. We read of a [b] wedge of gold, and little wedges (ſay they) widen mens conſciences for the receiving of greater: yea, thus the haters of marriage, firſt become guilty of bigamie. But let ſuch know, Firſt, that the Dioceſes of Gloceſter, and Worceſter, lie both contiguous together. Secondly, many ſingle Biſhopricks in England, are larger than both for extent in Land, and number of Pariſhes. Thirdly, no worſe a man than S. Dunſtan himſelf, had the Biſhoprick of Worceſter, and London with it, at the ſame time, being farre more diſtant, and remote. Fourthly, it is not the having of two Biſhopricks together, but the neglecting of one is the ſin; whereas Defended for keeping Worceſter in Commendam.

[b] Joſ. 7 21.

Hooper

Ann. Reg. Eliz. 4. Ann. Dom. 1550.

Hooper in preaching, and viſiting, afforded double diligence in his double Dioceſs.

28. The mention of Hooper his holding of the Biſhoprick of Worceſter in Commendam, mindes me of a difficulty, which (though I cannot anſwer) I muſt not omit. It is this, Seeing that Latimer was outed of that Biſhoprick in the daies of King Henry the eighth, on the account of the Six Articles, why was he not reſtored to the ſame under King Edward the ſixt? eſpecially, ſeeing Nicholas Heath, his ſucceſſour, was legally deprived; and the place actually void. Whereas on the contrary Hugh Latimer continued Hugh Latimer, without any addition of preferment. Here firſt we muſt largely trade in negatives. It was not for any want of favour from the King, ſeeing he ſtood rectus in Curia, in relation to His Majeſty. Nor was it becauſe his down-right Sermons diſobliged the Courtiers, who generally delight in ſoft preaching, as in [c] ſoft cloathing. Not was it out of ſullenneſſe, becauſe he would not be bedded again with that wife, which (though unwillingly) had in his abſence embraced another. Nor have we any cauſe to ſuſpect Latimer of Hoopers opinion, as diſtaſting Ceremonies, and ſo obſtructing his advancement. But we impute it, either to his conſcience (oft-times ſharpeſt in the blunteſt men) becauſe he would not be built on the ruines of another; eſpecially knowing Heath, one of a meek, and moderate nature: Or to his age, who, Barzillai [d] like, was ſuperannuated for earthly honour: Alas! what needed a ſquare-cap over the many night-caps, which age had multiplied on his Reverend head? Or, becauſe he found himſelf not ſo fit for government, better for preaching, than ordering Eccleſiaſtical affairs. Or laſtly, becauſe he prophetically foreſaw, that the ingratitude of the Engliſh Nation would ſhorten their happineſſe, and King Edwards life; and he was loth to come into a place, onely to goe out thereof. Sure I am, it was a loud lie, which * Parſons tells, that Latimer was kept bare, who kept himſelf bare, living, not in the want, but neglect, yea contempt of all worldly wealth. He was Confeſſour-General to all Proteſtants troubled in minde; yea, he was the Corban, or treaſurie, into which reſtored-ill-gotten goods were caſt, to be beſtowed on the poor, according to his diſcretion. And Latimer by the courteſie of England (once a Biſhop, and ever a Biſhop) was in civility ſaluted Lord, and honoured by all good people that knew him. This I conceive the true cauſe, why Hooper would not be tranſlated to Worceſter, but held it in Commendam with Glouceſter, becauſe Latimer, and Heath, were both ſurviving, each accounted a lawfull Biſhop by thoſe of their own Religion.

Why Latimer was not reſtored to the Biſhoprick of Worceſter.

[c] Mat. 11. 8.

[d] 2 Sam. 19. 35.

* In the Examen of Fox's Martyrs, Month of Feb. pag. 306.

29. But, when Hooper unwillingly willing wore thoſe Epiſcopal Ornaments, he put on with them a great grudge againſt Ridley, who enforced him thereunto. Yea, when thoſe his clothes may be preſumed half worn out, his anger was new, and freſh, as at the beginning: nor were they fully reconciled till their death, in the daies of Queen Mary. High time then to period their paſſion, before the Sun [of their life] went down in their wrath. Strange that their heart-burnings could not be quenched, till the fire was kindled, which was to burn both their bodies. But it matters not what is the cauſe, if amendment be the effect. The * Jeſuite challengeth the credit of this reconciliation to the Catholicks, bragging, that they made them friends. But we know, their cruell intention was not to make friends, but aſhes of them. Let the thanks be paid to that Divine Power, and Providence, which ſanctified their ſufferings into an agreement, beſides, beyond, above, againſt the deſigne, and deſire of thoſe, which inflicted them. Thus, when froward children fall out, and fight, a good parent, and a good rod, doe quickly make them friends. See the Letters at large in Maſter Fox, which paſſed betwixt them in priſon; wherein, as Hooper had the honour firſt to offer agreement, let Ridley receive his praiſe, that he did faſt embrace it. For, as the ſecond blow makes the fray: ſo, it is not the tender, but acceptance of peace, makes the reconciliation. As for their obſervation, that of all the Marian-Martyrs, Hooper, and Ridley ſuffered with moſt torture, and impute this to a Divine puniſhment, juſtly inflicted on them, for this their diſſention: there is ſomewhat of curioſity in the obſervation, and nothing of charity in the application.

Hooper, and Ridley reconciled by afflictions.

* Parſons ut ſupra, pag. 316.

Ann. Dom. 1550. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 4.

Three sorts of Non conformists.

30. We must not forget, that this earnest contest, was not about the calling, but clothes; not the vocation, but onely about the vestments of Bishops. Whereupon the juditious Reader will distinguish three Ranks, (or if the word be better liked) three Classes of Non conformists, according to their severall dates, and designes:

1. Antient Non-conformists, here in King Edward's daies, who desired onely to shake down the leaves of Episcopacy, misliking onely some garments about them.
2. Middle Non conformists, in the end of Queen Elizabeth, and beginning of King James, who struck at the branches thereof; Chancellours, and Officialls, and other appendant limbs, which they endeavoured to remove.
3. Modern Non-conformists, who did lay the axe to the root of the tree, to cut down the function it self, as unlawfull, and Antichristian.

Thus after-Ages still made new additions, as if it would be accounted idleness in them, if the strong, and active legs of the sons, and nephews, should not goe faster, and farther, than the old, and feeble feet, of their fathers, and grandfathers.

The Psalmes translated into meeter. e Balcim Cent. 9. pag. 728.

31. About this time, David's Psalms were translated into English meeter, and (if not publickly commanded) generally permitted to be sung in all Churches. The work was performed by Thomas e Sternhold, (an Hampshire-man, Esquire, and of the Privie Chamber to King Edward the sixt, who for his part translated thirty seven selected Psalms) John Hopkins, Robert Wisedome, &c. men, whose piety was better than their poetry; and they had drank more of Jordan, than of Helicon. These Psalms were therefore translated, to make them more portable in peoples memories (Verses being twice as light, as the self-same bulk in Prose) as also to raise mens affections, the better to enable them to practice the Apostles precept, f Jam. 5. 13. Is any merry? let him sing Psalms. Yet this work met afterwards with some frowns in the faces of great Clergy-men, who were rather contented, than well pleased, with the singing of them in Churches. I will not say, because they misliked so much liberty should be allowed the Laitie (Rome only can be guilty of so great envy) as to sing in Churches: rather, because they conceived these singing-Psalms erected in corrivality, and opposition, to the reading-Psalms, which were formerly sung in Cathedral Churches: or else, the childe was disliked for the mothers sake; because, such Translatours, though branched hither, had their root in Geneva.

The meanness of the Translation endeavoured to be excused.

32. Since, later men have vented their just exceptions against the baldness of the translation, so that sometimes they make the Maker of the Tongue to speak little better than barbarisme, and have in many Verses such poor rhime, that two hammers on a Smith's anvill would make better musick. Whilst others (rather to excuse it, than defend it) doe plead, that English poëtry was then in the non-age, not to say, infancy thereof: and that, match these Verses for their age, they shall goe a-breast with the best Poëms of those times. Some, in favour of the Translatours, alledge, that to be curious therein, and over-descanting with wit, had not become the plain song, and simplicity of an holy style. But these must know, there is great difference between painting a face, and not washing it. Many since have farre refined these Translations, but yet their labours therein never generally received in the Church: principally, because un-book-learn'd people have conn'd by heart, many Psalms of the old Translation, which would be wholly disinherited of their patrimony, if a new Edition were set forth. However, it is desired, and expected by moderate men, that, though the fabrick stand unremoved for the main, yet some bad contrivance therein may be mended, and the bald rhimes in some places get a new nap, which would not much discompose the memory of the people.

33. On

Ann. Reg. Edw. 6. Ann. Dom. 1550.

33. On the twenty fourth of July, King Edward, by His Letters patent, at the request of John à Lasco, free Baron of Lasco in Poland, did, by the consent of His Counsell, give, and grant the whole Church of S. Augustine's, neer Broad-street in London (the Quire excepted, formerly possessed by Marquesse Pawlet) unto the Superintendent, and Ministers of the Dutch-Church, and other strangers in London, to have, and to hold for them, their heirs, and successours in Frank Almonage, to be a meeting-place for them, therein to attend God's Word, and Sacraments. He ordered also, that hereafter it should be called by the new name of the Church of the Lord IESUS; and incorporated the said Superintendent, Ministers, and Congregation, to be a body politick, for all purposes, and intents; empowering them from time to time, in the vacancy of a Superintendent, to chuse, name, and substitute, any able, and fit person in that place: provided, that the person so chosen be first presented to the King, His Heirs, and Successours, to be approved, and confirmed by them in the Office of the Ministerie, enjoyning all Archbishops, Bishops, and other Officers, Quòd permittant prafatis Superintendenti, & Ministris, & Successoribus suis, liberè, & quietè frui, gaudere, uti, & exercere ritus, & ceremonias suas proprias, & disciplinam Ecclesiasticam propriam & peculiarem, non obstante, quòd non conveniant cum ritibus, & ceremoniis in Regno nostro usitatis: That they permit the foresaid Superintendent, and Ministers, and their Successours, freely, and quietly to hold, enjoy, use, and exercise their own proper rites, and ceremonies, and their proper, and peculiar Church discipline, notwithstanding that they agree not with the rites, and ceremonies used in Our Kingdome.

The first legal erection of the Dutch-Congregation in London.

34. Now followed the fatall tragedy of the Duke of Somerset, and we must recoile a little, to fetch forward the cause thereof. Thomas Seymour Baron of Sudely, and Lord Admirall, the Protectours younger Brother, had married the Lady Katharine Parre, the Relict of King Henry the eighth. A contest arose betwixt their Wives about place, the Protectresse (as I may call her) refusing to give it to the Kings Dowager. Yet was their precedencie no measuring cast, but clear in the view of any unpartiall eye. Nor needed other Herauld to decide the controversie than the Kings own Injunctions, [a] wherein after prayer for His own Royall person, Ministers were commanded to pray for the Queen Dowager even before the Kings Sisters, Mary, and Elizabeth, the Protectour (under whom his Lady must claim place) being placed last in the List of their Devotions.

Womens brawles, Mens thralles.

a Vide supra, in the first of this King.

35. The Womens discords derived themselves into their Husbands hearts. Whereupon, not long after followed the death of the Lord Thomas Seymour, arraigned for designing to translate the Crown to himself, though having neither Title to pretend unto it, nor effectual Interest to atchieve the same. Let [b] Adonijah, and this Lord's example deterre Subjects from medling with the Widows of their Soveraigns, lest in the same match they espouse their own danger and destruction. This Lord thus cut off, the Protectour stood alone on his own bottome at which his enemies daily endevoured to undermine.

Lord Thomas Seymour executed for Treason.

b 1 King. 2.

36. Soon after the Lords of the Councel resolved to accuse him of many high offences. Of these Lords, some were Lawyers, as the Lord Wriothesley, lately, the Lord Rich, then Lord Chancellour; Sir Edward Montague Chief Justice, &c. some Martialists, as Sr Ralph Sadler Treasurer to the Army, and some meer Statesmen, as William Pawlet Lord Treasurer, and their accusations participated of the severall conditions of the Accusers. The Lawyers charge him for bringing Westminster-hall into Somerset-house, keeping there a Court of Request, and therein determining Titles of Land to the apparent injury of the Subject. Military men taxed him for his Sumptuous buildings, having their Morter tempered with the tears of Souldiers Wives and Children, whose wages he detained; and for betraying Bolloigne, and other places in France to the Enemy. States-men chiefly insisted on his engrossing all power to himself, that whereas by the constitution of the Protectourship he was to act nothing without the advice of King Henry's Executours, he solely transacted matters of the highest consequence without their privity.

A tripartite accusation.

37. Here

Earle of Warwick the Protectors grand enemy.

37. Here I muſt ſet John Dudley Earl of Warwick (as a Tranſcendent) in a form by himſelf, being a competent Lawyer, (Son to a Judge) known Soldier, and able States-man, and acting againſt the Protector, to all theſe his capacities. Indeed, he was the very ſoul of the Accuſation, being all in all, and all in every part thereof. And ſeeing the Protector was free ſpirited, open hearted, humble, hard to diſtruſt, eaſie to forgive: The other proud, ſubtle, cloſe, cruell, and revengefull; it was impar congreſſus betwixt them, almoſt with as much diſadvantage as betwixt a naked and an armed perſon.

The Protector accuſed, and impriſoned, yet reſtored.

38. Hereupon, he was impriſoned at Windſor, in a place antiently called Beauchamp's Tower, it ſeems by a ſad Prolepſis, but never verified till now when this Vicount Beauchamp (by his original honour) was therein confined, and hence was he removed to the Tower of London. However, although all this happened in the worſt juncture of time, viz: in the disjuncture of his beſt Friend (the Lord Ruſſell Privie Seal) then away in the Weſt, yet by his own innocence, his other Friends endeavour, the Kings interpoſing, and Divine Providence, he was acquitted, and though outed his Protectorſhip, reſtored and continued Privie Counſellour, as in the King's Diarie was formerly obſerved.

[c] Fox, Acts & Mon. pag.

Accuſed the ſecond time.

39. But after two years and two months, his enemies began afreſh to aſſault him, hoping that as the firſt ſtroak ſhak'd, the next would fell him to the ground. Indeed, Warwick (who had too powerfull an influence upon all the Lords) could not erect his intended Fabrick of Soveraignty except he firſt cleared the ground-work from all obſtructive rubbiſh, whereof this Duke of Somerſet was the Principall: In whoſe abſence the Lords met at the Councell Table, where it was contrived how all things ſhould be ordered in relation to his Arraignment.

Lord Rich his Servants dangerous miſtake.

40. R. Rich Lord Chancellor (then living in great S. Bartholomews) though outwardly concurring with the reſt, began now ſecretly to favour the Duke of Somerſet, and ſent him a Letter, therein acquainting him with all paſſages at the Councell Board, ſuperſcribing the ſame (either out of haſte, or familiarity) with no other direction ſave, To the Duke: enjoyning his Servant a raw attendant, as newly entred into the family, ſafely to deliver it. The man made [e] more haſte than good ſpeed, and his Lord wondring at his quick return, demanded of him where the Duke was when he deliver'd him the Letter: In Charter-houſe (ſaid his Servant) on the ſame token that he read it at the window, and ſmiled thereat. But the Lord Rich ſmiled not at his relation, as ſadly ſenſible of the miſtake and delivery of the Letter to the Duke of Norfolke, no great friend of his, and an utter enemy to the Duke of Somerſet.

[e] This ſtory atteſted to me by his great grand childe the Earl of Warwick.

The Lord Rich reſigneth his Chancellors place.

41. Wonder not if this Lord roſe early up the next morning, who may be preſumed not to have ſlept all night. He higheth to the Court, and having gotten admittance into the Bed Chamber before the King was riſen up, fell down on his knees, and deſired that his old age might be eaſed of his burthenſome Office: pleading, That there ought to be ſome preparatory interval in States-men betwixt their Temporall buſineſſe and their Death; in order to which, he deſired to retire into Eſſex, there to attend his own Devotions. Nor would he riſe from the ground till the King had granted his requeſt. And thus he ſaved himſelf from being ſtript by others by firſt putting off his own clothes, who otherwiſe had loſt his Chancellours place for revealing the ſecrets of the Councell Board. Some daies after the Seale was ſolemnly fetcht from him, and conferred on Doctor Goodrich Biſhop of Elie.

The Duke of Somerſet impeached of Treaſon.

42. The Impeachment of the Duke went on nevertheleſſe, and two Nets were laid to catch him, that if one brake the other might hold. He was indicted of Treaſon, and Fellonie; the former was onely to give the report, the latter to diſcharge the bullet. So great a Peer could not be accuſed of leſſe than High Treaſon, that the offence might appear proportionable to the Offender. However, he was acquitted of Treaſon, whereat the people in Weſtminſter-hall gave ſuch a ſhout, that though the ſame was intercepted and circumſcribed by the houſe, it is reported to be heard as farre [f] as Long-Acre.

[f] Stowes Annals, p. 606.

43. But

Anno Dom. 1551. Anno Regis Ed. 6. 5.

43. But this ſound was ſeconded with a ſad ſilence when he was condemned for Felony, by a new made Statute, for plotting the death of a Privie Counſellour; namely, the Earle of Warwick. Here a ſtrange overſight was committed, that he craved not the benefit of the Clergie, which could not legally be denied him; on the granting whereof, the enſuing puniſhment had certainly been remitted: and not long after he was beheaded on Tower-hill, with no leſſe praiſe for his piety and patience, than pity and grief of the Beholders.

Sad ſilence.

44. Poſterity is much unſatisfied in the juſtneſſe of his ſuffering, and generally doe believe, That he himſelfe was the ſheep who was here condemn'd for the ſlaughter. A good Author tells us, That he loſt his life for a ſmall crime, and that upon a nice point, ſubtilly deviſed and packt by his enemies*. And yet that the good King Himſelfe was poſſeſſed of his guilt, may appeare by His enſuing Letter * written with His own hand to a dear Servant of His, as followeth:

A Quære for poſterity.

* Cambd Brit. in Somerſetſhire.

* Tranſcribed out of the Originall.

To Our well-beloved ſervant Barnaby Fitz-Patricke, one of the Gentlemen of Our Chamber.

EDWARD.

LIttle hath been done ſince you went, but the Duke of Somerſet's arraignment for felonious Treaſon, and the Muſters of the new-erected Gendarmery. The Duke, the firſt of this Moneth was brought to Weſtminſter-hall, where ſate as Judge, or High Steward, my Lord Treaſurer, twenty ſix Lords of the Parliament went on his Triall, Indictments were read; which were ſeverall; ſome for Treaſon, ſome for trayterous Felony. The Lawyers read how Sir Thomas Palmer had confeſſed that the Duke, once minded, and made him privie, to raiſe the North, after to call the Duke of Northumberland, the Marqueſſe of Northampton, and the Earle of Pembroke, to a Feaſt, and ſo to have ſlain them. And to doe this thing (as it was to be thought) had levied men a hundred at his houſe at London, which was ſcanned to be Treaſon, becauſe unlawfull Aſſemblies for ſuch purpoſes, was Treaſon by an Act made the laſt Seſſions. Alſo how the Duke of Somerſet minded to ſtay the Horſes of the Gendarmery, and to raiſe London. Crane confeſſed alſo the murdering of the Lords in a Banquet. Sir Miles Partridge alſo confeſſed the raiſing of London. Hamman his man having a Watch at Greenwich of twenty weaponed men to reſiſt, if he had been arreſted, and this confeſſed both Patridge and

Anno Dom. 1551. Anno Regis Ed. 6. 5.

Palmer. He answered, That when he levied men at his House, he meant no such thing, but onely to defend himself. The rest very barely answered. After debating the matter from nine of the clock till three, the Lords went together, and there weighing that the matter seemed only to touch their lives, although afterward more inconvenience might have followed, and that men might think they did it of malice, acquitted him of High Treason, and condemned him of Felony, which he seemed to have confessed. He hearing the Judgment, fell down on his knees, and thanked them for his open Triall. After he asked pardon of the Duke of Northumberland, the Marquesse, &c. whom he confessed he meant to destroy, although before he swore vehemently to the contrary. Thus fare you well.

¶ From Westminster the 20th of December, Anno Domini 1551. 1551. Dec. 20.

Hereby it plainly appeareth, that the King was possessed with a perswasion of His Uncles guiltinesse: whether or no so in truth, God knoweth; and generally Men believe Him abused herein. And it seemeth a wonder to me that six weeks (from December the 1, to January the 22.) interceding betwixt the Dukes condemnation and execution, no means were made during that time to the King for his pardon. But, it is plain, that his foes had stopped all accesse of his friends unto the King.

The Dukes character.

45. The Duke of Somerset was religious himself, a lover of all such as were so, and a great Promoter of Reformation. Valiant, fortunate, witnesse his victory in Musleborrough field, when the Scots filled many carts with emptinesse, and loaded them with what was lighter than vanity it self, Popish Images, and other Trinkets, wherein they placed the confidence of their Conquest. He was generally beloved of Martiall men, yet no marvell if some did grumble against him, seeing there is no Army, save that of the Church Triumphant, wherein the Souldiers at some time or other doe not complain against their Generall. Nor is the wonder great if he sometimes trespassed in matters of State, seeing the most conscientious Polititian will now and then borrow a point of Law (not to say, take it for their due) even with an intent never to pay it. He was better to perform than plot, doe than design. In a word, his self-hurting innocence declined into guiltinesse, whose soule was so farre from being open to causlesse suspitions, that it was shut against just jealousies of danger.

His great buildings.

46. He built Somerset-house, where many like the workmanship better than either the foundation or materials thereof: For the Houses of three Bishops, Landaffe, Coventry and Litchfield, and Worcester, with the Church of St. Mary le Strand, were pluckt down to make room for it. The stones and timber were fetcht from the Hospitall of S. Johns. This Somerset-house is so tenacious of his name, that it would not change a Dutchie for a Kingdome, when solemnly proclaimed by King James, Denmarke-house from the King of Denmarke's lodging therein, and His Sister Queen Anne her repairing thereof. Surely it argueth, that this Duke was well wel-belov'd, because his name made such an indelible impression on this his house, whereof he was not full five years peaceably possessed.

Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 6. Ann. Dom. 1552.

47. We lately made mention of Barnaby Fitz-Patrick, to whom the King directed His Letter, as who was bred and brought up with Him from His infancy, though somewhat the older. He was Prince Edward's PROXIE for CORRECTION, though we may presume seldome suffering in that kinde, such the Princes generall innocence and ingenuity to learn His book. Yet when such execution was done, as Fitz-Patrick was beaten for the Prince, the Prince was beaten in Fitz-Patrick, so great an affection did He bare to His Servant. Towards the end of His Reign He maintained him in the Court of France both to learn fashions there, and send intelligence thence. And it will not be amisse to insert the King's private Instructions unto him how he should behave himself in the French Court, partly for the rarity, partly for the certainty thereof, having it transcribed out of the Originall of the King's own hand, as followeth:

The Kings Instructions to Fitz-Patrick for his behaviour in France.

1. First, he shall goe in the Lord Admirals Company, and at the same Lords departing he shall have a Letter to the French King, which the Lord Admirall shall deliver, and present him to the French King; and if it shall chance that the French King will give him any Pension, entertainment, or reward at his being there for the time he tarrieth there, he shall receive it, and thank His Majesty for it, and shall serve when he shall be appointed. Nevertheless, when he is out of the Court he shall be most conversant with Mr. Pickering *.

* Afterwards Knighted, and supposed Suiter to Q. Eliz.

2. And at his setting forth shall carry with him four Servants, and if the wages amount to any great summe (more than I give him) that the French King giveth him, to live there after that proportion, advertising Me of the same.

3. Also all this Winter he shall study the Tongue, and see the manner of the Court, and advertise Me of the occurrences he shall hear, and if he be desirous to see any place Notable, or Town, he may goe thither, asking leave of the King. And shall behave himself honestly, more following the company of Gentlemen, than pressing into the company of the Ladies there, and his chief pastime shall be Hunting and Riding.

4. Also his Apparell he shall wear it so fine as shall be comely, and not much superfluous. And the next Sommer, when either the King goeth or sendeth any man of name into the Warres to be His Lieutenant, or to lead an Army, he shall desire to goe thither, and either himself, or else shall will Mr. Pickering to declare to the French King, how he thinketh not himself to have fully satisfied nor recompensed neither His Majesties good entertainment nor Mine expectation who had sent him over if he should return, having so delicately and idlely almost spent the time, without he did at this time of service be desirous to goe himself into the Warres, by the which thing he might at this time doe His Majesty service, and also learn to doe Me service hereafter; yea, and His Majesty to if the case so required. And therefore seeing this Nobleman shall now goe that his request is to have leave to goe with him.

5. Having said this to the French King, he shall depart into the Warres, waiting on this Nobleman that shall be sent, and there he shall mark the divers fortifications of places, and advantages that the enemy may take, and the ordering and conduct of the Armies. As also the fashion of the skirmishes, battles, and assaults, and the plats of the chief Towns where any enterprises of weight have been done, he shall cause to be set out in black and white, or otherwise, as he may and shall send them hither to Me, with advertisement of such things as have passed.

6. Furthermore, he shall at all times when he taketh money advertise Me of it, and I shall send him. And so the next year being well spent, upon further advertisement, and taking leave of the French King, he shall return.

7. And if there arise or grow any doubt in any matter hereafter, in the which he shall need advise: he shall advertise by the Post, and shall have Answer thereof. Ann. Dom. 1552. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6.

This Barnaby Fitz Patrick, after his return out of France, was created by the King, Baron of upper Ossery in Ireland, and died a most excellent Protestant, as hereafter we shall shew in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.

Little Church-work in this Parliament.

48. On the 15th of April, the Parliament ended which had sate three Moneths at Westminster, though therein nothing of Church matters determined, save a Penalty imposed on such who should strike or draw weapon in Church, or Church-yard, with the abolishing of the generall Holy daies of S. Mary Magdalen, and S. George: yet so, that it should be lawfull for the latter to be solemnly celebrated by the Knights of the Right honourable Order of the Garter. The Orders of which Order were about this time reformed and purged from some antient superstitions. April 15.

An ill presage: Bishop Godwins Annals in this year.

49. Six k Dolphins were taken in the Thames (three neer Quinborough, and three above Greenwich, where the Thames is scarce tainted with brackishnesse) in so much that many grave men dispensed with their wisdome, and beheld them with wonder, as not seen before on our shores. A fish much loving man and musick, swifter than all other fishes, and birds too: yea, than the Swallow it self (if Pliny say true) though all their celerity besteaded them not here to escape the nets of the fisher-men. Their coming up so farre was beheld by Mariners as a presage of fowl weather at Sea; but by States-men, as a prodigious omen of some tempestuous mutations in our Land. And particularly, they suspected the Kings death, though for the present He was very pleasant and merry in His progresse about the Countrey, as by his ensuing Letter to His former favourite, written in the next August, doth appear.

k Nat. Hist. l. 9. cap. 8.

Aug. 12.

EDWARD.

THE cause why we have not hitherto written unto you have partly been the lack of a convenient Messenger, partly because we meant to have some thing worthy writing ere We would write any thing. And therefore being now almost in the midst of Our journey which We have undertaken this Sommer, We have thought good to advertise, now since Our last Letters dated at Greenwich, We departed from thence towards a thing farre contrary to that wherein as We perceive by your diligent advertisement you and all the Countrey you are in are occupied; for whereas you all have been occupied in killing of your enemies, in long marchings, in painfull journeys, in extreme heat, in sore skirmishings, and divers assaults; We have been occupied in killing of wilde Beasts, in pleasant journeys, in good fare, in viewing of faire Countreys, and rather have sought how to fortifie Our own, than to spoil another mans. And being this determined came to Gilford, from thence to Petworth, and so to Coudray (a goodly House of Sir Anthony Brownes) where we were mar-

Ann. Dom. 1551. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 6.

marvellously, yea rather excessively banquetted. From thence We went to Halvenaker (a pretty House besides Chichester.) From thence We went to Warblington (a faire House of Sir Richard Cottons.) And so to Walthan (a faire great old House, in times past the Bishop of Winchesters, and now my Lord Treasurers house.) In all these places, We had both good hunting, and good cheer. From thence we went to Portsmouth Town, and there viewed not onely the Town it selfe and the Haven, but also divers Bulwarks, as Chatertons, Waselford, with other; in viewing of which We finde the Bulwarks chargeable, massey, well rampared, but ill-fashioned, ill-flanked, and set in unmeet places, the Town weak in comparison of that it ought to be, too huge great (for within the Walls are faire and large Closes, and much vacant room) the Haven notable great, and standing by nature easie to be fortified. And for the more strength thereof We have devised two strong Castles on either side of the Haven at the mouth thereof: For at the mouth the Haven is not past ten score over, but in the middle almost a mile over, and in length for a mile and a half able to beare the greatest ship in Christendome. From thence We went to Tichfield (the Earl of South-Hampton's House) and so to South-Hampton Town. The Citizens had bestowed for Our coming great cost in painting, repairing, and rampairing of their Walls. The Town is handsome, and for the bignesse of it as fair houses as be at London. The Citizens made great cheer, and many of them kept costly tables. From South-Hampton we came to Bewly a little Village in the middle of the new Forrest, and so to Christ-Church (another little Town in the same Forrest) where We now be. And having advertised you of all this, We thinke it not good to trouble you any farther with news of this Countrey, but onely that at this time the most part of England (thanks be to God) is clear of any dangerous or infectious sickenesse. We have received all your Letters of the 26 of May, of the 19 of June, and the first of August. Thus fare you well.

From Christ-Church the 22 of August.

A threefold division of Bishops.

But leaving the King in His Progresse, we come to behold the Bishops in their Visitations, and finde them divided into three sorts:

1. Zealous Protestants, as Archbishop Cranmer, Bishop Ridley, Hooper, Farrer.

Zealous Papists, as Gardner, Tunstall, Bonner: which three alone, were deprived of their Bishopricks, and confined.

3. Papists in heart, but outwardly conforming to the Kings Lawes, as Heath Archbishop of York, and many other Bishops.

Here it is worthy our inquiry why this latter sort, which so complied under King Edward the sixt, should be so stubborn and obstinate under Queen Elizabeth, whereof I can give but this reason assigned: That growing older and nearer their graves, they grew more conscientious and faithfull to their own (though erroneous) principles, it being in vain to dissemble now death did approach, though their younger years had been guilty of such prevarications.

Ann. Dom 1552

Ann. Reg. Edw. 6.

SECTION

SECTION II.

DIGNISSIMO VIRO

CAROLO CHENEY

De Comitatu BUCK: Armigero,

Mecœnati ſuo munificentiſſimo.

ETHELSTANUS, Saxonum Monarcha, decreto ſanxivit, ſi maſſere aſcenderet, ut ter*, Magnum mare transfretaret, per proprium negotium ſuum, fuit deinde TAINI dignus rectitudine. In qua lege enucleanda, mihi aliquantillum immorandum; quum licet tibi (ut alia omnia) expedita, aliis forſitan aliquid nodi ei ſubeſſe videatur.

* Regius Codex fol. 143. col. 4. Spelmanni Concilia, p. 406.

1. Maſſere) Mercatorem deſignari in confeſſo eſt.

2. Magnum mare) Mediterraneum intenditur, quo nomine Sacræ Scripturæ * ſepiùs innoteſcit.

*Num. 34. 6. Joſh. 1. 4. & 15. 12.

3. Proprium negotium) quâ clauſulâ excluditur ſervile genus, (FACTORES dicimus) qui non ſui juris, ſed Dominis rationem reddituri.

4. Taini)

4. Taini) intelligimus melioris notæ Generosum.

5. Dignus rectitudine) Olet hoc sæculi barbariem.

Sed his verbis voluit Rex, ut censeatur Iso-Tainus, atq; eundem honoris gradum sortiatur.

Quod si, Vir clarissime, illi seculo tanta contigisset felicitas, ut tu tunc temporis vixisses, quibus titulis te decorandum Rex ille censuisset? qui, ortu tuo Nobilis, Mare parvum, medium, magnum, omnia, (multis aquarum terrarumque montibus superatis) transivisti. Idq; non turpis lucri causa, ut navem mercibus; sed scientiæ ergo, ut mentem dotibus instructam reportares.

Te igitur in ipsissimo Libri mei umbilico (quantum paginas scriptas, nondum impressas, æstimare potui) collocandum curavi, eo consilio, quo provida natura Soli inter Planetas medium locum assignavit, ut ex æquo, utrinque totum opus nomine tuo illustraretur.

Deus Te, tuamque Conjugem (non magis natalium splendore, quam propriis virtutibus spectabilem) eousque protegat, dum in dubium venerit, longiorve an beatior vestra vita sit reputanda.

Ann. Dom. 1552. Ann. R. E. Ed. 6. 6. June 10.

LAtely information was given to the Kings Councell, that much coſtly furniture, which was embezelled, might very ſeaſonably (ſuch the Kings preſent occaſions) and profitably be recovered. For, private mens halls were hung with Altar-cloathes; their tables and beds, covered with copes, inſtead of carpets, and coverlets. Many drank at their daily meals in chalices; and no wonder, if in proportion it came to the ſhare of their horſes to be watered in rich coffins of marble. And, as if firſt laying of hands upon them were ſufficient title unto them, ſeizing on them was generally the price they had payed for them. Now, although four years were elapſed, ſince the deſtruction of Colledges & Chanteries, and much of the beſt Church ornaments was tranſported beyond the Seas, yet the Privie Councel thought, this very gleaning in the ſtubble, would richly be worth the while, and that, on ſtrict inquiſition, they ſhould retrive much plate in ſpecie, and more money for moderate fines of offenders herein. Beſides, whereas Pariſh Churches had ſtill many rich Ornaments left in the cuſtody of their Wardens, they reſolved to convert, what was ſuperfluous, or ſuperſtitious, to the Kings uſe. To which purpoſe, Commiſſions were iſſued out, to ſome ſelect perſons in every County, according to the * tenour following:

Commiſſioners ſent to enquire about Church-Ornaments.

Inſtructions given by the King's Majeſtie to His right truſty and right welbeloved Couſin and Counſellour the Marqueſſe of Northampton, and to the reſt of His Highneſs Comiſsioners appointed for the Survey of Church-goods within His Majeſties County of Northampton.

EDVVARD.

FIrſt, Upon the receipt of the ſame Commiſſion by any one of the ſame Commiſsioners, he that ſo ſhall firſt receive the Commiſsion, ſhall forthwith with all convenient ſpeed, give knowledge to the reſt named in the ſame Comiſsion, and with them ſhall agree to meet and aſſemble with that ſpeed they can for the execution of the ſame Commiſsion and theſe Inſtructions. And if any of the ſaid Commiſsioners ſhall be dead, ſick, or otherwiſe, be ſo abſent out of the Countrey for the ſervice of the King, that he cannot with ſpeed attend the ſame in that caſe; The reſt of the ſame Commiſsioners, ſo that they be to the Number appointed, by the Commiſsion, ſhall not make any delay from the proceeding in the ſame Commiſsion, but ſhall forthwith allot their ſittings, Aſſemblies and meetings for the ſame Commiſsion, as in like caſes hath been, or ſhall be meet to be uſed.

Item, For their better and more certain proceeding, the ſaid Commiſsioners ſhall in ſuch caſes, where none of the Commiſsioners be Cuſtos Rotulorum of that County, ne hath been ſince the beginning of Our Reign, command the ſaid Cuſtos Rotulorum, or their Deputy, or the Clerk of the Peax of theſe parts, to bring or ſend unto them ſuch Books, Regiſters, and Inventories, as hath heretofore any wiſe come to their hands, by Indenture, touching the Summes, Numbers and Values of any Goods, Plate, Iewels, Veſtments, and Bells, or Ornaments of any Churches, Chappels, and ſuch like. And likewiſe the ſaid Commiſsioners ſhall ſend to the Biſhops of every Dioceſe wherein the ſaid County is Situate, or to their Chancellours, Commiſſaries, or other Eccleſiaſticall Officers in whoſe hands, or cuſtody, the like of the aforeſaid Inventories and Regiſters have command of them, and every of them, They ſhall receive and take the ſaid Books, Regiſters, and Inventories. And that done, the ſaid Commiſsioners ſhall compare both the ſame Inventories, (that is to say) as well such as they shall receive and take of the Custos Rotulorum, or their Deputy, or the Clerk of the Peax, as of the Bishops, or other under-Officers, and according to the best, richest, and greatest Inventories of the said Commissioners shall proceed to make their survey and enquirie. And by the same make the searches of the defaults and wants that shall be found. And generally the same Commissioners shall not onely by the view of the said Registers and Inventories, but also by any other means they can better devise, proceed to the due search and inquisition of the wants and defaults of any part of the said Goods, Plate, Iewels, Vestments, Bells, or Ornaments.

* The originall under the King's hand was lent me by Mr. Thomas Treſham late of Giddington in Northampton-ſhire.

Ann. Dom. 1552. Ann. Reg. Edw. 6.

Item, For the more speedy obtaining of the said Registers and Inventories, the said Commissioners shall receive speciall Letters of commandement from our Privie Councell for the deliverie thereof, which Letters the said Commissioners shall deliver as they shall see occasion.

Item, The said Commissioners shall upon their view, and survey taken, cause due Inventories to be made by Bills or Books indented, of all manner of Goods, Plate, Iewels, Bells, and Ornaments, as yet remaining, or anywise forth coming, and belonging to any Churches, Chappels, Fraternities, or Gilds, and the one part of the same Inventories to send and return to Our Privie Councell, and the other to deliver to them in whose hands the said Goods, Plate, Iewels, Bells, and Ornaments shall remain to be kept preserved. And they shall also give good charge and order that the same goods and every part thereof be at all times forth coming to be answered, leaving nevertheless in every Parish Church or Chappell of common resort, one, two, or more Chalices or Cups, according to the multitude of the People in every such Church or Chappell, and also such other Ornaments as by their discretion shall seem requisite for the Divine Service in every such place for the time.

And, because We be informed, that in many places great quantities of the said Plate, Iewels, Bells, and Ornaments be imbecilled by certain private men contrary to Our expresse commandements in that behalf; The said Commissioners shall substantially and justly enquire and attain the knowledge thereof; by whose default the same is, and hath been, and in whose hands any part of the same is come. And in that point the said Commissioners shall have good regard, that they attain to certain names, and dwelling-places of every person and persons, that hath sold, alienated, imbezilled, taken or carried away, and of such also as have councelled, advised, and commanded any part of the said Goods, Plate, Iewels, Bells, Vestments, and Ornaments to be taken or carried away, or otherwise imbezilled. And these things they shall as certainly and duly as they can cause to be searched and understand.

Upon a full search and enquiry whereof, The said Commissioners, four or three of them shall cause to be called before them. Also the persons by whom any of the said Goods, Plate, Iewels, Bells, Ornaments, or any other the premisses, have been alienated, embezilled, or taken away, or by whose means or procurement the same, or any part thereof hath been attempted, or to whose hands or use any of the same or any profit for the same hath grown. And by such means as to their discretions shall seem best, cause them to bring into their the said Commissioners hands to Our use the said Plate, Iewels, Bells, and other the premisses so alienated, or the true and just value thereof, certifying unto Our Privie Councell the names of all such as refuse to stand to, or obey their Order touching the re-delivery, and restitution of the same, or the just value thereof. To the intent that as cause and reason shall require, every man may answer to his doings in this behalf.

Finally, Our pleasure is, that the said Commissioners in all their doings shall use such sober and discreet manner of proceeding as the effect of this Commission may goe forward with as much quiet and as little occasion of trouble or disquiet of the multitude as may be, using to that end, such wise per-

swasions

Ann. Dom. 1552. Ann. Reg. Ed 6. 6.

ſwaſions in all places of their Seſions as in reſpect of the place, and diſpoſition of the People may ſeem to their wiſdomes moſt expedient. Giving alſo good and ſubſtantiall order for the ſtay of the inordinate and greedy covetouſneſſe of ſuch diſordered people, as have or ſhall goe about the alienating of any the premiſſes, So as according to reaſon, and order ſuch as have, or ſhall contemptuouſly offend in this behalf may receive reformation, as for the quality of their doings ſhall be requiſite.

In purſuance of theſe their Inſtructions, the Kings Commiſſioners in their reſpective Counties, recovered much, and diſcovered more of Church-wealth and Ornaments: For, ſome were utterly imbeziled by perſons not reſponſible, and there the King muſt loſe his right. More were concealed by parties not detectable, ſo cunningly they carried their ſtealths, ſeeing every one who had nimmed a Church-Bell, did not ring it out for all to hear the ſound thereof. Many potent perſons well known to have ſuch goods, ſhufled it out with their greatneſſe, mutually connived at therein, by their equalls, fellow-offenders in the ſame kinde. However, the Commiſſioners regained more than they expected, conſidering the diſtance of time, and the cold ſcent they followed ſo many years after the Diſſolution. This Plate, and other Church-Utenſils, were ſold, and advanced much money to the Exchequer. An *Authour telleth us, That (amongſt many which they found) they left but one ſilver Chalice to every Church, too narrow a proportion to populous Pariſhes, where they might have left two at the leaſt, ſeeing for expedition-ſake, at great Sacraments, the Miniſter at once delivereth the wine to two Communicants. But they conceived one Cup enough for a ſmall Pariſh, and that greater and richer were eaſily able to purchaſe more to themſelves.

* Sir John Hayward.

2. All this Income rather ſtayed the ſtomack, than ſatisfied the hunger of the Kings Exchequer: For the allaying whereof, the Parliament, now ſitting, conferred on the Crown, the Biſhoprick of Durham. This may be called the Engliſh Herbipolis, or Wirtz-burge, it being true of both,

Dunelmia ſola, judicat Enſe & Stola.

Durham Biſhoprick diſſolved.

The Biſhop whereof was a Palatine, or Secular Prince, and his Seal in form reſembleth Royalty in the Roundneſſe thereof, and is not Oval, the badge of plain Epiſcopacy. Rich, and entire the revennes of this See, ſuch as alone would make a conſiderable addition to the Crown, remote the ſcituation thereof, out of Southern ſight, and therefore, if diſſolved, the ſooner out of mens mindes. Beſides, Cuthbert Tunſtall the preſent Biſhop of Durham, was in durance, and deprived for his obſtinacy, ſo that ſo ſtubborn a Biſhop gave * the State the fairer quarrell with ſo rich a Biſhoprick, now annexed to the Kings revenue.

* yet the Duke of Northumberland, either was, or was to be poſſeſſour thereof.

3. Well it was for this See, (though diſſolved) that the lands thereof were not diſperſed by ſale unto ſeverall perſons, but preſerved whole and entire (as to the main) in the Crown. Had ſuch a diſſipation of the parts thereof been made, no leſſe than a State-miracle had been requiſite for the recollection thereof. Whereas now within two years after, Queen Mary reſtored Tunſtall to this Biſhoprick, and this Biſhoprick to it ſelf, re-ſetling all the lands on the ſame.

Afterwards reſtored by Qu. Mary.

4. By this time, ſuch Learned men as were employed by the King, to reform the Eccleſiaſtical Laws, had brought their work to ſome competent perfection. Let me enlarge my ſelf on this ſubject of concernment, for the Readers ſatisfaction. When the Pope had ingroſſed to his Courts the cognizance of all cauſes, which either looked, glanced, or pointed in the leaſt degree, at what was reduceable to Religion, he multiplied Laws, to magnifie himſelf: Whoſe principal deſigne therein, was not to make others good, but himſelf great; not ſo much to direct, and defend the good, to reſtrain and puniſh the bad, as to enſnare and entangle both. For, ſuch the number of their Clementines, Sextines, Intra- & Extravagants, Provincialls, Synodalls, Gloſſes, Sentences, Chapters, Summaries, Reſcripts, Breviaries, long and ſhort Caſes, &c. that none could carry themſelves ſo cautiouſly, but would be rendred obnoxious, and caught within the compaſſe of offending. Though the best was, for money they might buy the Popes pardon, and thereby their own innocence.

A wood, rather a wilderneſſe, of the Popes Canons.

Two and thirty Regulatours of the Canon-Law.

5. Hereupon, when the Popes power was banished out of England, his Canon-Law, with the numerous Books and branches thereof, lost its authority in the Kings Dominions. Yet, because some gold must be presumed amongst so much drosse, grain amongst so much chaffe, it was thought fit, that so much of the Canon-Law should remain as was found conformable to the Word of God, and Laws of the Land. And therefore King Henry the eighth was impowred by Act of Parliament, to elect two and thirty able persons, to reform the Ecclesiastical Laws, though in His Reign very little to good purpose was performed therein.

Contracted to eight by King Edward the 6.

6. But the designe was more effectually followed in the daies of King Edward the sixth, reducing the number of two and thirty to eight, thus mentioned in His Letters-Patents dated at Westminster, the last year, Novemb: 11.

Bishops { Thomas Cranmer, of Canterbury. / Thomas Goodrich, of Elie. } Divines { Peter Martyr. / Richard Cox. }

Civilians, and Canonists { Dr. William May. / Dr. Rowland Taylor, of Hadley. } Common Lawyers { John Lucas. / Rich: Goodrick } Esquires.

It was not onely convenient, but necessary, that Common-Lawyers should share in making these Church Constitutions, because the same were to be built, not onely sure in themselves, but also symmetricall to the Municipall Lawes of the Land. These Eight had power by the Kings Patents, to call in to their assistance what persons they pleased, and are said to have used the pens of Sir John Cheeke, and Walter Haddon, Dr. in Law, to turn their Lawes into Latine.

Laws no Laws not stamped with Royall Authority.

7. However, these had onely a preparing, no concluding power; so that, when they had ended their work, two things were wanting, to make these Ecclesiastical Canons (thus by them composed) have the validity of Laws. First, an exact review of them by others, to amend the mistakes therein. As where * they call the Common-Prayer-Book then used in England, proprium & perfectum omnis divini cultus judicem, & magistrum: a title truly belonging onely to the Scripture. Secondly, a Royall ratification thereunto; which this King, prevented by death, nor any of His Successours ever stamped upon it. Indeed, I finde in an * Author, (whom I am half-ashamed to alledge) that Doctor Haddon Anno 12 or 13 Elizabeth, delivered in Parliament a Latine Book, concerning Church-Discipline, written in the daies of King Edward the sixt, by Mr. Cranmer, Sir John Cheek, &c. which could be no other than this lately mentioned. Which Book was committed by the House, unto the said Mr. Haddon, Mr. George Bromley, Mr. Norton, &c. to be translated, I conceive into English again, and never after can I recover any mention thereof, save that some thirteen years since * it was printed in London.

* Titulo de Divinis Officiis, cap. 6.

* John Pearl, at the end of his Preface to his Book, intituled, [Reformation no enemy to Her Majesty.]

* Anno 1640. A silent Convocation.

8. A Parliament was called in the last of this Kings Reign, wherein no Church-matter was medled with, save that therein a Subsidie, granted by the Clergy, was confirmed. Such moneys being the Legacie of course, which all Parliaments (fairly coming to a peaceable end) bequeath to their Sovereign. As for the Records of this Convocation, they are but one degree above blanks, scarce affording the names of the Clerks assembled therein. Indeed, they had no Commission from the King to meddle with Church-businesse, and every Convocation in it self, is born deaf, and dumb, so that it can neither hear complaints in Religion, nor speak in the redresse thereof, till first Ephata, be thou opened, be pronounced unto it by Commission from Royall Authority.

The true reason thereof.

9. Now, the true reason why the King would not intrust the diffusive body of the Convocation, with a power to meddle with matters of Religion, was a just jealousie

Ann. Dom. 1553. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 7.

jealouſie which He had of the ill affection of the major part thereof: who under the fair rinde of Proteſtant profeſſion, had the rotten core of Romiſh ſuperſtition. It was therefore conceived ſafer for the King to relie on the ability and fidelity of ſome ſelect Confidents, cordiall to the cauſe of Religion; than to adventure the ſame to be diſcuſſed, and decided by a ſuſpitious Convocation.

10. However, this barren Convocation is intituled the parent of thoſe Articles of Religion, (fourty two in number) which are printed with this Preface, Articuli de quibus in Synodo Londinenſi, Anno Domini 1552. inter Epiſcopos, & alios eruditos viros convenerat. With theſe was bound a Catechiſme, younger in age (as bearing date of the next year) but of the ſame extraction, relating to this Convocation, as authour thereof. Indeed, it was firſt compiled (as appears by the Kings Patent prefix'd) by a ſingle Divine, (* charactred pious and learned) but afterwards peruſed and allowed by the Biſhops, and other learned men, (underſtand it, the Convocation) and by Royall Authority commended to all Subjects, commanded to all School Maſters to teach it their Scholars.

Forty two Articles of Religion, and the Kings Catechiſme.

* à pio quodam & erudito viro conſcripta, in the Kings Patent.

11. Yet very few in the Convocation ever ſaw it, much leſſe, explicitly conſented thereunto: but theſe had formerly (it ſeems) paſſed over their power (I ſhould be thankfull to him, who would produce the originall inſtrument thereof) to the ſelect Divines appointed by the King, in which ſenſe they may be ſaid to have done it themſelves by their Delegates, to whom they had deputed their authority. A caſe not ſo clear but that it occaſioned a cavill at the next Convocation in the firſt of * Queen Mary, when the Papiſts therein aſſembled, renounced the legality of any ſuch former tranſactions.

Conſented, and not conſented to by the Convocation.

* See more thereof in the next year.

July 6.

Pretious King Edward the ſixt now changed his Crown of Gold for one of Glory: we will ſomething enlarge our ſelves, to give poſterity His true Character, never meeting more virtues in ſo few years. For His Birth, there goeth a conſtant tradition, that Cæſar-like, He was cut out of the belly of His Mother, Jane Seymour: though a great perſon of Honour, (deriving her Intelligence mediately from ſuch as were preſent at Her Labour) aſſured me of the contrary. Indeed, ſuch as ſhall read the calm, and ſerene ſtyle of that Letter, which I have ſeen written, (though not by) for that Queen, and ſigned with Her own Signet after Her delivery, cannot conjecture thence, that any ſuch violence was offered unto Her. But ſee the Letter.

The death of K. Edward the ſixt, who was not cut out of His Mothers belly, as is commonly reported.

Queen Janes Letter after Her Delivery to the Lords of the Councell.

RIght truſty and welbeloved, We greet you well; and foraſmuch as by the ineſtimable goodneſſe, and grace of Almighty God, We be delivered and brought in Childe-bed of a PRINCE, conceived in moſt lawfull Matrimony, between my Lord the Kings Majeſtie, and Us. Doubting not, but that for the love and affection which you bear unto Us, and to the Common-wealth of this Realm, this knowledge ſhall be joyous, and glad tidings unto you: We have thought good to certifie you of this ſame: To the intent ye might not onely render unto God condigne thanks and praiſe for ſo great a benefice, but alſo continually pray for the long continuance, and preſervation of the ſame here in this life, to the honour of God, joy, and pleasure of my Lord the KING and Us, and the universall weal, quiet, and tranquility of this whole Realm.

Ann. Dom. 1553. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 7.

¶ [a] Given under our Signet at my Lords Manour of Hampton-Court, the 22 day of October.

a Extant in Sir Tho. Cottons Library, sub Ner. cap. 10.

And although this Letter was soon after seconded with [b] another of a sadder subject, here inserted, subscribed by all the Kings Physitians; yet neither doth that so much as insinuate any impression of violence on Her person, as hastening Her death, but seems rather to cast the cause thereof on some other distemper.

b Extant, ibid.

A sadder Letter of Her Physitians unto them.

THese shall be to advise your Lordships of the Queens estate: Yesterday afternoon She had a natural Lax, by reason whereof She began to lighten, and (as it appeared) to amend, and so continued till towards night. All this night She hath been very sick, and doth rather appare, than amend. Her Confessour hath been with Her Grace this morning, and hath done that to his office appertaineth, and even now is preparing to minister to Her Grace the Sacrament of Unction.

¶ At Hampton-Court this Wednesday morning at eight a clock.

Your Lordships at Commandement,

Thomas Cutland. ℭ John Chambers, Priest.
Robert Karhold. ℭ William Butts.
Edward Bayntam. ℭ George Owen.

Impute we here this Extreme Unction administred to Her, partly to the over-officiousness of some superstitious Priest, partly, to the good Ladies inability; perchance insensible what was done unto her, in such extremity: otherwise we are confident, that Her judgment, when in strength, and health, disliked such practices, being a zealous Protestant. Which Unction did her as little good, as the twelve Masses said for Her soul in the City of London, at the Commandement of the Duke of Norfolk; whether he did it to credit their Religion with the countenance of so great a Convert, or did it out of the Nimiety of his own Love and Loyaltie to the Queen, expressing it according to his own judgment, without the consent, (if not against the will) of the Queens nearest kindred.

Prince Edw. towardliness in learning.

12. But leaving the Mother, let us come to the Son, who, as he saith of himself in the Manuscript of His Life, was for the first six years bred and brought up amongst the Women, and then consigned to masculine Tuition under Doctor Richard Cox, and Sir John Cheeke, who taught Him Latine; and John Belmain, who instructed Him in the French Tongue. How great and sudden His proficiency in Learning was, will appear by this Letter, written with His own hand to His Father, when about eight years old. And although some may cavill this Letter not to be the Princes, but Cheeke's or Cox's in the Prince, yet the very matter and style will attest it the genuine Issue of His infant-Genius.

Literæ

Ann. Dom. 1543 | Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 7.

Literæ meæ semper habent unum Argumentum, Rex Nobilissime, atq; Pater Illustrissime, id est, in omnibus Epistolis ago tibi gratias pro beneficentia tua erga me maxima; si enim sæpius multò ad te literas exararem, nullo tamen quidem modo potui pervenire officio literarum ad magnitudinem benignitatis tuæ erga me. Quis enim potuit compensare beneficia tua erga me? Nimirum nullus qui non est tam magnus Rex ac nobilis Princeps, ac tu es, cujusmodi ego non sum. Quamobrem Pietas tua in me, multo gratior est mihi, quod facis mihi, quæ nullo modo compensare possim, sed tamen adnitar, & faciam quod in me est, ut placeam Majestati, atque præcabor Deum, ut diù te servet incolumem. Vale Rex Nobilissime atque Pater Illustrissime.

His Letter to his King-Father. e See it in Sir Tho. Cotton's Libr.

Hatfeldiæ, vicesimo septimo Septemb:

Majestati tuæ observantissimus Filius,
EDWARDUS Princeps.

With the increase of His Age, His Writing was improved, both in the Letter, Matter, and Phrase thereof, as appeareth by what He wrote in Latine some moneths after, to His Mother-in-Law, Queen Katherine Parre; in thankfulnesse for the New-yeares-gift (the Kings and Her own Picture) She had sent unto Him; One may charitably believe that so Learned a Lady, understood the Letter without an Interpreter; but sure it is, She communicated the same to the King, who joyfully accepted thereof.

Another to Qu. Katharine Parre.

d Quod non ad te jamdiu scripserim Regina illustrissima, atque Mater charissima, in causa fuit, non negligentia, sed studium.

d in Sir Tho. Cotton's Library, whence I transcribed it.

Non enim hoc feci, ut numquam omnino scriberem, sed ut accuratiùs scriberem. Quare spero te futuram contentam & gavisuram, quod non scripserim. Tu enim velles me proficere in omni honestate & Pietate, quod est signum insignis & diuturni tui Amoris erga me, atque hunc amorem multis beneficiis mihi declarasti, & præcipuè hac strena, quam proximè ad me misisti, in qua Regiæ Majestatis, & tua effigies ad vivum expressa continetur. Nam plurimum me delectat vestras Imagines Abscentium contemplari, quos lubentissimè ſimè videre cupio præſentes, ac quibus maximè tum Naturâ, tum Officio devinctus ſum. Quamobrem majores tibi gratias ago, ob hanc ſtrenam, quàm ſi miſiſſes ad me precioſas veſtes, & Aurum cælatum, aut quidvis aliud Eximium. Deus tuam Celſitudinem, quam me brevi viſurum ſpero, ſervet incolumem.

Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 7. Ann. Dom. 1553.

Hartfordiæ,
decimo Januarii.

Filius Celſitudini tuæ obſequentiſsimus,
EDVARDUS Princeps.

A Letter to the Earle of Hartford.

Now our hand is in, but one Letter more (but in date ſome moneths before the laſt) to His Unckle, Earl of Hartford, and we have done. For if Papiſts ſuperſtitiouſly preſerve the Fingers, Teeth, yea Locks of Haire of their pretended Saints; wonder not if I prize the ſmalleſt Reliques of this gracious Prince, never as yet preſented to publique view.

NAtura movet me ut recorder tui Avuncule Chariſſime, etſi negotia tua impediunt te ne videas me, ideo de literas ad te, quæ literæ forent teſtimonium Recordationis meæ, quam habeo de te. Quòd ſi haberem ullum melius monumentum Benevolentiæ meæ erga te, quam literæ ſunt, illud ad te mitterem. Puto autem te acceptarum literas meas bene non pro bonitate literarum, ſed pro Benevolentia ſcriptoris. Et tu non erus adeo lætus in accipiendis literis à me, ut ego gaudebo, ſi intellexero te in bonam partem accepiſſe illas, quod puto te facturum. Optimè valeas in Chriſto Jeſu.

Hunſdoniæ,
octavo Novemb: E. Princeps.

An inſtance of His piety.

Such was the Piety of this young Prince, that being about to take down ſomething, which was above his reach, one of His Play-fellows proffered Him a boſſed-plated Bible to ſtand upon, and heighten Him to take what He deſired. Perceiving it a Bible, with holy Indignation, He refuſed it, and ſharply reproved the Offerer thereof; it being unfit, He ſhould trample that under His feet, which He was to treaſure up in His head and heart. How many now adaies, unable in themſelves to atchieve their own wicked ends, make Gods Word their Pedeſtall, that ſtanding thereon, they may be (not the holier, but) the higher, and the better advantaged, by abuſing a piety, to attain their own deſignes.

And an extraordinary one of the prevalency of His Prayer.

13. When Crowned King, His goodneſſe increaſed with His greatneſſe, conſtant in His private devotions, and as ſucceſſfull, as fervent therein, witneſſe this particular: Sir John Cheeke, His School-Maſter, fell deſperately ſick; of whoſe condition

Ann. Dom. 1553. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 7.

tion the King carefully enquired every day: At last his Physitians told Him, That there was no hope of his life, being given over by them for a dead man. No, saith King Edward, he will not die at this time, for this morning I begg'd his life from God in my Prayers, and obtained it: which accordingly came to passe; and he soon after, against all expectation, wonderfully recovered. This was attested by the old Earle of Huntingdon, bred up in his Childhood with King Edward, unto Sir Thomas Cheeke, still surviving about 80 years of age.

His exact Diary.

14. He kept an exact Account, written with His own hand, (and that a very Legible one) of all Memorable accidents, with the accurate Date thereof. No high Honour was conferred, Bishoprick bestowed, State-Office disposed of, no old Fort repaired, no new one erected, no Bullion brought in, no great Summes sent forth of the Land, no Ambassadours dispatched hence, none entertained here; in a word, no matter of moment transacted, but by Him, with His own hand it was recorded: Whose Notes herein, though very particular, are nothing triviall, though short, not obscure, as formerly we have made use of some of those which concern our History.

His good Archery and quick wit.

15. Whilst in health, His body was no lesse active in exercise, than His minde quick in apprehension. To give one Instance of both together. One day being shooting at Butts, (a manfull, and healthfull Pastime, wherein He very much delighted) He hit the very mark. The Duke of Northumberland, being present, (and, as I take it, betting on His Side) Well shot my Liege, quoth he. But you shot nearer the mark, (returned the King) when you shot off my good Unkle Somerset's head. And it is generally conceived that grief for his death caused K. Edwards Consumption, who succeeded not to any Consumptive Inclination, as hereditary from His Extraction, from a Father but little past, and a Mother just in the strength of Their Age.

An uncertain report.

16. However, I finde in a * Popish Writer, that it was said, That the Apothecary who poisoned him, (for the horrour of the offence, and the disquietnesse of his conscience) drowned himself. And that the Landresse who washed His shirt, lost the skin off her fingers. But if his History be no better than his Divinity, we that justly condemn the one, can doe no lesse than suspect the other.

* Image of both Churches, page 423.

The Prayer of K. Edward on his death-bed.

17. We will conclude this Kings most Pious life with that His most devout Prayer on His Death-Bed, which God heard and graciously answered, for the good of the Church of England.

d Fox Acts & Mon. p. 1395.

d LOrd God, deliver Me out of this miserable, and wretched life, and take Me among thy chosen. Howbeit, not my will, but thy will be done. Lord, I commit my spirit to thee. O Lord, thou knowest how happy it were for me to be with thee; yet for thy chosens sake send me life and health, that I may truly serve thee. Oh my Lord God, blesse thy people, and save thine inheritance. Oh Lord God, save thy chosen People of England. Oh my Lord God, defend this Realm from Papistry, and maintain thy true Religion, that I and my People may praise thy holy Name, for Jesus Christs sake.

Ann. Dom. 1553. Ann. Reg. Edw. 7.

Oppoſers of the Liturgie grow ſtrong. * Latimers Sermons, printed Anno 1607. pag. 83.

17. One of the laſt Sermons King Edward heard, was preached before Him by Hugh Latimer, at what time their party began to ſpread and increaſe, who oppoſed the Liturgie, witneſſe this paſſage in his Sermon: * I have heard ſay, when that the good Queen that is gone, had ordained in her Houſe daily Prayer, both before Noon, and after Noon; the Admirall getteth him out of the way, like a Mole digging in the earth. He ſhall be Lots Wife to me as long as I live. He was, I heard ſay, a Covetous man, a covetous man indeed: I would there were no more in England. He was, I heard ſay, an Ambitious man: I would there were no more in England. He was, I heard ſay, a Seditious man, a Contemner of Common-Prayer: I would there were no more in England. Well! he is gone, I would he had left none behinde him. A paſſage ſo informative to the Church-Hiſtory of that Age, muſt not paſſe without ſome obſervation thereon.

The good Queen is gone:] this was Queen Katharine Par, (the Relict of King Henry the eighth) who ſome two years ſince died in Child-bed.

The Admirall:] This was Thomas Lord Seymour her Husband.

Getteth himſelf out of the way:] Here is the queſtion, on what terms he abſented himſelf, whether on Popiſh,	or	Non-Conformiſt.

In proof whereof he is compared to Lots Wife, which importeth a looking back, and reflexion on former practiſe.		Being termed herein Seditious, and not Superſtitious; it intimates, that a factious Principle made him diſtaſt the Common-Prayer.

A Contemner of the Common Prayer, I wiſh there were no more:] This probably relates unto a potent Party diſaffected to the Liturgie, which now began to be very conſiderable in England, but (if the premiſſes be rightly collected) much too blame in the judgment of godly Maſter Latimer.

18. The diſlikers of the Liturgie, bare themſelves high upon the judgment of Maſter Calvin, in his Letter (four years ſince) to the Duke of Somerſet Lord Protectour, now no longer a privacie, becauſe publickly printed in his Epiſtles.

Mr. Calvin's 3 Reaſons for a ſet Form of Prayer. * Libro Epiſt: pag. 69.

And yet Maſter Calvin is therein very poſitive for a ſet Forme, whoſe words deſerve our Tranſlation and obſervation.

* Formulam precum, & rituum Eccleſiaſticorum valde probo, ut certa illa extet.	I doe highly approve that there ſhould be a certain Form of Prayer and Eccleſiaſticall Rites.
A quâ ne Paſtoribus diſcedere in functione ſua liceat.	From which it ſhould not be lawfull for the Paſtors themſelves to diſcede.
1. Ut conſulatur quorundam ſimplicitati & imperitiæ.	1. That proviſion may be made for ſome peoples ignorance and unskilfulneſſe.
2. Ut certius conſtet omnium inter ſe Eccleſiarum conſenſus.	2. That the conſent of all Churches amongſt themſelves may the more plainly appear.
3. Ut obviam ineatur deſultoriæ quorundam levitati, qui novationes quaſdam affectant.	3. That order may be taken againſt the deſultorie levity of ſuch who delight in innovations.
Sic igitur, ſtatum eſſe Catechiſmum oportet, ſtatam Sacramentorum adminiſtrationem, publicam item precum formulam.	Thus there ought to be an eſtabliſhed Catechiſme, an eſtabliſhed Adminiſtration of Sacraments, as alſo a publick Form of Prayer.

So

Ann. Dom. 1553. Ann. Reg. Ed. 6. 7.

So that it seems not a Form, but this Form of Prayer did displease, and exceptions were taken at certain passages still in the Liturgie, though lately reviewed by the Bishops, and corrected.

19. Whilst mutuall animosities were heightned betwixt the Opposers and Assertors of the Liturgie, Providence put a period for a time to that Controversie in England. Such who formerly would not, soon after durst not use the Common-Prayer, Masse and Popery being set up by Queen Mary in the room thereof. Thus when Children fall out and fight about the candle, the Parents comming in and taking it away, leave them to decide the differences in the dark.

Wanton frowardnesse justly punished.

The end of the Reign of King EDWARD the sixt.

THE Church-History
OF BRITAINE.

The Eighth Book:

CONTAINING THE PERSECUTIONS
Under the Reign of

QUEEN MARY.

LONDON,
Printed in the Year, M. DC. LV.

THE

Church-History

OF BRITAIN.

The Eighth Book.

CONTAINING THE PERSECUTIONS

Under the Reign of

QUEEN MARY.

LONDON,

Printed in the Year, M. DC. LV.

To the Right Honourable,

FRANCIS GREVILL,

BARON

BROKE

OF

BEAVTHAMPS-COVRT.

My Lord,

THere is a Generation of People in our Age called QUAKERS, which they disclaim as a Nick-name, though I see not how handsomely they can wave the Name, whilst they weare the thing, having contracted a Habit of QUAKING wherein they delight; Of their Practises no less Ridiculous then Erroneous, two most remarkable.

First, the casting off of their Cloaths, which, did it not more wound the Modesty of others, then their own, I could wish that their going naked might be their Puniſhment for their going naked; that what ſometimes they affect of Fancy, ſhould alwayes be enjoyned them by Authority; till the Cold converted them into more Civility.

In vain do they plead for their Practiſe, the Precedent of the Prophet * Iſaiah, going naked for three years, whoſe act was extraordinary and myſtical, having an immediate command from God for the ſame. As well may they in Imitation of * Hoſea, take a known harlot to their wives, which I beleeve they would not willingly do, though they have made Harlots of other mens wives, if all be true reported of them.

* Iſaiah 20.3.

* Hoſea 1.2.

Their other Opinion is, that THOU and THEE is the Omer of Reſpect to be meaſur'd out to every ſingle perſon; (allowing the hieſt no more, the loweſt no leſs) be he (to ſpeak in their own * Phraſe) either King, Lord, Judge, or Officer.

* Pamphlet called the Language of truth. pag. 2.

We will take their words aſunder (as the wheels of a watch) only ſcowre them, and then put them together again.

Written 1648.9

King) though none at this preſent in the Land, yet becauſe theſe pretend to a Prophetical ſpirit, and there may be one in due time, their words are conſiderable.

Lord) here your Honour with thoſe many perſons your Peers are concerned.

Judge) in this place the ſhooe pinches them, becauſe they * bear the Sword to puniſh Offendors.

* Rom. 13.4.

Officers) I ſuppoſe either Civil or Military, if they allow of the diſtinction.

No mention here of Miniſters: It ſeems THOU and THEE, is too good language for us, who are Cains, and Balaams, and Dogs, and Devils in their mouths. The beſt is, the ſharpeſt railing cannot pierce, where Guiltineſs in the perſon railed on, hath not firſt wimbled an hole for the entrance thereof.

the

Their Principall Argument for their Practice, is drawn from many places in * Scripture, where THOU and THEE are uſed by God to Man, and Man to God, and Man to Man, which cannot be deni'd.

* Exod. 33. 12. five times in one verſe.

In Oppoſition whereunto we maintain, that THOU from Superiors to Inferiors is proper, as a Signe of Command; from equals to equals is paſſable, as a note of Familiarity; but from Inferiors to Superiors, if proceeding from Ignorance hath a ſmack of Clowniſhneſs, if from Affectation, a tang of Contempt.

But in anſwer to their Objection from Scripture, we return foure things.

Firſt, THOU is not ſo diſtaſtful a term in Hebrew and Greek, as it is in the Engliſh, cuſtom of every Country being the grand Maſter of Language to appoint what is honourable, and diſgraceful therein. The Jews had their * Racha or terme of contempt unknown to us; we, our THOU, a ſigne of ſlighting unuſed by them.

* Matth. 5. 22.

Secondly, It followeth not, becauſe THOU and THEE only are ſet down, that therefore no other Additions of Honour were then and there given from Inferiors to their Superiors. A negative Argument cannot be framed in this Caſe, that more reſpect was not uſed, becauſe no more expreſt in ſcripture; it being the deſigne of Hiſtories, chiefly to repreſent the ſubſtance of deeds, not all verbal Formalities.

Thirdly, what Inferiors in Scripture wanted in words, they ſupplied in Poſtures and Geſtures of Submiſſion; even to * Proſtration of their bodies, which would be condemned for Idolatry, if uſed in England.

* Gen. 33. 3. 1 King. 1. 16. & 23. as alſo 1 King. 18. 7.

Laſtly, There are extant in Scripture, expreſſions of reſpect, as when Sarah termed her Husband Lord, which (though but * once mentioned in the text) was no doubt

doubt her constant Practise, or else the holy Spirit would not have took such notice thereof, and commended it to others imitation.

* 1 Pet. 3. 6.

But they follow their Argument, urging it unreasonable, that any should refuse that Coine in common discourse, which they in their solemn Devotions pay to God himself. THOU and THEE are Currant in the Prayers of Saints clean thorough the Scripture, as also in our (late admired) Liturgy, we Praise THEE, we Bless THEE, we Worship THEE, we Glorifie THEE, we give THEE Thanks for THY great Glory.

* Said or sung after the Communion.

It is answered; those Attributes of Greatness, Goodness, &c. given to God in the Beginning of every Prayer do Vertually and Effectually extend and apply themselves to every Clause therein, though for Brevities sake not actually repeated.

Thus OUR FATHER in the Preface of the Lords Prayer, relateth to every Petition therein; OUR FATHER hallowed be thy Name; OUR FATHER thy Kingdom come; OUR FATHER thy will be done &c. And this qualifieth the harshness and rudeness of THOU, THEE and THY, when for expedition and expressiveness sake they are necessarily used.

Your Honour will not wonder at the Practise of these QUAKERS, having read in the Prophetical Epistles of * S. Peter, and * S. Jude (last placed, because last to be performed) that towards the end of the world some shall NOT BE AFFRAID to speak evil of Dignities. These Feare, where no feare is, and QUAKE where they need not; but feare not, where feare is; being bold and impudent where they ought not. They are NOT AFRAID, not only to speak against Dignities (which in some case may be done, where they are Vitious men) but against Dignities, the lawful, useful, needful, Ordinances of God himself.

* 2 Pet. 2. 10.
* Jude 8.

God

God grant these may ſeaſonably be ſuppreſſed, before they grow too numerous, otherwiſe ſuch who now quarel at the Honour, will hereafter queſtion the wealth of others. Such as now accuſe them for Ambition for being higher, will hereafter condemne them for Covetouſneſs, for being broader then others; yea and produce Scripture too, proper and pregnant enough for their purpoſe, as abuſed by their Interpretation. In a word, it is ſuſpicious ſuch as now introduce THOU and THEE, will (if they can) expel MINE and THINE, diſolving all propriety into confuſion.

And now, my Lord, how ſilly a thing is that Honour, which lies at the mercy of ſuch mens mouths, to tender or deny the ſame. The beſt is Mens Statures are not extended or contracted, with their ſhaddows; ſo as to be ſtretched out into Giants in the morning; ſhrunk up into Dwarfes at Noone, and ſtretch'd out at Night into Giants again. Intrinſecal worth doth not increaſe and abate; Wax and Waine, Ebb and Flow, according to the Fancy of others. May your Lordſhip therefore labour for that true Honour, which conſiſteth in Vertue and God's Approbation thereof; which will laſt and remain how furiouſly ſoever the wicked rage, and imagine vain things againſt it.

Here I preſume, to preſent your Honour the Lives and Deaths of ſome worthies, contrary to thoſe QUAKERS in their Practiſe, and Opinion; I mean the Martyrs in the Reign of Queen Mary. Theſe deſpiſed not their Superiors, giving due Reverence to thoſe who condemned them, honouring lawfull Authority, though unlawfully uſed: Theſe caſt not off their Cloaths, but modeſtly wore their Linnen on them at their Suffering. Theſe counterfeited no Corporall QUAKING, (ſtanding as firme as the ſtake they were faſtned to:) though in a Spirituall ſenſe working out their ſalvation with

Feare

Feare and Trembling: Whose admirable Piety and Patience is here recommended into your Lordships consideration; by

Your humble Servant to be commanded in all Christian Offices,

THOMAS FULLER.

Anno Regin Mar. 1. | Anno Dom. 1553

THE CHVRCH-HISTORY OF BRITAINE.

CENT. XVI.

July 6. 1. KIng Edward, tender in yeers, and weak with ſickneſſe, was ſo practiced on by the importunitie of others, that, excluding His two Siſters, he conveyed the Crown to the Ladie Jane His Kinſwoman, by that which we may well call the Teſtament of King Edward, and the Will of the Duke of Northumberland. Thus, through the pious intents of this Prince, wiſhing well to the Reformation; the Religion of Queen Marie, obnoxious to exception; the ambition of Northumberland, who would do what he liſted; the ſimplicity of Suffolke, who would be done with as the other pleaſed; the dutifulneſſe of the Ladie Jane, diſpoſed by her Parents; the fearfulneſſe of the Judges, not daring to oppoſe; and the flattery of the Courtiers, moſt willing to comply, matters were made as ſure, as mans policy can make that good which is bad in it ſelf. But the Commons of England who for many yeers together had conn'd loyalty by-heart, out of the Statute of Succeſſion, were ſo perfect in their leſſon, that they would not be put out of it by this new ſtarted deſigne: ſo that every one proclaimed Mary next Heir in their conſciences: and, few daies after King Edwards death, all the project miſcarried: of the plotters whereof ſome executed, more impriſoned, moſt pardoned, all conquered, and Queen Mary crowned. Thus, though the ſtreame of Loyalty for a while was violently diverted, (to runne in a wrong channell,) yet with the ſpeedieſt opportunitie it recovered the right courſe again.

Queen Mary in deſpight of the Duke of Northumberland's oppoſition, crowned.

2. But now in what manner this Will of King Edwards was advanced, that the greateſt blame may be laid on them who had the deepeſt guilt, the following anſwer of Sr. Edward Mountagu, Lord Chief Juſtice of the Common-Pleas (accuſed for drawing up the Will, and committed by Queen Mary to priſon for the ſame) will truly acquaint us. The original whereof under his own hand, was communicated unto me, by his great grandchilde, Edward Lord Mountagu of Boughton, and here faithfully exemplified;

The truth of the carriage of Sr. Edward Mountagu in his drawing up the Will of King Edw. the ſixth.

Anno Dom. 1553 | Anno Regni Mar. 1.

SR. Edward Mountagu, Knight, late Chief-Justice of the Common Pleas, received a letter from Greenwich, dated the eleventh day of June last past, signed with the hands of the Lord Treasurer, the Duke of Northumberland; John Earl of Bedford, Francis Earl of Shrewsburie, the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Clynton, the Lord Darcie, John Gate, William Peter, William Cecill, John Cheke: whereby he was commanded to be at the Court on the morrow by one of the clock at after-noon, and to bring with him Sr. John Baker, Justice Bromley, the Attorney, and Solicitour General, and according to the same, all they were there at the said hour of one of the clock. And, after they were brought to the presence of the King, the Lord Treasurer the Marquesse of Northampton, Sr. John Gate, and one or two more of the Councill, whose names he doth not now remember, were present.

And then and there the King by His own mouth said, that now in His sickneſſe he had considered the state of this His Realm and Succession, which, if He should decease without Heir of His body, should go to the Lady Mary, who was unmarried, and might marry a stranger-borne, whereby the Laws of this Realm might be altered and changed, and His Highnesse proceedings in Religion might be altered. Wherefore His pleasure was, that the state of the Crown should go in such forme, and to such persons as His Highnesse had appointed in a Bill of Articles not signed with the Kings hand, which were read, & commanded them to make a Book thereof accordingly with speed. And they, finding divers faults not onely for the incertainty of the Articles, but also declaring unto the King, that it was directly against the Act of Succession, which was an Act of Parliament which would not be taken away by no such devise. Notwithstanding His Highnesse would not otherwise, but that they should draw a Book according to the said Articles, which he then took them, and they required a reasonable time of His Highnesse for the doeing thereof, and to consider the Laws and Statutes made for the Succession, which indeed were and be more dangerous then any of them, they did consider and remember, and so they departed commanding them to make speed.

And on the morrow all the said persons met, and, perusing the said Statutes there grew this question amongst them, whether it were presently treason by the words of the Statute of Anno primo Edvardi Sexti, or no treason till it were put in execution after the Kings death? because the words of the Statute are, the King His Heirs and Successours, because the King can have no Successours in His life; but to be sure they were all agreed that it were the best and surer way to say to the Lords, that the execution of this devise after the Kings decease was not onely treason, but the making of this devise was also presently treason, as well in the whole Councell as in them, and so agreed to make their report without doing any thing for the execution thereof.

And after Sr. William Peter sent for the said Sr. Edward to Eely-place, who shewed him that the Lords required great speed in the making of the said Book, and he told him, there were none like to be made for them for the danger aforesaid. And after that, the said S. Edward, with the rest of his company, went to the Court, and before all the Councell, (the Duke of Northumberland being not in the Council-chamber,) made report to the Lords, that they had considered the Kings Articles, and also the Statutes of Succession, whereby it appeared manifestly, that if they should make any Book according to the Kings commandment, they should not onely be in danger of treason, but also their Lordships all, wherefore they thought it their bounden duties to declare the danger of the Laws unto them, and for avoiding of the danger thereof they had nothing done therein, nor intended to doe, the Laws being so dangerous and standing in force.

The Duke of Northumberland, having intelligence of their answer, either

Anno Regin Mar. 1. Anno Dom. 1553

either by the Earle of Huntington, or by the Lord Admiral, cometh into the Council-Chamber before all the Council there, being in a great rage and fury, trembling for anger, and amongst his ragious talk called the said Sr. Edward Traitour; and further said, that he would fight in his shirt with any man in that quarrel (as all the whole Council being there will report) whereby the said Sr. Edward, with the rest were in great fear and dread, in special Mr. Bromley, and the said Sr. Edward, for Mr. Bromley told the said Sr. Edward after, that he dread then that the Duke would have striken one of them: and after they were commanded to go home, and so departed in great fear, without doing any thing more at that time, wishing of God they had stood to it, as they did then, unto this time.

And after the said Sr. Edward received another letter dated at Greenwich the 14th. of June last past, signed with the hands of the Lord Treasurer, the Earl of Bedford, the Marquesse of Northampton, the Earle of Shrewsburie, the Lord Clynton, the Lord Cobham, the Lord Darcy, William Peter, John Gate, John Cheeke, whereby he was commanded to bring with him Sr. John Baker, Justice Bromley and Mr. Gosnolde, and to be at the Court on the morrow by one of the clock at after-noon, where all they were at the same houre, and conveyed into a chamber behinde the Dining-Chamber there, and all the Lords looked upon them with earnest countenance, as though they had not known them. So that the said Sr. Edward, with the other, might perceive there were some earnest determination against them: and at length they were brought before the King Himself, there being present all the whole Council.

And the King demanded of them why they had not made His Book, according to His commandment, and refused that to doe? with sharp words and angry countenance; and the said Sr. Edward opened unto His Highnesse the cause why they did it not; and he and other had before declared and opened to the Councill, that if the writings were made, they were of no effect nor force, but utterly void when the King should decease, and the Statute of Succession not impaired nor hurted, for these will not be taken away, but by the same authority they were made, and that was by Parliament. To that said the King we minde to have a Parliament shortly, not telling when, which was the first time that the said Sr. Edward heard of any Parliament to be had. Whereunto he said, if His pleasure were so, all might be deferred to the Parliament, and all dangers and perils saved. Whereunto the King said, he would have this done, and after ratifie it by Parliament. And after commanded them very sharply upon their allegiance to make it; and there were divers of the Lords, that stood behind the said Sr. Edward said, and if they refused to do that, they were Traitours. And the said Sr. Edward was in great fear as ever he was in all his life before, seeing the King so earnest and sharpe, and the said Duke so angry the day before, who ruled the whole Councill as it pleased him, and were all affraid of him (the more is the pitty) so that such cowardnesse and feare was there never seen amongst honourable men, as it hath appeared.

The said Sr. Edward, being an old weak man and without comfort, began to consider with himself, what was best to be done for the safeguard of his life, which was like to chance in that fury and great anger presently. And, remembring that the making of the said writing was not presently treason by the Statute of Anno primo, because this word Successour would take no place while the King was living, and determined with himself not to meddle nor execute any thing concerning the same, after the death of the King, which he hath truly kept hereunto. And also remembring that the Queens Highnesse that now is should come by Act of Succession, as a purchaser by the law, might not lawfully punish treason or contempt committed in the Kings life, he said unto the King, that he had served His most noble Father many yeers, and also His Highnesse during His time, and loth he would be to disobey His commandment; for his own part he would obey it, so that His Highnesse would grant to them His commandment, license and commission under His great Seal, for the doing, making, and executing of all things concerning the same, and, when the things were done, that they might have a general pardon. All which Commission and pardon was as much as the said Sr. Edward could invent to help this danger over, and besides the things above remembred; which Commission and pardon the King granted them, saying, it was but reason that they should have them both, and the Commission is passed the Great Seal, and the Pardon was signed, and (as far as he knew) sealed.

Anno Dom. 1553 | Anno Regni Mariæ 1.

All the said matters considered, the said Sr. Edward said, for his part he would obey the Kings commandment, and so did M. Bromley say the same; and the King said to Sr. John Baker, what say you? you said never a word to day; who (as I take it) agreed to the same. Mr. Gosnold required a respite, for he was not yet perswaded to do the thing required. How the said Duke and the Earl of Shrewsburie handled him, he can tell best himself. And after upon the said Sr. Edwards motion the King gave him licence to be advised untill upon the morrow, who of himself being in great fear was content to obey the Kings commandment; and so the doers and makers of the said Book, with sorrowfull hearts, and with weeping eyes, in great fear and dread devised the said Book, according to such Articles as were signed with the Kings proper hand, above and beneath, and on every side. And their said Commission, with Articles so signed with the Kings hand, and the Book drawn in paper, were conveyed from the Court to the Lord Chancelors, to be ingrossed in parchment and to passe the great Seal, which was done accordingly.

And on the morrow next after the last Terme ended, the said Sr. Edward and all the Judges were sent for; he puts his hand to the Book in parchment sealed with the Great Seal, and so did many others. The said Book of Articles so signed remaineth with the Lord Chancellour, Bishop of Eely; but, who conveyed the said Paper Book into the Chancery, or who wrot them, or who set their hands to the same Book, the said Sr. Edward till he see them he cannot tell: but he will not denie but he was privie to the making of them, as he hath before said: and that he came to the knowledge of the matter by the Articles unsigned, and by the Articles signed, with the Kings hand, and both delivered unto him by the Kings own hands. Who put the King in minde to make the said Articles; or who wrote them, or any of them; or by whose procurement or counsell they were made: or by what means he and others were called unto this matter: he knoweth not, but he thinks in his conscience the King never invented this matter of Himself, but by some wonderfull false compasse: he prayeth God the truth may be known, as he doubts not it will be.

And further, he and all his company, as well before the King as before the Lords at all times, said, that their writings (before they were made, and after they were made) were of no value, force, nor effect, to any intent, constitution, or purpose, after the Kings death, and there is no remedy to help this but by Parliament. And that after the said Thursday, being the morrow after the Terme last past, that he by any writing, printing, overt, deed or act, never did any thing sithence the same day, in the Kings life, ne sithence the death of the King, for he determined with himself to be no executour of the said devise, whatsoever should chance of it: nor ever medled with the Councill in any thing, nor came amongst them, untill the Queens Grace that now is, was proclaimed Queen in London, nor never executed Commission, Proclamation, or other commandment from the Ladie Jane nor Her Councill, but commanded my son to serve the Queens Grace that now is, and to go to Sr. Thomas Tresham, and Buckingham-

Anno Regin Mar. 1. | Anno Dom. 1553

Buckingham-ſhire-men that went to her Grace to defend Her, which he ſo did to my no little coſt.

The caſe thus ſtated, theſe notes follow written with the ſame hand.

Now that it is to be conſidered the great fear the ſaid Sr. Edward was in, as well by the Duke of Northumberland on the one day, as by the King on the other day.

Alſo it is to be conſidered the Kings commandment upon their allegiance, by His own mouth, and the Articles ſigned with His Highneſſe own hand, and alſo His Commiſſion, licenſe, and commandment under His Great Seal to the ſaid Sr. Edward and others, for the making of the ſaid Booke.

Alſo the Kings pardon ſigned with His Highneſſe hand.

Alſo it is to be conſidered, that the ſaid Books were made in the Kings life, ſeaven or eight dayes before His death: and the Queens Highneſſe being Succeſſour, by Act of Parliament, to the Crown, and having the ſame, as a Purchaſer, may not lawfully by the Laws of the Realme puniſh the ſaid offence done in the Kings time.

Alſo the ſaid Sr. Edward hath humbly ſubmitted himſelf to the Queen Highneſſe, and to the order of the Commiſſioners: Which Commiſſioners have ordered the ſaid Sr. Edward to pay to Her Highneſſe a thouſand pounds, who hath already paid thereof five hundred pounds, and the other five hundred pounds are to be paid at the Feaſt of All-Saints come Twelvemoneth. And alſo to ſurrender his letters Patents of lands to the yeerly value of fifty pounds called Eltyngton, which he had of the gift of King Edward the Sixth, which was all the reward he had of the ſaid King Edward for his ſervice, coſts and expences.

Alſo, it is to be conſidered, that the ſaid Sr. Edward is put from his office of the Chief Juſtice-ſhip of the Common-Pleas, being of the yeerly value of ſix hundred marks, which office the moſt noble King of famous memorie King Henry the Eighth gave him in conſideration of his long ſervice, and alſo had ſix weeks impriſonment.

Alſo it is to be conſidered, that the ſame Sr. Edward hath ſeaventeen children, viz. eleven Daughters, and ſix Sons: whereof one of the ſaid Sons had his legge ſtriken off by the knee in Scotland at Muſcleborough-field, the Duke of Sommerſet being there. And his Son and Heire, by his commandment, ſerved the Queens Highneſſe with twenty men, to the coſt of the ſaid Sr. Edward of one hundred pounds, as the Gentlemen of Buckingham-ſhire can report.

SO far the late Judge with his own hand: Wherein he affirmeth that he medled not with the Councell in any thing afterward, as may appear by his not ſubſcribing the letter of the Lords to Queen Mary (enjoyning, ſhall I ſay? or) adviſing Her to deſiſt from claiming the Crown, whereto all the Privie * Councellours ſubſcribed, onely the hand of Sr. Edward Mountagu is wanting. And, ſeeing in the whole tranſaction of this matter, the obedience rather then invention of Judge Mountagu was required, not to deviſe, but draw things up according to Articles tendred unto him, I cannot believe his * report relating that the King uſed the adviſe of Juſtice Mountagu in drawing up the Letters Patents, to furniſh the ſame with reaſons of Law, as Secretary Cicil with arguments from Policie.

* See them extant in Mr. Fox. Act. & Mon. Anno 1553.

* Sr. John Heywood in his Edward 6

Anno Dom. 1553 | Anno Regni Mar. 1.

Sr. R. Cholmley comes off with losse.

3. Some will wonder that no mention herein of Sr. Roger Cholmley, Lord Chief Justice of the Kings Bench, and in dignity above Sr. Edward Mountagu (at this time but Judge of the Common-Pleas,) that he was not employed to draw up the Book. But it seems Judge Mountagu his judgement was more relied on, who had been formerly Lord Chief Justice of the Kings-Bench, and deserted it. Yet the said Sr. Roger Cholmley was imprisoned for bare subscribing this Will, and (as it seems) lost his place for the same. For Justice Bromley, though equally guilty with the rest (so far favour extends in matters of this nature) was not onely pardoned, but, from an inferiour Judge, * advanced to be successour to Sr. Roger Cholmly, and made Judge of the Kings-Bench.

* See Sr. H. Spelman. Glossary in Justiciarius p. 417.

Sr. James Hales his honesty.

4. Whereas Sr. Edward saith that all the Judges were sent for and that many put their hands to the Book, it intimateth that all did not but that some refused the same, it being eminently known to the everlasting honour of Sr. James Hales that no importunity could prevail with him to underwrite this will as against both law and conscience.

Contest betwixt two Religions a Neh. 13. 24.

5. Eight weeks and upwards passed between the proclaiming of Mary Queen, and the Parliament by her assembled: during which time two religions were together set on foot, Protestantisme and Poperie, the former hoping to be continued, the later labouring to be restored, And as the Jews Children a after the captivity spake a middle language betwixt Hebrew and Ashdod, so during the aforesaid interim the Churches and Chappels in England had mongrell celebration of their Divine services betwixt Reformation and Superstition. For the Obsequies for King Edward were held by the Queen in the Tower August the seaventh, with the Dirige sung in Latin, and on the morrow a masse of Requiem; and on the same day his Corps were buried at Westminster with a sermon service, and Communion in English. No small justling was there betwixt the zealous Promoters of these contrary Religions. The Protestants had possession on their side, and the Protection of the Laws lately made by King Edward and still standing in free and full force unrepealed. Besides, seeing by the fidelity of the Suffolk and Norfolke Protestant Gentry, the Queen was much advantaged for the speedy recovering of her Right, they conceived it but reason, that as she by them had regained the Crown, so they under her should enjoy their Consciences. The Papists put their Ceremonies in Execution, presuming on the Queen her private practice and publique countenance, especially after she had imprisoned some Protestant, and enlarged some Popish Bishops: advancing Stephen Gardiner to be Lord Chancelour. Many which were Newters before conceiving which side the Queen inclined would not expect, but prevent her authority in Alteration: So that Superstition generally got ground in the Kingdome. Thus it is in the Evening Twi-light, wherein light and darknesse at first may seem very equally matcht, but the later within little time doth solely prevail.

Aug. 7.

Mr. Jewell pens the first Congratulatory letter to the Queen.

6. What impressions the Comming in of Queen Mary made on Cambridge, shall, God willing be presented in our particular History thereof. The sad and sudden alterations in Oxford, thereby are now to be handled. Ma. John Jewel was chosen to pen the first Gratulatorie Letter to the Queen, in the Name of the University; an office, imposed on him, by his enemies, that either the refusall thereof should make him incurre danger from his foes, or the performance expose him to the displeasure of his friends; Yet he so warily penned the same in Generall termes, that his Adversaries missed their marke. Indeed all, as yet, were confident, that the Queen would maintain the Protestant Religion according to her solemne promise, to the Gentry of Norfolke, and Suffolke, though (she being composed of Courtship and Popery,) this her unperformed promise was the first Court-holy-water, which she sprinkled amongst the People.

7. And, because every one was counted a Truant in Popery, who did not out out-run the Law, Dr. Treſham, an active Papiſt, and a Van-Currier before Authority, repaired the great Bell in Chriſt Church, which he new nam'd, and baptized MARY. And whilſt Mr. Jewel was reading the Letter he had penned, to Dr. Treſham, for his approbation thereof, preſently that bell tol'd to Maſſe, (a Parentheſis which was not in the Letter) and Treſham breaking off his Attention to what was written, excla'med in a zealous Extaſie. Oh ſweet Mary! how muſically, how melodiouſly doth ſhe ſound [c]. This Bell then rung the knell for that time to the truth in Oxford, henceforward fill'd with Proteſtant Tears, and Popiſh Triumphs.

Anno Regin Mar. 1. Anno Dom. 1553

Mary the new Baptized maſſe Bell in Chriſts Church.

8. Then Stephen Gardiner viſitor of Maudlins, (as ſucceſſour to William Wainfleet Biſhop of Wincheſter founder thereof) ſent Commiſſioners to the Colledge, (whereof Sr. Richard Read the chief, and Dr. Wright Arch-Deacon of Oxford,) whereby ſtrange effects were produced.

Alteration by Gardiners viſitors in Maudlin Colledge.

1. Walter Haddon, then [a] Preſident of the Colledge, (though omitted by Brian Twine for what cauſe I know not, in their Catalogue) willingly quitted his place.
2. Thomas Bentham (that yeer Cenſor) being required to Correct the Schollers for their abſence from Popiſh Prayers, ingenuouſly confeſſed his ſorrow for his Complyance in the Reign of King Henry the 8th. and conſtantly profeſſed that he would not accumulate ſin on ſin, adding moreover, that he accounted it not equall, to puniſh that in others, which he himſelf did willingly and wittingly commit, and thereon was outed of his place.
3. Thomas Bickley was ſerved in the ſame manner. This was he who formerly ſnatching the Hoſt out of the Pixe at evening Prayer, firſt rent it with his hands, then trampled it under his feet, and now expelled, with great difficulty eſcaped into France.
4. Henry Bull, who about the ſame time openly in the quire ſnatched the Cenſer out of his hands, who was about to offer Idolatrous Incenſe therein, was likewiſe by the viſitors put out of his Fellowſhip.

[a] Laurence Humphery in his Lattin life of Dr. Jewel. p. 71.

What ſhall I ſpeak of learned Laurence Humphery, painfull John Fox, ſtudious Michael Reuniger, ſweet natur'd John Molins, Arch-Deacon of Paul's, Arthur Saul, Peter Morvin, Hugh Kirke, and Luke Puriſie, dear brethren in Chriſt, all at this time forced to forſake their Colledge: So that then Magdalen wept indeed for the loſſe of ſo many worthies. All this extremity was executed by theſe viſitors, not as yet impowred by law, the ſtatutes of King Edward, ſtanding hitherto unrepealed. But ſome are ſo deſirous to Worſhip the riſing Sun, that, to make ſure work, they will adore the dawning day: And many of the Oxford Schollers thought Prolepſis the beſt figure in their Grammer to foreſee what the Queen would have done, and to ingratiate themſelves by antedating the doeing thereof.

9. Of all the viſitors in Magdalen Colledge, Arch-Deacon Wright was moſt moderate, ſeeking to qualifie the cruelty of the reſt, as farre as he could or durſt appear. Blinde he was in one eye, but acute and clear-ſighted in his minde, and though his compliance for the preſent cannot be excuſed, yet commendable was his forwardneſſe, that preſently on the Crowning of Queen Elizabeth, he confeſſed his errours, and with a weak voice but ſtrong Arguments in his Sermon preached in All-hallows, ſolidly confuted the maine of Popiſh opinions; This was his laſt Will and Teſtament, being at the preſent much decayed in his Body, his ſtrength onely ſerving him, to give a ſolemn account of his Faith. For ſoon after he fell ſick, and at the end of eight dayes, in perfect * minde and memory, peaceably departed this life. Wherefore lying * Sanders is not to be liſtned to, when reporting that this Wright dyed raving and diſtracted. It being uſuall with him, to account all thoſe ſtaring mad, who are not ſtarke blinde with ignorance and ſuperſtition: Let not Sanders be too buſie in traducing Gods dying Servants, leſt what he wrongfully Arch-Deac. Wright a moderate viſitor who afterwards recanted his errours and died peaceably.

* Laurence Humph. ut prius p. 76.
* In defence of the Popes monarchy.
* Camb. Brit. in the yeer 1583.

Anno Dom. 1553 | Anno Regis Mar. 1.

wrongfully chargeth on others, justly befall himself, as it came to passe accordingly. For a learned * Pen tells us, that he died in Ireland, Mente motus, which if it amounts not to a Madnesse, I understand not the propriety of that expression.

* Camb. Brit. in the year 1583.

Masse set up in Corpus Christi Colledge.

10. Passe we now from Maudlins to Corpus Christi Colledge, where behold a sudden Alteration; Masse being presently brought up in the place of the Communion. It may seem a wonder, seeing so many Superstitious Utensils are required thereunto, where the Papists got attiring Cloaths for the Theatricall Pompe thereof; yet so it was, that they who to day [visibly] had nothing, next day wanted nothing for the Celebration of the Masse. Surely these Trinkets were never dropt down from Heaven; but such who formerly had been cunning in concealing, were now forward in produeing their wicked Wardrobe; and one Colledge afforded enough, not onely to suffice it self, but for the present to supply the whole University.

Jewel driven out of Corpus Christi Colledge.

11. But how well soever any Colledge kept their superstitious Trifles, sure I am Corpus Christi Colledge lost an essentiall Ornament thereof, namely Mr. John Jewel, fellow therein, who, on his refusall to be present at Masse, and other Popish Solemnities, was driven out of the Colledge, and retyred himselfe to Broadgates Hall; where he continued for a short time in great Danger.

Peter Martyr departs the Realme.

12. It was now high time for Mr. Peter Martyr seasonably to provide for his own security, who being by Birth a stranger, and invited over hither, and placed here by King Edward the sixth, to be Professour of Divinity in Oxford, had the Warrant of the Publique faith, and the Law of Nations, for his safety. Whereupon he solicited for leave to return, which was granted unto him. Well it was that he had protection of proof; otherwise such was the enmity of the Papists, and so sharp set were the Teeth of some persecuting Bishops against him, that they would have made this Martyr brook his own name, and have sacrificed his life to their fury.

The Dutch Congregation depart into Denmarke.

13. About the time of his Departure, (pardon a short digression) the Dutch congregation in London was also dissolved, gaining Licence with much adoe to transport themselves. These taking the opportunity of two Danish Ships, then lying in Thames mouth, adventured themselves therein even in the beginning of Winter, uncertain were to get any habitation. One hundred seaventy and five were embarqued in one vessell, from which the other was divided with Tempest, and with much danger got at last to * Elsinore in Denmarke. Had they stai'd longer in England, untill the Queens marriage with King Philip of Spaine (being most of them his Native Subjects in the Netherlands) it had been difficult, if not impossible for them to have procured their safe, and publique departure.

* John Utinhow in Narratione de dissipata Belgarum Ecclesia, cap. 2.

14. As for Mr. Jewell, he continued some weeks in Broad-Gates Hall, whither his Schollers repaired unto him, whom he constantly instructed in Learning, and Religion. Of all his Pupils, Edward * Tear in this one respect was most remarkable, who by his tutour being seasoned with the love of the Truth, made a double Copie of Verses, against the Superstition of the Masse, which so enraged Mr. Welsh, the Censor, as I take it of Corpus Christi Colledge, against him, that he publikely and cruelly whipt him, laying on one lash, for every verse he had made, which I conceive were about eighty in all: Part of them, I have here thought fit to insert; and blessed be God I may Translate, and the Reader peruse them without any pain and perill, and not at the dear rate, whereat the Author composed them. I have the rather presented them, because they proved as well Prophetical as Poetical, comfortably foretelling, what afterwards certainly came to passe.

A dear Copie of Verses.

* So I conceive his name whom Laurence Humphery in Jewels life p. 77. calls Edvardum Annum.

Supplex

Anno Begin Mar. 1. Anno Dom. 1553

Supplex oro Patris veniam cœlestis ad aures
Ex animo pauca quas recitabo preces:
Ecce patent aditus, patet alti janua Cœli
Ad summum votis jam penetrabo Deum.
Summe Pater, qui cuncta vides, qui cuncta gubernas,
Qui das cuncta tuis, qui quoque cuncta rapis,
Effice ne maneat longævos Missa per Annos:
Effice ne fallat decipiatve tuos;
Effice ne cæcos populorum reddat ocellos
Missa, docens verbo dissona multa tuo:
Effice jam rursus Stygias descendat ad Undas,
Undè trahit fontem principiumque suum.

Respondet Dominus spectans de sedibus Altis,
Ne dubites rectè Credere parve puer:
Olim sum passus mortem, nunc occupo dextram
Patris, nunc summi sunt mea regna poli:
In cœlis igitur toto cum corpore versor,
Et me Terrestris nemo videre potest;
Falsa Sacerdotes de me mendacia fingunt,
Missam quique colunt, hi mea verba negant:
Dura Cervicis populus me mittere Missam
Fecit, & è medio tollere dogma sacrum;
Sed tu crede mihi, vires Scriptura resumet,
Tolleturque suo tempore Missa nequam.

Accept O heavenly Father I request
These few Devotions from my humble Breast:
See ther's Accesse, Heaven's gate open lyes,
Then with my Prayers I'le penetrate the skyes;
Great God, who all things seest, dost all things sway,
And All things giv'st, and all things tak'st away,
Let not the present Masse long-lived be,
Nor let it those beguile belong to thee:
Thy peoples eyes keep it from blinding quite,
Since to thy word it is so opposite,
But send it to the Stygian Lakes below: (flow.
From whence it's rise and source doth spring and

The Lord, beholding from his Throne, reply'd,
Doubt not, young Youth, firmly in me confide
I dy'd long since, now sit at the right hand
Of my blest Father, and the world command
My body wholy dwels in heavenly light,
Of whom no earthly Eye can gain a sight:
The shamlesse Priests of me forge truthlesse lies
And he that worships Masse, my word denyes
A stiffeneck'd people for their sins did make Me send them Masse, my word away to take
But trust me, Scripture shall regain her sway,
And wicked Masse in due time fade away.

---

15. But to return to Mr. Jewel: he had not lived long in Broadgates Hall, when, by the violence of the Popish Inquisitors being assaulted, on a sudden, to subscribe, he took a pen in his hand, and, smiling, said, have you a minde to see how well I can write? and thereupon under-writ their Opinions. Thus the most orient Jewel on earth Hath some flawes therein. To conceal this his Fault, had been partiality; to excuse it, flattery; to defend it, impiety; to insult over him, Cruelty; to pitty him, Charity; to admire God, in permitting him, true devotion; to be wary of our selves, in the like occasion, Christian discretion.

Mr. Jewell his great fall.

16. Such as go out when God openeth them a Doore to escape, do peaceably depart; But such who break out at the window, either stick in the passage, or bruise themselves by falling down on the out-side. Jewell may be an instance hereof, whose cowardly compliance, made his foes no fewer without him; and one the more (a guilty Conscience) within him. The Papists neither loved, nor honoured, nor trusted him any whit the more, for this his Subscription, which they conceived not Cordiall; forced from him by his feare: Yea thereby he gained not any degree of more safety: and his life being way-laid for, with great difficulty, he got over into Germanie.

Carnall Compliance never profits.

17. Rejoyce not over me O mine Enemy, for though I fall, yet shall I rise again, as here it came to passe: Comming to Francfort, he had Dr. Edwin Sandys, (afterwards Arch-Bishop of Yorke,) for his Board, and Bedfellow, who counselled Mr. Jewell, with the joynt advice of Mr. Chambers, and Mr. Sampson, his bosome friends, to make a publicke Confession of his sorrow for his former Subscription: whereupon on a Sunday, after his fore-noons Sermon, in the Congregation of Francfort, he bitterly bewailed his fall, and heartily requested pardon from God and his People, whom thereby he had offended. Wet were the eyes of the Preacher, and those not drie of all his Auditors: what he fairely requested was freely given: and hence forward all all embraced him, as a Brother in Christ, yea as an Angell of God. Yea whosoever seriously considereth the high Parts Mr. Jewell had in himselfe, and the high opinion others had of him, will conclude his Fall necessary for his Humiliation.

Mr. Jewels seasonable and sincere Recovery.

The Issu-lesse issue of a disputation at Oxford.

18. But to return to Oxford, whither, about this time, Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, were brought to be baited in Disputation, by the fiercest Papists, of both Universities; Which worthy Bishops, restrained in Liberty, debarred from Books, depriv'd of Friends, and streightned for time, were brought out of the Prison, to dispute, and after the end thereof thither remanded. Here it is sad to recount those Legions of Taunts, which were passed upon them: They who had three Logicall termes in every Syllogisme, had far more railing ones after it, in following their Argument, and opprobrious improving thereof against the Prisoners. Wherefore when Weston, the Prolocutor (or Obloquutor rather) closed all with his vain glorious brag, Vicit veritas, many of the unpartiall Auditors conceived, that Vicit vanitas, was a truer Conclusion of the Disputation; though indeed there could be no proper victory, where there was no fair Fight: things not being methodized with Scholasticall Formality, but managed with tumultuous Obstreperousnesse. See all at large in Mr. Fox: to transcribe which would be tedious, exscribe something, imperfect, Contract all, obscure: may the reader therefore be remitted thither, for his perfect Satisfaction. Onely, I will adde; this Disputation was but a preparative, or Prologue to the Tragedy of these Bishops Deaths: as it were to drie their Bodies, the more afore-hand, that afterwards they might burn the brighter, and clearer for the same.

Some Oxford man invited to undertake a proper task.

19. But we leave the prosecution hereof with the impression made by the Alteration of Religion on every severall Colledge in Oxford, to some learned men of that University, as an office proper for them to performe, having as their education therein, so their advantage thereby in consulting the Registers of their severall Colledges. I have hitherto, and shall hereafter be the shorter in Matters of this Vniversity, remembring two profitable Precepts, for this purpose; the one Minus notis, minus diu insistendum: the other ΞΕΝΟΣ ΩΝ ΑΠΡΑΓΜΩΝ ΙΣΘΙ, Being a stranger be not over-busie: Who confesse my selfe bred in another Seminary of learning. Wherefore if my tongue, long acquainted with CAMBRIDGE Sibboleth, have or shall chance to faulter in pronouncing the termes of Art, or Topicall Titles, proper to this University, I hope the Readers Smile shall be all the writers Punishment. For as I heartily protest the fidelity of my Affections to my Aunt, and humbly request that my Weaknesse or want of Intellegence, may no way tend to her Prejudice, so I expect that my Casuall mistakes should meet with a Pardon of Course: And if any of her own Children (which is much to be desired) Will hereafter write a particular History of Oxford, I should be joyfull if the best Beames I can bring will but make him Scaffolds, and the choicest of my Corner-stones, but serve to fill up the Walls of his more beautifull Building.

Protestant Bishops withdraw themselves from the Parliament.

20. We have something trespassed on time to make our Story of Oxford intire, and must now go a little backward. The Queen being crowned on the first of October, her first Parliament began the fifth day following, wherein Godwot a poor appearance of Protestant Bishops. For Cranmer of Cant. was in the Tower for treason. Ridley of London, and Poynet of Winchester were displaced on the restitution of Bonner and Gardiner, Holegate of Yorke, Bush of Bristoll, Bird of Chester, Hooper of Worcester and Glouncester, Barlow of Bath and Wells, Scory of Chicester, Ferrar of St. Davids, Coverdale of Exeter were already deprived either for being married, or delivering some displeasing doctrines. Onely two Protestant Bishops, viz. John[a] Taylour of Lincolne, and John Harley of Hereford (on what score I know not) found the favour to be last undone, as remaining un-deprived at the beginning of the Parliament, where they presented themselves according to their duty, & took their place amongst the a Fox Acts & Mon. pag. 1410.

Anno Regni Mar. 1. Octob 1. — Anno Dom. 1553

the Lords. But presently began solemne Masse after the Popish manner, which these two good Bishops not abiding withdrew themselves, and shortly both of them died their naturall deaths; Providence graciously preventing their violent destructions.

5. 21. All the rest of the Bishops present in Parliament, as Samson of Coventry, and Litchfield, Capon of Salisbury, Thirleby of Norwich, Bulkley of Bangor, Parfew of St. Asaph [b] Kitchin of Landaffe, though dissembling themselves Protestants in the dayes of King Edward, now returned to their Vomit, and the advancing of Popery. No wonder then if all things were acted according to their pleasure, the Statute of Premunire made by King Henry the Eight, and many other good laws of Edward the Sixth repealed. Masse and Latine service with the maine of Popery reestablished.

Popery restored by the rest.

b Ely and Oxford I conceive void at this time.

18. 22. But in the Convocation which began few dayes after, amongst all the Clergy therein assembled there were found but six which opposed the Reduction of Popery, Viz.

1. Walter Philips Dean of Rochester. 3. John Philpot Archdeacon of wincheſt.
2. James Haddon Dean of Exeter. 4. Richard Cheyney Archdeacon of Hereford.
5. John Ailmer Archdeacon of Stow.
6. One whose name is not recorded.

Sixe Protestant Champions in the Convocation.

Of these Mr. Philpot one of a fervent spirit (but not to any distemper as some suspect) was so zealous against Transubstantiation, that he offered to maintain the negative by Gods word, and confound any six who should withstand him in that point, or else saith he, [c] let me be burned with as many fagots as be in London before the Court gates.

25. c Foxe Acts & Mon pag. 1413.

23. But Weston the Prolocutor in the Convocation threatened him with the Prison, adding that he was a mad man, meeter to be sent to Bedlam then continue there. Philpot returned he would think himself happy to be out of that company. Nay, lest you slander the house said Weston, and say we will not suffer you to declare your minde, we are content you come into the house as formerly on two conditions. First, that you be apparelled in a long gown and Tippet as we are. Secondly, that you speak not but when I command you. Then said Philpot, I had rather be absent altogether, and so it seems departed the place, and soon after the Convocation ended, having concluded all things to the hearts desire of the Papists therein.

Weston his railing on Mr. Philpot.

30. Dec. 13.

24. Afterwards Philpot was troubled by Gardiner for his words spoken in the Convocation. In vain did he plead the Priviledge of the Place, commonly reputed a part of Parliament, alledging also how Weston the Prolocutor once and again assured them, that the Queen had given them leave and liberty, fully and freely to debate of matters of Religion according to their own conscience. Once at his Examination the Lord Rich [d] affirmed, that the Convocation was no part of the Parliament House, and we must believe him herein, because a Lawyer, and a Lord Chancelour: Otherwise we have the Statute 8. Hen. 6. That the Clergy of the Convocation shall have such liberty as they that come to the Parliament. In fine Philpot, in defence of the Truth acted the valiant part of a Martyr according to his promise, though the Scene was altered from the Court-gates to Smithfield.

Philpot sealeth the truth with his blood.

d Foxe Acts & Mon. pag. 1806.

Jan. 20. — 53. 15. — 54.

25. The match of Queen Mary with Philip King of Spain was now as commonly talked of as generally distasted. To hinder the same Sr. Thomas Wyat a Kentish Knight took Armes with a great party assisting him. Saunders saith, and that very truly, that he was Vir magnæ potentiæ, being indeed well borne, well allied, well learned, well landed, and well loved, wanting neither wit, wealth, nor valour, though at present all were ill imployed by him. Indeed this his Treason may be said to fall in labour, some weeks before the full time thereof (occasioned by a sudden fright) and therefore no wonder if the issue thereof proved abortive. For Wyat hearing that one of his Dear Friends was cast into the Fleet (though for a cause unrelating to this Plot, to which the Wyat rising to hinder the Spanish match.

Party

Anno Dom. 1553. | Anno Regin. Mar. 1.

Partie was privy) ſuſpected, as guilt is ever jealous, that this his Friend had betrayed the deſigne, which made Wyat anticipat the due date thereof, and break our the ſooner into open hoſtility.

The Queens Herauld ſent unto him.

26. The Queen, hearing of his commotion, ſent an Herauld unto him to deſiſt, which Herauld came to Sr. Tho. his houſe deeply moated round about, the Bridge being drawn up, yet ſo that a place like a Ford pretended a ſafe paſſage thereunto. On the inſide thereof walked the proper caſe of a man well habited, and his face carrying no deſpair of wiſdome therein. The Herauld asked him whether he might ſafely go over there, to whom the other ſlightly anſwered, Yea, Yea; but had not the ſtrength of his Horſe been more then ordinary, he either had been drowned in the water, or buried in the mudde.

Almoſt drowned with falſe directions.

27. The Herauld hardly eſcaping fills all the Houſe with complaints, that being an Officer ſent from the Queen under the protection of the publike faith (having his coate, his conduct upon him) he ſhould be ſo wilfully abuſed by falſe directions to the danger of his life by one of Sr. Tho. his ſervants. The Knight highly offended at the fault (as Gentleman enough, and enemy to actions of baſeneſſe) ſummons all his Servants to appear before the Herauld, vowing that the Offendour ſhould be ſent Priſoner to the Queen with his leggs bound beneath his Horſe belly, to receive from her the reward of his wickednesse.

But all ends in merriment.

28. The Herauld challengeth the party at the firſt ſight of him. Alaſſe ſaid Sr. Tho. he is a meer Naturall, as will appear, if you pleaſe to examine him. Why Sirrah ſaid the Herauld did you direct me to come over where it was almoſt impoſſible to paſſe without drowning? To whom the other anſwered, the Duckes came over not long before you, whoſe leggs were ſhorter then your horſes. Hereat the Herald ſmiled out his anger, adding withall, Sr. Thomas, hereafter let your Foole wear the Badge of his Profeſſion on him, that he may deceive no more in this kinde. But paſſe we to matters of more moment; Wyat courteouſly diſmiſſed the Herauld, but denying to deſiſt, marched to Rocheſter to meet his Complices out of the Weſt of Kent, who came ſhort unto him, as intercepted and routed, with Sr. Henry Iſley their Conductour, by the Lord Abergaveny, though this loſſe was preſently repaired.

Jan. 29.

The Londoners revolt to Wyat.

29. For when Thomas Duke of Norfolke marched down with five hundred Londoners, in white Coats to reſiſt Wyat, and was now come to Strond, on the other ſide of Rocheſter, the Londoners revolted to Wyat. Thus the moſt Valiant Leader cannot make his Followers Loyall. Yet theſe Londoners falſe to forſake the Duke were faithfull not to betray his perſon, which they might eaſily have done if ſo diſpoſed. Wyat is much elated with this ſupply, as more in the omen then in it ſelf, who concluding all Londoners of the ſame lump, hereby promiſed himſelf eaſie enterance into that City, and hearty entertainment therein.

Wyats inſolence, and Q. Mary her oration.

30. His inſolency is ſaid to riſe with his ſucceſſe, ſo that having a Treatie with ſome of the Privie Councellours in his paſſage to London, he demanded unreaſonable conditions, affirming that he would rather be truſted then truſt, and therefore requiring the perſon of the Queen, the Tower of London to be committed unto him, with power to diſplace evill Councellours, not propounded with more pride, but that with as much ſcorne they were refuſed. Mean time, Queen Mary came to Guild-Hall, and there made a long oration, and indeed if on juſt occaſion ſhe could not ſpeak confidently and pertinently, She was neither Daughter to her Father, nor to her Mother.

Febr. 1.

e Act. & Mon pag. 1419.

Mr. Foxe e addeth that ſhe ſeemed to have perfectly conned her ſpeech without book; which if ſo, ſounds nothing to her diſgrace, ſome being for extempory prayers, but none to my knowledge for extempory policy. This her oration ſecured the affections of the Citizens unto her, as by the ſequell will appear.

31. Entring

Anno Regni Mar. 1. Anno Dom. 3. 155. 4.

31. Entring Southwarke he enjoyneth his Souldiers to offer no violence, or take any thing without payment, yet Winchester House soon felt their fury, though such by his command (a Generall can but proclaim and punish the Breakers of his Proclamation) were made exemplary for their rapine. Then were the Prisons (and Southwarke is well stored with houses of that kinde) set open for such who were guilty onely of pretended heresie, not Felonie and murther. But those who thanked him for his curtesie, refused the acceptance thereof, (a tender conscience is a stronger obligation then a Prison) because as they were legally committed they would be legally discharged.

Southwark entred and Prisons opened.

32. But now all the Towers of the Tower, and the topps of the square Steeples neer the Bridge-Foot, on the other side were planted with Ordnance (so that both Church and State threatened his ruine) ready to be discharged into Southwarke, either to beat down the Barrough, or to force Wyat to depart, who perceiving it impossible to force his passage into London over the Bridge, and moved with the miserable moans of the Southwarkers, left their Barrough, and though towards the evening marched swiftly, silently, secretly to Kingston upon Thames. Speed begets speed, quickness causeth successe in matters of execution, as here in Wyat his comming to Kingston before any almost had notice of his motion.

Southwarke left, Kingston marched to.

Feb. 6.

33. But Wyat was not so much advantaged with his own expedition, as with the coincident oversights of the Queens party (whose carelessenesse and cowardise met together) enough to destroy her cause, had not Divine Providence resolved with finall successe to rectifie all humane mistakes. First, such set to order Kingston Bridge did their work by halves, breaking and not breaking it down, so that the substantialls standing, the rest were easily repaired for Wyat his safe passage over. Secondly, two hundred men set to defend the opposite banke quitted their Station [a], the very sight of two pieces of Ordnance planted against them. Thirdly, the Queens Scouts lost their eyes, (and deserved to lose their Heads) who could not discover a Body of four thousand men marching with a large train of Artillery so that the Queen had notice thereof, by the Kentish Fugitives sooner then by her own Scouts.

The carelessenesse of the Queene her Souldiers.

a B. Godwins annalls of England in Q. Mary pag. 394

34. but time soon gained by Wyat was as soon lost, on the accident of a piece of Ordnance breaking its carriage. Now whilst the Army waited the leasure of bringing up this broken piece (an houre to Wyat being of greater consequence then the greatest Gun) he came short of the time prefixed to such Citizens as were Fautours of his cause. Otherwise he had been at London in the night (taking his enemies napping before they dreamt of him) and all terrour is most active in the darke, when the lesse men see, the more they suspect, whereas now it was break of day before they had gotten to Knights-Bridge.

Wyat his march how retarded.

35. Wyat had a double designe, and performed them both alike. One violently to take White-Hall, the other peaceably to be taken into London. Captain Vaughan with five hundred Welsh-men (and one would wonder how they should straggle into Kent) embraced the right-hand way towards Westminster, and then wheeled away to White-Hall, his men shooting their arrows (regardlesse where they lighted) into the windows of the Court, but could not force their passage into it. Wyat went directly to Charing-Crosse, where he met with some opposition, but continued his resolution for London.

His double designe.

36. Here one might have observed, that within three hours the tongue of the multitude in London thrice altered their tunes. First they cryed,

Three tunes of London in three hours.

1. A Wyat, a Wyat, every mouth giving the alarme to the next man he met. The next note was
2. Treason, Treason, all suspecting that the Earle of Pembroke the Queens Generall had revolted, because hovering aloofe in the fields he suffered suffered Wyat his Van and main Battell (cutting off some of the Reare) to march undisturbed save with one shot, from Knights-Bridge to Charing Chrosse. Their next tune was

3. Downe with the Draggle tails, Downe with the Draggle-tails.

And indeed no wonder if these Kentish-men marching in the darke, to avoid discovery in the depth of winter through durty wayes were richly landed in their cloaths, and well fringed with mire and mud about them.

Wyat stopped at Ludgate.

37. Wyat himself marched directly up the Strand and Fleetstreet with the losse of lesse then twenty men, and comming to Ludgate promised himself entrance into the City. But there he found nothing forbid his admission save a strong gate close shut and well fortified against him with men and Ammunition. From that minuite he went backward both in motion and successe. Returning to Fleetstreet He sate down on a Bench over against the Bell Savage (an Inne so called, because given by one Isabell * Savage to the Company of Cutlers) and there too late began to bemoan and accuse his own rashnesse. Retreating to Temple-Barre he was faced with some horse, and after a fight being moved by a Herauld to submit himself. Then will I yeeld saith he to a Gentleman, and so submitted himselfe (say [a] most) to Sr. Maurice Berkley, say [b] others to Sr. Clement Paston being in neither of them mistaken for their Gentle extraction.

* Stows survey of London.

a Hollinshed, Stow, Speed.
b Fox. pag. 1419.

Penitent at his execution

38. Hence was he carried to White-Hall to be examined, thence to the the Tower to be committed; Entring therein Sr. John Bridges Livetenant thereof taking him by the collar with his Dagger in his hand; Ah Traitour, saith he, I would stab thee my self, but that I know thou wilt be executed, to whom the other calmly replied, Sr, now it is no mastery. Some dayes after he suffered penitently and patiently on the Scaffold, condemning his own act, and therefore we have spoken the lesse against him, for speaking so much against himself. Fifty of his Complices were hanged, four hundred led with ropes about their necks, pardoned by the Queen, and all things stilled and quieted.

c Holinshed.

The Emperour why jealous of Cardinall Poole.

39. Long since had Queen Mary sent for Cardinall Poole in Italie, to come over into England. But Charles the Emperour by the Popes power, secretly retarded his return, fearing it might obstruct the propounded marriage betwixt King Philip his Son and Queen Mary. Indeed the Queen bare Poole an unfeighned affection, and no wonder to him that considereth

1. Their age. He being about tenn yeers older, the proportion allowed by the Philosopher betwixt Husband and Wife.
2. Parentage. She being Daughter to King Henry the eighth. He (by his Mother Margaret, Daughter to George Duke of Clarence) Grandchild to Edward the Fourth.
3. Education. Both when young brought up together, the aforesaid Lady Margaret being Governesse of Queen Mary in her infancy.
4. Religion. Both zealous Catholicks, and suffering, the Queen confinement, the Cardinall exile for the same.

His person also and nature was such as might deserve love, and though a Cardinall Deacon, yet that shallow character might easily be shaved off by the Popes dispensation, so that there was some probability of their marriage: and Oh how Royally Religious would their Offspring have been, extracted from a Crown and a Cardinalls Cap.

Poole at last gets leave for England.

40. But now when the marriage with Prince Philip was made up; Poole at last got leave for England, and to wipe away all superstition of Lutheranisme wherewith he was formerly taxed, he became a Cruell, that he might be beleeved a Cordiall Papist. For meeting in Brabant with Emanuel tremellius, requesting some favour from him, he not onely denyed him relief, but also returned him railing termes, though formerly he had been his familiar Friend. Yea his Godfather [d] giving him his name at the Font, when Tremellius from a Jew first turned Christian.

d Antiq. Brit. in Polo pag. 351.

41. Arrived

Anno Dom. 1554 | Anno Regni Mar. 3.

April 11. & May 2.

Anno Regin Mar. 2 Mart. 22. 1555

Anno Dom. 4. 155.- 5. 25.

41. Arrived in England, he was first ordained Priest (being but Deacon before) and then consecrated Arch-Bishop of Canterbury by Heath, Arch-Bishop of Yorke, and sixe other Bishops the Queen her selfe being present thereat, in the Franciscan Church at Greenwich, one of those Bankrupt Covents which her grace had set up again, Three dayes after he was dedicated in Bow Church in Cheapside, where rich in costly robes and sitting on a guilded Throne his Pall was presented unto him. Adorned herewith, Poole presently mounts the Pulpit and makes [a] a drie Sermon of the use and honour of the Pall without good language or matter therein (may they all make such who take for their Text what is not in Scripture) many much admiring the jejuneness of his discourse, as if putting off his parts when putting the Pall upon him.

Is ordained Priest, and consecrated Arch-Bishop.

a Ant. Brit. in Polo pag. 353.

42. Now sate the second Parliament in this Queens Reigne, wherein she parted with her Supremacy to the Pope, and Poole by his power Legatine solemnly reconciled England to the Church of Rome, that is, set it at open oddes and enmity with God and his Truth. Then did he dispense with much irregularity in severall persons, confirming the Institution of Clergie-men in their Benefices, legitimating the Children of forbidden marriages, ratifying the Processes, and Sentences in matters Ecclesiasticall, and his Dispensations were confirmed by Acts of Parliament, as in the Statutes at large appear. Then was Anthonie Brown, Vicount Mountacute, Thirleby Bishop of Eli, and Sr. Edward Carne sent on a gratulatorie Embassie to Pope Paul the fourth to tender Englands thanks for his great favours conferred thereon: A sad and certain presage of heavie persecution which immediately did ensue.

England reconciled to Rome.

Anno Dom. 1555 | Anno Regni Ma. 3

SECTION. II.

To Mr. THOMAS BOWYER of the Old Jury Merchant.

YOu may with much joy peruse this sad story of Persecution presented unto you, whose Grandfather Francis * Bowyer brought no fewel to these flames, but endeavoured to quench them. The Church is indebted to him for saving reverend Dr. Alexander Nowel, (then School-master of Westminster, designed to Death, by Bonner ) and sending him safe beyond the Seas. Thus he laid a good foundation, to which I impute the firm-standing of your family, it being rare, to see, (as in yours) the third Generation in London living in the same Habitation. May many more of the stock, succeed in the same, the desire of your obliged friend T F.

* Afterward Sheriffe of London Anno. 1577.

The disposing of the future matter.

I. WE come now to set down those particular Martyrs that suffered in this Queens Reigne. But this point hath been handled already so curiously, and copiously by Mr. Fox, that his industry herein hath starved the endeavours of such as shall succeed him, leaving nothing for their penns, and pains to feed upon. [a] For, what can the man doe that cometh after the King? even that which hath been already done, saith Solomon. And Mr. Fox appearing sole Emperour in this subject, all posterity may despair to adde any remarkable discoveries, which have escaped his observation. Wherefore to handle this subject after him, what is it, but to light a candle to the Sunn? or rather (to borrow a metaphor from his book) to kindle one single stick to the burning of so many faggots? However, that our pains may not wholy be wanting to the Reader herein, we will methodize these Martyrs, according to the several Dioceses, and make on them some brief observations.

[a] Eccles. 2. 12.

Persecution in the Dioceſs of Exeter.

[b] Fox. 2052.

[c] Holinshed pag. 1309.

2. In the Dioceſse of Exeter (containing Cornwall and, Devonshire) I finde but one Martyr, namely Agnes [b] Priest, condemned by William Stanford then Judge of the Assise of Lancester, but burned at Exeter. The tranquility of these parts is truly imputed [c] to the good temper of James Turbervile the Bishop; one, as gentilely qualified, as extracted; and not so cruel to take away the lives from others, as carefull to regain the lost livings to his Church: and indeed he recovered to him and his successours, the Fee-farme of the Manour of Credston. Yet to shew his sincerity in Religion, that he might not seem to do nothing, he dipp'd his fingers in this poor womans blood, but did not afterwards wash his hands in the persecution of any other Protestant for ought we can finde in any history.

3. The

Anno Regin Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1555

3. The like quiet diſpoſition of Gilbert Bourn, Biſhop of Bath and Wells ſecured Somerſet ſhire. Indeed, he owed his life under God, to the protection of a Proteſtant (for Mr. Bradford at Pauls-croſſe, ſaved him from a dagger thrown at him in a tumult) and this perchance, made him the more tender to Proteſtants lives. Yet in the Regiſter of his Church, we meet with one [a] Richard Luſh condemned by him, though his execution doth not appear, and yet it is probable, that this poor Iſaac, thus bound to the Altar, was afterward ſacrificed, except ſome intervening Angel ſtaied the ſtroak of the ſword. In the Dioceſs of Bath and Wells. a Fox. pag. 2004.

4. So alſo the Dioceſs of Briſtol, made up of Dorſet-ſhire, and part of Gloceſter-ſhire, enjoyed much quietneſſe, John Holyman the Biſhop did not, for ought I can finde, prophane himſelf with any barbarous cruelty. But Mr. Dalby [b] his Chancellour (as an active Lieutenant to a dull Captain) ſent three, namely, Richard Sharpe, Thomas Benion, and Thomas Hale, to the ſtake at Briſtol, for the teſtimony of the truth. This Dalby knowing himſelf to be low in parts and learning, and deſpairing otherwiſe to appear in the world, thought, the onely way to recommend himſelf to mens notice, was, to do it by his cruelty. In the Dioceſs of Briſtol. b Fox. pag. 2052.

5. More ſparks of perſecution flew into the Dioceſs of Sarisbury, in Wiltſhire and Barkſhire, under John Capon the Biſhop, and Dr. Geffray his Chancellour, for, this Dreg was worſe then Saul himſelf. At Nubery he ſent three Martyrs to heaven in the ſame charriot of fire, [c] Julius Palmer, John Gwin, and Thomas Askin. Yea, this was but a light flouriſh, in reſpect of that great blow he intended, had not heaven prevented him, and many others of his bloody crew, by the death of Queen Mary; whereby, to uſe Davids phraſe, God ſmote them [d] on the cheek-bone, and brake the teeth of the ungodly. In the Dioceſs of Sarisburie. c Fox. pag. 1940. d Pſal. 3. 7.

6. In the Dioceſs of Wincheſter, conſiſting of Hantſhire, and Surrey, I finde no great impreſſion from Stephen Gardiner the Biſhop, and much marvell thereat. It may be this politician, who managed his malice with cunning, ſpared his own Dioceſs, fox-like preying fartheſt from his own den. Indeed he would often ſtay behind the traverſe, and ſend Bonner upon the ſtage (free enough of himſelf without ſpurring to do miſchief) to act what he had contrived. Yea, I may ſay of Gardiner, that he had an head, if not an hand, in the death of every eminent Proteſtant; plotting, though not acting, their deſtruction. And, being Lord Chancellour of England, he counted it his honour, to flie at ſtout game indeed, contriving the death of the Ladie Elizabeth, and uſing to ſay, that it was vain to ſtrike at the branches, whileſt the roote of all Hereticks doth remain. And this good Lady was appointed for the ſlaughter, and brought to the ſhambles, when the ſeaſonable death of this butcher, ſaved the ſheep alive. In the Dioceſs of Wincheſter.

7. However (as bloody as he was) for mine own part, I have particular gratitude to pay to the memory of this Stephen Gardiner, and here I ſolemnly tender the ſame. It is on the account of Mrs. Clarke my great Grandmother by my mothers ſide, whoſe huſband rented Farnham-Caſtle, a place whither Biſhop Gardiner retired, in Surrey, as belonging to his Sea. This Biſhop, ſenſible of the conſumptionous ſtate of his body, and finding phyſick out of the Kitchin more beneficiall for him, then that out of the Apothecaries ſhop, and ſpeciall comfort from the Cordialls ſhe provided him; did not onely himſelf connive at her Hereſie, as he termed it, but alſo protected her during his life, from the fury of others. Some will ſay, this his curteſie to her, was founded on his kindeneſſe to himſelf. But however, I am ſo far from detaining thanks from any, deſerved on juſt cauſe, that I am ready to pay them, where they are but pretended due on any colour. The Authours gratitude to Stephen Gardiner.

8. Suſſex ſmarted more than all the forenamed Counties together, under John Chriſtopherſon Biſhop of Chicheſter. This man was well learned, and In the Dioceſs of Chicheſter.

Anno Dom. 3. 155... 4. Anno Regni Mar. 1.

and had turned Eusebius his Eccleſiaſticall Hiſtory into latine, with all the perſecutions of the Primitive Chriſtians. What he tranſlated in his youth, he practiſed in his age, turning Tyrant himſelf, and ſcarce was he warme in his Biſhoprick, when he fell a burning the poor Martyrs. Ten in one fire at [a] Lewis, and ſeaventeen others at ſeverall times in ſundry places.

a Fox. pag. 2003. & pag. 2024.

In the Dioceſs of Canterbury.

9. In the Dioceſs of Canterbury, Cardinal Poole appeared not perſonally active in the proſecution of any to death. Whileſt others impute this to his ſtatelineſſe, not ſtooping to ſo ſmall matters; we more charitably aſcribe it to his favouring of the Proteſtant party, having formerly loſt the Papacy under that imputation. But, ſeeing it is a true Maxime, which an heathen man layeth down; It is enough for a private man, that he himſelf do no wrong; but a publique perſon muſt provide, that thoſe under him do no injury to others; I ſee not, how the Cardinal can be excuſed, from the guilt of that innocent blood, which Thornton his Suffragan, and Harpſfield his Arch-Deacon, ſhed like water, in, and about the City of Canterbury.

In the Dioceſs of Rocheſter.

10. The Dioceſs of Rocheſter (containing the remainder of Kent) was of ſmall extent. But, that flock muſt be very little indeed, out of which the ravenous Wolfe cannot fetch ſome prey for himſelf. Morris the Biſhop played the tyrant therein, being the firſt in Queen Maries dayes that condemned a woman (Margery Polley by name) to be burnt for religion; with many moe who at Dartford, or Rocheſter, ſealed the truth with their lives.

In the Dioceſs of London under Bonner.

b 1 Cor. 15. 32

11. Croſſe we the Thames to come into Middleſex, and Eſſex, the Dioceſs of London under Biſhop Bonner, whom all generations ſhall call Bloody. St. Paul [b] mentioneth his fighting with beaſts at Epheſus after the manner of men, which ſome expound, his encountering with people, men for their ſhape, and ſex; but beaſts for their cruell mindes, and manners. In the ſame ſenſe we may ſay, that Lion, Tiger, Wolfe, Bear; yea, a whole foreſt of wilde beaſts met in Bonner, killing two hundred in the compaſſe of three yeers. And, as if his cruelty had made him Metropolitan of all England, he ſtood not on diſtinction of Dioceſſes, but martyred all, whereſoever he met them. Thus Mr. Philpot belonged to Gardiners Juriſdiction, and often pleaded in vain, that Bonner was none of his Ordinary, yet Bonner (Ordinary, or Extraordinary) diſpatch'd him, who cared not whence men came, but onely whither he ſent them. No ſex, quality, or age, eſcap'd him, whoſe fury reached from John Fetty a lad of eight yeers old, by him ſcourged to death; even unto Hugh Laverock, a Creeple, ſixty eight yeers old, whom he cauſed to be burnt.

Under Dr. Story.
* quer. for he is not in B. Godwins catologue.

12. Dr. Story Dean of * Pauls muſt not be forgotten, being under Bonner a moſt cruell perſecutour. Was not this falſe Herauldry, cruelty on cruelty? Well; So it ſeemed good to Divine Providence, as conducing moſt to the peace of the Church, that one place rather then two, ſhould be troubled with ſuch damnable Tyrants. Bonner perſecuted by whole-ſale, Story by Retail; the former enjoyned, the later attended the execution; What Bonner bade, Story beheld to be performed. Yea, ſometimes he made cruel additions of his own invention; As, when he cauſed a faggot to be toſſed in the face of Mr. Denlie the Martyr, when he was ready to be burnt. How he was rewarded afterwards for his cruelty, by Gods bleſſing in due place.

In the Dioceſs of Norwich.

13. Under the ſame Torrid Zone of perſecution (but a little more temperate) lay Norfolke, and Suffolke, in the Dioceſs of Norwich. Biſhop Hopton was unmercifull in his Viſitations; but Downing the Chancellour plai'd the Devill himſelf; enough to make wood deare in thoſe parts, ſo many did he conſume to aſhes, whoſe ſeveral examinations are at large ſet down in the Book of Martyrs.

In the Dioceſs of Elie.

14. Elie Dioceſs [Cambridge-Shire] ſucceeds, whoſe Biſhop Dr. Thirlby was a learned, diſcreet, and moderate man; witneſſe his meek behaviour at the degrading of Arch-Biſhop Cranmer, ſhedding plentifull tears

Anno Regin Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1555

tears thereat. But, can water, and fire, weeping, and burning, come from the ſame perſon? Surely ſo it did here; for afterwards he fingled out John Hallier (as the Repreſentative for all the Proteſtants in his Dioceſs) whom he cauſed to be burnt at Cambridge. The ſhedding his blood was as giving earneſt of his zeal in the Popiſh cauſe, though afterward he made no farther payment in this kinde; juſtly offending the Proteſtants for doing ſo much, yet ſcarcely pleaſing the Papiſts, becauſe he did no more. As for the execution of William Woolſey, and Robert Pigot, in this Dioceſs: Thurlby was no whit intereſted therein, but the guilt thereof muſt be ſhared, betwixt Dr. Fuller the Chancellour, and other Commiſſioners.

15. In Peterborough Dioceſs (conſiſting of North-hampton-ſhire, and Rutland) I finde but one, John Kurde, a Shooe-maker, burnt at Northhampton. But, this his death I cannot charge on the account of David Poole the Biſhop, as conſenting thereunto, becauſe William Binſley Batchelour of law, and Chancellour of Peterborough, was onely his active Proſecutor. In the Dioceſs of Peterborough.

16. Lincolne Dioceſs is next, the largeſt of the whole Kingdome, containing Lincolne, Leiceſter, Huntington, Bedford, and Buckingham, beſides parts of Hartford and Warwick-ſhires. Now, according to the rules of proportion, who could expect otherwiſe, but, the moe men, the moe Martyrs? The greater the Province, the more grievous the perſecution? But, it fell out the clean contrary, finding but one Martyr in all that ſpace of ground (a * Merchants ſervant burnt at Leiceſter.) Frivolous is their reaſon, who impute this to the diſpoſition of White, Biſhop of this Dioceſs (the firſt half of Queen Maries Reign) whom they behold, as poetically given; of more phanſie, then fury, which vented it ſelf in verſes; more pleaſed to laſh the Hereticks with a Satyr, then ſuck their blood by deſtructive courſes. As little credit is to be given to their conceit, who aſcribe the following tranquillity of this Dioceſs to Biſhop Watſon, Whites ſucceſſour therein; becauſe he was a man ſo buried in the ſpeculations of School-Divinity, that it unactiv'd him to be practical in perſecution. I ſay again, both theſe reaſons amount not to any partiall cauſe, of the peace of this Dioceſs. For we know full well, that after the coming in of Queen Elizabeth, this White, and this Watſon diſcovered keenneſs, and fierceneſſe of ſpirit againſt Her, more then any other Biſhops; in ſo much, that they threatned Her with an excommunication. I conceive the true cauſe was this; Lincolne Dioceſs, in the Reign of Henry the eighth, had borne the heat of the day, when Buckingham-ſhire alone (as we have formerly [a] obſerved) afforded more Martyrs then all England beſide. God therefore thought it fit, that other Dioceſſes ſhould now take their turnes; that this of Lincolne, harraged out before, ſhould now lie fallow, whileſt other Countries, like reſt-ground, ſhould ſuffer perſecution, whereon indeed the plowers plowed, and made long furrows. In[e] the Dioceſs of Lincolne.

* Fox. Volum. 3. pag. 706.

a Lib. 4. Cent. 16. Parag. 2.

17. The Dioceſſes of Oxford, Gloceſter, Hereford, and Worceſter, under their reſpective Biſhops, Robert Kinge, James Brook, Robert Parſew, and Richard Pates, enjoyed much quiet, It being true of them, what is ſaid of Judea, Galilee, and Samaria, after the converſion of [b] Paul, Then had the Churches reſt throughout all thoſe places. This principally flowed from Gods gracious goodneſſe, who would not have all places at once equally embroyled. It is not fit, that all the rooms in the houſe, ſhould onely be chimney, furnace, or oven, but that it ſhould alſo afford ſome other places for quiet repoſe. And yet I wonder much, that we finde no fire (and very little ſmoke) in Gloceſter-ſhire, ſeeing Brook, the Biſhop thereof is [c] charactered to be A great Perſecutor of Proteſtants. Indeed his fury ſpent it ſelf moſt abroad; who, either being, or accounting himſelf a great Scholar, ſtickled much at Oxford againſt Arch-Biſhop Cranmer, pretending himſelf to be a Commiſſioner immediately Delegate from the Pope, and venting his malice againſt that good Prelate, in two Orations, onely remarkable for their length, and bitterneſs. Quiet in foure Dioceſſes.

b Acts. 9. 31.

c Haddons Chronologie of Biſhops pag 477.

18. Ralph

Anno Dom. 1555. Anno Regin. Mar. 3. 4.

In the Dioceſs of Coventrie, and Lichfield.

18. Ralph Baynes was Biſhop of Coventrie, and Lichfield, late Profeſſour of Hebrew in Paris, who alſo [a] wrote a Comment on the Proverbs, and dedicated it to Francis the firſt King of France. Sure I am, he forgat a paſſage of Solomons therein Prov. 14. 21. But he that hath mercy on the poor, happy is he. This Baines proving a blodie perſecutour of Gods poor ſervants in his Juriſdiction. The gentile birth and breeding of Mrs. Joyce Lewes, was not too high for him to reach at, and the poor condition of Joan Waſt, a blinde woman in Darbie was not too low for him to ſtoop to, condemning them both to death, with many other faithfull witneſſes of the truth.

a Pitſeus de Angliæ Scriptoribus pag. 759.

In the Dioceſs of Yorke.

19. The Arch-Biſhoprick of Yorke enjoyed much peace, and tranquillity under Dr. Nicolas Heath, a meek, and conſcientious man. It is enough to intimate his moderate temper, equal, and diſingaged from violent extremities, that Primo Elizabethæ in the Diſputation between the Papiſts, and Proteſtants, he was choſen by the Privie Councel, one of the Moderatours. And, as he ſhewed mercy in proſperity, he found it in adverſity, in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, though depos'd from his dignity, repos'd in a peacable quietneſſe. So that his impotent age might rather ſeem ſeaſonably eaſed of troubleſome greatneſſe, than abridged of any requiſites for his comfortable ſupportation.

In the Dioceſs of Cheſter.

20. Dr. Cotes was Biſhop of Cheſter, who waſhed his hands in the blood of Mr. George March burnt at Cheſter. At whoſe execution, I underſtand not the addition of a pitch'd barrell placed above his head, certainly to enflame the flame; but, whether out of kindneſſe, to haſten his death; or cruelty, to encreaſe his pain, I dare not decide. Sure I am, Cotes died ſoon after, and Cuthbert Scot ſucceeded in his Biſhoprick, one very buſie about the burning of Bucers body in Cambridge, but otherwiſe I finde no perſecution raiſed by him in his own Dioceſs.

Peace in the Biſhoprick of Durham.

21. The Biſhoprick of Durham had Halcyon dayes of eaſe, and quiet, under God, and good Cuthbert Tonſtall the Biſhop thereof. A learned man, of a ſweet diſpoſition, rather devout to follow his own, than cruel to perſecute the conſcience of others. Indeed, he being preſent in London at the examination of divers Martyrs, would ſometimes flie out in baſe and unbeſeeming language (as when he called Biſhop Hooper beaſt for being married) yet his paſſion herein may the rather be pardoned, becauſe politickly preſumed, to barke the more, that he might bite the leſſe, as appeared by his courteous carriage in his own Dioceſs. For, I meet with the marginal note in [b] Mr. Fox, which indeed juſtly deſerved even in the faireſt letters, to be inſerted in the body of his book. Note that Biſhop Tonſtall in Queen Maries time was no great bloody perſecutor. For, Mr. Ruſſel a Preacher was before him, and Dr. Himner his Chancellour would have had him examined more particularly. The Biſhop ſtayed him, ſaying, Hitherto we have had a good report among our neighbours, I pray you bring not this mans blood upon my head. But more of this Cuthbert Tonſtall hereafter.

b Volum. 3. pag. 958.

And of Carlile.

22. The Dioceſs alſo of Carlile was not moleſted with any great troubles under Owen Oglethorp, the Biſhop thereof, one qualified with a moderate temper. It argueth no leſſe, becauſe afterward he crowned Queen Elizabeth, an office which all other Biſhops, then ſtiffly denied to performe. But, to ſpeak plain Engliſh, though the peaceableneſs of theſe northerne Biſhopricks, proceeded partly from the mildeneſs of thoſe that ſate in the Epiſcopal chairs thereof; yet it muſt be remembred, that even want of matter for perſecution to work on, conduced much to the peace of thoſe places. The beams of the Goſpel being neither ſo bright, nor ſo hot in theſe parts, where ignorance, and ſuperſtition generally prevailed.

The ſingularity of the B. of Landaffe.

23. The ſame may be ſaid of all Wales, where caſting over our eye, we diſcover no conſiderable perſecution, under the Biſhops of Aſaph, and Bangor. But, as for the Biſhop of Landaffe, his proceedings againſt good

Raulins

Anno Regin Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1555.

Raulins White (whom he cauſed to be burnt at Cardiffe) was remarkable, as ſtanding alone without precedent. For, He cauſed his Chaplain to ſay a maſs (the firſt I beleeve, that found out, and laſt that uſed that way) for the converſion of the ſaid Rawlins, though the ſame proved ineffectuall.

24. But Dr. Morgan, Biſhop of St. Davids, is paramount for his cruelty, paſſing the ſentence of condemnation on Robert Farrar, his immediate predeceſſour, whom he cauſed to be burnt at Carmarthen. We know whoſe counſell it was; [a] This is the heire, come let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours. And Morgan never thought himſelf in quiet poſſeſſion of his Biſhoprick, whileſt Farrar was as yet in poſſeſſion of his life. However, herein, Morgan, Out-Bonnered even Bonner himſelf, who (though not out of pitty, of pollicy) did not himſelf condemne Ridley his Predeceſſour, but procured him to be ſent to Oxford, to be ſentenced by others; whereas this Biſhop himſelf pronounced the ſentence on Farrar; an act which no good man could, and no wiſe man would have done. Thus have we briefly ſurveyed all the Dioceſſes in England; The Univerſities of Cambridge, and Oxford onely excepted; which, being Peculiars, and exempt from Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, are reſerved for a particular deſcription, by Gods bleſſing, at the end of this book. Nor do we forget, (though acted out of the Continent of England) that cruel murder in the Iſle of Garnſey; where, the infant burſting out of the mothers wombe (the cruell fire being ſo mercifull, as to be the midwife, to ſeparate, and tender the innocent babe, from the condemned mother, to the charity of the beholders) was firſt taken out of the [b] fire, and then caſt in again, and burnt with the mother thereof.

The cruelty of the B. of Bangor.

a Luk. 20.14.

b Fox. Volum. 3. pag. 747. The firſt and laſt of the Martyrs.

25. In all this Army of Martyrs, Mr. John Rogers, burnt in Smithfield Februarie the 4th. 1555. led the Vann; and five Martyrs burnt at Canterbury, November the 10th. 1558. (namely John Cornford, Chriſtopher Browne, John Herſt, John Snoth, and Katharine Knight) brought up the Rere, according to their own prayer (not to ſay propheſie) at the ſtake, that they might be the laſt, as by Gods mercy it ſo proved. All theſe were executed in the foure laſt yeers of Queen Maries Reigne, none ſuffering in the firſt yeer thereof. In which time, the Butchers under Her, did onely prepare their ſhambles for ſlaughter, whet their knives, and make ready their inſtruments of cruelty. Compariſons, I know, are odious, and the more, when made betwixt perſons of eminencie. However, to ſuch as peruſe the whole ſtory, theſe proportions will appear true. Of all the Marian Martyrs, Mr. Philpot was the beſt borne Gentleman; Biſhop Ridley the profoundeſt Scholar; Mr. Bradford the holieſt, and devouteſt man; Arch-Biſhop Cranmer of the mildeſt, and meekeſt temper; Biſhop-Hooper of the ſterneſt, and auſtereſt nature; Dr. Taylor had the merrieſt, and pleaſanteſt wit; Mr. Latimer had the plaineſt and ſimpleſt heart; &c. Oh the variety of theſe ſeveral inſtruments! Oh their joynt harmony in a conſort to Gods glory!

26. It is obſervable, that the Sacrament of the Altar was the main touch-ſtone, to diſcover the poor Proteſtants. Many indeed, are the differences betwixt us and the Romiſh Church, but on this point the examiners pinched moſt. Haply, becauſe in other controverſies, Proteſtants (hunted after by thoſe blood-hounds) might take covert under ſome tolerable diſtinction, and thereby evade the danger. Whereas this point of the real, corporal preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament, the ſelf ſame body that was crucified, was ſuch downe-right falſehood, it was incapable of any palliation, and was the compendious way to diſover thoſe of the contrary opinion. This neck-queſtion (as I may terme it) the moſt dull and duncicall Commiſſioner was able to aske; and thanks be to God, the ſillieſt Proteſtant-ſoule brought before them, was able to anſwer, firſt by denying it, then by dying in the defence of his denyall.

The Sacrament of the Altar, the greateſt ſnare to Proteſtants.

Anno Dom. 1555. Anno Regis Mar. 3.

Cruelty of Papists in pretorturing Martyrs.

27. Remarkable was their cruelty in pretorturing of many, whom afterwards they put to death. Herein akinn in their proceedings to Pilate, first scourging, then crucifying Christ. By what law did Edmond Terrill first burne the hand of Rose Allen, and her body afterwards? Even by the same that Bonner first burnt the hand of Thomas Tomkins, and then commanded him to be dispatch'd out of the way: By the same law, that Cuthbert Simpson was first cruelly rack'd, and then burnt, even by the law of their own might, and malice, not having otherwise any rag of legality, to cover the shame of their cruelty. Nature was mercifull in appointing that all men should [a] once die; whereas, had these Tyrants had the ordering thereof, they would have made divers to have died sundry times: yea, such was their cruelty, that, after once they had [b] eat up Gods servants, if possible, they would have chew'd the cud upon them the second time.

a Heb. 9. 27.

b Psal. 14. 4.

Some Cõmissioners of and by themselves courteous.

28. Some Commissioners privately were courteous to the Martyrs, who notwithstanding publikely concurr'd to their condemnation. It is Luthers observation, that in Scripture, son of man is alwayes taken in a good sense, but sons of men generally in the worst acception. Sure I am, take some of these men sole, and single by themselves, they were well natur'd, pittifull, and compassionate; but, when in conjunction with others, they became (at least by consenting) as cruel as the rest. What favour did Dr. Fuller, Chancellour of Elie, offer William Woolsey, and Robert Piggot, when alone? yet, when in complication with other Commissioners, pronounced the sentence of condemnation upon them.

Ministerial Persecutours.

29. Passe we now from the Judicial, to the Ministerial Persecutours; Sheriffs, Under-sheriffs, Bayliffs, Promoters, Summoners &c. The locusts [c] had tails like unto Scorpions, and there were stings in their tails. So here in officers, the baser, the bloodier; the meaner the more malicious; though by particular exception, some happened to be more mercifull then others. Of the Twin-Sheriffs in London (Mr. Woodroffe, and Mr. Chester) the former like Esau, had his hands rough, and hairy, being rugged and surly to Gods servants; whilest Mr. Chester Jacob-like, had smooth hands, kinde, and curteous to such as suffered. Thus Amrie (as I take it) the Sheriffe of Chester, was most cruel to Mr. George Marsh, whilest the Sheriffe of Stafford-shire (pitty it is, Mr. Fox hath not recorded his name) was afterward persecuted, for shewing so much favour to Mrs. Joyce Lewes at her execution, when he said [d] Amen to her prayer, desiring God to deliver this Realme from Papistrie.

c Revel. 9. 10.

d Mr. Fox Vol. 3. pag. 839.

Difference in prisons.

30. One prison may, comparatively, be a paradise in respect of another, and generally 'tis the Jaylour puts the difference betwixt them. How passionately did poor Jeremy [e] plead? Cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the Scribe lest I die there. And therefore he took it for a speciall favour to be sent to the Court of the prison. How nastie a place was the dungeon of Malchiah, into which Jeremiah was afterward [f] cast? till Ebed-melech the blackmore drew him out thence? Now, amongst the fruitfull generation of Jayles in London, there were (though never a better) some lesse bad amongst them. I take the Marshalls-see to be in those times, the best for usage of prisoners. But, oh the misery of Gods poor Saints in Newgate, under Alexander the Jaylour, more cruell than his namesake the copper-smith was to St. Paul; in Lollards-Tower, the Clinke, and Bonners Cole-house; a place which minded them of the manner of their death, first kept amongst coles, before they were burnt to ashes.

e Jer. 37. 20.

f Jer. 38. 6.

Dr. Gefferie his illegal proceedings.

31. It is more then suspicious, that many of these silly souls were hurried to the stake, even against those laws which then stood in force in the Realm, before the Writ De Haretico comburendo was issued out against them. For, what the Jews said to [g] Pilate, It is not lawfull for us to put any man to death; The Ecclesiastical censures may say to the Secular Power in England, We have no power of life or limbe, but the inflicting punishments on both, must be devolv'd to the civill Magistrate. Yet Dr. Gefferie Chancellour of g John 18. 31.

Anno Regni Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1555.

of Sarisburie ſtood not on ſuch legal niceties, but haſtned them to the [a] ſtake, more minding the end to which, than the juſtice of the proceedings, whereby he ſent them thither.

[a] Fox Vol. 3. pag. 895.

32. All who met at laſt in final conſtancy, manifeſted not equal intermediate chearfulneſs. Some were more ſtout, bold, and reſolute; others more faint, fearfull, and timorous. Of the later was Arch-Biſhop Cranmer, who firſt ſubſcribed a recantation, but afterwards recanted his ſubſcription, and valiantly burned at the ſtake. Thus he that ſtumbleth, and doth not fall down, gaineth ground thereby, as this good mans ſlip mended his pace to his martyrdome. It is alſo obſervable, that married people, the parents of many children, ſuffered death with moſt alacrity. Mr. Rogers, and Dr. Taylour may be the inſtances thereof. The former of theſe, if conſulting with fleſh and blood, had eleven ſtrong reaſons to favour himſelf, I mean, a wife, and tenn children, all which abated not his reſolution.

All the Martyrs not alike chearfull.

33. Beſides theſe who were put to death, ſome ſcores (not to ſay hundreds) dyed, or rather were kill'd with ſtinch, ſtarving and ſtrait uſage in priſon. I am not ſatisfied in what diſtance properly to place theſe perſons. Some, perchance, will account it too high, to rank them amongſt Martyrs; and ſurely, I conceive it too low, to eſteem them but bare Confeſſours. The beſt is, the Herauldry of heaven knows how to marſhall them, in the place of dignity due unto them; where, long ſince, they have received the reward of their patience.

Of thoſe who died in priſon.

34. Miraculous was Gods providence, in protecting many which were condemned to the ſtake. It is part of the praiſe of his power [b], To hear the groaning of the priſoner, to looſe thoſe that are appointed to death. In Davids expreſſion [c]. There was but a ſtep between them, and death; which ſtep alſo had been ſtepped, had not one inſtantly ſtepp'd aſide, I mean the ſeaſonable death of Queen Mary. She melancholicke in minde, unhealthfull in body, little feared of Her forraigne foes, leſs beloved by Her native Subjects, not over-dear to Her own Huſband, unſucceſſefull in Her treaties for peace, and unfortunate in Her undertakings for warr, having deceived the Gentrie of Norfolke and Suffolke, by Her falſe promiſes, was deceived Her ſelf by a falſe conception, and having conſumed ſo many of Gods Saints by fire, dyed Her ſelf by water, an hydropicall Tympanie.

Q. Maries death life to many.

[b] Pſa. 102. 20.

[c] 1 Sam. 20. 3.

35. Obſervable was the mercy of the Proteſtants to theſe perſecutours, after the power was delivered into their hands, under the Reigne of Queen Elizabeth; by whom none of the aforeſaid Tyrants were proſecuted, or moleſted, for any act of cruelty done by them in the dayes of Queen Mary. Nor ſuffered they in the leaſt degree, on their former account, except they ran on a new ſcore of contempt againſt the Queen and State. As ſuch Biſhops who, in the firſt of Her Reigne, refuſed the Oath of Supremacy. Otherwiſe, all ſuch as conformed to Her Government, were not onely permitted to enjoy their old, but admitted to new preferment. Witneſſe Mr. Bonner, Chancellour of Peterborough, who condemned John Kurde of Northampton, yet in Queen Elizabeths dayes had the Arch-Deaconry of Peterborough conferred upon him. Thus, while Papiſts heap fagots on Proteſtants, Proteſtants, according to Solomons [d] counſell, heap coals on them (courteſies, and civilities) to melt them if poſſible into remorſe.

Proteſtants mercy, for Papiſts malice.

[d] Pro. 25. 22.

36. But, though the Proteſtants ſhewed much mercy to the Papiſts, their perſecutours, yet the God of the Proteſtants manifeſted much juſtice, in their wofull, and wretched deaths. I confeſſe, Gods beſt ſervants ſometimes have had ſad and ſuddain ends; witneſs good Eli himſelf, who [e] fell down, and brake his neck. I confeſs likewiſe, that ſome wicked men, who have liv'd like Lions, have died (to uſe the common countrie phraſe) like Lambs; or to uſe the expreſſion of the Pſalmiſt, [f] They have no hands in their death, so fairly, and quietly do they expire. It is not good therefore to be over tampering in this particular (our Saviour himself retrenching the censoriousnes of the Jews, for falling so heavy on the memories of those on whom the tower of Siloe [g] fell) and infallibly to inferr from their fatal death, their final damnation. However, when a remarkable death, suddenly follows a notorious wicked life, even such passengers, as are posting in the speed of their private affairs, are bound to make a stand, and solemnly to observe the justice of Gods proceedings therein. The rather, because Bellarmine our adversary [h] affirmeth, that Infelix exitus Adversariorum, the unhappy end of the Adversaries thereof, is one of the marks of the true Church. These cautions premised, take a few of many signal fatalities of these wicked persecutours.

Gods judgments muſt warily be deale with.

[e] 1 Sam. 4. 18.

[f] Pſal. 73. 4.

Anno Dom. 1555. Anno Regni Mar. 3.

[g] Luke 13.5.

[h] De notis Ecclesiæ lib. 4. cap. 17.

Gods hand visible on many of the persecutours.

37. Morgan, Bishop of S[t]. Davids (who sentenced Farrar his predecessour) not long after was striken in so strange a sort, that his meat would rise up, sometimes out of his mouth, sometimes out of his nose, most horrible to behold, but more terrible to endure, and so continued till his death. Judge Morgan, who condemned the Ladie Jane, soon after ran mad, and sodied, having allways in his mouth, Lady Jane, Lady Jane, Dunning, the bloody Chancellour of Norwich, died suddenly, taken (as some say) sitting in his chair. Berrie, the remorsles Commissarie in Norfolk, fell down suddenly to the ground with an heavie grone, and never stirred after. Thornton, the Suffragan of Dover, looking upon his men, playing at bowls, was upon a sudden strook with a palsy, had thence to his death-bed, and, being advised by some to remember God, yea, so I do (saith he) and my Lord Cardinal too. D[r]. Gefferie, the bloodie Chancellour of Sarisburie, died suddenly on a Saturday, the day before he had appointed, moe than ninety persons to be examined by inquisition. M[r]. Woodroffe, that cruell Sheriffe of London, being but a week out of his office, was so striken by the hand of God, that for seven yeers space, till his dying-day, he was not able to move himself in his bed. Burton the cruell Bailie of Crowland, was poisoned to death, with the stinch of a crowes dung, muting on his face. What shall I speak of Dale, the Promoter, eaten up with lice? Alexander the Keeper of Newgate, consumed with offensive rottennes? Robert Balding, smitten with lightning, at the taking of William Seaman? Clarke, who hang'd himself in the Tower, with many moe? So that we may conclude with the prophecie of [a] Moses, Rejoyce O ye nations with his people, for he will avenge the blood of his servants, and will render vengeance to his adversaries, and will be merciful unto his land, and to his people.

[a] Deut. 32.43

What use to be made of the Martyrs sufferings.

[b] Matth. 9.8.

38. And now, to take our leaves of those Martyrs, what remains? but, 1. That we glorifie God in, and for their patience; [b] who had given such power unto men. 2. That we praise God, that true doctrine at this day, may be professed at an easier rate, then in that age. In Faires, and Markets, for the most part, commodities are sold deerest in the morning, which towards evening may be bought at a lower price. Sure I am, they paid most for the Protestant-Religion at the dawning of the day from Popery (life, or limbe, was the lowest price thereof) which since may be purchased at a cheaper pennie-worth. 3. That we embrace, and defend that doctrine, which they sealed with their lives; and as occasion shall be offered to vindicate, and assert their memories, from such scandalous tongues, and penns, as have, or shall traduce them.

Parsons his Cavill against the Martyrs calling answered.

39. It is inconsistent with our History, here to enter the lists, with that railing book which Parsons the Jesuite hath made against those good Martyrs. Onely be it remembred, that his Cavill-General is chiefly at their calling, because they were most Mechanicks, Weavers, Shooe-makers &c. An exception lying as well against just Joseph, a Carpenter; hospital Simon, a Tanner; zealous Aquila, and Priscilla, Tent-makers; attentive Lydia, a purple-seller.

Anno Regin Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1555

ple-seller. And is it not injurious to inferr their piety to be less, because their painfulness was more? If it be farther objected, that it is improbable, that these sillie souls should be more illuminated with knowledge, than the great Doctours of the Romish Church: know that Christs birth was revealed to the [c] shepherds in their calling, watching their flocks by night, and concealed from the Priests, and Pharisees (the pretended shepheards of Israel:) and, God might give more light to these industrious artificers, than to their idle Masters of Arts.

c Luke 2. 1.

40. Behold your calling (saith the Apostle) how not manie wise men after the flesh &c. But God hath chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the wise. And; allwayes in time of persecution, the Church is like a copse, which hath in it more under-wood than oakes. For, great men consult with their safety; and, whilest the poorer sort (as having little to lose) boldly embrace religion with both armes; the rich (too often) do only behold it at distance, with a smiling countenance; but dare not adventure to entertain it, except with very great secrecie. We conclude all with this observation, that such Martyrs, as were artificers by their vocation, humbly continued in the station, wherein Divine Providence had placed them, none presuming (as too many now adayes) to invade the ministeriall function, not adventuring to preach, save onely that their real Sermon of patience at their death.

Poverty and piety oft goe together.
d 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27.

41. So much for the first forme, of Christians in those dayes, which were martyr'd. A second sort succeeds of such, who, being Confessours for the Faith, fled into forrain parts from persecution. This their removall is not onely defended from cowardize, but warranted for Christian Policy by our Saviours [a] precept, But when they persecute you in this City, flee into another. Had all fled, Religion had been at a losse for champions, to defend her for the present, had none fled, Religion might have been at a loss for champions, to maintain her for the future. We will give in a particular, both of such eminent persons, and of the places wherein they were entertained. Partly, that such places may receive their deserved praise, for their hospitality to exiles: and partly, that our harbouring the banished Dutch (flying many yeers after from the cruelty of Duke d' Alva) in London, Norwich, Canterbury, Colchester, and Sandwich, may appear, not so much the giving of a free, and fair curtesie; as the honest paying of a due debt, and wiping off an old score runn on trust by our great-grand-fathers.

A Catalogue of Confessours, with their places of refuge.
a Mat. 10 23.

Som seated themselves at,

1. Emden, in East-Frizland, a Staple-Town of English Merchants. I finde neither the names, nor number of those that harboured here; only it appears, that John Scorie, late bishop of Chicester, was here Superintendent of the English Congregation in Emden.
2. Weasel, then in the Dominions (as I take it) of the Duke of Cleve, but bordering on the Low-Countries, in the possession of the King of Spaine. The English meeting here, was rather a Chappel, then a Church; or, rather a Tabernacle, then a Chappel; because soon set up, and as suddenly taken down again. For they, who formerly had fled so farr from Mary, were now loth to live too neer to Philip; and, for fear of so potent a neighbour, quickly forsook this place, and disposed themselves elsewhere, in these four following Church-Colonies.

Some

Anno Dom. 1555. Anno Regin. Mar. 3.

3. Arrow, [a] a ſmall city in Switzerland, on the banks of the River Artola, belonging to the Republique of Berne. The moſt noted men abiding here were Thomas Leaver. Richard Laugherne. Boys.

Robert Pownall. Thomas Turpin. Willford Upchaire.

4. Strasburgh, where they found moſt courteous entertainment. The moſt eminent Engliſh, abiding here, as may be collected from their ſolemne [b] joynt-ſubſcription to a letter, were

James Haddon. Guido Eaten. Michael Reymuger.
Edwin Sandys. John Geoffrey. Auguſtine Bradbridge.
Edmond Grindal. John Pender. Arthur Saule.
John Huntington. Thomas Eaten. Thomas Steward.
Chriſtopher Goodman. Thomas Lakin.
Humfrey Alcocſon. Thomas Craſton.

Some ſeated themſelves at

5. Zurich. This was no formed Congregation of Paſtours, and people; but rather a flock of Shepheards, and therefore the letters unto them carie this ſtyle in their ſuperſcription, To the Students at Zurich. But, behold their names,

Robert Horne. John Mullings. John Parkhurſt.
Richard Chambers. Thomas Spenſer. Roger Kelke.
Thomas Leaver. Thomas Bentham. Robert Beamont.
Nicolas Karvile. William Cole. Laurence Humfrey.
Henry Cockraft. John Pretio.

6. Frankford on the Meine. Where they found the State very favourable unto them. And this was the moſt viſible, and conſpicuous Engliſh Church beyond the ſeas, conſiſting of [c] John Bale. Thomas Steward. John Samford.

Edmond Sutton. Thomas Wood. John Wood.
John Makebraie. John Stanton. Thomas Sorby.
William Whittingham. William Walton. Anthonie Carter.
Thomas Cole. Iaſper Swyft. Hugh Alford.
William Williams. John Geofrie. George Whetnall.
George Chidley. John Graie. Thomas Whetnall.
William Hammon. Migbell Gill. Edward Sutton.
John Fox. William Kethe.
Laurence Kent. John Hellingham.

Here we omit their petty Sanctuaries, having (like [d] David) places, where himſelf, and his men were wont to haunt, Deesburgh, Wormes, &c. Where their ſtragling numbers amounted not to the conſtitution of a Church. If theſe Congregations be compared together, Emden will be found the richeſt for ſubſtance (there the Merchants which bear the bagg;) Weaſel the ſhorteſt for continuance; Arrow the ſlendereſt for number; Strasburgh of the moſt quiet temper; Zurich had the greateſt ſcholars, and Frankford had the largeſt priviledges. Nor let any wonder, if ſome in theſe Catalogues, aſſigned to one colonie, were afterwards found in another; ſeeing the Apoſtles [e] expreſſion, We have here no biding City, hath in it a ſingle truth in time of peace, and at leaſt a double one in time of perſecution; men flitting from place a Troubles of Frankford printed Anno. 1575. pag. 185.

b Tr. of Fr. pag. 23.

c Tr. of Fr. pag. 20. & 25.

d 1 Sam. 30. 31

e Heb. 13. 14.

Anno Regin Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1555

place to place, as they were adviſed by their own ſecurity. Know alſo, that beſides theſe (the firſt founders of theſe ſeverall Congregations) many additional perſons, coming afterwards out of England, joyned themſelves thereunto.

42. Come we now to ſet down the ſad troubles of Frankford, rending theſe baniſhed exiles aſunder, into ſeverall factions. This I dare ſay, if the Reader takes no more delight in peruſing, than I in penning ſo dolefull a ſubject, he will ſhew little mirth in his face, and feel leſs joy in his heart. However we will be ſomewhat large, and wholy impartial in relating this ſorrowfull accident; the rather, becauſe the penn-knives of that age, are grown into ſwords in ours, and their writings laid the foundations of the fightings now adayes. A brief introduction to the troubles of Frankford.

43. The Engliſh exiles came firſt to Frankford June the 24th. and on the 14th. of July following, by the ſpeciall favour, and mediation of Mr. John Glauberg, one of the chief Senatours of that State had a Church granted unto them: yet ſo, as they were to hold the ſame in Copartenie with the French-Proteſtants, they one day, and the Engliſh another; and on Sunday, alternately to chuſe their hours, as they could beſt agree amongſt themſelves. The Church was alſo granted them with this proviſo, [a] That they ſhould not diſſent from the French in doctrine, or ceremonie, leſt thereby they ſhould miniſter occaſion of offence. On the 29th. of the ſame moneth, our Engliſh with great joy, entred their new Church, and had two Sermons preached therein, to their ſingular comfort. About which time they conſtituted their Church, chooſing a Miniſter, and Deacons for a time; and, out of conformity to the French, abrogated many things, formerly uſed by them in the Church of England, as namely, A Church at Frankford firſt granted to the Engliſh.

a Tr. of Fr. pag. 6.

1. They concluded, that the anſwering aloud after the Miniſter ſhould not be uſed.
2. The Letanie, Surplice, and other ceremonies in Service, and Sacraments, they omitted, both as ſuperfluous, and ſuperſtitious.
3. In place of the Engliſh Confeſſion, they uſed another, adjudged by them of more effect, and framed according to the [b] State and Time.
4. The ſame ended, the people ſung a Pſalme in meeter, in a plain tune.
5. That done, the Miniſter prayed for aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, and ſo proceeded to the Sermon.
6. After Sermon, a generall prayer for all States, and particularly for England, was deviſed, which was ended with the Lords prayer.
7. Then followed a rehearſall of the Articles of Belief, which ended, the people ſung another pſalme, as before.
8. Laſtly, the Miniſter pronounced the bleſſing. The peace of God &c. or the like, and ſo the people departed.

b Tr. of Fr. pag. 7.

What is meant by framing their Confeſſion according to the State and Time, I underſtand not (muſt our confeſſions, as our clothes follow the faſhions of the State, and place we live in?) except it be this, that it was made more particularly, not only for ſinners, but for exiles, acknowledging their preſent baniſhment, juſtly inflicted on them for their offences. The prayer deviſed after Sermon, according to the genuine ſenſe of the word, ſeems no extemporary prayer then conceived by the Miniſter, but a ſet forme formerly agreed upon by the Congregation. Thus have we a true account of their Service; conceive it onely of ſuch things, wherein they differed from the Engliſh Liturgy, not of ſuch particulars wherein they concurr'd therewith; the cauſe (as I conceive) why no mention of reading of pſalms, and chapters in their Congregation. Theſe certainly were not omitted, and probably were were inserted betwixt the Confession, and singing the first psalme.

Other English Congregations invited to Frankford.

44. Thus setled in their Church, their next care was to write letters, Dated August the first, to all the English Congregations, at Strasburgh, Zurich, Weasel, Emden &c. to invite them, with all convenient speed to come, and joyne with them at Frankford. This is the Communion of Saints, who never account themselves peacably possessed of any happiness untill (if it be in their power) they have also made their fellow-sufferers, partakers thereof. However, this their invitation found not any great entertainment amongst the other English Church-Colonies; all delaying, and some denying to come; but especially those of Zurich were most refractory, and shewed least inclination to repair to Frankford.

Those of Zurich quickned by importunity.

45. This occasioned severall reiterated letters from Frankford; pressing, and requiring those of Zurich deeply to weigh this matter of Gods calling, and the necessity of uniting themselves in one Congregation. Let none say that Frankford might as well come to Zurich as Zurich to Frankford; because the English-Zurichians (though not in number) in learning, and quality equalled, if not exceeded those of Frankford. For Frankford was neerer to England, and more convenient for receiving intelligence thence, and returning it thither. Besides all Christendome met at Frankford twice a yeer (the vernal and autumnal mart) and, grant there was more learning at Zurich, there were moe books at Frankford, with conveniences to advance their studies. But chiefly, at Frankford the Congregation enjoyed most ample priviledges; and it was conceived it would much conduce to the credit, and comfort of the English Church, if the dispersed handfulls of their exiles, were bound up in one sheaf, united into one Congregation, where they might serve God in purity of faith, and integrity of life, having both Doctrine, and Discipline free from any mixture of superstition.

But refuse to communicate with them.

46. Notwithstanding this their importunity, those of Zurich made no other addresses to Frankford, than by dilatory letters excusing themselves from coming thither. Some saw no absolute necessity, that all the English should repair to one place; conceiving it rather safer, to adventure themselves in several bottoms, and live in distinct Colonies. Others were displeased with the imperative stile of the letter from Frankford, requiring them to come thither; exceeding the bounds of counsell for convenience, into command for conscience: yea, charging recusancy herein, as a sin on the soul of the refusers. They pleaded, they were already peacably seated, and courteously used at Zurich: and, to goe away before they had the least injury offered them, was to offer an injury to those, who, so long and lovingly had entertained them. Some insisted on the material point, how they should be maintained at Frankford, there being more required to their living there, than their bare coming thither. But, the main was, those of Zurich were resolved no whit to recede from the liturgie used in England under the reign of King Edward the 6th, and, except these of Frankford would give them assurance, that comming thither they should have the full and free use thereof, they utterly refused any communion with their Congregation.

Anno Dom. 1555. Anno Regni Mar. 3.

SECT.

Anno Regin Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1556

Section. III.

To the right worſhipfull Sr. Henry Wroth Knight.

SIr, it is my deſire fitly to ſuite my dedications to my reſpective Patrons, that what is wanting in the worth of the preſent, may be partly ſupplied in the propernes thereof, which made me ſelect this parcell of my Hiſtory for your Patronage. I finde Sr. Thomas Wroth your great-grandfather of the Bedchamber, and a favourite, to King Edward the 6th who (as I am informed) at his death, paſſed out of the armes of him, his faithfull Servant, into the embraces, of Chriſt, his deareſt Saviour. Soon after Sr. Thomas found a great change in the Engliſh Court, but no alteration, (as too many did to their ſhame) in his own conſcience, in preſervation whereof he was fain to fly beyond the Seas. To be a fugitive is a Sin and ſhame, but an honour to be a voluntary Exile, for a good cauſe. Hence it is that I have ſeen, in your ancient Houſe at Durance, the * creſt of your Armes, with the extraordinary addition of Sable vvings ſomewhat alluding to thoſe of Bats, to denote your anceſtours dark and ſecret flight for his ſafety. However God brought him home again, on the ſilver vvings of the Dove, when peaceably reſtoring him, in the dayes of Q. Elizabeth to his large Poſſeſſions. In a word, I may wiſh you and yours leſs mediate trouble then he had in the courſe of his Life, but cannot deſire you more final happines in the cloſe thereof. T F.

* viz. a Lions Head erazed.

ABout this time Mr. John Knox came from Geneva, and was choſen by the Congregation of Frankford, for their conſtant Miniſter. Let none account it incongruous, that among ſo many able, and eminent Engliſh Divines, a Scotchman ſhould be made Paſtour of the Engliſh Church, ſeeing Mr. Knox his reputed merit did naturalize him (though a forrainer) for any Proteſtant Congregation. At which time alſo Mr. Chambers, and Mr. Edmond Grindal came thither as Agents, with a letter from the Congregation of Strasburgh. This Strasburgh, as in the poſition thereof, it is almoſt ſeated in the juſt middway betwixt Zurich and Frankford: ſo the Engliſh there reſiding, embraced a moderate, and middle expedient, betwixt the extremities of the two foreſaid Congregations. Theſe made a motion, that they might have the [a] ſubſtance and effect of the Common Prayer-book, though ſuch ceremonies, and things, which the Countrie could not bear, might well be omitted. Knox and Whitingam aſked them, what they meant by the ſubſtance of the Book: and whileſt the other

Mr. Knox choſen conſtant Miniſter at Frankford.

[a] Tr. of Fr. pag. 24.

Anno Dom. 1555. Anno Regni Mar. 1.

other wanted commission to dispute the point, the motion for the present came to no perfection.

The Liturgie of England tendred to Mr. Calvin. and his censure thereof.

2. However it gave occasion that Mr. Knox, and others in Frankford, drew up in Latine a platforme, or description of the Liturgie, as used in England under King Edward, and tendered the same to the judgement of Mr. John Calvin in Geneva, to pass his sentence thereon. This is that Mr. Calvin whose care of all the Churches is so highly commended by some, and as much censured is he by others, as boasting himself in another mans line, and medling with forraine matters which did not belong unto him. Take Mr. Calvins judgment herein from his own letter bearing date the 20th. of January following, In the Liturgie of England, I see there are many tolerable fooliſh things; by these words I mean, that there is not that putity which were to be desired. These rites, though they could not at the first day be amended, yet, seeing there was no manifest impiety, they were for a season to be tolerated. Therefore it was lawfull to begin of such rudiments, or abcedaries, but so, that it behooved the learned, grave, and godly Ministers of Christ, to enterprize further, and to set forth some thing more filed from rust, and purer. This struck such a stroke, especially in the Congregation of Frankford, that some therein, who formerly partly approved, did afterward wholy dislike; and moe, who formerly disli'd did now detest the English Liturgie.

Dr. Cox, and others arrive at Frankford.

3. In this case stood matters in Frankford, when Dr. Richard Cox, with some of his friends out of England, arrived there. This Doctour was a man of an high spirit, deep learning, unblameable life, and of great credit amongst his Countrie-men; for, he had been Tutour unto Edward the 6th. And well may the nurse herself be silent, whilest the well battleing of the babe pleads aloud for her care, and diligence: as here the piety and pregnancie of his Prince-pupill, added much to Dr. Cox his deserved reputation. He, with others, coming into the Congregation March 13. discomposed the model of their service; first, answering aloud after the Minister; and, on the Sunday following, one of his company, without the consent and knowledge of the Congregation, got up into the pulpit, and there read all the [a] Letanie. Knox, highly offended hereat, in the afternoon, preaching in his course out of Genesis, of Noahs nakednesse in his tent, took occasion sharply to tax the authours of this disorder, avowing many things in the English Book to be superstitious, impure, and imperfect; and, that he would never consent they should be received into the Congregation.

a Tr. of Fr. pag. 38.

The Senate of Frankford interpose for Knox.

4. Here I omit many animosities, and intermediate bickerings betwixt the opposite parties; especially at one conference, wherein Dr. Cox is charged to come with his inartificial argument ab authoritate, Ego [b] volo habere, I will have it so. In fine, Knox his party finding themselves out-voted, by Dr. Cox his new recruits out of England, got one voice on his side, which, was louder, and stronger then all the rest; I mean the authority of the Senate of Frankford, interposing on his behalf: and, Mr. John Glauberg (principal procurer of their Congregation, as is aforesaid) publiquely professed, that if the reformed order of the congregation of Frankford were not therein observed, [c] As he had opened the Church-door unto them, so would he shut it againe.

b Tr. of Fr. pag. 40.

c Tr. of Fr. pag. 43.

Mr. Knox accused of high treason, and departs from Frankford.

5. The wringing of the nose (saith wise [d] Agur) bringeth forth blood; so the forcing of wrath bringeth forth strife. See here, the Coxan party depressed, embrace a strange way to raise themselves, and accuse Knox to the State, for no less than high treason against the Emperour in an English book of his intitled, An admonition to Christians; first, privately preached in Buckingham-shire, and now publiquely printed to the world. Eight places therein were laid to his charge: the seven last may well be omitted, the first was so effectuall to the purpose, wherein he called the Emperour, no less an enemy to Christ then was Nero. Strange, that words spoken some yeers since, in another

d Pro. 30. 33.

Anno Regin Mar. 3. Anno Dom. 1555

another land, and language, againſt the Emperour, to whom Knox then owed no natural allegiance (though ſince a caſual, and accidental one, by his removall into an imperiall City) ſhould, in this unhappy juncture of time, be urged againſt him, by exiles of his own religion, even to no leſſe than the indangering of his life. But, what ſaid Rachel of Leah? [a] With great wreſtlings have I wreſtled with my ſiſter, and I have prevailed: with great, rather than good wreſtlings. Such, too often, is the badneſſe of good people; that in the heat of paſſion, they account any play to be fair play, which tends to the overturning of thoſe with whom they contend. Hereupon, the State of Frankford (as an Imperial Town, highly concerned to be tender of the Emperours honour) willed Knox to depart the City; who on the 25th. of March, to the great grief of his friends, and followers, left the Congregation.

a Gen. 30. 8

March 25. 1556.

6. After the departure (or rather the driving away) of Mr. Knox; Dr. Cox, and his adherents clearly carried all, and proceeded to the election of officers in their Congregation. But firſt for a fit title for him that was to take charge of their ſouls, then for a proper perſon for that title.

Officers choſen in the new modell Congregation.

1. Biſhop (though firſt in nomination) was [b] declined, as improper, becauſe here he had no inſpection over any Dioceſs, but onely a cure of a Congregation, on which very account Mr. Scorie (though formerly Biſhop of Chicheſter) when preacher to the Congregation of Emden, took upon him the title of Superintendent.

b Troubles of Frankford pag. 31.

2. Superintendent was here alſo waved, as the ſame in effect, onely a bad Latine word, inſtead of a good Greek.

3. Miniſter alſo was miſlik'd, for the principal Preacher (though admitted to ſignifie his aſſiſtants) perchance as a terme of too much complyance, with the oppoſite party.

4. Paſtour at laſt was pitched upon, as freeſt from exception, moſt expreſſive of the office, and leaſt obnoxious to offence.

Then was Mr. Whitehead [c] choſen their Paſtour, yet ſo, as two Miniſters, foure Elders, and foure Deacons, were joyned to aſſiſt him. And, becauſe this was then aſwell an Univerſitie, as a congregation of the Engliſh, Mr. Horne was choſen Reader of the Hebrew, Mr. Mullines of the Greek, and Mr. Traherne was made Lecturer of Divinity. In this new modell'd Congregation, I finde no office by name aſſigned unto Dr. Cox (more honour for him to make all, than to be any officer) who was vertually influent upon all, and moſt active (though not in the doctrinal) in the prudential part of Church-government.

c Ibid. pag. 52.

7. As for the oppreſſed Congregation (ſo their oppoſites ſtile themſelves) it was headed by William Whittingham, one (though of leſs authority, yet) of as much affection to the cauſe, as Knox himſelf. This partie continued their diſlike of the Liturgie, calling it the [d] Great Engliſh Book, offended (it ſeems) with the largeneſs thereof. And they affirmed (may the report lie on the reporters to avouch it) how Cranmer Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury did preſent a book of prayer, an hundred times more [e] perfect than the Liturgie uſed in King Edwards dayes, yet the ſame could not take place, becauſe he was matched with ſo wicked a Clergie, in Convocation with other enemies. Beſides this their old grudge againſt the Common Prayer, they were grieved afreſh in this election of new officers in the Engliſh Congregation, that their old officers were neither legally continued, nor fully diſcharged, nor friend-like conſulted with, nor fairely aſked their conſent, but no notice at all taken of them. In a word, never aroſe there a greater murmuring of the Grecians againſt the [f] Hebrews, becauſe their widdows were neglected in their daily miniſtration; than here an heart-burning in the Wittingamian againſt the other party, for the affront offered to their old officers, in this new election.

Whittingam heads the oppoſite partie.

d Ibid. pag. 40.

e Ibid pag. 43

f Acts 6. 1.

8. Here a moderate motion was made that the difference might be compremiſed, Arbitration refuſed by the party of Dr. Cox.

premiſed, and referr'd to Arbitrators, which ſhould be equally choſen on both ſides. To this, Dr. Cox his party would in no wiſe conſent. Whether becauſe thoſe pretended Arbiters would be no Arbiters, but parties, and widen the wound by dreſſing of it; or becauſe, being already poſſeſs'd of the power, they would not diveſt themſelves of the whole to receive but part again from the curteſie of others. However this party loſt much reputation by the refuſall. For in all controverſies, that ſide recuſant to ſubmit it ſelf to a fair arbitration, contracts the juſt ſuſpition, either that their cauſe is faulty, or the managers thereof froward, and of a moroſe diſpoſition. In fine, as when two ſwarmes of bees daily fight in the ſame hive, the weakeſt grow ſo wiſe, as to ſeek themſelves a new habitation: ſo here, Whittingam, and his adherents reſolve to depart, and to ſeek their ſeverall providences in another place. Anno Dom. 1555. Aug. Mar. 6

The two parties part aſunder.

9. But alas theſe two ſides had a ſad parting-blow. The oppreſs'd Congregation complained, that inſtead of their Vale, they had a volley of ill words diſcharged at them; amongſt which none ſo mortal to their reputation, as the word Schiſmatick, wherewith the Conians branded them at their departure. Much ſending, and proving there was betwixt them, whether Schiſmatick was properly applyable to ſuch, who agreeing in doctrine, diſſented onely in [ſuperfluous] ceremonies. In concluſion, nothing was concluded amongſt them as to agreement. And now, no pity ſhewed at their departure, no ſending of ſighes, or ſhedding of tears on either ſide; the one being as glad of the room they left, as the other were deſirous of their own removall.

The names of ſuch as went to Geneva.

10. If any be curious to know the names of ſuch, who ſeparated themſelves from this Congregation of Frankford, this enſuing catalogue [a] will acquaint him therewith, a Taken out of their ſubſcription to a letter in the Troubles of Frankford pag. 47.

William	Williams.	Thomas	Wood.	John	Eſcot.
William	Whittingham.	William	Kethe.	Thomas	Grafton.
Anthonie	Gilby.	John	Kelke.	William	Walton.
Chriſtopher	Goodman.	John	Hilton.	Laurence	Kent.
Thomas	Cole.	Chriſtopher	Seothous	John	Hellingham.
John	Fox.	Nicolas	Purſote.	Anthonie	Carier.

Of theſe Mr. Fox, with a few moe, went to Baſil, the reſt ſettled themſelves at Geneva, where they were all moſt courteouſly entertained. And now who can expect leſs, but, that thoſe ſtill remaining at Frankford, as the ſame in opinion, ſhould be the ſame in affection, and live in brotherly love together. But alas; man, while he is man will be man; and Sathan the ſower of tares, did ſet a ſad diſſention betwixt them, which we come now to relate. 6. 155- 7.

The ſad difference betwixt Mr. Aſhley and Mr. Horne.

b Troubles of Frankford pag. 55.

11. There was an eminent member of the Congregation in Frankford, Mr. Aſhley by name, one of a worſhipfull [b] degree, and (as it ſeems) of a Spirit (not to ſay Stomack) no whit beneath his extraction. Now there happened ſome high words at Supper betwixt Him and Mr. Horn (then Paſtor of the Congregation) yet ſo that all the difference by the ſeaſonable mediation of the Gueſts was then ſeemingly compoſed. But two dayes after Mr. Aſhley was convented before the Elders, where it was laid to his charge, that at the time and place aforeſaid, he had ſpoken words ſlanderous to them and their Miniſtry. Aſhley appealed from them, as an adverſary Part againſt Him, (and therefore no competent Judges) unto the whole Congregation. (as men of eſtimation with both Parties) to hear and determine the difference betwixt them. Jan. 15. 16.

Horne and the Elders in diſcontent quit their places.

12. Hereat Mr. Horn and the Elders were highly offended, pleading that they had received authority from the whole Church, to hear and decide ſuch such Caſes, and were reſolved not to depart with the power, ſo legally delegated unto them. And whereas many meetings were made of Mr. Aſhleys friends to debate his buſineſſe, Mr. Horne and the Elders condemned them, as tending to ſchiſme, accounting their own preſence ſo of the Quorum to any lawful aſſembly, that without it, all conventions, were conventicles. Yea Mr. Horne and the Elders, perceiving that Mr. Aſhleys friends (being moſt numerous in the Congregation) would bring his Cauſe to be determined by the diffuſive Church, fully and freely forſook their Miniſtry and Service therein. Preferring rather willingly to un-Paſtor, and diſ-Elder themſelves than to retain the place, without the power, Title without the Authority due thereunto.

Anno Regin Mar. 4 — Anno Dom. 6. 155–7.

Feb. 2.

13. This deſerting of their Duty, was by others interpreted an high contempt of the Congregation. Eſpecially, when two dayes after, a full Church, met with an empty Pulpit, wherein none to teach the people. The Aſhleyans (being far the major part) took exception that Horne and the Elders ſhould ſo ſlightly, and ſuddenly quit; what before they had ſo ſeriouſly, and ſolemnly, accepted; as if their Paſtoral charges were like their cloaths or upper garments, to be put off at pleaſure, to coole themſelves in every heat of Paſſion. Beſides, theſe men being married in a manner to their Miniſteriall Functions, could not legally divorce themſelves without mutual conſent, and the Churches approbation thereof.

4. Whereat the Church is highly offended.

14. Soon after the State of the controverſie was altered, Mr. Aſhleys buſineſſe being laid aſide, and another of an higher concernment taken up in the room thereof; namely how the Congregation ſhould proceed againſt the Paſtor and Elders, in caſe they were accuſed for miſdemeanour. For hitherto no proviſions were made, in the conſtitutions of this Church, to regulate this caſe if chancing to occur. Whether becauſe the compilers of thoſe conſtitutions charitably preſumed on the integrity of all ſuch Officers, or omitted the making any law againſt them, in favour to themſelves (as moſt probable to obtain ſuch places) or becauſe no canons can at once be compleated, but a reſerve muſt be left for the additions of others to perfect the ſame. But now eight were appointed to regulate the manner of the proceeding of the Congregation againſt Paſtor and Elders if peccant, who were without (or rather above cenſure, according to the old Diſcipline) which ſtill inflamed the anger of Mr. Horne and his Party.

14. Inquiry how to proceed againſt the Paſtor and Elders if accuſed

15. A Party much advantaged by Mr. Chambers ſiding therewith, becauſe He was keeper of the charity conferred on, and contributions collected for the Congregation. Now where goeth the Purſe, there goeth the Poor, moſt in want were of Hornes ſide, in hope of the larger relief. This made others complain of Chambers, as an unjuſt Steward of the Churches treaſure, too free to ſuch as He affected, and bountifull only of Taunts and ill Terms to thoſe of a different Judgement, making neither Mens Need, or Deſerts, but only his own fancy the direction of his Diſtributions.

Mr. Chambers accuſed of injuſtice.

16. Now began their brawls to grow ſo loud, that their next neighbours over-heard them, I mean the State of Frankford took notice thereof, to the ſhame of all, and grief of all good in the Engliſh Nation. For how ſcandalous was it that exiles of the ſame Country, for the ſame Cauſe could not agree together. But man in miſery (as well as man in honour) hath no underſtanding. Yea they began to fear, leſt many Dutch-men, hitherto their bountifull Benefactours, ſhould for the future withdraw their benevolences, conceiving theſe exiles wanted no money, who had ſuch ſtore of animoſities, and probably poverty would make them more peaceable amongſt themſelves. Their diſcords were the worſe, becauſe the Vernall mart at Frankford did approach, and it would be welcome ware, and an uſefull commodity for Popiſh Merchants meeting there, to carry over into England, and all the world over, the news of their diſtractions.

The ſcandal of this diſſention.

17. Hereupon

By the Magistrate interposing they are made short friends.

17. Hereupon the Magistrate of Frankford interposed to arbitrate their differences, but whether of his own accord, or by the secret solicitation of others is uncertain. Sure it is both parties solemnly disavowed any secret practise to procure the same. The Magistrate interposed his counsels rather then commands, appearing very upright, and unbiased to either party. For though at the first He seemed to favour Horne and his Complices (out of that general Sympathy which a Magistrate beareth to all publick Officers) yet afterwards quitting their Cause, he bent all his endeauours to make a Reconciliation. By his Edict it was ordered, that the former Pastors were put out of the functions, and made private men. That new ones, or the same again, (if the Church so pleased) were to be chosen in their roomes. That the treasure of the Congregation should be kept joyntly and distributed by the Deacons, who at an appointed Time should account for the same to the Minister and Elders. And the day after, leave was given them to devise a new Discipline (with convenient speed) amongst themselves, and tender the same, when drawn up, to the Magistrate for his Ratification. In fine all seemingly were made friends, in token whereof they (both Parties) joyned hands together.

Anno Dom. 1557. Anno Regni Mar. 4 Feb. 28. March 1.

New discipline makes new distractions.

18. Soon after fifteen were appointed, to draw up a forme of new discipline. But this new discipline, occasioned new grudges, or rather revived the old ones. Though short the Book, it was long before fully finished, because such as were concerned therein drew the Sheets thereof severall wayes. Some would have the old discipline stand still in full force, others would have it only altered, others totally abolished. When the Discipline was new drawn up, some required moneths, and the most moderate more dayes of deliberation before they would subscribe it. In conclusion, whereas the whole Congregation of Frankford, consisted then but of Sixty two (understand them masters of families, besides women, children, and servants) fourty two subscribed this new Discipline, and the rest refused. 31.

Mr. Horne and his party protest against it.

19. Presently they proceeded to the Election of new Pastors and ministers, when Mr. Horne issuing into the Church with his party, cast a bundle of Paper-bills on the Table standing in the middle of the Church. A Table surely set there (not for the inflaming of discords, but) the celebration of that Sacrament, which should cement them all in a comfortable communion. Those Bils contained their refusals to concur in this Election, because they could not in their consciences allow the Discipline whereby it was made. However the rest went on with their Choice, and no one (saving Mr. Wilford) beeing formerly of the Ministry, was now again elected. Whereof this reason was rendred, because they with Mr. Horne had willingly relinquished their functions, and it was but just to take that from them, which they cast away from themselves. Besides it is said, that some of them gave it out, that if they should be re-elected they would not accept thereof.

The matters put to moderators.

20. Hitherto we have had no mention for a long time of Dr. Cox, and it may seem much, that the activity of his Spirit should be so long concealed, which makes some presume him absent all the while. But let such know, that Dr. Cox engaged in the former controversie, in defence of the liturgy, set forth in K. Edwards Raigne, as concerning his Soveraigns Honour and generall Interest of the English Church concerned therein. Whereas he hitherto stood neuter in this difference of Mr. Horne and his complices, as beholding it of narrower extent and less consequence, betwixt particular persons. Whereupon the Magistrate of Frankford, (not at leasure himself, because of the business of the Mart, to examine the matter, appointed Him, with Dr. Sandys, and Richard Berty, Esqs (as men of estimation with both parties) to hear and determine the difference betwixt them.

A kinde of Agreement made.

21. By the powerful mediation of which Umpires, they were perswaded into some tolerable agreement, though it was no better than a Palliative cure.

Anno Regis Mar. 4. Anno Dom. 1557.

cure. But I am weary of their diſſentions, and therefore proceed to ſome more acceptable ſubject. Only let me add that this whole ſtory of their diſcords, with the cauſes and circumſtances thereof, is taken out of the Troubles of Frankford, a book compoſed in favour of the oppoſers of the Engliſh Diſcipline; And when the Writer is all for the Plantif, the diſcreet Reader will not only be an unpartial Judge, but alſo ſomewhat of an Advocate for the Defendant.

22. It is no leſs pleaſant to conſider, then admirable to conceive, how theſe exiles ſubſiſted ſo long, and ſo far from their native country, in ſo comfortable a condition. Eſpecially ſeeing Gardiner Bp. of Wincheſter ſolemnly vowed, ſo to ſtop the ſending of all ſupplies unto them, that for very hunger they ſhould eat their own nailes, and then feed on their fingers ends. But threatned folke live long, and before theſe baniſhed men were brought to that ſhort Bil of fare, the Biſhop was firſt all eaten up of wormes himſelf. To reduce their ſubſiſtence, within compaſs of belief, let the following particulars be put together. The wonderful providence in the maintenance of theſe poor Exiles.

23. Moſt of theſe Clergy-Exiles, were men well preferred in King Edwards raigne. Theſe as they were diſſwaded by the due conſideration of their ever-living God, from being ſolicitouſly over-carking for the future, ſo were they adviſed by their daily beholding of their conſumptioniſh, and everdying King to be providentially careful for the time to come: This made them make hay in the Sun-ſhine, and then got they good feathers, wherewith afterwards they did flye beyond the Seas. Yet ſome thing they carried over with them.

24. Some perſons of much worſhip and wealth were amongſt them, who bountifully communicated to the neceſſities of others. Of theſe the principall. The bounty of the baniſhed Gentry to their fellow-Sufferers.

Sir { John a Cheeke, of whom largely hereafter. / Richard Moriſin of Caiſhobury in Hertford-ſhire. / Francis Knollys, afterwards privy-counſelour to Q. Elizabeth. }

Sir { Anthony Cook, (father in Law to Cecil after L^rd. Burgeley) and famous for his learned daughters. / Peter Carew, renowned for his valour in Ireland where He died, Anno 1576. / Thomas Wroth, richly landed at and nigh Durance in Middleſex. } a Humphery in His large latin life of Jewel. pag. 88.

Dame Dorothy Stafford afterwards of the Bed-Chamber to Queen Elizabeth.

Dame Elizabeth Berkley.

Theſe accounting all their fellow-ſufferers, their fellows, forgot themſelves, to remember the afflictions of Joſeph, being advanced ſo much the higher in the eſteem of all, who were wiſe and virtuous, by how much they degraded themſelves in their helpefull condeſcention to their inferiours.

25. Many Pious Perſons reſiding in England, but chiefly in London (which commonly counter-poiſeth the charity of all the land beſides) were very free towards their relief. Some of theſe, conſcious to themſelves of cowardly compliance with the Superſtitions of the Times, hoped in ſome degree to leſſen their offence, by their liberality to ſuch Exiles, as were more conſtant and couragious than themſelves in the cauſe of the Truth. And although great the diſtance betwixt London and Zurich, yet Merchants have long armes, and by their Bils of Exchange, reach all the world over. Richard Springham and John Abel Merchants of London gave much, and ſent more to their ſupport, as being entruſted to make over the gifts of many good people, utterly unknown to ſuch as received them. That is the beſt charity, which Nilus-like, hath the ſeverall ſtreams thereof ſeen, but the fountain concealed. Such ſilent and ſecret bounty, as good at all times, to avoid vain-glory, is And of the Londoners unto them.

Anno Dom. 1557. | Anno Regni Mar. 4.

is best in bad times, to prevent danger. As for Thomas Eaton a London Merchant, but living in Germany he was (saith my [a] author) communis hospes, the host-general of all English Exiles, thanks, (and that forced on him, against his will) being all the Shot, his Guests paied, at their departure.

[a] Humphrey ut prius.

Forrain liberality unto them.

24. The King of Denmark, Henry Prince Palatine of Rhene, Christopher Duke of Wirtenburge, Woulfgange Duke of Bipont, &c. with all the States and free cities wherein the English sojourned, were very bountifull unto them. So were the Dutch Divines, especially those of Zurich, and take them in order as my foresaid Author nameth them, Bullinger, Pellican, Bibliander, Simler, Wolphius, Lavator, Zuinglius, whose short stipends would scarce reach to maintain themselves, and yet their thrift and charity stretched them so, as therewith also to relieve others. Nor let learned Gesner be forgotten, that great natural Historian, and no less loving of men, then knowing in beasts, foule, and fishes. As for Peter Martyr, he had a petty colledge in his house at Strasburge, (whereof Mr. Jewel was the vice-master) wherein most of the clergy paied (if any) easie rates for their diet therein.

Improved by their own industry.

27. Some of the English Schollars, subsisted partly by their own pains, the making of Books, the Copies whereof were very beneficiall unto them. Say not this argued salable souls (savouring more of the Stationer then the Scholler) to sell their Books, yea that it was a kinde of Simony in them, to make profit of those their parts which God had freely bestowed upon them. For as it betrayeth a mercenary minde, in those who having plenty themselves, will sordidly contract for their Copies, so such Authors, who are in want, are faulty in being wanting to their own just relief, if neglecting moderate benefit by their own endeavours. Thus John Bale much advantaged himself, by his folio edition of his Centuries. Mr. Fox gained by his first (and least Latine) Book of Martyrs. Mr. Laurence Humphrey, was no loser by his making and setting forth his three books de Nobilitate, which he intituled Optimates, as by translating Philo de Nobilitate, and Origen de recta fide out of greek. Others imployed themselves, in overseeing and correcting the Press, especially about the English Bible, with the Geneva notes thereon.

And God his blessing above all.

28. Such sums attained by their own Industry, though small in bulke, were great in blessing, a divine benediction being alwayes invisibly breathed on painful and lawful diligence. Thus the Servant imployed in making and blowing of the fire, (though sent away thence as soon as it burneth cleare) oft-times getteth by his pains a more kindly and continuing heat, then the Master himself, who sitteth down by the same; and thus persons industriously occupying themselves, thrive better on a little of their own honest getting, then lazy Heirs on the large revenues left unto them.

Q. Mary her sickness believed enlivens the credit of English Exiles.

29. One thing much kept up the credit of the English Exiles, with the Merchants and Bankers beyond the Seas, namely the certain and constant report of Queen Maries decaying condition, daily consuming, though increasing, wasting, though swelling, with an Hydropicall distemper, which could not be kept so close under the key of Confession, but that it became the publike discourse at home, and abroad. And although many reports of Queen Maries death were shot out at random (whereof one, some moneths after hit the mark) and the same were proved to be false, yet thereby the news of her sickness gained a general belief. This gave reputation to such English in Germany as were known to be possessed of estates in their own country, enabling them with Trust to borrow convenient summs from any creditours, who would make probable adventures for their advantage, beholding the English, very responsible in an approaching reversion.

Sr. John Cheek his unprosperous return.

30. So much of our English Exiles, whom our Pen will shortly handle under a better notion. Return we to Sr. John Cheek, lately mentioned, with a promise to enlarge his story, though so sad in it self, we would willingly (but for wronging of the truth) have buried the same in silence. Well,

and

Anno Regin Mar. 5. Anno Dom. 1557

and welcome, loved and reſpected was this Knight at Strasburge, when He would needs return for Brabant ut uxorem duceret, to marry a wife, ſaith the printed Sleidan, but by miſtake, (for He was marryed ſome yeers before, to a Lady which long ſurvived him) inſtead of ut uxorem educeret, that He might fetch forth, and bring home his wife, lately (it ſeems) come out of England into the Low-Countries. He is ſaid firſt to have conſulted the Starrs, (would He had not gone ſo high, or elſe gone higher for his advice) being too much addicted to judicial Aſtrologie. Now whether here the Errour was in the Art it ſelf, as falſe and frivolous, or in his miſapplying the rules thereof, (not well underſtanding the language of the Stars) more ſure it is, his journy had ſad ſucceſs. For in his return from Bruxels to Antwerpe, no whit ſecured by his own innocence, nor by the promiſe of the Lord Paget, nor by the pledging of S^r. John Maſon, for his publick protection, nor by the interceſſion of his friend Fecknam (Abbot of Weſtminſter) to Q. Mary, He (with S^r. Peter Carew) was beaten from his Horſe, tied hand and foot to the bottom of a cart, thence conveyed hoodwinkt to the next Haven, and ſo ſhipt over under hatches unto the Tower of London.

a Fox Acts & Mon. tom. 3. pag. 701.

31. Here all arts were uſed on Him (which might prevaile to drive, or draw, an eaſie Soule ſurpris'd on a ſuddain) to make him renounce his Religion, untill hard uſage in priſon, joyned with threatnings of worſe, and fair promiſes on his ſubmiſſion, drew from his mouth an abrenuntiation of that Truth, which He ſo long had profeſſed and ſtill believed, and thereupon was reſtored to his liberty, but never to his contentment. For ſuch is the tyranny of Papiſts, that they are not ſatisfied to take mens Conſciences captive by their cruelty, except alſo they carry them about in publike triumph, as here Bonner [a] got S^r. John Cheek unawares to ſit in the place where godly Martyrs were condemned. And although He then did nothing, but ſit ſtill, ſigh, and be ſilent, yet ſhame, for what He had done, Senſe of what others ſuffered, and ſorrow that his preſence ſhould be abuſed to countenance cruelty, brought him quickly to a comfortable end, of a miſerable life, as carrying Gods pardon, and all good mens pitty along with him.

Recanteth (orally) and died for grief thereof.

a Fox ibidem

Sept. 13.

32. Since his Death, his Memory hath done ſome pennance (I ſay not to ſatisfy the failings in his life) being wronged in his Parnetage, abuſed in his Parts, and miſtaken in his Poſterity. For the firſt, a learned Pen [b] (but too free in dealing diſgracefull characters on the ſubjects thereof) ſtileth him a Man of mean Birth, and generally he is made, only the Son of his own Deſerts. Whereas M^r. Peter Cheek, S^r. Johns Father, living in Cambridge, (where S^r. John was borne, over againſt the Croſs in the market-place, and where by the advantage of his Nativity, He fell from the wombe of his Mother, into the lap of the Muſes) was deſcended of the family of the Cheeks of Maſton in the Iſle of Wight, (where their eſtate was about 300^li. a yeer, never increaſed nor diminiſhed till ſold outright ſome 20. yeers ſince) out of which Richard Cheek, in the raigne of King Richard the Second, married a Daughter of the Lord Mountagu. As for Duffield his Mother, ſhe was a diſcreet and grave Matrone, as appeared by the good [d] counſel, and chriſtian charge She gave this her Son, when comming to take his farewell of her, and betake himſelf to Prince Edward his Tuition. For his Parts, the foreſaid Author, with the ſame breath, termeth Him, So far as appears by the books He wrote, Pedantick enough, that is too much, to ſuch as underſtand his Mioſis. But had He peruſed all his works, and particularly, His True Subject to be Rebel, He would have beſtowed a better character upon him. Another Writer [e] can finde no iſſue left of his body, ſaving one Son bearing his Fathers name, whereas he had three Sons by his wife, (as appears on her Monument in S^t. Martins in the Fields) 1. Henry the Eldeſt, Secretary to the Councel in the North, (who one Francis Ratliffe Siſter to the laſt Earle of Suſſex of that family, begat S^r. Thomas Cheek of Pyrgo in Eſſex, bleſſed with an happy iſſue) 2. John Hiſtory rectified in his parentage, parts and poſterity.

c S^r. John Hayward in the life of Edward the 6. pag. 8.

d The mother of my aged and worthy friend Mr. Jackſon of Hiſtons was with many others preſent thereat.

e One that ſet forth his life in Oxford Anno 1641.

John a valiant Gentle man, and Edward, both dying without any posterity, But these things belong to Heraulds, not Historians.

The Pilgrimage of the Dutchess of Suffolk.

33. The sufferings of Katherine Dutchess of Suffolk, Baroness Willoughby of Eresby, late widow of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolke, since wife to Richard Berty Esq; must not be forgotten. A Lady of a sharpe wit, and sure hand to drive her wit home, and make it pierce, where She Pleased. This made Bp. Gardiner to hate her much for her Jests on Him, but more for her earnest towards God, the Sincerity of Her Religion, and thereupon she was forced with her Husband and infant-Daughter to fly beyond the Seas.

True, and sad Errantry.

34. It would tire our Pen to trace their Removals, from their House (the Barbican in London) to Lions-Key, thence to Leigh, thence over Seas (beeing twise driven back again) into Brabant, thence to Santon a City of Cleveland, thence to Wesel, one of the Hanse-Towns, thence to Windheim in the Palatinate, thence to Frankford, thence (by many intermediate Stages) into Poland. Every removall ministred them matter, of new Difficulties, to improve their Patience, new Dangers to imploy their Prayers, and new Deliverances, to admire Gods providence. Especially in their [a] Passage from Santon to Wesel, in a cold February, and a great thaw, after a long frost, on foot, in a dark night, and rainy weather, thorow wayes unknown, without guide to direct, or company to defend them, leaving certain Foes behinde, and having but suspected friends before them. The end of their journy, was worse then their journy it self, finding first at Wesel, no Inn to entertain them, able to speak little high-Dutch for themselves, and other willing to speak in comfort to them. In a word, it would trouble ones Head to invent more Troubles then they had all at once, and it would break ones Heart, to undergo but halfe so many, seeing their real sufferings out-Romanced the fictions of many Errant Adventures.

a See it at large in Fox tome 3. pag. 928.

The vanity of Relations.

35. No English Subject had like forrain relations with this Lady, and yet they rather afflicted then befriended Her. She had been wife to Him, who had been Husband to a Queen of France, yet durst not go into that country. By the confession of Bp. Gardiner himself, She and Queen Mary, were the only English Ladies of Spanish extraction and alliance, yet was it unsafe for Her to stay in any part of the Spanish Dominions. The Emperour owed her, (as Executrix to her Husband Duke Charles) great sums of mony, yet durst she not demand payment, lest the creditrix should be made away, and so the debt satisfied.

God the best debtor.

36. Yet an higher Emperour, even God himself, seemed in some sort indebted unto Her (He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord) for her bounty at Home, in the height of her Honour, forrainers, Protestants especially, in distress.

Makes just payment.

37. And now that good debtour, God his providence, made full payment thereof, by inciting the King of Poland, at the mediation of the Palatine of Kilnia (as He at the instance of John Baron Alasco, who formerly in England had tasted of this Ladyes liberality) to call this Dutchess with her Husband and family to a place in Poland of Safety, Profit, Credit, and Command, where they comfortably continued till the death of Queen Mary. During these their Travels, Peregrine Berty (carrying his forrain nativity in his name) was born unto them, afterwards the valiant Lord Willoughby of Eresby. To conclude, let this virtuous Lady her example, incourage all to be good to all Godly in distress, seeing Hosts hodie, eras Hospes, the Entertainers to day, may want Entertainment to morrow.

Why the Parliament so silent in Church-matters.

38. My Pen hath been a long Time an Exile from England, and now is willing to return to its native soile, though finding little comfort to invite it thither, and less to welcome it there. Only I finde a Parliament called, solely commendable on this account, that it did no more mischief in Church matters. Indeed the two former Parliaments had so destroyed all things

Jan. 21.

in

Anno Regin Mar. 1. Anno Dom. 1557.

in Religion, they gave a writ of ease to the rest in this Queens Reign to do nothing.

39. The same reason may be rendred of the silence in the convocation where John Harpesfield Archdeacon of London, and Prolocutor preached also the Latin Sermon. [a] His Text, (how suiting to the occasion, let him answer it) Matt. 21. 2. Ite in castellum quod contra vos est &c. where Christ sends two Disciples to fetch Him the Ass and the Ass colt.

As also the Convocation.

a Register of Cant. in Cardinal Poole.

40. The Clergy gave the Queen a subsidie of eight-shillings in the Pound, (confirmed by Act of Parliament) to be paid in four yeers. In requital whereof, by Pools procurement, the Queen priviledged them from shewing their Horses with the Laytie; yet so as they should muster them up for the defence of the Land under Captains of their own choosing.

A grand subsidie granted.

41. Here we meet with a piece of valour in Q. Mary, daring to oppose the Pope, and shewing that her mother Q. Katherines devotion, had not drowned in her all the Spirit of K. Henry her Father. Pope Paul the fourth, wholy favouring the French Faction, and perfectly hating Cardinal Poole, (whom he beheld as the principal Promoter of the late Warrs in France) sent Cardinal William Peito (borne of an antient Family at [b] Chesterton in Warwickshire) to ease him in England of his Legative Power. But the Queen so ordered the matter, that by her Prerogative she prohibited Peito entrance into England, and got the aforesaid Power established and confirmed on Cardinal Poole.

Queen Mary somewhat slour, though more devout.

b Camb. Brit. in Warwickshire.

42. Somewhat before we saw a great wonder, viz. the death of Stephen Gardiner Bp. of Winchester, not that He died (being past sixty) but that He, who lived so zealous a Papist should die more then halfe a Protestant, as wholy one in the point of mans [c] Justification by the free mercies of God, and merits of Christ. John White borne in Winchester Diocess; first Schoolmaster, then Warden of Winchester School, was by the Premises so tempted to be also Bp. there, that it made him digest the Symony to succeed Gardiner; though on condition to pay, a thousand pounds a yeer, out of that Bishoprick to Cardinal Poole for his better support.

The death of Stephen Gardiner.

c Fox Acts & Mon.

43. But the most pleasant object to entertain us at this time in England, is the beholding of two fair and fresh Foundations in Oxford. The one Trinity Colledge, built by Sr. Thomas Pope, in the place, (where long since Thomas Hatfield Bishop, and Robert Walworth, Prior of Durham, had built a Colledge for Durham Monks) which at the present much decayed and ruinated, was by Sr. Thomas reedified and endowed. I finde this Mr. Pope (as yet unknighted) principal [d] Visitor, at the dissolution of Abbeys, into whose hand the Seal of St. Albans it self was first surrendred. Now as none were Losers employed in that service, so we finde few refunding back to charitable uses; and perchance this man alone the thankful [e] Samaritan who made a publique Acknowledgement.

Trin. Col. in Oxford founded by Sr. Thomas Pope.

d Weavers funeral Mon. pag. 112.

e Luke 17. 16

Presidents	Bishops	Benefactours	Learned Writers
Thomas Sleithurst.		Dame Elizabeth Powlet.
Arthur Yeldard.
Randulph Kettle.
Dr. Potter.
Dr. Harris.

Insomuch that therein is at this present a President, twelve Fellows, twelve Scholars, besides officers and servants of the Foundation, with many other Students, the whole Number being an hundred thirty three.

Anno Dom. 1557. Anno Regni Mar. 4

St. Johns Colledg in Oxford founded by Sr. Thomas White.

44. The other, S^t. Johns Colledge erected by S^r. Thomas White, (borne at Rickmansworth in Hertford-shire) a bottomlesse fountain of Bounty if we consider the ponds which He filled, and besides the running streams, which flowed from Him. Of the first Kind, were the Cities of London, Bristol and Coventry, on which He severally bestowed great summs of mony to purchase Lands therewith. His running stream, I account that his gift which I may call the Circulation of charity, being a legacy of 100. pounds delivered out of Merchant Taylors Hall on S^t. Bartholomews day, and lent gratis to 4. poore cloathiers for 10. yeers, in 23 severall Corporations. Thus as a wise Merchant He conceived it safest to adventure his Bounty in sundry Bottoms.

The occasion (ut aiunt) thereof.

45. But the master-piece thereof was his founding of S^t. Johns Colledge in Oxford. Indeed his liberality baited first at Glocester-Hall, which place He reedified. But so small a Hall was too little to loage so large a soul in, which sought for a subject of greater Receipt. A Tradition goes of his Dreame, that he should in time meet with a Place, where [a] two Elmes grew of the same height, and where his further purpose should take effect. Come we from what he dreamt to what he did, who finding belike that Tree-market by it he built and endowed S^t. Johns Colledge. And being himself free of the Company of Merchant Taylors in London (where he was Lord Maior;) he ordered that that School should be a prime Nursery to his Colledge; and out of it the most pregnant Schollers are annually elected into this his Foundation. It is now lately enlarged with Addition of a new Court, and other Benefactions, by the liberality of William Laud Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, whose Body though it be obscurely buried at Alhallows Barking, gratefull Posterity will deservedly behold this Building as his lasting Monument.

[a] Stows survey of London, pag. 91.

Presidents	Bishops	Benefactours	Learned Writers
Alex. Belcher.	Toby Matthew	S^r. Will. Craven	Edm. Campian }
Will. Elie.	Arch B. of York.	Knight.	Grego. Martin } * fellows
Will. Stoke.	Joh. Buckeridg.	S^r. Will. Paddie	Humph. Ely } of this
Jo. Robinson.	Bishop of Ely.	Knight D^r. of	Hen. Holland. } house and
Tob. Matthew.	Row. Searchfield.	Physick Commoner of the Colledg. He gave freely towards the building, & furnishing of their library, purchased to the Colledge two perpetual Patronages; and much beautified the Chappel.	violent Papists.
Fra. Willis.	Bishop of Bristol.		JOHN CASE D^r. of Physick.
Ran. Hutchinson.	Will. Laud Arch.
Io. Buckeridg.	B. of Canterbury
Will. Laud.	Will. Juxon B.
Will. Juxon.	of London.
Rich Baily.	D^r. Boile BP.
Fra. Cheynell.	of Corke.
Faith. Owen.			WILLIAM LAVDE in his learned book against Fisher.

* Pitzeus de scriptor. Anglicis.

The above mentioned D^r. Case, sometimes Fellow of this Colledge, married a Wife, kept House in Oxford, and Schollers in his house, teaching many youth Logick, Ethicks, and Philosophy. The University was so farr from beholding this as an infringing of their priviledges, that out of honour to this Doctors abilities, his schollers by special grace were so farr favoured, that they were made as capable of Degrees, as if admitted Gremials in the University.

Anno Regni Mar. 6. Anno Dom. 1558.

University. At this day St. Johns hath a President, fifty Fellows, and Scholars, a Chaplain and a Clarke; besides Servants, Commoners and other students, being in all an hundred and twenty.

46. Queen Mary every day waxed more and more melancholy, whereof several causes are assigned. Some conceive her Sorrowing, that by negligence the Key of France, [Calis] was slipt from her girdle, which her predecessours wore by their sides more then two hundred yeers. But, now it is gone, let it Goe, it was but a beggerly Town, which cost England ten times yearly more then it was worth in keeping thereof, as by the [a] accounts in the Exchequer doth plainly appear.

Calis lost, the Queen melancholy.

[a] and in a manuscript of Sr. Robert Cottons own making.

47. Others ascribe her sadness to her Husbands absence, which had many (and made more) occasions to go and stay beyond the Seas, after he had found England not so usefull as he expected, as having neither power therein, nor profit thereby, (though as much as on the Articles of marriage was promised Him) halfe so much, as He had promised to himself. Besides Queen Mary her Person, was no gainer, scarce a saver of Affection, having her Fathers feature, a face broad and big, with her mothers colour, a somewhat swarthy complexion.

Her grief at her husbands absence.

48. As Queen Mary was not over fair, King Philip was not over-fond, especially after he began to despair of Issue from her. Indeed her Physitians hoped her to be with Childe, till her misconceived pregnancy proved a Dropsy, at the last, whereof she died, having reigned five years and odd moneths. As for the suggestion of Osorius the Spaniard, that the English Protestants attempted to poison her, a learned [b] Author returns, Nihil hujusmodi dictum, nec scriptum, fictum, nec pictum, being the bare Inventions of his scandalous Tongue.

Nov. 17.

And death of a Dropsie.

b Haddan contra Osorium lib. 1. fol. 25.

49. Within few howres after her death, died Cardinal Poole Arch-Bishop of Canterbury. One who the longer He lived in England, the less He had of an English-man, daily more and more Italianating Himself, and conversing most with the Merchants of that country. Practising the principles of Italian thrift, his Pompe was rather gawdy then costly, and attendance ceremonious, more than expentive. By Bils of Exchange, He made over much mony to Venice and Rome, and fearing a banke in England, (if Queen Mary should faile) provided Himself a banke beyond the Seas. He procured of the Queen the Patronage of [c] nineteen Benefices unto his See, promised and intended to repair the Palace at Canterbury. He was buried in His own Cathedral with this short and modest Epitaph on his plain Monument, DEPOSITVM CARDINALIS POLI.

The death of Cardinal Poole.

c Ant. Brit. in vita Poli.

50. He alwayes had a favourable inclination to Protestants, though (to wipe off the aspersion of Lutheranisme) at last he grew somewhat severe against them, but expressing it rather in wronging the Dead, (whose bones He burnt) than hurting the Living. The Papists accuse him, for too much Indulgence to the married Clergy, because only parting them from their Wives, and depriving them from their Livings: But soon afterwards [d] preferring the same persons to Benefices of farr better Revenue. He was an absolute Protestant in the point of justification, much offended with the Proud errour of Osorius therein; thus expressing himself [e] non potest viribus humanis nimium detrahi, nec addi Divinæ Gratiæ. Too much cannot be taken away from mans power nor given to Gods Grace.

His good inclinations to be a Protestant.

d Sanders de schis. Ang. lib. 2. pag. 307.

e Haddan contra Osorium lib. 2. fol. 58.

51. He left Aloisius Priol, a Gentleman of Venice, his sole executor, to dispose of his estate to pious uses, chiefly on the relief of forrainers. In England He had no want of neer Kindred, and some of them (for all their high birth) neer a kin to want; yet He passing them by, ordered that his whole Estate should be conferred on Italians; Some condemning, some commending him for the same, as a deed of Gratitude, because those of that Nation had formerly for many yeers relieved his Leaveth all his Estate to Italians.

Anno Dom. 1558. Anno Regin. Mar. 6.

neceſſities. His Executor ſo honeſtly diſcharged his Truſt therein, that he freely diſpoſed the whole eſtate to the True Intent of the Teſtator, In ſo much that he left not any thing thereof unto himſelf; ſave onely two ſmall Books, viz. a [a] Breviary and a Diurnall, for a meer Memoriall. Thus died Cardinall Poole, neither of Italian Phyſick willfully taken by himſelf, as an Engliſh [b] Author inſinuats, nor of Poiſon given to him by the Proteſtants, as a [c] Spaniſh writer ſuggeſts, but of a quartan feaver then epidemicall in England, and malignant above the ordinary nature of that Diſeaſe.

a Antiq. Brit. in vita Poli.
b Mr. Fox Acts & Mon. pag. 2102.
* Paul Oſorius.
Queen Maries double funeral ſermons.
c Pitzeus de ſcrip. Ang. Cent. pag.
* Camb. in his Eliz. in Anno 1559. p. 23. d Pitz. de ſcrip. Ang. Cent. pag.

52. The Funerals of Queen Mary were performed with much Solemnity and true ſorrow of thoſe of her own religion. [d] White Biſhop of Wincheſter preached the Sermon, taking for his Text Eccleſiaſtes 9. 4. A living Dog is better then a dead Lion. One not preſent at the Place might eaſily tell whom he made the Lion, and whom the Dog. Indeed he ſtrawed all the flowers of his Rhetorique on Queen Mary deceaſed, leaving not ſo much as the ſtalkes to ſcatter on her ſurviving ſiſter. This white being a Tolerable Poet, (for ſo * one charactereth him) was an Intollerable Flatterer, and made uſe of his Poetical Licence, in the praiſe of Popery. More modeſt and moderate was the Sermon of Feckenham Abbot of Weſtminſter, taking for his Text. Eccleſiaſtes 4. 2. I praiſe the Dead rather then the Living, who preached alſo the [e] Obſequies of Queen Mary; either that he did it as an act of Supererrogation, or becauſe it was conceived the more ſtate for ſo great a Prince to have a Duplicate of ſuch ſolemnities. The beſt is, the Proteſtants of that Age, cared not how many (ſo it be Funeral) Sermons were preached for her.

Her deſerved Praiſe.

53. However, take Queen Mary in her ſelf abſtracted from her Opinions, and by her ſelf, ſecluded from her bloody counſellours, and her Memory will juſtly come under Commendation. Indeed ſhe knew not the Art of being popular, and never cared to learn it, and generally (being given more to her Beads then her Book) had leſs of learning, (or Parts to get it) then any of her Fathers children. She hated to equivocate in her own Religion, and alway was what ſhe was, without diſſembling her judgement or Practiſe, for fear or flattery; Little beloved of her ſubjects, to whom though once ſhe remitted an intire Subſidie, yet it little moved their affections, becauſe though liberall in this Act, ſhe had been unjuſt in another, her Breach of promiſe to the gentry of Norfolke and Suffolk. However ſhe had been a worthy Princeſſe, had as little Cruelty been done under her, as was done by her. Her Devotion alwayes commanded her Profit, and often times did fill the Church with the emptying of her own Exchequer.

Her, and her Ladies Bounty to the Hoſpitals of the Savoy.

54. Take one inſtance of many; The Hoſpitall of the Savoy in the Strand, founded by her grandfather King Henry the ſeventh, and ſince Diſſolved, was by her Erected again. And whereas the Utenſells thereof had lately been Embezelled (the houſe being left as bare as the poore people which were brought therein) her maids of Honour, out of their own Wardrope furniſhed it with * Beds, Blankets, and Sheets. Were any of thoſe Ladies ſtill alive, I would pray for them in the language of the * Pſalmiſt, The Lord make all their bed in their ſickneſſe. And he is a good Bed-maker indeed, who can and will make it fit the perſon, and pleaſe the patient. But ſeeing ſuch long ſince are all deceaſed, it will be no Superſtition to praiſe God for their piety, and Commend their practiſe to the imitation of Poſterity.

* Stow in his ſurvey of London. pag. 491.
* Pſal. 41. 3.

The place of her Burial.

55. Her Body was enterred in the Chappell of King Henry the ſeventh, In the Iſle on the North-ſide thereof, and afterwards the Corps of her ſiſter Queen Elizabeth were buried in the ſame Vault. Over Both, King James afterwards erected a moſt ſumptuous monument; though the Epitaph inſcribed thereon, taketh noe notice

at

Anno Regin. Eliz. 1.

Anno Dom. 1558

at all of Queen Mary, as destined, and designed soly to the memory of Queen Elizabeth. But Maryes name still surviveth in many [Roman] Catholick families, being (though never mother her self) Godmother to many of her Servants Sons, giving her own, [Anthony Maria, Edward Maria &c.] as an addition to their Christian names.

56. Many great persons, (chiefly of the Clergy) followed her into another world; whether out of a politick Sympathie that being raised by her, they would fall with her, or that fore seeing alteration of religion, and their own ruine, they died, to prevent death, heart-broken with sorrow. Besides, at this time, there was a strange mortality, different from other infections, not sweeping but choosing, which did principally single out men of wealth and quality. Whil'st such as make uncharitable applications, parallel this to the plague of the Israelites, [b] which slew the wealthiest of them, we will onely conceive, that God intending to plant in Queen Elizabeth, first cleared the ground, by removing such, as probably would oppose her. Neither was it a small advantage unto her, that the Parliament sat at her sisters death; after which, they onely continued so long, as joyntly and publiquely to proclaim Elizabeth Queen, and then they were [c] dissolved. Now though her Title was free from doubt, yet it it was not so clear from cavils, but that one considering the power of the English Papists, at this time, and their activity at all times, will conclude they might have, though not hurt, troubled, and though not hindred, disturb'd her succession. Whereas now being so solemnly proclaimed, it gave much countenance, and some strength to her right, being done by the whole State in so weighty a manner, that it crush't in pieces all hopes of private oppositions. Thus those whom God will have to rise, shall never want hands to lift them up.

God paveth the way for Q. Elizabeths coming to the crown.

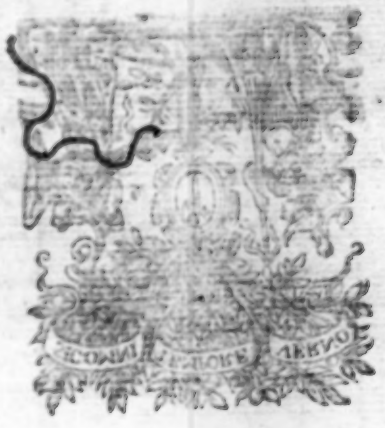
a communis quadam lues ex ardore febrium per universos Anglia ordines jam meabat & in illis maxime divites, & honorantes personas de populabatur Haddon contra Cyprium fol. 25.

b Psal. 78. 32.

c Holinshed pag. 1170.



THE

THE Church-Hiſtory OF BRITAINE.

THE NINTH BOOK, Containing the Raign of QUEEN ELIZABETH.

QUEEN ELIZABETH

Continuing the Reign of

THE NINTH BOOK

OF BRITAIN.

OR

COMPLETE HISTORY

OF

THE

To the Honourable

GEORGE BERKLEY

Sole Son to the Right Honorable

GEORGE,

Baron of

BERKLEY.

have ever dissented from their opinion who maintain, that the world in was created a levell Champian, Mountains being only the product of Noahs flood, where the violence of the waters aggested the earth, goared out of the hollow valleys. For, we reade how in that deluge * the mountains were (not then as upstarts first caused, but as old standards, newly) covered.

* Gen. 7. 20.

As much do I differ from their false position, who affirme, that all being equall in the loynes of Adam, and wombe of Eve, honour was onely the effect of humane ambition, in ſuch, whoſe pride, or power, advanced themſelves above others. Whereas it was adequate to the creation, as originally fixed, in Eldership, or Primogeniture, and afterwards, by Divine providence (the ſole fountain thereof) confer'd on others: Either out of love, by nothing leſſe than his expreſs Commiſſion, for their good; or hatred, by ſomewhat more than his bare Permiſſion for their ruine.

The three Sons of David ſerve us for the threfold diviſion of honour.

* 2 Sam. 15. 4. 1. Abſolon, ſaid * O that I were made Judge in the land.

* 1 King. 1. 5. 2. Adoniah, exalted himſelf ſaying, * I will be King.

* 1 King. 1. 17. 3. Solomon ſaid nothing; But * David ſaid (and God confirmed his words) Aſſuredly he ſhall reign after me.

The firſt ſought by ſecret ambition to ſurpriſe his fathers ſubjects.

The ſecond went a more bold, and blunt way to work, by open uſurpation, but both finally miſcaried.

The Third reached not at all at Honor, but only happily held what was put into his hands.

But when outward Greatneſſe (as in the laſt inſtance) is attended with inward Grace, all Chriſtian beholders thereof, are indebted to a double tribute of reſpect to that perſon, whoſe Honour is martialled according to the * Apoſtolicall equipage. But Glory, Honour, And Peace. See how it ſtandeth like a Shield in the middle with

* Rom. 2. 12.

Glory,

Glory, and Peace, as supporters on each side. And this: that Honor, the zealous pursute whereof I humbly recomend unto you.

For will you be offended at this my counsel, as if it imorted a suspition of your present practise, who know well that St. Paul * saith, Edifie one another, Even As Ye Doe. It is no tautologie, to advise good people to do, what they do. Such precepts are prayses, such counsels comendations. And in this notion, do I tender my humble advice, to your consideration. * 1 Thes. 5. 11.

Remember the modesty of * David in asking; One thing have I desired of the Lord, Viz. to be constantly present at his publique service. And behold the bounty of * God in giving three, for one. And he died in a good old age, full of dayes, riches, and honor. Such measure may you assuredly expect from him; If before, and above all things seeking for that one thing which is needfull, the rather because God hath done great things for you already, for which you have cause to rejoyce. * Psal. 27. 4. * 1 Cor. 29. 28.

A great and good * man said to his fellow-servants. Seemeth it a small thing to you to be Son in-law to a King. A greater honour was done to your first Ancestor, who was Son To A King, namely to Hardinge King of Denmark, whence Fitz-Harding your most ancient sir-name. But labour Sir for a higher honor then both; Even to be led by Gods Spirit, and then you shall be even in the language of the Apostle himself, * Fitz-Dieu, A Son Of God. * 1 Sa. 18. 23. * Rom. 8. 14.

Now as your Eminent bounty unto me may justly challenge the choicest of my best endeavours; So the particular cular motive, inducing me to dedicate this Booke to your honor, is, becauſe it containeth the reign of Queen Elizbeth, to whom you are ſo nearly related. Whoſe * Grandmother proved her heir, by Anne Bollen her mother. Inwhich capacity ſome of that Queens (or rather the Lady Elizabeths) moveables, and Jewels (which were her Movers) deſcended unto her. You may therefore challenge an intereſt moſt properly in this part of my Hiſtory.

* The heir generall of George Caryt L. Hunſden whoſe Grandmother Mary was ſecond Sister to Anne Bollen.

And now what remaineth but my humble and harty prayers to the Divine Majeſty for his bleſſing on your ſelfe; and on your hopefull Iſſue, That God would plentifully powre all his ſauours of this, and a better life upon them.

Suſpect me not Sir, for omitting, becauſe not expreſſing your noble Conſort. We finde in the fourth commandement, Thou, and thy Son, and thy Daughter, &c. Where Divines render this reaſon, why the wife is not mentioned, becauſe the ſame perſon with the Husband. On which account, your ſecond ſelf is effectually included within the daily devotions of

Your bounden Orator

Thomas Fuller.

THE

Anno Regni Eliz. 1. Anno Dom. 1559

THE CHVRCH-HISTORY OF BRITAINE.

SECTION. I.

CENT. XVI.

1. FOr the first six weeks the Queen, and her wise councell, suffered matters to stand in their former state, without the least change, as yet not altering but consulting what should be altered. Thus our Saviour himself coming into the Temple, and finding it profaned with sacriledge, when he had looked round about upon all things, [a] departed for that evening, contenting himself with the survey of what was amisse and deferring the reformation thereof till the next morning but on the first [b] of January following being Sunday, (the best new-yeers-gift that ever was bestowed on England) by vertue of the Queens Proclamation, the Letanie was read in English, with Epistles, and Gospels, in all Churches of London, as it was formerly in her Graces own Chappel.

Her slow but sure pace of Reformation.

a Mar. 11. 11.

b Holinshed 1. year of Q. Elizabeth pag. 1172.

2 But some violent Spirits, impatient to attend the leisure (by them counted the lazinesse) of authority, fell before hand to the beating down of superstitious Pictures and images, and their forward zeal met with many to applaud it. For Idolatry is not to be permitted a moment; the first minuite is the fittest to abolish it. All that have power, have right to destroy it, by that Grand-charter of Religion, whereby every one is bound to advance Gods glory. And if Soveraigns forget, no reason but Subjects should remember their duty. But others condemned their indiscretion herein: for though they might reforme their private persons and families, and refraine to communicate in any outward act, contrary to Gods word, yet publique reformation belonged to the Magistrate, and a good deed was by them ill done for want of a calling to do it. However, the Papists have no cause to tax them with over-forwardnes in this kinde, the like being done by them, in the beginning of Queen Maries raigne; whilst the laws of King Edward the Sixth stood as yet in full force, when they prevented authority, as hath been [c] formerly observed thus, those who are hungry, and have meat afore them, will hardly be kept from eating, though Grace be not said, and leave given them by their superiours.

The forwardnes of private men in publique reformation variously censured.

c See 16. Cent. 2 part. 2 paragraph.

3 Now

The letter from the English church at Geneva to those at Frankford about accommodation in ceremonies comes too late.

3. Now the tidings of Queen Elizabeths peaceable coming to the crown, was no sooner brought beyond the Seas, but it fitted the English Exiles with unspeakable gladness, being instantly at home in their hearts, and not long after with their bodies. I knew one right well, whose father amongst them, being desperately diseased, was presently and perfectly cured, with the cordiall of this good news; and no wonder if this Queen recovered sick men, which revived religion it self. Now the English Church at Geneva, being the greatest opposer of ceremonies, sent their letter by William Ceth, to all other English Congregations in Germany, and especially to those of Frankford congratulating their present deliverance, condoling their former discords, counselling and requesting that all offences heretofore given or taken, might be forgiven and forgotten, and that for the future, they might no more fall out about superfluous ceremonies. [a] But this letter came too late, because the principall persons concerned in that controversie, with whom they sought a charitable reconciliation, were departed from Frankford, (I think towards England) before the messenger arrived, and so the motion missed to take effect. Some suppose had it come in season, it might have prevailed much, that both parties in gratitude to God would in a bonefire of their generall joy, have burnt this unhappy bone of dissention cast betwixt them. Others considering the distance of their principles, and difference of their spirits, conceive such an agreement neither could be wrought, nor would be kept betwixt them. For it is the property of cold to congregate together things of different kinds, and if the winter of want, pinching them all with poverty, could not freeze their affections together; less likely was it that the warmth of wealth, in their native Soile would conjoyne them in amity, but rather widen them further asunder, as indeed it came to passe. For as the rivers of Danubius and Savus in Hungarie, though running in the same channell, yet for many miles keep different streames visible in their party-coloured waters, which do rather touch, then unite; yea the fishes, peculiar to one stream, are not found in another: So these opposite parties, returning home, though concurring in doctrine, under the generall notion of Protestants, were so reserved in severall disciplines to themselves with their private favourites and followers, that they wanted that comfortable communion, which some hop'd, and all wished would be amongst them. Till at last they brake out into dolefull and dangerous opposition, whereat all Papists clap, and Protestants wring their hands, which our fathers found begun, our selves see highened, and know not whether our children shall behold them pacified and appeased.

[a] It was dated Decem. 15. but not received till about January the second; see troubles at Frankford pag. 162.

Anno Dom. 1558. Anno Regni 1.

Alteration of Religion enacted by the Parliament.

4. But now a Parliament began at Westminster, Wherein the Laws of King Henry the eighth against the See of Rome were renewed, and those of King Edward the sixth in favour of the Protestants revived, and the Laws by Queen Mary, made against them, repealed. Uniformity of Prayer, and Administration of Sacraments was enacted with a Restitution of first fruits, Tenths &c. to the Crown: For all which we remit the Reader to the Statutes at large. It was also enacted, that whatsoever Jurisdictions, Privileges, and Spiritualls, preeminences had been heretofore in Use by any Ecclesiasticall Authority whatsoever, to visit Ecclesiasticall men, and Correct all manner of Errors, Heresies, Schisms, Abuses, and Enormities should be for ever annexed to the Imperiall Crown of England; if the Queen and her Successors might by their Letters patents substitute certain men to exercise that Authority, herewith proviso, that they should define nothing to be heresie, but those things which were long before defined to be Heresies, out of the Sacred Canonicall Scriptures, or of the four Oecumenicall Councills, or other Councills, by the true and proper sence of the Holy Scriptures, or should thereafter be so defined, by authority of the Parliament, with assent of the Clergy of England assembled in a Synod. That all and every Ecclesiasticall Persons, Magistrates, Receivers of pensions out of the Exchequer, such as were to receive degrees in the Universities, Wards that were to sue their

Jan. 25.

Anno Regin Eliz. 1. Anno Dom. 1558

their Liveries, and to be inveſted in their Livings; and ſuch as were to be admitted into the number of the Queens ſervants &c. ſhould be tyed by oath to acknowledge the Queens Majeſty, to be the onely and ſupreme Governour of her Kingdoms, (the Title of Supreme head of the Church of England liked them not) in all matters and cauſes as well ſpiritual as temporal, all forrain Princes, and Proteſtants, being quite excluded from taking Cognizance of Cauſes within her Dominions.

5. But the Papiſts found themſelves much agrieved at this Eccleſiaſticall Power, declared and confirmed to be in the Queen: they complained, that the ſimplicity of poore people was abuſed, the Queen declining the Title Head, and aſſuming the name Governour of the Church, which though leſs offenſive was more expreſſive. So whil'ſt their ears were favoured in her waving the word, their ſouls were deceived with the ſame ſence under another Expreſſion. They cavilled how King [a] Henry the eighth was qualified for that Place and Power being a Lay-man; King Edward double debarr'd for the preſent, being a Lay-childe, Queen Elizabeth totally excluded for the future, being a Lay-woman. [b] They object alſo, that the very [c] writers of the Centuries, though Proteſtants, condemne ſuch Headſhip of the Church in PRINCES: and [d] Calvin more particularly ſharply taxeth Biſhop Gardiner, for allowing the ſame Priviledge to KING Henry the eighth.

Papiſts exceptions againſt the Queens Supremacy.

a Sanders de Schiſmate Anglicano lib. 3. pag. 316.
b Hart againſt Rainolds pag. 673.
c In Præfat. centur. 7.
d Upon the 7. of Amos 3. The ſame how defended by Proteſtant Divines.

6. Yet nothing was granted the Queen, or taken by her, but what in due belonged unto her, according as the moſt learned and moderate Divines have defended it. For [e] firſt they acknowledged, that Chriſt alone is the Supreme Soverain of the Church, performing the Duty of an head unto it, by giving it power of life, feeling, and moving: and [f] him hath God appointed to be head of the Church, and [g] by him all the body furniſhed, and knit together, by joynts and bands encreaſeth with the encreaſing of God. This Headſhip cannot ſtand on any mortall ſhoulders, it being as incommunicable to a Creature, as a Creature is incapable to receive it. There is alſo a peculiar Supremacy of Prieſts in Eccleſiaſticall matters, to preach the word, miniſter the Sacraments, celebrate Prayers, and practiſe the diſcipline of the Church, which no Prince can invade without uſurpation and the ſin of Sacriledge; for Incenſe it ſelf did ſtink in the Noſtrils of the God of heaven, and [h] provoked his Anger, when offered by King Uzziah, who had no calling thereunto. Beſides theſe, there is that power, which Hezekiah exerciſed in his Dominions, Commanding the Levites and Prieſts to do their Duty, and the People to ſerve the Lord. And to this power of the Prince it belongeth to reſtore Religion decayed, reforme the Church Corrupted, protect the ſame reformed. This was that ſupremacy in Cauſes and over Perſons as well Eccleſiaſticall as Civil, which was derived from God to the Queen, annexed to the Crown, diſuſed in the dayes of her Siſter (whoſe blinde zeal ſurrendred it to the Pope) not now firſt fixed in the Crown, by this act of State, but by the ſame declared to the Ignorant that knew it not, cleared to the ſcrupulous that doubted of it, and aſſerted from the Obſtinate that denied it.

e Ephef. 1. 22.
f Col. 2. 19.

h 2 Chr. 26. 19

7. As for Calvin, he reproveth not (Reader, it is Dr. Rainolds whom thou readeſt) the title of head, as the Proteſtants granted it, but that ſenſe thereof, which Popiſh Prelates gave, namely Stephen Gardiner, who did urge it ſo, as if they had meant thereby, that the King might do things in Religion, according to his own will, and not ſee them done according to Gods will, namely, that he might forbid the Clergie Marriage, the laytie the Cup in the Lords Supper. And the truth is that Stephen Gardiner was ſhamelеſſly hyperbolicall in fixing that in the King, which formerly with as little Right the Pope had aſſumed. Whether he did it out of mere flattery, as full of adulation as ſuperſtition, equally free in ſprinkling Court and Church holy-water, and as very a fawning Spaniel under King Henry the eighth, as afterwards he proved a cruel Blood-hound under Queen Mary his Daughter. Or becauſe this Biſhop being in his heart diſaffect-

How Dr. Rainolds anſwereth the exceptions to the contrary. i againſt Hart pag. 673.

ed to the Truth, of set purpose betrayed it in defending it, suting King Henries vast Body and Minde, with as mighty, yea monstrous a power, in those his odious instances, straining the Kings Authority too high, on set purpose to break and to render it openly obnoxious to just exception: The Centuriators also well understood, do allow and [a] Confess the Magistrates Jurisdiction in Ecclesiasticall matters, though on good reason they be enemies to this Usurpation of unlawfull power therein. But I digresse, and therein Transgresse, seeing the large prosecution hereof belongs to Divines.

Anno Dom. 1559. Anno Regni Eliz. 1.

a Idem ibidem.

9. But Sanders taketh a particular exception against the Regular passing of this Act, Elizabeth shewing much Queen-Craft, in procuring the votes of the Nobility, feeding the [b] Earle of Arundell with fond hopes, that she would marry him, and promising the Duke of Norfolke, a dispensation from his wife, which he could not with such expedition obtain from the Pope; and yet (saith he) when all was done, it was carried in the house of Lords but by [c] three voices. Here not to mention how in the greatest Councells matters of most high concernment, have been determined with as few as three clear decisive suffrages, this suggestion of Sanders is a loud untruth; for the Act having easily pass'd the house of Commons, found none of the Temporall Nobility in the house of Lords to oppose it, save only the [d] Earle of Shrewsbury, And Anthony Brown Viscount Mountacute, who had formerly been employed to reconcile the Kingdom of England to his Holiness. As for the Bishops, there were but fourteen, and the Abbot of Westminster, then alive: of whom foure being absent (whether Voluntarily, or out of Sickness, uncertain) the rest could not make any considerable opposition: If any other Artifice was used in cunning contriving the businesse, the Protestants were not aforehand, but just even with the Papists, who had used the same subtilty in their own Cause in the first Parliament of Queen Mary.

Sanders confuted of falsehood.

b de schismate Anglicano pag. 329.

c Idem pag. 303.

d Camdens Elizabeth in this year pag. 19.

10. But now to remove into the Convocation, which at this time was very small and silent: For as it is observed in Nature, when one Twinn is of an unusual Strength and bigness, the other his partner borne with him is weak and dwingled away. So here this Parliament being very active in matters of Religion, the Convocation (younger Brother thereunto) was little imployed and less Regarded. Only after a Mass of the Holy Ghost had been celebrated, Edmond Bonner Bishop of London (in the vacancie of the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, President of the Convocation) began with a speech to this effect. That although it had been an ancient and laudable custome to begin such meetings of the Clergie with a Latine Sermon, yet such now was not to be expected; partly, because the Arch-Bishop was Dead, who was to designe the Preacher, and partly, because they had received a [e] mandate from the privy Councel, that no such Sermons should be made in that Church, till they were further informed by the Queen and her Councel. In the third Session on friday Nicholas Harpsfield Doctor of Law, and Arch-Deacon of Canterbury was chosen, [f] Referendary or Prolocutor for the Clergie, a place of some Credit, but little pains to discharge, seeing the only remarkable thing which passed in this Convocation, was certain Articles of Religion, which they tendered to the * Parliament, which here we both Transcribe and Translate. requesting the Reader not to begrutch his pains to peruse them: Considering they are the last in this kinde, that ever were represented in England, by a Legall Corporation in defence of the Popish Religion. And though errour doth go out with a Stink, yet it is a perfume that it does go out: We are so far from denying a grave to bury them, that we will erect the * Monument over this ashes of these dead errours.

The acts of this years Convocation.

e Liber Synod. Anno Dom. 1559. folio 15.

f Ib. fol. 6. g fol. 8.

Feb. 18.

* To the Bps. that they might present them to the Parli. &c.

* Copied by me out of the Original.

REVERENDI

Anno Regin. Eliz. 1.

Anno Dom. 1558

REVERENDI in Chriſto Patres ac Domini colendiſſimi. Quoniam fama publica referente ad noſtram nuper notitiam pervenit, multa Religionis Chriſtianæ Dogmata publico & unanimi gentium Chriſtianarum conſenſu hactenus recepta & probata, ac ab Apoſtolis ad nos uſque concorditer per manus deducta, præſertim Articulos infraſcriptos in dubium vocari. Hinc eſt quod nos Cantuarienſis Provinciæ inferior ſecundarius Clerus in uno, (Deo ſic diſponente ac Sereniſſimæ Dominæ noſtræ Reginæ, Decani & Capituli Cant. mandato, Brevi Parliamenti, ac monitione Eccleſiaſtica ſolita declarata id exigente) convenientes, partium noſtrarum eſſe exiſtimavimus, tum noſtræ, tum eorum, quorum cura nobis Committitur, æternæ ſaluti omnibus quibus poterimus modis proſpicere. Quocirca majorum noſtrorum exemplis Commoti, qui in ſimilia ſæpe tempora inciderunt, fidem quam in Articulis infra Scriptis, veram eſſe credimus, & ex animo profitemur ad dei Laudem, & honorem officiique & aliarum noſtræ curæ commiſſarum exoneracionem præſentibus duximus publicè auferendam affirmantes, & ſicut Deus nos in die Judicij Adjuvet aſſerentes.

Primò, quod in Sacramento Altaris virtute Chriſti verbo ſuo à Sacerdote debitè prolato aſſiſtentis, præſens eſt realiter ſub ſpeciebus panis & vini naturale Corpus Chriſti Conceptum de Virgine Mariæ, Item naturalis ejus Sanguis.

Item, quod poſt Conſecrationem, non remanet ſubſtantia panis & vini, neq; alia ulla ſubſtantia, niſi ſubſtantia Dei & hominis.

Item, quod in miſſa offertur verum Chriſti Corpus, & verus ejuſdem ſanguis, ſacrificium propitiatorium pro vivis & defunctis.

Item, quod Petro Apoſtolo & ejus legitimis ſucceſſoribus in ſede Apoſtolica, tanquam Chriſti Vicariis data eſt ſuprema poteſtas paſcendi, & regendi eccleſiam Chriſti militantem et fratres ſuos confirmandi.

REVEREND Fathers in Chriſt, and our honourable Lords. Whereas by the report of publique fame it hath come unto our knowledge that many Doctrines of the Chriſtian Religion hitherto received and approved by the unanimous conſent of Chriſtian nations, and with joynt agreement, as by hands deduced from the Apoſtles unto us, (eſpecially the Articles under-written) are now called into queſtion. Hence it is, that we the inferior and ſecondary Clergy of the Province of Canterbury aſſembled in one body, (God ſo diſpoſing it, and the Command of our Lady the Queens moſt excellent Majeſty, together with the mandate of the Dean and chapter of Canterbury, the Parliament-Writ, and all due and wonted Eccleſiaſticall monition declared ſo requiring it) conceived it to belong unto us to provide for the eternall Salvation both of our ſelves, and ſuch as are committed to our charge, by all means poſſible for us to obtain. Wherefore ſtirred up by the examples of our Predeceſſours, who have lived in the like times, that faith which in the Articles under-written we believe to be true, and from our ſouls profeſs to the praiſe and honour of God, and the diſcharge of our duty, and ſuch ſouls as are commited unto us, we thought in theſe preſents publiquely to inſert, affirming and avowing as God ſhall helpe us in the laſt day of judgement.

Firſt, that in the Sacrament of the Altar by the vertue of Chriſts aſſiſting, after the word is duly pronounced by the Prieſt, the naturall Body of Chriſt conceived of the Virgin Mary is really preſent, under the ſpecies of bread and wine, alſo his naturall bloud.

Item, that after the Conſecration, there remains not the ſubſtance of Bread and Wine, nor any other ſubſtance, ſave the ſubſtance of God and man.

Item, that the true body of Chriſt, and his true bloud is offered a propitiatory ſacrifice for the Quick and Dead.

Item that the ſupreme power of feeding and governing the militant Church of Chriſt, and of confirming their Brethren is given to Peter the Apoſtle, and to his lawfull Succeſſours in the See Apoſtolike, as unto the Vicars of Chriſt.

Item quod Authoritas tractandi & diffiniendi de ijs quæ spectant ad fidem, Sacramentum & disciplinam ecclesiasticam hactenus semper spectavit & spectare debet tantum ad Pastores Ecclesiæ, quos spiritus Sanctus in hoc in ecclesiam Dei posuit & non ad Laicos.

Item that the Authority to handle and define such things which belong to faith, the Sacraments, and Discipline Ecclesiasticall, hath hitherto ever belonged, and only ought to belong unto the Pastors of the Church, whom the holy spirit hath placed in the Church of God, and not unto lay-men.

Anno Dom. 1557. Anno Regni Reginæ I.

Quam nostram assertionem, affirmationem & fidem, Nos inferior Clerus prædictus considerationes prædictas Vestris Paternitatibus tenore presentium exhibemus, humiliter supplicantes, ut quia nobis non est copia hanc nostram sententiam & intentionem aliter illis quos in hac parte interest notificandi, Vos, qui Patres estis, ista superioribus Ordinibus significare velitis: Qua in re Officium charitatis ac Pietatis (ut arbitramur) præstabitis, & saluti gregis vestri (ut par est) prospicietis, & vestras ipsi animas liberabitis.

Which our Assertion, Affirmation and faith, We the lower Clergy aforesaid so represent the aforesaid considerations unto your Fatherhoods by the Tenor of these Presents, humbly requesting, that because we have not liberty otherwise to notifie this our Judgement, and intention to those, which in this behalf are concerned, you who are Fathers would be pleased to signifie the same to the Lords in Parliament, wherein, as we conceive you shall performe an office of Charity and Piety, and you shall provide (as it is meet) for the safety of the flock committed to your charge, and shall discharge your duty towards your own soul.

This remonstrance exhibited by the lower house of Convocation to the Bishops, was according to their Requests presented by Edmond Bonner, Bp. of London, to the Lord Keeper of the broad Seal of England in the Parliament, and (as the said Bishop, in the eighth Session reported) he generously and gratefully received it. But we finde no further news thereof, save that in the 10. Session, an account was given in, by both Universities in an Instrument under the hand of a Publique Notary, wherein they both did concur to the Truth of the aforesaid Articles, the last only excepted. Mar. 9. 10.

The Disputations betwixt the Papists and Protestants at Westminster.

10. But we may probably conceive that this Declaration of the Popish Clergy hastened the Disputation appointed on the last of March in the Church of Westminster, wherein these questions were debated.

1. Whether Service and Sacraments ought to be celebrated in the vulgar tongue?
2. Whether the Church hath not power to alter Ceremonies, so all be done to edification?
3. Whether the Mass be a propitiatory sacrifice for the Living and the Dead?

Popish Disputants.		Moderators.	Protestant Disputants.
*White,	Bps. of Winchester.	Nicholas Heath.	John Scory late Bp.
Watson.	Lincolne.	Bp. of York.	of Chichester.
Baynes.	Covent and	St. Nicholas	David Whitehead.
Scot.	Lichfield.	Bacon Lord	Robert Horne.
	Chester.	Keeper of the	Edmond Gwest.
Dr. Cole Deane of Pauls.		great Seal.	Edwine Sands.
Dr. Langdale.	Arch-Deac- of Lewes.		John Aelmer.
Dr. Harpsfield.	Canterbury.		Edmond Grindall.
Dr. Cheadsey.	Middlesex.		John Jewell.

* There is some difference in the Number and Names of Both Parties Mr. Fox neither agreeth with Mr. Camden, nor with himself.

The

Anno Regis Eliz. 4. Anno Dom. 1559.

The paſſages of this Diſputation (whereof more Noiſe then fruit, and wherein more Paſſion then Reaſon, Cavils then Arguments) are largely reported by Mr. Fox. It was ordered that each ſide ſhould tender their Judgements in writing to avoid verball extravagancies, as alſo in Engliſh for the better information of the Nobility and Gentry of the houſe of Parliament, their Auditors, and that the Papiſts ſhould begin firſt, and the Proteſtants anſwer them. But in the ſecond dayes diſputation, this order was broken by the Popiſh Biſhops, who quitting their Primacy to the Proteſtants, ſtood peremptorily upon it, that they themſelves would deliver their Judgements laſt. Alledging in their behalf the faſhion of the Schools, that becauſe they had the negative on their ſide, the others ought firſt to oppoſe; Citing alſo the Cuſtome of the Courts at Weſtminſter, where the plaintiffe pleadeth before the defendant, conceiving themſelves in the nature and notion of the Later, becauſe maintaining thoſe opinions, whoſe Truth, time out of minde were eſtabliſhed. Cheſter, more open then the Reſt, plainly confeſſed, that if the proteſtants had the laſt word, they would come off, cum Applauſu Populi, with applauſe of the People, which themſelves, it ſeems, moſt deſired; Whereby it appears what Wind they wiſhed for, not what was fitteſt to fanne the truth, but what would blow them moſt reputation. In this Refuſal to begin, Wincheſter and Lincolne behaved themſelves ſaucily, and ſcornfully, the reſt ſtiffly and reſolutely; only Feckenham Abbot of Weſtminſter, (who it ſeems the ſecond day was added to the Popiſh Diſputants) carried it with more meekneſſe and moderation. Hereupon the Lord Keeper cut off this conference, with this ſharp Concluſion. Seeing my Lords we cannot now hear you, you may perchance ſhortly hear more of us.

The Papiſts complain of partial uſage.

11. Yet need we not behold the fruſtration of this meeting, as a private Doome, peculiarly to this conference alone, but as the generall Deſtiny of ſuch publike Colloquies, which like Sicamore-trees prove barren, and which the larger the Leaves of the Expectation, the leſs the fruits of Succeſſe. The Aſſembly diſſolved, it were hard to ſay, which were lowder, the Papiſts in Complaining, or the Proteſtants in Triumphing. The former found themſelves agrieved that they were ſurpriſed of a ſudden, having but two dayes warning to provide themſelves. That Bacon the Moderator (though well ſkill'd in matters of Equity, ignorant in matters of Divinity) was their Zealous Enemy, to whom the Arch-Biſhop was added only for a ſtale. That to call ſuch fundamentall points of Doctrine into queſtion, would cauſe an unſetledneſſe in Religion of dangerous conſequence, both to ſingle ſouls, and to the Church in generall. That it was unlawfull for them, owing obedience to the Sea Apoſtolike, without leave of his Holineſſe firſt obtained to diſcuſſe theſe truthes long ſince decided in the Church.

The Proteſtants triumph on the other ſide.

13. The Proteſtants on the other ſide ſlighted the Papiſts Plea of want of warning, ſeeing (beſides that both ſides were warned at the ſame time) that Party ſent a challenge, and gave the firſt defiance in their late Declaration; and now it was Senſeleſſe in them to complain that they were ſet upon unawares. That if the truths were ſo clear as they pretended, and their learning ſo great as was reputed, little Study in this Caſe was required. That Bacon was appointed Moderator, not to decide the matters Controverted, but to regulate the manner of their Diſputation, whereunto his known Gravity and Diſcretion, without deep learning did ſufficiently enable him. That it was an old Policy of the Papiſts to account every thing fundamentall in Religion, which they were loth ſhould be removed, and that the receiving of erroneous principles into the Church, without examination, had been the mother of much ignorance, and ſecurity therein. For the preventing of the farther growth whereof, no fitter means then an unpartiall reducing ing of all Doctrines to the triall of the Scriptures. that their declining the Disputation, manifested the badnesse of their Cause, seeing no pay-master will refuse the touch or scales, but such as suspect their Gold to be base or light. That formerly Papists had disputed those points when power was on their side, so that they loved to have Syllogisms in their mouths, when they had swords in their hands.

Anno Dom. 1557. Anno Regni Eliz. 1.

Nine Bishops now dead.

14. It remaineth now, that we acquaint the reader, how the popish Bps. were disposed of, who now fell under a 4. fold division.

1 Dead, 3 Deprived,
2 Fled, 4 Continued.

There were nine of the first sort, who were of the Death-guard of Q. Mary, as expiring either a little before her decease. viz.

John	Capon.	Bp. of	Sarisbury.	These were Q. Mary her Ushers to her grave.
Robert	Parfew.		Hereford.
Maurice	Griffin.		Rochester.
William	Glyn.		Bangor.

Or a little after her departure, as Reignald	Pole.	Bp. of	Canterbury	These were Q. Maries trainbearers to the same.

John	Hopton.		Norwich.
John	Brookes.		Gloucester.
John	Holyman.		Bristol.
Henry	Morgan.		S. Davids.

Three fled beyond the Seas.

15. Three only made their flight beyond the seas, namely 1. Thomas Goldwell of S^t. Asaph, who ran to Rome, and there procured of the Pope, the renewing of the indulgences, (for a set time) to such as superstitiously repaired to the well of S^t. Winnifride. 2. Cuthert Scot of Chester, who afterwards lived and died at Lovain. 3. Richard Pates of Worcester, whose escape was the rather connived at, because being a moderate Man, he refused to persecute any Protestant for his difference in religion.

A note of Worcester.

16. Be it here remembred, that the See of Worcester had nine Bishops successively.

whereof { The four first, (being all Italians) none of them lived there.
The five last, [Latimer, Bel, Heath, Hooper, Pates,] none of them died there as either resigning, removed or deprived, and all five were alive together in the raigne of Q. Mary.

As for Pates, we finde him thus subscribing the councell of Trent, Richardus Patus Episcopus Wigornienſis, under-writing only in his private and personall capacity, having otherwise no deputation as in any publick imployment.

The rest restrained.

17. The third sort succeeds, of such who on the refusall of the oath of supremacy, were all deprived, though not restrained alike. Bonner was imprisoned in the Marshalsea, a Jaile beeing conceived the safest place to secure him from peoples fury, every hand itching to give a good squeeze to that Sponge of Blood. White, and Watson, Bishops of Winchester and Lincoln, died in durance, their liberty being inconsistent with the Queens safety whom they threatned to excomunicate.

A Prison to be envied.

18. As for Bishop Tonstal, and Thyrlby, they were committed to Arch-Bishop Parker. Here they had sweet chambers, soft beds, warme fires, plentifull and wholsome diet, (each Bishop faring like an Arch-Bishop, as fed at Anno Regni Eliz. 1.

Anno Dom. 1558.

at his table) differing nothing from their former living, save that, that was on their own charges, and this on the cost of another. Indeed they had not their wonted attendance of superfluous Servants, nor needed it, seeing a long train doth not warme but weary the wearer thereof. They lived in free custody, and all things considered, custody did not so soure their freedome, as freedome did sweeten their custody.

19. The rest (though confin'd for a while) soon found the favour to live Prisoners on their Parole, having no other Jaylour than their own promise. Thus Poole of Peterburgh, Turbervile of Exeter &c. lived in their own, or their friends houses. The like liberty was allowed tho Heath Arch-Bishop of Yorke, who (like another Abiathar * sent home by Solomon to his own fields in Anathoth) lived cheerfully at Chobham in Surry, where the Queen often courteously visited him.

Some living in their own Houses.

* 1 King. 2. 26.

20. Popish writers would perswade people, that these Bishops were cruelly used in their prisons, should their hyperbolicall expressions be received as the just measure of truth. Carceribus variisq; e custodiis commissi, longo miseriarum tædio extincti sunt, saith Sanders, Confessor obiit in vinculis saith Pitzeus of White. A great cry and a little pain. Many of our poor Protestants in the Marian daves said lesse, and suffered more. They were not sent into a complementall custody, but some of them thrust into the prison, of a Lion, where the Sun shined as much to them at mid-night, as at noon-day. Whereas Abbot Feckenham of Westminster (who as a Parliamentary Baron, may goe in equipage with the other Bishops) may be an instance how well the Papists were used after their deprivation. For He grew Popular * for his alms to the poor, which speaks the Queens bounty to Him, in enabling him (a prisoner) to be boun itull to others.

Cruelty causelessly complain'd of. De Schism. Ang. pag. 335.

Camdens Eliz. in hoc Anno.

21. Onely one Bishop conformed himself to the Queens commands, and was continued in his place, viz. Anthony Kitchin, alias Dunstan of Landaffe. Camden calls him, Sedis suæ calamitatem. The bane of his Bishoprick, wasting the lands thereof by letting long leases, as if it were given to Binominous Bishops (such as had two Names) to be the empairers of their Churches, as may appear by these 4. contemporaries in the raigne of K. Henry the 8.

One Bishop continued.

John	Capon		Salcot		Sarisbury.
John	Voisey	alias	Harman	spoiled	Exeter.
Robert	Parsew		Warton		St. Asiph.
Anthony	Kitchin		Dunstan		Landaffe.

I know what is pleaded for them, that Physicians in desperate consumptions, prescribe the shaving of the Head, (which will grow again) to save the life, and that these Bishops, fearing the finall alienation of their lands passed long leases for the prevention thereof, though whether Policy or Covetousnesse most shared in them herein, we will not determine. Only I finde a mediate successour * of Kitchins (and therefore concerned to be knowing therein) much excusing him from this common defamation of wronging his See, because many forged leases are countenanced under the pretence of this passing the same.

* Godwin in the Bps. of Landaffe

22. As for the numbers of Recusants which forsook the land at this time, the prime of them were, Henry Lord Morley, Sr. Francis Inglefield, Thomas Shelly, and John Gage Esqrs; As for the Nuns of Sion, and other Votaries wafted over, we have formerly treated of them in our History of Abbies. Nor were there moe then eighty Rectours of Churches, fifty Prebendaries, fifteen Masters of Colledges, twelve Arch-Deacons, twelve Deans, with six Abbots, and Abbesses deprived at this time of their places thoroughout all England.

A list of persons deprived

23. Now

Matthew Parker designed Arch-Bishop, his due commendation.

23. Now the Queen and Her Councell, accounted it high time to supply the Church of Canterbury (which hitherto had stood * Vacant a yeer, and three weeks) with an Arch-Bishop. Dr. Matthew Parker is appointed for the place; borne in Norwich, bred in Cambridge, Master of, Benefactour to Bennet-Colledge there, Chaplain to Queen Anne Bollen (a relation, which, next his own merits befriended him with Queen Elizabeth, for such high, and suddain advancement) then to King Henry the eighth, Deane of the Colledge of Stoke juxta Clare, a learned, and religious Divine. He confuted that character which one gives of Antiquaries, that generally they are either superstitious, or supercilious, his skill in antiquity being attended with soundnesse of doctrine, and humility of manners. His Book called Antiquitates Britanicæ hath indebted all posterity to his pen. Which work our great [a] Critick cites as written by Mr. Joscelin, one much employed in the making thereof. But we will not set the memories of the Patrone, and Chaplaine, at variance (who loved so well in their lives time) nor needeth any Writ of partition to be sued out betwixt them, about the authorship of this book, though probably one brought the matter, the other composure thereof.

Anno Dom. 1559. Anno Regin. Eliz. 1.

* Counted from Poole's death to Parkers consecration.

[a] Mr Selden of Tithes cap. 9. pag. 256.

The Queen Her letter for his consecration.

24. The Queen had formerly sent order to Dr. Wotton, Dean of Canterbury (an exquisite Civilian, and therefore one who may be presumed critical in such performances) and to the Chapter there, to choose Matthew Parker their Arch-Bishop, which within fourteen dayes after was by them accordingly performed. This done, She directeth Her Letters-Patents in manner, and forme following,

July 18. Aug. 1.

[b] Registrum Parkeri. Tom. 1 fol. 3.

Elizabetha [b] Dei Gratia, &c. Reverendis in Christo Patribus, Antonio Landavensi Episcopo, Will. Barlow quondam Bath. & Well. Ep. nunc Ciceſtrensi electo, Joh. Scory quondam Ciceſtrensi Episcopo, nunc electo Heresor. Miloni Coverdalio, quondam Exoniensi Episcopo, Johanni Suffraganeo Bedford, Johanni Suffraganeo Thetford, Johanni Bale Osserensi Episcopo.

Quatenus vos, aut ad minus quatuor vestrûm, eundem Matthæum Parkerum in Archiepiscopum, & Pastorem Ecclesiæ Cathedralis, & Metropoliticæ Christi Cantuariensis prædictæ, sicut præfertur, electum, electionemque prædictum confirmare, & eundem Magistrum Matthæum Parkerum in Archiepiscopum, & Pastorem Ecclesiæ prædictæ consecrare, cæteraque omnia, & singula peragere, quæ vestro in hac parte editorum, & provisorum, velitis cum effectu &c. Dat. sexto Decembris, Anno secundo Elizabethæ.

But the old Bishop of Landaffe appeared not at the Consecration, terrified (say the Papists) by Bonners threats, so as to absent himself, which others do not believe. For, he that feared not the Lion out of the grate, would he be frighted with the Lion within the grate? If Bonner, when at liberty, could not deterr him from taking the oath of Supremacy, improbable it is, that when now detain'd prisoner in the Tower, he could dissuade him from his obedience to his Soveraigne. More likely it is, that his absence (as also Bishop Bale's, and the Suffragans of Thetford) was occasioned by their indisposition of body, and infirmity of old age.

Dec. 6.

The manner thereof.

[c] Regist. Parker. Tom 1. fol 9. [d] Ibid. fol. 10. [e] 1 Pet. 5. 1.

25. But the other four Bishops appeared, William Barlow, John Scory, Miles Coverdal, and John Hodgskins, by whom Matthew Parker was solemnly consecrated in manner, and forme following. The East part of the Chappel of [c] Lambeth was hung with tapestry, the floore spred with red cloth, chairs and cushions are conveniently placed for the purpose; morning prayer being solemnly read by Andrew Peerson, the Arch-Bishops Chaplaine, Bishop Scory went up into the [d] pulpit, and took for his text, The [e] Elders which are are among you I exhort, who also am an Elder; and a witnesse of the sufferings of Christ, &c. Sermon ended, and the Sacrament administred, they proceed to the Consecration: the Arch-Bishop had his Rochet on, with Hereford, and the Suffragan of Bedford, Chichester wore a silke cope, and Coverdale a plain cloth-gown down to his ancles. All things are done conformable to the book of Ordination, Letanie sung, the Queens Patent for Parkers consecration audibly read by Dr. Yale, he is presented, the oath of Supremacy tendred to him, taken by him, hands reverendly imposed on him, and all with prayers begun, continued, concluded. In a word, though here was no Theatrical pompe to make it a Popish pageant; though no sandals, gloves, ring, staffe, oyle, pall &c. were used upon him, yet there was ceremony enough to cloth his consecration with decency, though not to clog it with superstition.

Anno Regni Eliz. 2

Anno Dom. 1559

Dece. 17.

26. This his consecration is avowed most legal, both according to Canon, and Common Law. In the latter it was ordered by King Henry [a] the eighth, that an Arch-Bishop should not be consecrated, but by an Arch-bishop, and two Bishops; or by four Bishops, in case an Arch-Bishop was wanting, as here it was performed. Object not that one of these foure was but a Suffragan, seeing such by the [b] laws of the land (though not able to vote as Barons in Parliament) had Episcopal power to all purposes, and intents. Neither cavill, that Coverdale henceforward led a private life, being always a Bishop quoad characterem, and for the present quoad jus & titulum (Exeter, his former Bishoprick being actually void by the deprivation of Turberville) though refusing to be so quoad possessionem. As for the canonical part of his consecration, six of the most eminent Doctours of that faculty England then afforded, gave it under their hands, that the same was exactly observed.

The legality of his consecration.

[a] Anno Regin. 25.

[b] 26. of Henry 8. cap. 14.

27. Yet notwithstanding all circumstances so solemnly performed, some impudent Papists have raised a lie, that Matthew Parker was consecrated Ad caput manni, At the Nagg-head, a tavern in Cheapside. Indeed they shew a place therein, just against the barr, so anciently arched, that an active phansie (which can make any thing of any thing) may create to it self a top, or tester of a pulpit thereof, though the like thereunto may be seen elsewhere in the city. But that this lie of the naggs-head was bred in a knaves brains, doth plainly appear. For, why should a rich man be a thief: seeing all Churches in England were equally open unto them to pick, and choose at pleasure, why should they steal a clandestine consecration in a place so justly obnoxious to censure? Were not the Canaanites, and Perizzites then in the land? Were not many prying Papists then mingled amongst Protestants? which consideration alone would command them to be cautious in their proceedings. Besides, that mock-pulpit shewen at this day at the entrance of that tavern, was inconsistent with the secrecie (which is said to be their designe) who would rather have made choice of an inner, and more remote roome for that purpose. But, when once one Jesuite had got this shameless lie of the Naggs-head (I can not say by the taile, but) by the ears, instantly Champney, Fitz-Simon Person, Killian, Constable, and all the whole kennell of them, baule it out in their books to all posterity.

The impudent lie of the Naggs-head.

28. All the authority the Papists produce for their Naggs-head Consecration, is ultimately resolved into the single testimony of one Thomas Neale, Chaplaine to Bishop Bonner, and sometimes Hebrew-Professour in Oxford. But, was this Neale known, or unknown to the Bishops, pretended in this taverne-assembly? If known, as most probable he was (Bonners Chaplains bearing their Masters marke, the indeleble character of cruelty stamped upon them, as the Wolfe is too well known to the sheep) it is utterly unlikely they would permit a person, vowing open opposition to their proceedings, to be present thereat. If Neale were unknown, the English Bishops (whom the Papists, though they call Hereticks, do not count fools) would not admit a stranger to their privacies of such importance, seeing commonly in such cases, mens jealousies interpret every unknown face to be a foe unto them.

Neale's testimony (the sole witnesse thereof) confuted.

Anno Dom. 1559. Anno Regin. Eliz. 2

A silent witness pretended in vain.

29. To the testimony of Neale, [a] one endeavours to twist the witness of John Stow, to prove this Nags-head-consecration. A silent wittness, who says nothing herein, if either we consult his Chronicle of our Kings or his Survey of London, he neither speaks words, nor makes any signes thereof. But (saith the Jesuite) Stow, though prudently omitting to print it, told the same to some of his private friends. I pray, to whom? where? and when? and what credible witnesses do attest it? Be it referr'd to the ingenuity of our very adversaries, whether their bare surmises without any proof, be to be believed before the publique Records, faithfully taken when the thing was done, carefully preserved ever since, intirely extant at this day, and truly transcribed here by us. Besides, Charles Howard, Earle of Nottingham (not more famous for the Coronet of a Count, than the crown of old age) alive in the later end of the Reigne of King James, being requested of a friend, whether he could remember Matthew Parkers consecration, gave an exact account of the same solemnly performed in Lambeth Chappel, being himself an eyewitness thereof, and an invited guest to the great feast kept there that day, therefore the more observant of all particular passages thereat, because the said Arch-Bishop was related to him as a kinsman. Let such as desire further satisfaction herein, consult learned [b] Mason (whom King James justly termed a wise builder in Gods house) who hath left no stones unturn'd to clear the truth, and stop the mouth of malicious adversaries. Let the Papists therefore not be so busie to cast durt on our Bishops, but first fall on washing the face of their own Pope, even John the twelv'th, whom an excellent [c] authour reporteth to have ordained a Deacon in a stable, for which two Cardinals reproved him. And let these three stories be told together, that the Empress Helen was the daughter of an Hostler; that Arch-Bishop Cranmer himself was an Hostler; and, that our first Bps. in Queen Elizabeths dayes were consecrated in the Naggs-head. I say let these three be told together, because wise, and good men will believe them together, as all comming forth of the forge of falsehood, and malice.

a Champneius pag. 501.

b De Minist. Anglic. lib. 3. cap. 8. 9. &c.

c Luitprandus lib. 6. *cap.*7.

Sees supplied with Protestant Bishops.

30. Now though we are not to gratifie our Adversaries with any Advantages against us, yet so confident is our innocence herein, that It may acquaint the world with that small foundation on which this whole report was bottom'd: Every Arch-Bishop, or Bishop presents himself in Bow-Church, accompanied thither with Civilians, where any shall be heard, who can make any legall exceptions, against his Election. A Dinner * was provided for them at the Naggs-head in Cheapside, as convenient for the Vicinity thereof, and from this Sparke hath all this Fire been kindled; to admonish posterity not only to do no evil but also in this Captious Age, to refrain from all appearance thereof.

* This the Lord Chancellour Egerton affirmed to Bishop Williams.

31. Parker, thus solemnly consecrated, proceeded, with the assistance of the aforesaid Bishops, to the consecration of other grave Divines; and not (as Sanders lewdly lies) that these new elected Bishops, out of good fellowship, mutually consecrated one another; some whereof were put into Bishopricks void.

By the { Natural death, as Sarisbury, Rochester, Glocester, Bristol, Bangor, or, Voluntary desertion, as Worcester, and St. Asaph, or, Legal deprivation of the former Bishops, as all other Sees in England.

Suffice

Anno Regin. Eliz. 1. Anno Dom. 1558

Suffice it at this time to present a perfect Catalogue of their names, Sees, with the dates of their consecrations, referring their commendable characters, to be set down, when we come to their respective deaths.

Province of Canterbury.

1. Edward	Grindal	consecrated,	London,	Decem. 21. 1559.
2. Richard	Cox.		Elie,	Decem. 21. 1559.
3. Edwin	Sandys		Worcester,	Decem. 21. 1559.
4. Rowland	Merick		Bangor,	Decem 21. 1559.
5. Nicolas	Bullingham		Lincolne,	Janu. 21. 1559.
6. John	Jewell		Sarisbury,	Janu. 21. 1556
7. Thomas	Young		S. Davids,	Janu. 21. 1559.
8. Richard	Davies		S. Asaph,	Janu. 2 . 1559.
9. Thomas	Bentham		Coven. & Lichfield,	Mar. 24. 1559.
10. Gilbert	Barclay		Bath, and Wells,	Mar. 24. 1559.
11. Edmond	Gwest		Rochester,	Mar. 24. 1559.
12. William	Alley		Exeter,	July. 14. 1560.
13. John	Parkhurst		Norwich,	Sept. 1. 1560.
14. Robert	Horne		Winchester,	Feb. 16. 1560.
15. Edmond	Scambler		Peterburgh,	Feb. 16. 1560.
16. Richard	Cheiney		Gloceſter,	Apr. 19. 1562.

Province of Yorke.

1. Thomas	Young, translated from S^r. Davids to Yorke		Feb. 20.	1560.
2. James	Pilkington, consecrated,	Durham,	Mar. 2.	1560.
3. John	Best	Carlile,	Mar. 2.	1561.
4. George	Downham	Cheſter,	May, 4.	1561.

The other Bishopricks were thus disposed of, Richard Cheiney held Bristol in Commendam with Gloceſter; Barlow, and Scory, Bishops in King Edward's dayes, were translated, the one to Chicester, the other to Hereford. As for the Bishoprick of Oxford, as it was void at this time; so it continued for some years after.

32. We must not forget how the Bishoprick of Carlile was first profered to Bernard Gilpin, that Patriarchal Divine (Rectour of Houghton in the North) as may appear by the ensuing letter of Edwin [a] Sandys, Bishop of Worcester, wrote unto him.

Mr Gilpin refuseth the Bishoprick of Carlile.

[a] Found amongst Mr. Gilpins papers after his death.

MY much and worthily respected Cozen, having regard unto the good of the Church of Christ, rather than to your ease, I have by all the good means I could, been carefull to have this charge imposed upon you, which may be both an honour to your self, and a benefit to the Church of Christ. My true report concerning you hath so prevailed with the Queens Majesty, that she hath nominated you Bishop of Carlile.

I am not ignorant that your inclination rather delighteth in the peaceable tranquillity of a private life. But if you look upon the estate of the Church of England with a respective eye, you cannot with a good conscience, refuse this charge imposed upon you: so much the less because it is in such a place, as wherein no man is found fitter then your self, to deserve well of the Church. In which respect I charge you before God, and as you shall answer to God herein, that, setting all excuses aside, you refuse not to assist your Countrie, and to do service to the Church of God to the uttermost of your power. In the mean while I give you to understand, that the said Bishopprick is to be left untouched, nither shall any thing of it be diminished (as in some others it is a custom) but you shall receive the Bishoprick entire, as Dr. Oglethorp hath left it.

Wherefore exhorting, and charging you to be obedient to Gods call herein, and not to neglect the duty of our own calling, I commend both your self, and the whole business to the Divine Providence.

Your Kinsman, and Brother,

Edwin Worcester.

Anno Dom. 1559. Anno Regin. Elizab. 1.

But Mr. Gilpin desired to be excused, continuing unmoveable in his resolution of refusall. Not that he had any disaffection to the office (as some do believe themselves, and would willingly perswade others) but, because (as he privately confess'd to his [a] friends) he had so much kindred about Carlile, at whom he must either connive in many things, not without hurt to himself; or else deny them, not without offence to them. To avoid which difficulties, he refused the Bishoprick. It was afterward bestowed (as in our Catalogue) on Dr. John Best, a grave, and learned Divine. But whether on the same terms (without any diminution to the Church) my [b] authour knew not, leaving us under a shrewd suspicion of the negative.

[a] B. Carleton in Gilpins life pag. 80.

[b] Idem. pag. 81.

Why Barlow and Scory were not restored to their former Bishopricks, conjectured.

33. If any demand of me, why Barlow formerly Bishop of Bath, and Wells; and Scory Bishop of Chicester, were not rather restored to their own, than translated to other Bishopricks, As certainly I do not know, so willingly I will not guess at the cause thereof; though I have leasure to listen to the conjectures of others herein. Some impute it to their own desires (preferring faire paper before what was soiled with their ill successe) rather to begin on a new account, than to renew their reckoning with those Bishopricks, where they had been interrupted with persecution. Others ascribe it to the Queen, herein shewing her absolute power of disposition and transposition of all Prelates; at Her pleasure crossing Her hands, and translating Scory from Chichester to Hereford, Barlow from Bath and Wells to Chichester. A third sort resolve it on a point of the Queens frugality (a vertue needfull in a Princess coming to a Crown in Her condition) to get new first-fruits by their new translations, which otherwise would not accrue by their restitutions. Sure I am, none of these Conjecturers were either of the Bedchamber, or Councell-Board to the Queen, acquainted with Her intentions herein.

Why Coverdale resumed not his Bishoprick of Exeter.

[c] Amos 4. 11.

34. As for Miles Coverdale, formerly Bishop of Exeter, he never returned to his See, but remained a private Minister to the day of his death. Indeed it was true of him, what is said of others, [c] He was as a fire-brand pluckt out of the burning, being designed to death by Queen Mary, had not the seasonable, and importunate intercession of Frederick, King of Denmarke, redeemed him. And, although his dissenting in judgement from some ceremonies in our Discipline, is generally alledged as the cause of his not returning to his Bishoprick, yet more probable it is, it was caused by his impotencie, as may appear by his Epitaph, which here we have thought fit to insert, as I took it from the brass-inscription of his marble-stone, under the Communion-Table in the Chancell of St. Bartholomews behinde the Exchange.

Hic

Anno Regin. Anno Dom. 1558.

Hic tandem requiemque ferens, finemque laborum,
Ossa Coverdalii mortua tumbus habet.
Exoniæ qui Præsul erat dignissimus olim,
Insignis vitæ vir probitate suæ.
Octoginta annis grandævus vixit & unum,
Indignum passus sæpius exilium.
Sic demum variis jactatum casibus, ista
Excepit gremio terra benigna suo.

Obiit 1568. Jan. 20.

Now if Coverdale Anno 1568. was fourscore and one year of age, then at this very time when he consecrated Parker, was he seventy two years old, passing with Iesse [a] for an old man; yea he had passed the [b] age of man, and therefore henceforward, finding himself fitter for devotion, than action, refused the resumption of his Bishoprick.

a 1 Sa. 26. 12.
b Psal. 90.

35. So much for the Bishops. As for the inferiour Clergy under them, the best that could be gotten were placed in pastoral charges. Alas; tolerability was eminency in that age. A rush-candle seemed a torch where no brighter light was ere seen before. Surely preaching now ran very low, if it be true what I read, that Mr. Taverneur, of Water-Eaton in Oxford-shire, High-Sheriffe of the County, came in pure charity, not ostentation, and gave the Scholars a Sermon in St. Maries, with his gold chain about his neck, and his sword by his side, beginning with these words, [c].

Meane Ministers in this age, as appears by Mr. Taverneurs Sermon.

c In the preface to St. Iohn Cheeks book called the true Subject to the Rebell, printed at Oxford 1641.

Arriving at the mount of St. Maries, in the stony stage where I now stand, I have brought you some fine biskets, baked in the oven of charity, and carefully conserved for the chickens of the Church, the sparrows of the Spirit, and the sweet swallows of salvation.

If England in our memory hath been sensible of a perfective alteration in her Churches; if since she hath seen more learning in the peoples pews, than was then generally in the Readers deske, yea Preachers Pulpit; let God be more glorified in it, men more edified by it; seeing of late the Universities have afforded moe vine-dressers, than the Country could yeeld them vineyards. Yea, let us be jealous over our selves with a godly jealousie, lest our ingratitude make us to relapse into the like ignorance, and barbarisme. For, want of bread was not so much the suffering of those dayes, as fulnes thereof hath lately been the sin of ours.

36. Great abuses being offered to the monuments of the dead, the Queen thought fitting seasonably to retrench the increase of such impieties. And, although her Proclamation being printed, the printing of Her name thereunto had been of as much validity in it self, and of far more ease to Her Majesty, yet to manifest Her Princely zeal therein, She severally signed each copie (and those numerous to be dispers'd thoroughout all Her Dominions) with Her own hand. And, seeing Shee begrutched not Her pains to superscribe Her name, I shall not think much of mine to transcribe the whole Proclamation.

A Proclamation against defacers of Monuments in Churches.

Elizabeth

Anno Dom. 1559.

Elizabeth.

This Proclamation was printed at London in Paul's Church-yard, by Rich. Jugg, and John Cawood Printers to the Queen.

THe Queens Majesty understanding, that by the means of sundry people, partly ignorant, partly malitious, or covetous; there hath been of late yeers spoiled and broken certain ancient Monuments, some of metall, some of stone, which were erected up as well in Churches, as in other publike places within this Realme, only to shew a memory to the posterity of the persons there buried, or that had been benefactours to the building, or dotations of the same Churches, or publique places, and not to nourish any kinde of superstition. By which means, not only the Churches, and places remain at this present day spoiled, broken, and ruinated, to the offence of all noble and gentile hearts, and the extinguishing of the honourable and good memory of sundry vertuous, and noble persons deceased; but also the true understanding of divers families in this Realm (who have descended of the blood of the same persons deceased) is thereby so darkened, as the true course of their inheritance may be hereafter interrupted, contrary to justice, besides many other offences that do hereof ensue to the slander of such as either gave, or had charge in times past only to deface monuments of idolatry, and false fained images in Churches, and Abbeys. And therefore, although it be very hard to recover things broken and spoiled: yet, both to provide that no such barbarous disorder be hereafter used, and to repaire as much of the said monuments as conveniently may be: Her Majesty chargeth and commandeth all maner of persons hereafter to forbear the breaking, or defacing of any parcell of any monument, or tombe, or grave, or other inscription, and memory of any person deceased, being in any manner of place; or to break any image of Kings, Princes or Nobles, Estates of this Realme, or of any other that have been in times past erected, and set up, for the only memory of them to their posterity in common Churches, and not for any religious honour: or to break down and deface any image in glass-windows in any Churches, without consent of the Ordinarie: upon pain that whosoever shall be herein found to offend, to be committed to the next Goale, and there to remain without baile, or mainprise, unto the next coming of the Justices, for the delivery of the said Goale; and then to be farther punished by fine, or imprisonment (besides the restitution, or reedification of the thing broken) as to the said Justices shall seem meet: using therein the advice of the Ordinary; and, if need shall be, the advice of Her Majesties Councell in Her Starr-Chamber.

And for such as be already spoiled in any Church, or Chappell, now standing: Her Majesty chargeth, and commandeth all Arch-Bishops, Bishops, and other Ordinaries, or Ecclesiastical persons, which have authority to visit the Churches, or Chappels, to enquire by presentments of the Curates, Church-wardens, and certain of the parishioners, what manner of spoiles have been made sithence the beginning of Her Majesties raigne, of such monuments, and by whom; and if the persons be living, how able they be to repair, and reedifie the same; and thereupon to convent the same persons, and to enjoyn them under pain of Excommunication, to repair the same by a convenient day, or otherwise (as the cause shall farther require) to notifie the same to Her Majesties Councell in the Starr-chamber at Westminster. And, if any such be found, and convicted thereof, not able to repair the same; that then they be enjoyned to do open pennance two or three times in the Church, as to the quality of the crime, and party belongeth, under the like pain of excommunication. And if the party that offended be dead: and the Executours of the Will left having sufficient in their hands unadministred, and the offence notorious; the Ordinarie of the place shall also enjoyn them to repair, or reedifie the same, upon like, or any other convenient pain, to be devised by the said Ordinarie. And when the offender cannot be presented, if it be in any Cathedral, or Collegiate Church, which hath any revenue belonging to it, that is, not particularly allotted to the sustentation of any person certain, or otherwise, but that it may remain in the discretion of the governour thereof, to bestow the same upon any other charitable deed, as mending of high-wayes or such like; Her Majesty enjoyneth, and straitly chargeth the governours, and companies of every such Church, to employ such parcels of the said sums of money (as any wise may be spared) upon the speedy repaire, or reedification of any such monuments so defaced, or spoiled, as agreeable to the original, as the same conveniently may be.

Anno Regni Eliz. 2 Anno Dom. 1559.

And where the covetousness of certain persons is such, that as Patrons of Churches, or owners of the personages impropriated or by some other colour, or pretence, they do perswade with the Parson and Parishioners, to take, or throw down the bells of Churches, and Chappels, and the lead of the same, converting the same to their private gain, and to the spoils of the said places, and make such like alterations, as thereby they seek a slanderous desolation of the places of prayer: Her Majesty (to whom in the right of the Crown by the ordinance of Almighty God, and by the laws of this Realme, the defence and protection of the Church of this Realme belongeth) doth expressly forbid any manner of person, to take away any bells, or lead, of any Church, or Chappel, under pain of imprisonment during Her Majesties pleasure, and such farther fine for the contempt, as shall be thought meet.

And Her Majesty chargeth all Bishops, and Ordinaries to enquire of all such contempts, done from the beginning of Her Majesties raigne, and to enjoyn the persons offending, to repair the same within a convenient time. And of their doings in this behalf, to certifie Her Majesties privie-Councell or the Councell in the Star-Chamber at Westminster, that order may be taken herein.

Given at Windsor the 19th. of September, the second year of Her Majesties raign.

Her Princely care took this desired effect, that it stopped the main stream of Sacriledge herein, though some by-rivolets thereof ran still in private Churches, in defiance of all orders provided to the contrary.

37. May the Reader take notice, that henceforward God willing, we will set down at the end of every year, the deaths of such eminent Divines, who deceased therein, though we finde no funeralls of any prime Protestant in the two first yeers of the Queens raigne. Her coming to the Crown inspirited the weakest, and oldest with vigorousnesse, and vivacity for a time; and Divine Providence preserved them from blasting, who were but newly replanted in their places. Only we conjecture, that John Bale Bishop of Osserie, died about this time, we finding no future mention of his activity; which, if alive, could not conceal it self. Pity it is, we cannot give the exact date of his death, who was so accurate in noting the deceases of others. For this John Bale, was he, who (besides many other books) enlarged Leland, and continued the Lives of the English Writers. Borne at Covy, near Dunwich

The death and character of Bp. Bale.

Dunwich in Suffolke, bred in Cambridge, afterwards a Carmelite in Norwich, and ignorantly zealous in their superstitions. He was first converted to the knowledge of the Gospel, as himself [a] confesseth, by the care of that worthy Lord, Thomas Lord Wentworth, of Nettlested in Suffolke. Whereupon (to use his own expression) he was transported from his barren mount Carmel, to the fair and fruitfull vale of the Gospel. Anno Dom. 1534. Anno Regni Henr. 8.

[a] De Scriptor. Britan. Centur. 8.

38. Presently comes persecution. For his preaching of the Gospell, he is drag'd from the Pulpit to the Consistory, before Lee Arch-Bishop of Yorke; and for the same cause, was afterwards convented before Stokesley, Bishop of London; but the Lord Cromwell (much affected with the facetiousness of such Comedies, as he had presented unto him) rescued him from their paws, by his power. After eight yeers exile in Germany, he was recalled by King Edward, and made Bishop of Osserie in Ireland, where he remained but a short time. For after the Kings death he hardly escaped with his own life (some of his servants being slain) cast by tempest into Cornewall, taken by pirates, dearly redeemed, with much difficulty he recovered London, with more danger got over into Germany. Whence returning, in the first of Queen Elizabeth, about this time he ended his life, leaving a Scholars Inventory, moe books (many of his own making) than mony behinde him.

The persecutions which in his life he suffered.

39. His friends say, that Bale his pen doth zealously confute such as are strangers to him conceive, it doth bitterly enveigh; and his foes say, it doth damnably raile on Papists, and their opinions; though something may be pleaded for his passion. Old age, and ill usage will make any man angry. When young, he had seen their superstition; when old, he felt their oppression. Give losers therefore leave to speak, and speakers to be cholerick in such cases. The best is, Bale raileth not more on Papists then Pits (employed on the same subject) on Protestant Writers; and, even set one against the other, whilest the discreet reader of both, paring off the extravagances of passion on each side, may benefit himself in quietness, from their loud, and clamorous invectives.

Bales passion endeavoured to be excused.

40. Pius the fourth, being newly setled in the Papal chaire, thought to do something, no less honourable, than profitable to his See, in reducing Queen Elizabeth (a wandring sheep worth a whole flock) to the Church of Rome. In order whereunto, he not only was deaf to the importunity of the Count of Feria, pressing him (for a private grudge) to excommunicate Her, but also addressed Vincent Parpalia, Abbot of S^t^. Saviours, with courteous letters unto her. The tenour whereof ensueth, 1560. 2 Reg. 5.

The Pope tampereth to reconcile the Queen to the Church of Rome.

To our most dear Daughter in Christ,
Elizabeth Queen of England.

DEar daughter in Christ, health and Apostolical benediction. How greatly we desire (our Pastoral charge requiring it) to procure the salvation of your soule, and to provide likewise for your honour, and the establishment of your Kingdom withall, God the searcher of all hearts knoweth, and you may understand by what we have given in charge to this our beloved son Vincentius Parpalia, Abbot of S^t^. Saviours, a man well known to you, and well approved by us. Wherefore we do again and again exhort, and admonish your Highnesse, most dear daughter, that rejecting evil Councellours, which love not you, but themselves, and serve their their own lusts, you would take the fear of God into Counsell with you, and acknowledging the time of your visitation, shew your selves obedient to our fatherly perswasions, and wholsome Counsells; and promise to your self from us all things that may make not only to the salvation of your soul, but also whatsoever you shall desire from us for the establishing & confirming of your Princely dignity, according to the authority, place, and office committed unto us by God. And if so be, as we desire and hope, you shall return into the bosome of the Church, we shall be ready to receive you with the same love, honour, and rejoycing, that the Father in the Gospel did his Son returning to him: although our joy is like to be the greater in that he was joyfull for the salvation of one Son, but you, drawing along with you all the people of England, shall hear us and the whole company of our brethren (who are shortly God willing, to be assembled in a generall Councell, for the taking away of heresies, and so for the salvation of your self, and your whole nation) fill the Universal Church with rejoycing, and gladnesse. Yea, you shall make glad heaven it self with such a memorable fact, and atchieve admirable renown to your name, much more glorious than the Crown you wear. But, concerning this matter, the same Vincentius shall deal with you more largely, and shall declare our fatherly affection toward you: and we intreate your Majesty to receive him lovingly, to hear him diligently, and to give the same credit to his speeches, which you would to our self.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 4 Anno Dom. 1562.

Given at Rome at S. Peters &c.

the fifth day of May 1560.

in our first yeer.

What private proposals Parpalia made to her Majesty, on condition she would be reconciled to Rome is unknown. Some conceive the Pope might promise more then He meant to perform, but would He perform more than He did promise, nothing herein had been effected. A Bargain can never be driven, where a Buyer can on no terms be procured. Her Majesty was resolute and unmoveable in her Religion. And yet some (not more knowing of Councells, but more daring in Conjectures than others) who love to feign, what they cannot finde, that they may never appear to be at a loss, avouch that the Pope promised to revoke the Sentence, against her mother Anne Bollens marriage, to confirme our English Lithurgie by his authority, to permit the English, the Communion under both kinds, provided she would own the Popes Primacy, and cordially unite her self to the Catholike Church. Yea some thousands of Crowns, (but all in vain) were promised to the effectors thereof, wherein his holinesse, seemingly liberal, was really thrifty, as knowing such his Sums, if accepted, would within one year return with an hundred fold increase.

41. Scipio a Gentleman of Venice, formerly familiar with Mr. Jewel (whilst he was a student in Padua) wrot now an expostulating letter unto Him, being lately made Bishop of Sarisbury. Wherein he much admired that England should send no Embassadour, nor message, or letter to excuse their Nations absence from the general appearance of Christianity in the Sacred Councell of Trent. He highly extolled the antiquity and use of General Councels, as the only means to decide controversies in Religion, and compose the distractions in the Church, concluding it a Superlative Sin for any to decline the authority thereof.

The contents of Scipio his Letter to Mr. Iewell.

42. To

Anno Dom. 1563. Anno Regin. Eliz. 5.

The sum of Mr. Jewels answer.

42. To this Mr. Jewel returned a large and solemn answer. Now although he wrote it as a private person, yet because the subject thereof was of publick concernment, take the principall Heads thereof.

[a] See it at large at the end of the History of the Councell of Trent.

[a] First, That a great part of the world professing the name of Christ (as Greeks, Armenians, Abessines &c. with all the Eastern Church) were neither sent to, nor summoned to this Councell.

Secondly, That Englands absence was not so great a wonder, seeing many other kingdoms and free-states, (as Denmarke, Sweden, Scotland, Princes of Germany and Hanse-Towns) were not represented in this Councel, by any of their Embassadors.

Thirdly, That this pretended Councell was not called according to the ancient custome of the Church, by the Imperiall Authority, but by Papall usurpation.

Fourthly, That Trent was a petty place not of sufficient receit for such multitudes, as necessarily should repair to a generall Councell.

Fifthly, That Pope Pius the fourth, by whose command the Councel was re-assembled, purchased his place by the unjust practises of Simony, and bribery, and managed it with murder and Cruelty.

Sixthly, That repairing to Councells was a free-act, and none ought to be condemned of Contumacy, if it stood more with their conveniency to stay at home.

Seventhly, That anciently it was accepted as a reasonable excuse of holy Bishops, absenting, or withdrawing themselves, from any Councell, if they vehemently suspected ought would be acted therein prejudiciall to the Truth, lest their (though not active) included concurrence might be interpreted a countenancing thereof.

Eightly, Our English Bishops were imployed in feeding their flocks, and governing their Churches, and could not be spared from their charge without prejudice to their consciences.

Ninthly, The members of the Councell of Trent, both Bishops and Abbots, were by oath pregaged to the Pope to defend and maintain his authority against all the world.

Lastly, in what capacity should the English Clergy appear in this Councell? They could not as free-persons to debate matters therein, beeing pre-condemned for Hereticks by Pope Julius. They would not come as Offendors, to hear the Sentence pronounced against themselves, which they had heard of before. What effect this Letter produced I finde not, sure I am no Papists as yet have made an effectuall refutation of the reasons rendered therein.

Westminster Col. Church re-founded by Q. Eliz.

43. The Bells of S[t]. Peters in Westminster had strangely rung the changes these last thirty yeers. Within which time, first it was a stately and rich Covent of Benedictine Monks. Secondly, it was made a Collegiate Church of Dean and Prebendaries by King Henry the eighth. Thirdly, by the same King, is was made an Episcopall See, and Thomas Thirby (who having roasted the Churches Patrimony, surrendred it to the spoile of Courtiers) the first and last Bishop thereof. Fourthly, Queen Mary re-seated the Abbot and Monks in the possession thereof, who were outed after her Death. Lastly, this yeer Queen Elizabeth converted it again into a Collegiate Church, founding therein maintenance for one Dean, twelve Prebendaries, as many old souldiers past service for Almsmen, and fourty Scholars, who in due time are preferred to the Universities, so that it hath proved one of the most renowned Seminaries, of Religion and learning in the whole nation.

1561

The Pope trieth again in vain to seduce the Queen.

44. Pope Pius though unsuccessfull in his addresses last yeer to the Queen, yet was not so disheartened, but that once more he would try what might be effected therein. To which purpose he imployed the Abbot of Martinegi with most loving letters unto her, desiring leave to come over into England. But the Queen knowing it less difficulty and danger to keep him, him, then to cast him out of her Dominions, forbad his entrance into the Realme as against the Laws of the Land, So that he was fain to deliver his Errand, and receive his answer, (and that a deniall) at distance in the Low-Countries. As little successe had the Bishop of Viterbo, the Popes Nuncio to the King of France, secretly dealing with Sr. N. Throgmorton the Queens Agent, there to perswade her to send Embassadors to the Councell of Trent; which for the reasons afore mentioned was justly refused.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 4. Anno Dom. 1562.

45. Sr. Edward Carne the Queens Leger at Rome, Doctor of Civill Law, Knighted by the Emperour Charles the fifth, pretended that as the Queen would not suffer the Popes Nuncio to come into England, so the Pope would not permit him to depart Rome: Whereas indeed the cunning old man was not detained, but detained himself; so well pleased was he with the place and his office therein. Where soon after he died, the last Leger of the English Nation to Rome publickly avowed in that imployment.

The death of Sr. Edward Carne.

46. This yeer the Spire of Pauls-Steeple covered with lead strangely fell on fire, attributed by severall Persons to sundry Causes. Some that it was casually blasted with lightning, others that it was mischevously done by Art Magick; And others (and they the truest) done by the negligence of a Plummer carelessly leaving his coals therein. The fire burnt for five full hours, in which time it melted all the lead of the Church, only the stone Arches escaping the fury thereof: but by the Queens bounty and a Collection from the Clergy, it was afterwards repaired, only the blunt Tower had not the top thereof sharpned into a Spire as before.

Pauls Steeple burnt down.

47. A petty rebellion happened in Merton Colledge in Oxford (small in it self, great in the consequence thereof, if not seasonably suppressed) on this occasion. Some Latine superstitious Hymns formerly sung on Festivalls had by order of the late Warden Dr. Gervas been abolished, and English Psalms appointed in their place: now when Mr. Leach a Fellow in the House on Allholland-day last had the Book in his hand ready to begin the Psalme: in springs one Mr. William Hall a seniour Fellow offering to snatch it from him with an intent to cast it into the fire, adding [a] moreover that they would no more dance after his pipe. This was done in the intervall of the vacancy of the wardenship: For though John Man was lawfully chosen to the place, yet Hall and his Popish faction (whereof Mr. Patto, Mr. Binnion, and Sr. Appleby the Leaders) opposed his admission. And whereas in this House great was the power of a Seniour-Fellow (especially in office) over the young Scholars, Hall raised such a persecution against them, that it was penall for any to be a Protestant.

Papists stickle in Merton Colledge.

[a] Manuscript Records of Cant. in Matthew Parker. pag. 322.

48. Arch-Bishop Parker hearing hereof, summoneth Hall to appear before him, who cared so little for the same, that some of his Party plucked off the Seal from the citation, which was affixed to the gates of the Colledge. Whereupon his Grace made a solemn visitation of that Colledge, wherein all were generally examined. Man confirmed Warden, Hall justly expelled, his party publickly admonished, the Young Schollers relieved, Papists curbed, and suppressed, Protestants countenanced, and encouraged in the whole University.

Are curbed by the Arch-Bishop his visitation.

May 26.

Anno Regin. 1. Eliz. 2. 3. 156-

49. * A Parliament was called, wherein a Bill passed for the assurance of certain lands assumed by the Queen from some Bishopricks during their vacation. Another for the restitution in blood of the children of Thomas Cranmer late Arch-Bishop of Canterbury. Here fain would I be informed by some learned in the law, what needed the restoring of those Children, whose Father was condemned, and died only for Heresie; which is conceived a Personall crime, and not tainting the blood. For although this Arch-Bishop was first accused of high-Treason, yet it afterwards was waved, and he tried upon hereticall opinions. * Except any will say, that because not solemnly and formally pardoned, in majorem cautelam, such an Act was not amiss, or else done not so much

* Cranmers children restored in blood.
b Parliament. Rolles: quinto Elizabethe.
* I have read that he was condemned of treason [Cromptons juris. courts fol. 2. b.] which Treason was released unto him, & yet he, saith Holinsh. excepted out of the general pardon, intricacies I understand not. An Act for translating the Bible into Welsh.

much for the use of the living Children as honour of their dead Father.

Anno Dom. 1563. Anno Regin. Eliz. 6.

50. A third Bill passed for the Translating of the Bible into the Welsh tongue, which sicnce the Reformation may hitherto be said to have been read in Latin in their Congregations, English being Latin to them as in the most Parishes of Wales utterly un-understood. This some years after was performed, principally by the endeavours of [a] William Morgan Doctor of Divinity, afterwards Bishop of Landaff, and thence preferred to S^t Asaph, but worthy for his work of better advancement.

a Godwin in his catalogue of Bishops p. 641.

The 39 Articles compiled in Convocation.

51. In the Convocation now sitting, wherein Alexander Nowel Dean of S^t Pauls was Prolocutor, the nine and thirty Articles were composed. For the main they agree with those set forth in the Reign of King Edward the sixth, though in some particulars allowing more liberty to dissenting judgments. For instance, in this Kings Articles it is said, that it is to be be believed, that Christ went down to Hell [to preach to the Spirits there,] which last clause is left out in these Articles, and men left to a latitude concerning the cause, time, and manner of his Descent.

Jan. 29.

Why favourably drawn up in general terms.

52. Hence some have unjustly taxed the Composers for too much favour extended in their large expressions, clean through the contexture of these Articles, which should have tied mens consciences up closer in more strict and particularizing propositions, which indeed proceeded from their commendable moderation, Childrens cloaths ought to be made of the biggest, because afterwards their bodies will grow up to their garments. Thus the Arcles of this English Protestant Church in the infancy thereof, they thought good to draw up in general terms, foreseeing that posteritie would grow up to fill the same. I mean these holy men did prudently pre-discover, that differences in judgments would unavoidably happen in the Church, and were loath to unchurch any, and drive them off from an Ecclesiastical communion for such petty differences, which made them pen the Articles in comprehensive words to take in all, who differing in the branches, meet in the root of the same Religion.

Most confessors who composed the Articles.

b 2 Sam. 24. 24.

53. Indeed most of them had formerly been sufferers themselves, and cannot be said in compiling these Articles (an acceptable service no doubt) to offer to God what cost them nothing, [b] some having paid Imprisonment, others Exile, all losses in their Estates for this their experimental knowledg in Religion; which made them the more merciful and tender in stating those points, seeing such who themselves have been most patient in bearing, will be most pittiful in burdening the consciences of others.

English Articles and Trent Decrees contemporaries.

54. It is observable, these Articles came forth much about the time wherein the Decrees of the Councel of Trent were published, Truth, and Falshood starting in some sort both together, though the former will surely carry away the victory at long running. Many of which Decrees begin with Lying, and all conclude with Cursing, thundering Anathemas against all Dissenters. Whilest these our Articles like the still voice only plainly express the Positive truth.

The 39 Articles confirmed by Parliament.

c See the Statutes in decimo tertio, Eliz. cap. 12.

55. But some nine years after, Viz. Anno 1571. the Parliament [c] confirmed these Articles so far, that every Clerk should before the Nativity of Christ next following subscribe the same. And hereafter every person promoted to an Ecclesiastical living, should within a time prefixed, publickly in the time of Divine service, read and profess his consent to the same, on pain of Deprivation ipso facto, if omitted.

But only imposed on Clergy-men.

56. No Lay-person was required to subscribe, no Magistrate, none of the Commons according to the severity in other places. For the persecuted Church of English in Frankford in Queen Mary her dayes, demanded subscription to their discipline of every man, yea even of women; and the Scotch (in the minority of King James) exacted it of Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Courtiers, which here was extended onely to men of Ecclesiastical function. Not that the Queen and State was careless of the spiritual good of others (leaving them to live and believe as they list) but because charitably presuming that where

Parishes

Anno Regin Eliz. 5. Anno Dom. 1563

Pariſhes were provided of Paſtors Orthodox in their judgments, they would by Gods bleſſing on their preaching, work their people to conformity to the ſame opinions.

* Some queſtion there is about a clauſe in the twentieth Article, whether originally there, or ſince interpolated. Take the whole [a] Article according to the common Edition therof.

* Querie, about the 20 Article, whether ſhuffled in, or no.

[a] Pag. 98.

Twentieth Article of the Authority of the Church.

The Church hath power to decree Rites or Ceremonies, and authority in controverſies of faith. And yet it is not lawful for the Church to ordain any thing that is contrary to Gods word; neither may it ſo expound one place of Scripture, that it be repugnant to another. Wherefore although the Church be a witneſs and keeper of holy writ, yet as it ought not to decree any thing againſt the ſame, ſo beſides the ſame ought it not to enforce any thing to be believed for neceſſity of ſalvation.

Take along with this the bitter invective of a modern [b] Miniſter, who thus laieth it on with might and main on the backs of Biſhops, for ſome unfair practice herein, in an epiſtle of his, written to the Temporal Lords of His Majeſties Privy Councel, reckoning up therein Fourteen Innovations in the Church.

[b] Mr Burton in his Apologie.

The Prelates, to juſtifie their proceedings have forged a new Article of Religion, brought from Rome, (which gives them full power to alter the Doctrine and Diſcipline of our Church at a blow) and have foiſted it into the twentieth Article of our Church. And this is in the laſt edition of the Articles, Anno 1628. in affront of his Majeſties Declaration before them. The clauſe forged is this, The Church (that is the Biſhops as they expound it) hath power to decree rites and ceremonies, and authoritie in matters of faith. This clauſe is a forgery fit to be examined and deeply cenſured in the Star-chamber. For it is not to bee found in the Latin or Engliſh Articles of Edward 6 or Queen Elizabeth ratified by Parliament. And if to forge a Will or writing be cenſurable in the Star-chamber, which is but a wrong to a private man, How much more the forgery of an Article of Religion, to wrong the whole Church, and overturn Religion which concerns all our ſouls?

57. Such as deal in niceties diſcover ſome faltering from the truth in the very words of this grand Delator. For the

The accuſer his firſt miſtake.

Article ſaith that		He chargeth them
The Church hath authority in controverſies of faith.	} }	with challenging authority in matters of Faith.

Here, ſome difference betwixt the terms. For matters of faith (which all ought to know and believe for their ſouls health) are ſo plainly ſetled by the Scriptures, that they are ſubject to no alteration by the Church, which notwithſtanding may juſtly challenge a caſting voice in ſome controverſies of faith, as of leſs importance to ſalvation.

58. But to come to the main matter; this clauſe in queſtion lieth at a dubious poſture, at in and out, ſometimes inſerted, ſometimes omitted, both in our written and printed copies.

The dubious appearing of this clauſe.

Inſerted

Inserted in	Omitted in
The originall of the Articles 1562. as appeareth under the hand of a Publick Notary, whose inspection and attestation is only decisive in this case. So also Anno 1593. and Anno 1605. and Anno 1612. all which were publick and authentick Editions.	The English and Latine Articles set forth 1571. when they were first ratified by Act, and whose being, as obligatory to punishment, beares not date nine yeers before, from their composition in Convocation, but hence forward from their confirmation in Parliament.

Anno Dom. 1563. Anno Regin. Eliz. 5.

And now, to match the credit of private Authours in some equality, we will weigh Mr. Rogers Chaplain to Arch-Bishop Whitgift, inserting this clause in his Edition 1595. against Dr. Mocket, Chaplain to Arch-Bishop Abbot, omitting it in his Latine translation of our Articles set forth 1617.

Arch-Bishop Laud his opinion in the point.

59. Arch-bishop Laud, in a speech which he made in the Star-Chamber, inquiring into the cause why this clause is omitted in the printed Articles 1571. thus expresseth himself,

* In his speech made June 14. 1637. pag. 65.

> Certainly this could not be done, but by the malicious cunning of that opposite Faction. And, though I shall spare dead mens names, where I have not certainty; Yet, if you be pleased to look back and consider who they were that governed businesses in 1571. and rid the Church allmost at their pleasure, and how potent the Ancestors of these Libellers began then to grow, you will think it no hard matter to have the Articles printed, and this clause left out.

I must confess my self not so well skilled in Historicall Horsemanship, as to know whom his Grace designed for the Rider of the Church at that time. It could not be Arch-Bishop Parker, who, though discreet and moderate, was sound and sincere in pressing conformity. Much less was it Grindall (as yet but Bishop of London) who then had but little, and never much influence on Church-Matters. The Earle of Leicester could not in this phrase be intended, who alike minded the insertion or omission of this or any other Article. As for the non-Conformists, they were so far at this time from riding the Church, that then they first began to put foot in stirrup, though since they have dismounted those whom they found in the saddle. In a word, concerning this clause whether the Bishops were faulty in their addition, or their opposites in their Substraction I leave to more cunning State-Arithmeticians to decide.

60. One Article more we will request the Reader to peruse, as the subject of some historicall debates which thereon doth depend.

An Article to confirme the Homilies made in King Edward his reign.

35. Article of Homilies.

> The second Booke of Homilies, the severall titles whereof, we have joyned under this Article, doth contain a godly and wholsome Doctrine, and necessary for these times, as doth the former Booke of Homilies which were set forth in the time of Edward the sixth, and therefore we judge them to be read in Churches by the Ministers diligently, and distinctly, that they may be understood of the People.

Anno Dom. 1563

See we here the Homilies ranked into two formes. The first, such as were made in the Raign of Edward the sixth, being twelve in number. Of which the tenth (of obedience to Magistrates) was drawn up at or about Kets Rebellion, in a dangerous juncture of time. For as it is observed of the Gingles, or S^t. Anthony his fire, that it is mortall if it come once to clip and encompasse the whole body. So had the North-East Rebels in Norfolke, met and united with the South-East Rebels in Devonshire, in humane apprehension desperate the consequence of that conjuncture.

61. The second forme of Homilies, are those composed in the Raign of Queen Elizabeth, amounting to one and twenty, concluding with one against Rebellion. For though formerly there had been one in King Edwards dayes for obedience, yet this was conceived no superfluous tautologie, but a necessary geminatum of a duty in that seditious age, wherein dull schollers needed to have the same lesson often taught unto them. As also those in Q. Eliz.

62. They are penned in a plain stile, accommodated to the capacities of the Hearers (being loth to say of the Readers) the Ministers also being very simple in that age. Yet if they did little good, in this respect they did no harme, that they preached not strange Doctrines to their people, as too many vent new darknesses in our dayes. For they had no power to broach Opinions, who were only employed to deliver that liquor to them which they had received from the hands of others better skilled in Religion then themselves. The use of Homilies.

63. However some behold these Homilies, as not sufficiently legitimated by this Article to be (for their Doctrine) the undoubted issue of the Church of England, alledging them composed by private men of unknown names, who may probably be presumed at the best, but the Chaplains of the Arch-Bishops under whom they were made. Hence is it that some have tearmed them Homely Homilies, others a popular * discourse, or a Doctrine usefull for those times wherein they were set forth. I confesse what is necessary in one age may be less needfull in another, but what in one age is godly and wholsome Doctrine (characters of commendation given by the aforesaid Article to the Homilies) cannot in another age be ungodly and unhealthfull; as if our faith did follow fashions and truth alter with the times, * like Achitophell his Counsell, though good in it self, yet not at some seasons. But some are concerned to decry their credits, as much contrary to their judgement, more to their practise, especially seeing the second Homily in the second book stands with a spunge in one hand to wipe out all pictures, and a hammer in the other to beat down all Images of God and Saints erected in Churches. And therefore such use these Homilies as an upper garment girting them close unto, or casting them from them at pleasure, allowing and alledging them when consenting, denying and disclaiming them when opposite to their practise or opinions. Their authenticall necessity questioned.

* Mr. Mountagu in his appello Cæsarem.

* 2 Sam. 17.

64. The Religion in England being setled according to these Articles which soon after were published, the first Papist that fell foule upon them was William Rastall, Nephew to S^r. Thomas More by Elizabeth his Sister, and a great Lawyer. Yet we beleeve not him * that telleth us he was one of the two Chief justices, as knowing the * contrary. However he was very knowing in our common law: Witnesse his collections of statutes and comments thereon with other works in that faculty. But this veteranus Jurisconsultus was vix Tyro Theologus, shewing rather zeal to the cause, then ability to defend it in those Books which he set forth against Bp. Jewell. Rastall writes against Bp. Jewel.

* Pitzæus de Ang. Scriptor pag. 764.

* See S^r. Henry Spelman his glossary in Indic.

65. No eminent English Protestant died this yeer, but great grief among the Romanists for the loss of D^r. Richard Smith Kings professour of Divinity in Oxford, till outed by Peter Martyr. Whereupon he forsook the land, returned in the Raign of Queen Mary, went back after her death into the Low-Countries, where he was made Dean of S^t. Peters in Doway, and appointed by King Philip the second, first Divinity professor in that new erected University. The death of Dr. Smith.

sity. His * party much complain that his strong parts were disadvantaged with so weak sides and low voice, though indeed too loud his railing against the truth, as appears by his Books.

* Pitæus de Ang. Script. pag. 761.

66. The English Bishops conceiving themselves impowered by their Canons, began to shew their authority in urging the Clergy of their Diocess to subscribe to the Liturgie, Ceremonies and Discipline of the Church, and such as refused the same were branded with the odious name of Puritanes.

The Original of Puritans.

67. A name which in this notion first began in this yeer, and the grief had not been great, if it had ended in the same. The Philosopher banisheth the term (which is polysæmon) that is subject to several senses, out of the Predicaments, as affording too much Covert for cavill by the latitude thereof. On the same account could I wish that the word Puritan were banished common discourse, because so various in the acceptions thereof. We need not speak of the ancient Cathari or Primitive Puritans, sufficiently known by their Heretical opinions. Puritan here was taken for the Opposers of the Hierarchie and Church-service, as resenting of Superstition. But prophane mouths quickly improved this Nick-name, therewith on every occasion to abuse pious people, some of them so far from opposing the Liturgie, that they endeavoured (according to the instructions thereof in the preparative to the Confession) to accompany the Minister with a PURE heart, and laboured (as it is in the Absolution) for a life PURE and holy. We will therefore decline the word to prevent exceptions, which if casually slipping from our pen, the Reader knoweth that only Non-conformists are thereby intended.

The Homonymie of the tearm.

68. These in this age were divided into two ranks. Some milde and moderate, contented only to enjoy their own conscience. Others fierce and fiery, to the disturbance of Church and State. Amongst the former, I recount the Principall; Father John Fox (for so Queen Elizabeth termed him) summoned (as I take it) by Arch-Bishop Parker to subscribe, that the generall reputation of his piety, might give the greater countenance to Conformity. The old man produced the new-Testament in Greek, to this (saith he) will I subscribe. But when a subscription to the Canons was required of him, he refused it, saying, I have nothing in the Church save a Prebend at Salisbury, and much good may it do you if you will take it away from me. However such respect did the Bishops (most formerly his Fellow-Exiles) bear to his age, parts, and pains, that he continued his place till the day of his death: who, though no friend to the Ceremonies, was otherwise so devout in his carriage, that (as his neerest relation surviving hath informed me) he never entred any Church without expressing solemn reverence therein.

Mr. Fox a moderate Nonconformist.

69. With Mr. Fox, I joyne his Dear Friend Lawrence Humfrey, whom I should never have suspected for inclinations to nonconformity (such his intimacy with Doctor Jewell and other Bishops) had I not read in my Author, that De Adiaphoris non juxta cum Ecclesia Anglicana senserit. He was Regius Professor of Divinity in Oxford, where his Answers and determinations were observed quick, clear, and solid, but his Replies and objections weak and slender, which his Auditors imputed to no lack of learning (wherewith he was well stored) but to his unwillingness to furnish his Popish Adversaries with strong arguments to maintain their Erroneous opinions. * But such his quiet carriage, that notwithstanding his nonsubscribing, he kept his Professors place and Deanry of Winchester as long as he lived.

And Dr. Lawrence Humfrey.

* Cambden Elizabetha in Anno 1589.

70. Pass we now to the fierce (not to say furious) sticklers against Church-Discipline, and begin with Anthony Gilby born in Lincolne-shire, bred in Christs Colledge in Cambridge. How fierce he was against the Ceremonies take it from his own [a] pen. They are known liveries of Anti-Christ, accursed leaven of the Blasphemous Popish Priesthood, cursed patches of Popery, and Idolatry, they are worse then lousie, for they are sibbe to the sarke of Hercules that made him tear his own bowels asunder.

Anthony Gilby a fierce Nonconformist.

[a] pag. 150.

71. William

Anno Regin. Eliz. 1. Anno Dom. 1566.

71. William Whittingham succeeds, bred in Allsouls Colledge in Oxford, afterwards Exile in Germany (where he made a preface to Mr. Goodman his Booke approving the Divinity therein) and returning into England was made Deane of Durham.

And William Whittingham. a Bale Cent. nona pag. 731.

72. Christopher Goodman is the third, and well it were if it might be truly said of him (what of Probus the Emperor) that he was Vir sui nominis. Sure it is that living beyond the seas in the dayes of Queen Mary, he wrote a Booke stuffed with much dangerous Doctrine. Wherein he maintained that Sr. Thomas Wyat was no Traitor, [b] that his cause was Gods, that none but Traitors could accuse him of Treason, and that the Councellours and others who would be accounted Nobles (and took not his part) were in very deed Traitors to God, his People, and their Country. These three (for David Whitehead I have no minde to mention with them) were certainly the Antesignani of the fierce Nonconformists. Yet finde I none of them solemnly silenced, either because (perchance) dead before this yeer (wherein the vigorous urging of Subscription) or because finding some favour in respect of their suffering of banishment for the Protestant Religion. Only I meet with Thomas Samson Dean of Christs Church in Oxford, qui propter Puritanismum [c] exauctoratus, displaced this yeer out of his Deanry; notwithstanding the said Samson stands very high in Bale his Catalogue of the English Exiles in the Reign of Queen Mary.

And Christopher Goodman

[b] pag 202, 205, & 207.

Note that these three were active in the separation from Frankford vide supra 9. Book. p. 9.

[c] Godwin his catalogue in the Bishop of Oxford.

Aug. 31.

73. Queen Elizabeth came to Oxford, honourably attend with the Earle of Leicester, Lord Chancelour of the University. The Marquesse of Northampton. The Lord Burleigh. The Spanish Ambassadour &c. Here she was entertained with the most stately welcom which the Muses could make. Edmond Campion then Proctour (Oratorie being his Master-piece) well performed his part, only over flattering Leicester (enough to make a modest mans head ake, with the too sweet flowers of his Rhetorick) save that the Earle was as willing to hear his own praise, as the other to utter it. Her Highness was lodged in Christs-Church, where many Comedies were acted before Her, one whereof (Palemon and Arce) had a Tragicall end, three men being slain [d] by the fall of a wall, and press of people. Many Acts were kept before her in Philosophie, and one most eminent in Divinity, wherein Bishop Jewell (this yeer in his absence created Honorarie Doctour) was Moderatour. It lasted in summer time till candles were lighted, delight devouring all wearines in the Auditours, when the Queen importuned by the Lords (The Spanish Ambassadour to whom she profferred it, modestly declining the imployment) concluded all with this her Latine Oration.

The Queens entertainment at Oxford.

[d] Stow his Chron. p. 660.

Qui male agit, odit lucem, & ego quidem quia nihil aliud nisi male agere possum, idcirco odi lucem, odi, id est, conspectum vestrum. Atque sanè me magna tenet dubitatio, dum singula considero quæ hic agantur, laudemne, an vituperem, taceamne, an eloquar; Si eloquar, patefaciam vobis quam sim literarum rudis: tacere autem volo, ne defectus videatur esse contemptus. Et quia tempus breve est quod habeo ad dicendum, idcirco omnia in pauca conferam, & orationem meam in duas partes dividam, in laudem & vituperationem. Latus autem ad vos pertinet. Ex quo enim primum Oxoniam veni, multa vidi, multa audivi, probavi omnia. Erant enim & prudenter facta, & eleganter dicta. At ea quibus in prologis vos ipsi excusastis, neque pro pare ut Regina, possum, neque ut Christiana debeo. Cæterum quia in exordio semper adhibuistis cautionem, mihi sane illa disputatio non displicuit. Nunc venio ad alteram partem, nempe vituperationem. Atque hæc pars mihi propria est: Sane fateor Parentes meos diligentissimè curasse ut in bonis literis rectè instituerer, & quidem in multarum linguarum varietate diu versata fui, quarum aliquam mihi cognitionem nitionem assumo: quod etsi verè tamen verecundè dico. Habui quidem multos & Doctos Pædagogos, qui ut me eruditum redderent, diligenter elaborarunt. Sed Pædagogi mei posuerunt operam in agro sterili & infæcundo, ita fructus percipere vix poterant, aut dignitate mea, aut illorum laboribus, aut vestra expectatione dignos. Quamobrem etsi omnes vos me abundè laudastis, ego tamen, quæ mihi conscia sum, quam sim nulla laude digna facile agnosco; sed finem imponam orationi meæ Barbarismis plenæ, si prius optavero, & votum unum addidero. Votum meum hoc erit, ut me vivente sitis Florentissimi, me mortua Beatissimi.

Her Highness speech to the University. This speech was taken by D. Laurence Humfrey, and by him printed, in the life of B. Jewell pag. 244.

Anno Dom. 1566

Thus having stayed seven dayes, she took her leave of the University, Mr. Williams the Maior riding in scarlet before her Majesty to Magdalen Bridge; But the Doctours attending her in their formalities as far as Shot-over.

SECT.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 7. Anno Dom. 1565.

Section. IIII.

To William Honyewood Esq;

Some Conceive, that to be pressed to death (the punishment on Recusants to submit to legall Tryall) is the greatest torment in the World. God keepe all good men from feeling, and chiefly from deserving it. I am the easier induced to believe the Exquisiteness of the Torture, being sensible in my self by your bounty, what a burden it is for One, who would be ingenuous, to be Loaded with Curtesies which He hath not the least hope to requite, or deserve.

1. IN this year began the Suit betwixt Robert Horne Bishop of Winchester, and Edmund Bonner late Bishop of London on this occasion. All Bishops were impowred by the statute quinto Elizabethæ, to tender the Oath of Supremacy to all persons living within their Dioceſs. Now Bishop Bonner was within the Dioceſs of Winchester full ill against his will (as being a Prisoner in the Marshall-See, in Southwarke) to whom Horne offered this Oath, and he refused the taking thereof. Hereupon his refusall was returned into the Kings-Bench, and he indicted on the same. Being indicted, he appeared there, confessed the fact, but denied himself culpable, and intending to traverse the Inoictment, desired that Councell might be assigned him. Sr. Robert Cateline, then Chief Justice granted his motion, and no meaner then Ployden that eminent Lawyer Christopher Wray, afterwards Lord Chief Justice, and Lovelace, were deputed his Councell.

The suit betwixt Bp. Horne and Bonner.

2. First they pleaded for their Client, that Bonner was indicted without the title, and addition of Bishop of London, and only stiled Doctour of Law, and one in Holy Orders. But the Judges would not allow the exception as legall to avoid the Indictment.

Bonner his Councell Their 1. Plea.

3. Secondly, they pleaded that the Certificate entred upon Record, was thus brought into the Court. Tali die & anno per A. B. Cancellarium dicti Episcopi Winton. And did not say, per mandatum Episcopi, for the want of which clause, Bonner his Councell took exceptions thereat, sed non allocatur, because the Record of it by the Court is not of necessity.

2. Exception.

Main matter debated by the Judges,

4. Pass we by their third exception, that he was indicted upon that Certificat in the County of Middlesex by the common Jury of enquest in the Kings-Bench for that County. It being resolved by the Judges that his triall could not be by a Jury of Middlesex, but by a Jury of Surrie of the neighbourhood of Southwark; The main matter which was so much debated amongst all the Judges in the Lord Catelins his chamber was this.

Anno Dom. 1568 Anno Regni Eliz. 10

> Whether Bonner could give in evidence of that issue that he had pleaded of not guilty, that Horne Bishop of Winchester was not a Bishop tempore oblationis Sacramenti, at the time wherein he tendred the oath unto Bonner.

a Dyer fol. 234 Mich. 6. & 7. Eliz. plaint 15.

And it was resolved by them [a] all, that if the truth of the matter was so indeed, that he might give that in evidence upon that issue, and that the Jury might trie whether he was a Bishop then or no.

Divided by the Parliament.

5. Whilest this suit as yet depended, the Queen called a Parliament, which put a period to the controversie, and cleared the legality of Horne his Episcopacy in a Satute enacting, That all persons that have been or shall be made, ordered, or consecrate, Arch-Bishops, Bishops, Priests, Ministers of Gods Holy Word and Sacraments, or Deacons after the forme and order prescribed in the said order and form how Arch-Bishops, Bishops, Priests, Deacons, and Ministers should be consecrated, made, and ordered, be in very deed, and also by authority hereof, declared and enacted to be, and shall be, Arch-Bishops, Bishops, Priests, Ministers, and Deacons, and lawfully made, consecrated, and ordered: Any Statute, law, Canon, or other thing to the contrary notwithstanding. Eliz. 8. Sept. 30. 110.

A favourable proviso.

6. However it immediately followeth, Provided alwayes, and nevertheless be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that no person or persons shall at any time hereafter, be impeached or molested in body, lands, livings, or goods, by occasion or mean of any Certificate, by any Arch-Bishop, or Bishop heretofore made, or before the last day of this present Session of Parliament to be made, by vertue of any Act made in the first Session of Parliament, touching, or concerning, the refusal of the oath declared and set forth by Act of Parliament, in the first yeer of the Reign of our said Soveraign Ladie Queen Elizabeth: Any thing in this Act, or any other Act or Statute heretofore made to the contrary notwithstanding.

Their suit. supersceded.

7. The seasonable interposing of this Statute made it a Drawn battell betwixt Horne and Bonner. The former part thereof here alledged cleared Horne his Episcopacy from all cavils of law, the later Proviso was purposely inserted in favour of Bonner (who here himself found that which he never shewed to others) that he (as all other Popish Bishops deprived) might be no more molested for refusing the Oath of Supremacy. The Parliament saw they had already lost their livelihood and liberties for their erroneous consciences, and had received their thirty nine stripes, more then which the State thought not fit to inflict, lest their justice should degenerate into cruelty.

Malice pleased nor full nor fasting.

8. The enacting of this Statute did not stop the railing mouths of Papists against our Bishops, but only made them alter their note, and change their tune in reviling them. Formerly they condemned them as illegall, whose calling was not sufficiently warranted by the laws of the Land, henceforward * Sanders and others railed on them for Parliamentary Bishops, deriving all their Power and Commission from the State. But as well might the Jesuits terme [b] Shemaiah, Nethaniah Prerogative Levites, because sent by Jehosaphat to preach the word to the people of the Land. For that good King did not give, but quicken and encourage their Commission to teach, as here the Parliament did only publish, notifie, and declare the legall authority of the English Bishops, whose Call and Consecration to their place was formerly performed, derived from Apostolicall, or at leastwise Ecclesiastical institution.

* Descism. Ang. pag. 449.

[b] 2 Chron. 17. 8.

9. These

Anno Regin. Eliz. 1. Anno Dom. 1567.

9. These were the prime of the first Set of Puritans, which being very aged expired (for the most part) at or about this time, when behold another generation of Active and zealous Nonconformists succeeded them. Of these Coleman, Button, Helingham and Benson, (whose Christian names I cannot recover) were the chief; inveighing against the established Church-Discipline, accounting every thing from Rome which was not from Geneva, endeavouring in all things to conforme the government of the English Church, to the Presbyterian Reformation. Add these three more, though of inferiour note to the aforesaid Quaternion. William white, Thomas Rowland, Robert Hawkins, all beneficed within the Diocess of London, and take a taft of their Spirits out of the Register thereof.

The Ring-leaders of the second set of Nonconformists.

10. For this very yeer these three were cited to appear before Edmund Grindall Bp. of London, one who did not run of himself, yea would hardly answer the spur in pressing conformity, the Bp. asked them this question,

Have we not a godly Prince? a speak, is she evil?

Their judgements of the Queen.

To which they made their severall answers in manner following,

William White. What a question is that the fruits do shew.

Thomas Rowland. No but the Servants of God are persecuted under her.

Robert Hawkins. Why, this question the Prophet answereth in the Psalms. How canst thy have understanding that work iniquity, spoyling my people, and that extoll vanity.

a The Register of London pag. 33.

Wonder not therefore if the Queen proceeded severely against some of them, commanding them to be put into Prison, though still their Party daily increased.

11. Nicholas Wotton died this year Dean at the same time of Canterbury and Yorke, so that these two Metropolitan Churches, so often contesting about their Priviledges, were reconciled in his preferment. He was Doctour of both Laws, and some will say of both Gospels, who being Privie Councellour to King Henry the Eighth, Edward the Sixth, Queen Mary, and Queen Elizabeth, never overstrained his conscience, such his oylie compliance in all alterations. However he was a most Prudent man, and happily active in those many Embassies wherein he was employed.

The death of Dr. Wotton.

1568 12. The Romanists were neither ignorant not to observe, nor idle, not to improve the advantage lately given them by the discords betwixt the Bishops and Nonconformists. And now to strengthen their Party, two most active fugitive Priests, Thomas Harding, and Nicholas Saunders return into England, and that Episcopall power which they had lately received from the Pope, they largely exercised on the Papists.

Harding and Saunders Bishops in England.

1. Absolving all English in the Court of Conscience who returned to the bosome of their Church.
2. Dispensing with them in cases of irregularity: saving such which proceeded from wilfull murder.
3. Even from irregularity of heresie, on condition that the Party to be absolved refrained three years from the Ministery of the Altar.

b Camdens Eliz. in this year.

Very earnest they were in advancing the Catholick Cause, and perverted very many to their own Erroneous opinions.

16. May 17. 13. Mary Queen of Scots, ill used at home by her own Subjects made an escape into England, and landed at Wirkington in Cumberland, the State-part of whose sufferings we leave to Civill Historians, confining our selves to the imprinted passages concerning Religion beginning with her letter to the Pope.

Q. of Scots comes into England.

Most

Anno Dom. 1568. Anno Regni Eliz. 11.

Nove 30.

Her letter to Pope Pius Quintus. (hitherto never printed) the Copy whereof was with many other rarities bestowed on me by James Arch-Bishop of Armagh. translated out of the Italian.

Most Holy Father.

AFter the kissing of your most holy feet, I having been advertised that my Rebels and their Fautours that retain them in their Countries, have wrought so effectually by their practises, that it hath been related unto the King of Spain my Lord and good Brother, that I am become variable in the Catholick Religion, although I have within some dayes past written to your Holinesse devoutly to kiss your feet, and recommending me unto you, I do now again most humbly beseech you to hold me for a most devout, and a most obedient Daughter of the Holy Catholick Roman Church, and not to give faith unto those reports which may easily come, or shall hereafter come to your ears, by means of the false and calumnious speeches which the said Rebels, and other of the same Sect have caused to be spread abroad, that is to say, that I have changed my Religion, thereby to deprive me of your Holinesse grace, and the favour of other Catholick Princes. The same hath touched my heart so much, that I could not fail to write again of new to your Holinesse, to complain and bemoan my self of the wrongs and of the injuries which they do unto me. I beseech the same most humbly to be pleased to write in my favour to the devout Christian Princes, and obedient sons of your Holinesse, exhorting them to interpose their credit and authority which they have with the Queen of England, in whose power I am, to obtain of her, that she will let me go out of her country, whither I came, secured by her promises, to demand aid of her against my Rebels, and if nevertheless she will retain me, by all means yet that she will permit me to exercise my Religion, which hath been forbidden to me, for which I am grieved and vexed in this Kingdom, insomuch as I will give you to understand, what subtilties my Adversaries have used to colour these calumniations against me. They so wrought that an English Minister was sometimes brought to the place where I am streightly kept, which was wont to say certain prayers in the vulgar tongue, and because I am not at my own liberty, nor permitted to use any other Religion, I have not refused to hear him, thinking I had committed no errour. Wherein nevertheless most Holy Father, if I have offended or failed in that or any thing else, I ask misericordia of your Holinesse, beseeching the same to pardon and to absolve me, and to be sure and certain that I have never had any other will then constantly to live the most devout and most obedient Daughter of the Holy Catholick Roman Church, in which I will live and die according to your Holinesse advises and precepts. I offer to make such amends and pennance that all Catholick Princes, especially your Holinesse, as Monarch of the world, shall have occasion to rest satisfied and contented with me. In the mean time I will devoutly kiss your Holinesse feet, praying God long to conserve the same for the benefit of his Holy Church. Written from Castle [a] Boulton the last of November 1568.

a The Lord Scroop his house in Yorkshire, where Sr. Fra. Knowls was her keeper.

The most devout and obedient Daughter, to your Holinesse, the Q: of Scotland, Widdow of France

MARIA.

I meet

Anno Regin Eliz. 10.

Anno Dom. 1568

I meet not with the anſwer which his Holineſſe returned unto her, and for the preſent leave this Lady in ſafe cuſtody, foreſeeing that this her exchange of letters with Forraign Princes, and the Pope eſpecially will finally cauſe her deſtruction.

14. Thomas Young Arch-Biſhop of Yorke died at Sheffield, and was buried in his own Cathedrall. He plucked down the great Hall at Yorke, built by Thomas his predeceſſour five hundred yeers before, ſo far did plumbi ſacra ſames, deſire to gain by the trade, prevail with him. Yet one preſumeth to avouch, that all that lead in effect proved but droſs unto him, being [a] in fine defeated of the profit thereof. He was the firſt Proteſtant Engliſh Biſhop that died in the dayes of Q. Elizabeth.

The death of T. Young Arch-Biſhop of Yorke.

June 26. Anno Regin 11.

[a] S. J. Harington in his addition to Bp. Godwins catalogue.

Nove. 14. Mund

1569

15. Thomas Piercy Earle of Northumberland, and Charles Nevill Earle of Weſtmerland brake out into open Rebellion againſt the Queen. Lords of right noble extraction and large revenue (whoſe titles met with their eſtates in the Northern Parts) and indeed the height of their honour was more then the depths of their judgement. Theſe intended to reſtore the Romiſh Religion, ſet free the Queen of Scots, pretending much zeal for the liberty of the people, and honour of the nation, complaining of Queen Elizabeth her neglect of the ancient Nobility, and advancing mean perſons to the places of higheſt truſt and command, though indeed could ſhe have made her Noblemen wiſe, (as ſhe did her Wiſe men Noble) theſe Earls had never undertaken this Rebellion. Numerous their Tenants in the North, and their obligations the higher for the low rent they paid, though now alaſs poor ſouls they paid a heavy fine, loſing their lives in the cauſe of their Landlords.

The Rebellion of the Earls of Northumberland and Weſtmerland.

16. Their firſt valour was to fight againſt the Engliſh Bible, and Service-Booke in Durham, tearing them in pieces. And as yet unable to go to the coſt of ſaying Maſſe, for want of Veſtiments, they began with the cheapeſt piece of Popery. Holy water, their Wells plentifully affording water, and Plumtree the Prieſt quickly conferring conſecration. Afterwards better provided, they ſet up Maſs in moſt places where they came, Richard Norton an ancient and aged Gentleman carrying the Croſs before them, and others bearing in their Banners the five wounds of Chriſt, or a Chalice, according to their different devices. No great matter was atchieved by them, ſave the taking of Bainards Caſtle in the Biſhoprick, which indeed took it ſelf in effect, the Defenders thereof being deſtitute of Victuals and Proviſions.

More ſuperſtitious then valiant.

18. Wells Anno Regin 12. Dece. 10.

[b] Sows Cron. 663.

17. But hearing how the Garriſons of Carlile and Barwick were manned againſt them on their backs, and the Earle of Suſſex advancing out of the South with an Army to oppoſe them, their ſpirits quickly ſunk, and being better armed then diſciplined, wanting expert Commanders (how eaſily is a rout, routed) they fled Northwards and mouldered away without ſtanding a battell.

Routed by the Queen her forces.

18. An Italian Authour writing the life of Pope Pius Quintus giveth us this brief account of this expedition.

> They did not overrun the Kingdom as they ought to have done, and followed after Elizabeth, for which they could not have wanted followers enough; but they ſtood ſtill, and not being able to maintain themſelves long in the field for want of mony, they finally withdrew themſelves into Scotland without any thing doing.

An Italian Authour reckoning without his Hoaſt.

So eaſie it is for this Authors fancy (which ſcaleth the higheſt walls without Ladders, gaineth the ſtraighteſt paſſes without blows, croſſes the deepeſt Rivers without Bridge, Ford, or Ferry) to overrun England, though otherwiſe this handfull of men (never exceeding ſix hundred horſe, and four thouſand foot) were unlikely to run through other ſhiers, who could not ſtand a blow, in their own Country.

19. Northumberland

Anno Dom. 1569. Anno Regin. Eliz. 12.

Northumberland with many more of the Rebels executed.

19. Northumberland fled into Scotland, lurked there a time, was betrayed to Earle Murrey, sent back into England, and beheaded at Yorke. Westmerland made his escape into Flanders (the wisest work that ever he did) where he long lived very poore, on a small, and ill paied Pension. Many were executed by Sr. George Bowes Knight Marshall, every market Town being then made a shire Town for his Assises, betwixt New-Castle, and Witherby, (a about sixty miles in length, and forty in breadth) much terrifying those parts with his severity. Insomuch that when next year Leonard Dacres put together the ends of the quenched brands of this Rebellion, with intent to rekindle them, they would not take fire, but by the vigilancy and valour of the L. Hunsdon his designe was seasonably defeated.

a Stow his Chronicle. p. 663.

The execution of Dr. Story.

20. John Story D. of Law, a cruel persecutor in the dayes of Q. Mary (being said for his share to have martyred two or three hundred) fled afterwards over into Brabant, and because great with Duke de Alva (like cup, like cover) he made him searcher at Antwerp for English goods. Where if he could detect either Bible, or Heretical Books, as they termed them in any ship, it either cost their persons imprisonment, or goods confiscation. But now being trained into the ship of Mr. Parker an Englishman, the Master hoised sail (time and tide winde and water consenting to that designe) and over was this Tyrant and Traitor brought into England: where refusing to take the Oath of Supremacy, and professing himself subject to the King of Spain, he was executed at Tyburne; Where being cut down halfe dead, after his * privie members were cut off, he rushed on the Executioner, and gave him a blow on the eare, to the wonder (saith my Author) of all the standers by, and I (who was not there) wonder more that it was not recounted amongst the Romish miracles.

* Fox Acts & Mon. p. 2152.

* Fox Acts & Mon. ut prius.

The original of the English Colledges beyond the seas.

21. The old store of Papists in England began now very much to diminish, and decay; insomuch that the Romanists perceiv'd, they could not spend at this rate out of the main stock, but it would quickly make them Bankerupt. Prisons consumed many, Age moe of their Priests, and they had no place in England whence to recruit themselves. The largest cisterne with long drawing will grow dry, if wanting a fountain to feed the daily decay thereof. Hereupon they resolved to erect Colledges beyond the seas, for English youth to have their education therein. A project now begun, and so effectually prosecuted, that within the compasse of fifty years, nine Colledges were by them founded, and furnished with Students, and they with maintenance, as by the following Catalogue may appear, as they stood at the last yeer of King James. Since (no doubt) they have been enlarged in greatnesse, increased in number, enriched in revenues, as such who shall succeed us in continuing this Story, may report to posterity. May they at my request (if having the conveniencies of leisure, and instructions) be pleased to perfect this my Catalogue, and replenish the vacuities thereof with their more exact observations. And let no Papists laugh at our light mistakes, Protestants not pretending to such exact intelligence of their Colledges, as they have of ours. Indeed they have too criticall instructions of all our English societies, by their agents living amongst us; and it is a bad signe, when suspicious persons are over-preying to know the windows, doors, all the passages and contrivances of their neighbours houses, as intending therein some designe for themselves.

Colledge.

Anno Regin Eliz. 12. Anno Dom. 1569.

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactors.	Means.
1. Douay Colledge in Flanders, founded 1569. Thence (for fear of the wars) removed to Rhems in France about 1508. where Henry the third King of France, did patronize, and protect them. And some twenty years after brought back hither again.	Philip, the Second King of Spaine.	All the Recusants in England.	A pension out of the King of Spains Treasury, which being sometimes but badly paid, the Scholars are fain to feed on patience. 2. A yearly collection from the Catholicks of England. 3. Sale of Masses, Rich mens mortuaries, which also are the staple maintenance of all other Colledges.

Number.	Rector.	Eminent Schollars.
Uncertain, but numerous. For, here they do not pick and choose, for wit, or wealth, (as in other Colledges) but they receive all that come unto them.	1. William Allen (afterwards Cardinal) a principal procurer, and advancer of this foundation. (Lancaster) He died 1594. 2. Tho. Worthington (of an ancient family in Lancashire) Rector 1609. 3. Matthew Kelison, a North-Hamptonshire man, Rector 1624. Note, That whereas the government of all other English Colledges belongs to Jesuits, this only is ruled by Secular Priests.	Dr. Web, whom they brag to be the best Casuist in the world. He lived to sing his Mass of Jubile, having been a Priest full fifty years.

Anno Dom. 1569.

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactour.	Means.
2. Colledge of Rome, founded 1579.	Gregory the 13. Pope exhibited maintenance, first to six, then to fourteen, at last to threescore Scholars therein, to the yearly value of foure thousand Crowns.	Owen Lewes Referendary Apostolical, was a principal promoter thereof.	The Welsh Hospital in Rome (founded, and endowed many hundred yeers since, by Cadwallader, King of Wales, for Welsh pilgrims) with the rich lands thereof, conferred by Pope Gregorie the 13. on this Colledge. They have at Frascata (which is the Popes Sommer house, lying some ten miles East of Rome) three or four farmes, where corne for the Colledge, and other provision groweth.

Number.	Rectour.	Eminent Scholars.
One hundred at the least. But Italian aire not well agreeing with English bodies, they bury yearly ten, or twelve of their fresh-men. Note; that whereas Anno 1576. there were but thirty old Priests remaining in this Realm, these two Colledges alone within few years sent above three hundred Priests into England.	1. D. Maurice. He was removed out of his place for being too favourable to his Countrimen, the Welsh. 2. Ferdinando, a Neapolitan Jesuite succeeded him. 3. Robert Persons, Rectour for twenty three years, from 1587. to 1610. where he died. 4. Thomas Fitzherbert, one of great age, and parentage, Rectour 1623.	Francis Mounfort, who Anno 1591. being to depart the Colledge for England, took his farewell of Pope Clement the eighth, with so passionate a latin Oration, that it fetch'd tears from the tender heart of his Holines. This Mounfort, some moneths after, was executed in England.

a Extant the continuation of Sanders de Schis. Angl. pag. 119. Image of both Churches pag. 330. Sanders de Schism. Angl. pag. 365.

Anno Regni Eliz. 8. Anno Dom. 1566.

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactours.	Means.
3. Colledge of Valladolit in Old Caſtile founded 1589.	Philip the ſecond, King of Spain.	Dona Luyſa de Caravaial, a rich widow Ladie in Spain, gave all her eſtate (being very great) to this Colledge, and came over into England, where ſhe died.	Lands they have not purchaſed much in Spain (being loth the Spaniard ſhould take notice of their wealth) but great ſums of mony they have at uſe in Brabant. As alſo with Engliſh Factours in Spain (perverted to their perſwaſion) they have a great ſtock in trading.

Number.	Rector.	Eminent Scholars.
They are fewer now than formerly, ever ſince the Spaniſh Court was removed by Philip the Third, from Valladolit, to Madrid.	Father Walpoole (if not Rectour) was principall actour herein, about the year 1605. When by pretending to have gained Mr. Pickering Wotton, (ſon, and heir to Lord Wotton) to the Romiſh Church, he got above [a] five hundred pound to his Colledge.

Know that Sr. Francis Ingleſield, Privie Councellour to Queen Mary, forſaking his fair Eſtate in Bark-ſhire in the firſt of Queen Elizabeth, fled beyond the Sea. He afterwards was a bountifull benefactor to the Colledge at Valladolit; Yea he is beheld by the Engliſh Papiſts as a Benefactor Generall to their Nation, for the priviledges he procured them from Pope Gregory the thirteenth, whereof hereafter. He lieth buried in this Colledge, and his Grave is ſhewen with great reſpect to Travellers of our Country coming thither

[a] See this forgery at large in Lewes Owen his Running Regiſter. p. 59 to whom I am much beholding for my inſtructions in this ſubject.

Anno Dom. 1589.

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactours.	Means.
4. Colledge of Sivil, founded 1593.	Philip the second, King of Spain.	Our English Merchants, and Factours there residing, even often against their own wills, to secure themselves from the searchers in the Inquisition. So that it is a Nemo scit, what here is gotten for a Ne noceant.	They have a Box in every ship sailing to the West-Indies. Upon it is the picture of Sᵘᵗ. Thomas Becket (on the Octaves of whose day this Colledge forsooth was first founded) and into it (through an hole in the lid thereof) Merchants put in their devotion. The key of this (not Christmas, but all-the-year-long) box is kept by the Rector of the Colledge, who only knoweth to how much this money amounteth.

Number.	Rector.	Eminent Scholars.

* Cunning conveyances to pass over the seas.

* Here expect not of me a discovery (being no Spie by my profession) of the cunning contrivances, whereby these Jesuits pass, and repass the seas, without any detection, yea, suspicion of them. Sometimes under the protection of a Pass (procured from some Lords of the Privie Councell) for a young Gentleman to go over into France (with two, or three, of his Serving-men) to learn the language. Sometimes they shuffle themselves into the company of an Embassadour, or his meniall servants, and so cover their private falsehood, under his publick Faith. Many English Gentlewomen intended for Nunns, are first vailed (before their going beyond seas) under pretence of travelling to the Spaw for their healths. In their return for England, these Jesuits have found the fartherest way about, for them the neerest way home. For, out of France, or Spain, first they will sail into the Low-Countries, and thence into England; and so, coming immediately out of Protestant parts, escape without any, or with easie examination. And yet these curious Engineers, who flie so high, and carry their conveyances so farr above all common discovery, have sometimes one of their wheels or strings broken, and then down they fall into Newgate, or some other prison, notwithstanding all their verbal, and real equivocations.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 13. Anno Dom. 1569

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactours.	Means.
5. Saint Omers in Artois founded about the year 1596.	Philip the second, who gave them a good annuity, for whose soul they say every day a Mass, and every year an Obitum.	English Catholicks, especially the parents, or friends of such youths, as here have their education.	Watton-Cloister, being a most pleasant place, with good land, and a fair wood, some two leagues off. It anciently belonged to the Benedictines, of whom the Jesuits here bought it, Pope Paulus Quintus, and the King of Spain, confirming their bargain. It is said to be worth five hundred pounds a year.

Number.	Rectour.	Eminent Scholars.
Welnigh an hundred of Gentlemens sons (not as yet professed Jesuits, though like them in habit, but) young Scholars. Besides above twenty Jesuits (Priests, and Laybrethren) having an inspection over them.	Though this Colledge be of English only, yet their Rectour generally is a Fleming, and that out of a double designe. First, that he may solicite their suits in that country, the better by the advantage of his language, and acquaintance. Secondly, that they may the more colourably, deny such English passengers as begg of them, pleading, that their Rectour, being a stranger, will part with no money, and they have none of their own.	Father { Fleck. Floid. Wilson.

Colledge.

Anno Dom. 1569. Anno Regni Eliz. 12.

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactours.	Means.
6. Colledge of Madrid in New Castile in Spain founded 1606.	Joseph Creswel, Jesuite, with money of the two Colledges of Valladolit and Sivil, bought an house here, and built a Colledge thereon.		What they gain by soliciting of suits for Merchants, and others, in the Spanish Court. The rest is supplied unto Colledges, from the Parents thereof, I mean, the two Colledges of Valladolit, and Sivil.

Number.	Rector.	Eminent Scholars.

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactour.	Means.
7. Colledge of Lovain in Brabant, founded about the year 1606.	Philip the Third, King of Spain, gave a Castle (then much decayed, never much defensive for this City) with a pension to the English Jesuits, to build them a Colledge therewith.

Number.	Rector.	Eminent Scholars.
Uncertain, as much in motion, and never all resident here together.

Colledge.

Anno Regni Eliz. 12 | Anno Dom. 1569

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactours.	Means.
8. Colledge of Liege in Lukeland founded 1616.	The Arch-Bishop of Collen (being at this time also Bishop of Liege) gave them a pension to live on, and leave to build a fair Colledge here.	Many of the English Nobility, and Gentry, under pretence of passing to the Spaw for recovery of their healths, here drop much of their gold by the way. It is doubtfull how soveraign the Spaw-water will prove to these passengers, but certain that their gold is cordial to these Jesuits.

Number.	Rector.	Eminent Scholars.
		Mr. Brown, brother to the last Vicount Mountacute in Sussex, became here a Jesuite.

Colledge.	Founder.	Benefactours.	Means.
9. Colledge of Gant in Flanders founded 1624.	Philip the Fourth, who gave them a pension.

Number.	Rector.	Eminent Scholars.

One may observe a kinde of gradation in these Colledges. St. Omers, generally is for boyes, to be taught in Grammar: Rome, for youths studying the arts; all the rest for men (Novices, or professed Jesuits) save that Doway is for any, of what age or parts soever. Compare these Colledges amongst themselves, Rome will appear the richest in visible; Valladolist, the cunningest in concealed wealth. Doway the largest in men, and straightest in means; Liege, getting the most from passengers on land; Sivil, gaining the best by Travellers at sea; Madrid, wearing the bravest cloaths (where all the the Jesuits are constant Courtiers) and S^t. Omers eating the best meat, as neerest to England, whence many a dainty bit is daily sent unto them.

Anno Dom. 1569. Anno Regin. Elizab. 12.

The bounty of English Catholicks.

22. It is incredible what a mass of mony (much in specie, more in exchange) was yearly made over out of England, for the maintenance of these Colledges: having here their Provincials, Sub-Provincials, Assistants, Agents, Coadjutours, Familiars &c. who collected vast sums for them, especially from Catholicks possessed of considerable estates out of Abby-lands, his Holinesse dispensing with them, to hold the same with a clear conscience, if bountifull on all such occasions.

The oath taken by English Fugitives at their admission.

23. We will conclude all with the solemn Oath, which each Student (arrived at mans estate) ceremoniously sweareth, when admitted into one of these Colledges;

I. A. B. [a] one bred in this English Colledge, considering how great benefits God hath bestowed upon me, but then especially, when he brought me out of mine own Country, so much infected with Heresie, and made me a member of the Catholick Church, as also desiring with a thankfull heart, to improve so great a mercy of God, have resolved to offer my self wholy up to Divine Service, as much as I may to fulfill the end for which this our Colledge was founded. I promise therefore, and swear, in the presence of Almighty God, that I am prepared from mine heart, with the assistance of Divine Grace, in due time to receive Holy Orders, and to return into England, to convert the souls of my Countrymen, and kindred, when, and as often as it shall seem good to the Superiour of this Colledge &c.

[a] In the continuation of Sanders de schismate Anglicano p. 116.

Be it remembred, that our long Vacation, is their chiefest Term; for, in the moneths of August, or September, these Colledges receive their annual supplies of green Students, and then dispatch their ripe Noviciats for England; or, if you will, then take in young spawn, and send their old frogs over hither a croaking. All that I will adde is this; If covetousnes should prevail so far, as to pluck down Protestant-Colledges in England, whilest superstition preserves, and increaseth Popish Seminaries beyond the seas, sad would the sight be, to behold the truth on our side encumbred with ignorance, to encounter falsehood on theirs, advantaged with learning and languages.

The Pope excommunicateth the Queen.

24. Pope Pius the fifth had now long patiently expected the amendment of Queen Elizabeth; and, weary with his waiting in vain, resolved at last (if not wisely, valiantly) that, seeing desperate diseases must have desperate cures, he would thunder his Excommunication against Her, according to the tenour following.

A Sentence

Anno Regin. Eliz. 11. Anno Dom. 1569.

A Sentence Declaratory of our Holy Lord Pope PIUS QUINTUS, against ELIZABETH Queen of England, and the Hereticks adhering unto Her.

Wherein also Her Subjects are declared absolved from the Oath of Allegiance, and every other thing due unto Her whatsoever. And those, which from henceforth obey Her, are innodated with the Anathema.

Pius Bishop, servant to Gods servants, for a future memorial of the matter.

HE that reigneth on high, to whom is given all power in heaven, and in earth, committed One Holy Catholick, and Apostolick Church, out of which there is no salvation, to one alone upon earth, namely to Peter the chief of the Apostles, and to Peters Successour, the Bishop of Rome to be governed in fulness of power. Him alone he made Prince over all people, and all Kingdoms, to pluck up, destroy, scatter, consume, plant, and build: that he may contain the faithfull that are knit together, with the band of charity in the unity of the Spirit, and present them spotlesse, and unblameable to their Saviour. In discharge of which function, We, which are by Gods goodnesse called to the government of the aforesaid Church, do spare no pains, labouring with all earnestnes, that Unity, and the Catholick Religion (which the Author thereof hath, for the triall of his childrens faith, and for our amendment, suffered with so great afflictions) might be preserved uncorrupt. But the number of the ungodly hath gotten such power, that there is now no place left in the whole world, which they have not assayed to corrupt, with their most wicked Doctrines. Amongst others, Elizabeth, the pretended Queen of England, the servant of wickedness, lending thereunto her helping hand, with whom, as in a Sanctuary, the most pernicious of all have found a refuge. This very woman, having seised on the Kingdom, and monstrously usurping the place of Supreme Head of the Church, in all England, and the chief authority, and jurisdiction thereof, hath again brought back the said Kingdom into miserable destruction, which was then newly reduced to the Catholick Faith, and good fruits.

For, having by strong hand inhibited the exercise of the true Religion, which Mary the lawfull Queen, of famous memory, had by the help of this See restored, after it had been formerly overthrown by Henry the eighth, a revolter therefrom: and following, and embracing the errours of Hereticks, She hath removed the Royall Councell consisting of the English Nobility, and filled it with obscure men, being Hereticks, suppressed the embracers of the Catholick Faith, placed dishonest Preachers, and Ministers of impieties, abolished the sacrifice of the Mass, Prayers, Fastings, Choice of meats, Unmarried life, and the Catholick Rites, and Ceremonies; commanded Books to be read in the whole Realm, containing manifest Heresie, and impious mysteries, and institutions by Her self entertained, and observed, according to the prescript of Calvin, to be likewise observed by Her Subjects: presumed to throw Bishops, Parsons of Churches, and other Catholick Priests, out of their Churches, and Benefices, and to bestow them, and other Church-livings upon Hereticks, and to determine of Church causes; prohibited the Prelates, Clergy, and People, to acknowledge the Church of Rome, or obey the Precepts, and Canonicall Sanctions thereof; compelled most of them to condescend to Her wicked Laws, and to abjure the authority, and obedience of the Bishop of Rome, and to acknowledge Her to be sole Ladie in temporall and spirituall matters, and this by oath; imposed penalties, and punishments upon those which obeyed not, and exacted them of those, which persevered in the unity of the faith, and their obedience aforesaid; cast the Catholick Prelates, and Rectors of Churches in prison, where many of them, being spent with long languishing, and sorrow, miserably ended their lives. All which things, seeing they are manifest, and notorious to all Nations, and by the gravest testimony of very many, so substantially proved, that there is no place at all left for excuse, defence, or evasion. We, seeing that impieties, and wicked actions are multiplied one upon another; and moreover, that the persecution of the faithfull, and affliction for Religion, groweth every day heavier, and heavier, through the instigation, and means of the said Elizabeth; because We understand Her minde to be so hardened, and indurate, that She hath not only contemned the godly requests, and admonitions of Catholick Princes, concerning Her healing, and conversion; but (alas) hath not so much as permitted the Nuncios of this See, to cross the seas into England: are constrained of necessity to betake our selves to the weapons of justice against Her, not being able to mitigate our sorrow; that We are drawn to take punishment upon one, to whose Ancestors the whole state of all Christendome hath been so much bounden. Being therefore supported with His authority, whose pleasure it was to place Us (though unable for so great a burden) in this supreme throne of justice, We do, out of the fulnesse of Our Apostolick Power, declare the aforesaid Elizabeth, being an Heretick, and a favourer of Heresies, and Her adherents in the matters aforesaid, to have incurred sentence of Anathema, and to be cut off from the unity of the body of Christ. And moreover, We do declare Her to be deprived of Her pretended title to the Kingdom aforesaid, and of all Dominion, Dignity, and Priviledge whatsoever; and also the Nobility, Subjects, and People of the said Kingdom, and all other which have in any sort sworn unto Her, to be for ever absolved from any such oath, and all manner of duty of Dominion, Allegiance, and Obedience; As We do also by authority of these presents absolve them, and do deprive the same Elizabeth of Her pretended title to the Kingdom, and all other things above-said. And We do command, and interdict all, and every the Noble-men, Subjects, People,

Anno Regin Eliz. 11. Anno Dom. 1569.

People, and others aforesaid, that they presume not to obey Her, or Her monitions, mandates, and laws; and those which shall do the contrary, We do innodate with the like Sentence of Anathema. And, because it were a matter of too much difficulty, to convey these presents to all places, wheresoever it shall be needfull, Our will is, that the copies thereof, under a publick Notaries hand, and sealed with the seal of an Ecclesiastical Prelate, or of his court, shall carry together the same credit, with all people, judicially, and extrajudicially, as these presents should do, if they were exhibited or shewed.

Given at Rome at S^t. Peters, in the year of the incarnation of our Lord, one thousand five hundred sixty nine, the fifth of the Kalends of March, and of Our Popedom, the fifth year.

Cæ: Glorierius.
H. Cumyn.

25. The principall persons, whose importunity solicited the Pope to thunder out this excommunication, were D^r. Harding, D^r. Stapleton, D^r. Morton, and D^r. Web. And now the news thereof, flying over into England, variously affected the Catholicks, according to their several dispositions.

The different opinions of English Catholicks, concerning this excommunication.

1. Some admired, and applauded the resolution of His holinesse, expecting, all persons should instantly start, from the infectious presence of the Queen; and that that virgin-rose, so blasted, should immediately wither.
2. Others would not believe that there was any such excommunication at all, but, that it was a mere slander, devised by the common enemy, to make all Catholicks odious.
3. Others accounted such Excommunication, though denounced, of no validity, [a] because the reasons which moved the Pope thereunto, were falsely, and surreptitiously suggested to His Holiness.
4. Others did question the lawfulnesse of all excommunications of Princes, according to the rule of S^t. Thomas, Princeps, & multitudo non est excommunicanda, where the uncertain profit, which might follow, could not countervail the certain mischief which would ensue.
5. Others did condemne the present excommunication, pro hic, & nunc, as unexpedient, probable to incense, and exasperate the Queen to more severity, and make Her gird Her government closer to their sides, who thought to shake it off. This was apparent by the wofull experience of the excommunication denounced against King Henry the eighth. Yea, Watson, Bishop of Lincolne (if his [b] namesake may be credited) was exceedingly grieved at the Popes proceedings herein, foreseeing the inconvenience would thence arise. This same Watson was he, who, in the first of Queen Elizabeth, would in all hast, by his own bare Episcopal power, have excommunicated Her; but now, older and wiser, mollified with ten years durance, he altered his opinion.
6. Others were unsatisfied in the Authenticalnes of the instrument, who never did or durst see the original, and were unresolved, whether the copies were sufficiently attested.

[a] Watsons Quodlibets pag. 262.

[b] Watsons Quodlibets pag. 260.

Anno Dom. 1569. Anno Regni Eliz. 12.

7. Others were perplexed in point of conſcience, how far they were bound to obey herein, ſeeing the law of nature obligeth the wife in duty to her huſband excommunicated, and the ſame reaſon is of the ſervant to the Maſter, Subject to the Prince.

8. Laſtly, Others were troubled in point of policy, having their perſons, and eſtates in the Queens power; and Baunes the School-man pleadeth, that Subjects are not bound to deſert, or reſiſt their Prince, when ſuch actions neceſſarily infer danger of death, and loſt of goods.

But, leaving them to have their ſcruples ſatisfied by their Confeſſours, this cauſeleſſe curſe to Queen Elizabeth was turn'd into a bleſſing: and, as the Barbarians looked, when St. Paul (having the viper upon [a] his hand) ſhould have ſwoln, and falne down dead, whilſt he ſhooke it off into the fire without any hurt, or harme: ſo Papiſts expected, when the Queen ſhould have miſerably expired, ſtung to the heart with this excommunication, when She, nothing frighted thereat, in ſilence ſlighted, and neglected it, without the leaſt dammage to Her power, or perſon, and no whit the leſs lov'd of Her ſubjects, or fear'd of Her enemies. And moſt falſe it is which Sanders [b] reports, that She, by the mediation of ſome great men, ſecretly laboured in vain in the Court of Rome, to procure a Revocation of the Popes ſentence againſt Her, as what another [c] relateth: how She was wont to ſay, that the thing it ſelf grieved Her not ſo much, as becauſe done by P. Pius, whoſe Election and life, ſhe held for miraculous.

a Acts 28.6.

b De Schiſm. Anglicano pag. 372.

c An Italian in the life of Pius Quintus.

The death of Bp. Barlow, and Bourn.

26. This year two eminent Biſhops, once of the ſame Cathedral, but different Religions, ended their lives. William Barlow, Dr. of Divinity, Canon of St. Oſith, then Prior of Breſham, ſucceſſively Biſhop of St. Aſaph, St. Davids, and Bath and Wells, in the dayes of King Edward the ſixth. Afterwards an exile, in the reign of Queen Mary in Germany, where he lived in great want, and poverty, and by Queen Elizabeth he was made Biſhop of Chicheſter, where he was buried. The other Gilbert Bourne Biſhop of Bath and Wells, though a zealous Papiſt, yet of a good nature, well deſerving of his Cathedral, and who found alſo fair uſage in his reſtraint, living in free cuſtody with the Dean of Exeter, and lies buried in the Pariſh-Church of Silverton.

Popiſh expectation deſeated.

c Camdens Eliz. in Anno 1570.

27. Now was the twelfth year of the Queen fully paſt with her ſafety and Honour. In which the Credulous Papiſts truſting the predictions of Southſayers, had promiſed to themſelves a Golden [c] day as they called it. Inſtead whereof they are likely to finde many Leaden years hereafter. And henceforward the ſeventeenth of November, the day of the Queens Inauguration was celebrated with far greater Solemnity then ever before. Saint Hugh being for fourty four years left out of our Calenders to make Room for Her Majeſty: And John Felton, who faſtned the Popes Bull to the Palace of London, being taken and refuſing to fly, was hanged on a Gibbet before the Popes Palace. 1570 July 15. Aug. 1.

The foundation of Jeſus Col. in Oxford.

28. Hugh Price Dr. of the Civill Law, procured the foundation of a Colledge in Oxford on a Ground, where White-hall had been formerly ſituated, which with Edifices and Gardens thereto belonging, being then in the Crown, Queen Elizabeth gave to ſo pious a uſe, and therefore is ſtiled the Foundreſs in this Mortmain. However the ſaid Doctor inſcribed theſe following verſes over the Gate, when the Building of the Colledge was but begun,

Struxit Hugo Pricius tibi clara Palatia Jeſu,
Ut Doctor Legum Pectora Docta daret.
Hugh Price this Palace did to Jeſus Build,
That a Laws Doctor Learned men might yield.

But

Anno Regin Eliz. 12.

Anno Dom. 1570

But an Oxford [a] Author telleth us that a Satyrical Pen did under-write with Wit and Wagary enough these following verses.

[a] Pitz. de Ang. Ox. pag. 37.

Nondum struxit Hugo, vix fundamenta locavit,
Det Deus ut possit dicere struxit Hugo.

Hugh hath not Built it yet, may it be said
Hugh Built it, who hath scarce the Ground-work Laid.

But no doubt the Scholars therein at their first admission, know how to justifie their reputed Founders words by the Figure of Prolepsis, and can tell you that what is well began is half finished.

Principalls.	Bishops.	Benefactors.	Learned-writers.
Dr. David Lewis, * Dr. of Laws. 1. Dr. Lloyd, Dr. of Law, and Dean of the Arches 2. Dr. Griffin Lloyd, Chanc. of Oxon 3. Dr. Fra Bevans 4. Dr. Jo. Williams, Marg. Prof. 5. Griffith Powell, Bac. of Law. 6. Francis Mansell, D. D. Fellow of All-Souls. 7. He resigned his place to Sr. Eubule Thelwel, (one of the Masters of the Chancery) conceiving he might be more serviceable to the Colledge. Sr. Eubule Thelwel. K. 8. Dr. Francis Mansel, rechosen. 9. Michael Roberts, D. D. 10.	Morgan Owen, Bishop of Landaffe. Thomas Howel, Bishop of Bristoll, A most excellent Preacher.	Herbert Westfalling, Bp. of Hereford. Hen. Rowland, Bp. of Bangor. Griffith Lloyd, Dr. of Law. Griffith Powell. John Williams Dr. of Divinity. Sr. Eubule Thelwell, K. who made a Court in a manner four-square, builded and wainscotted the Hall, perfected the Chappel with a curious and costly Roof &c. Mistres Jane Wood: widdow of Owen Wood Dean of Armagh.	James Howel an elegant writer.

* This Coll. hath had ten Principals, whereas Trin. Coll. in the same University, founded 14. years before, hath had but five Presidents.

So that in the year 1634. It had one Principall, sixteen Fellows, sixteen Scholers, most of the ancient British Nation, besides officers and servants of the Foundation, and other Students. All which made up the Number of one hundred and nine.

29. Hitherto Papists generally without regret, repaired to the publike places of Divine Service, and were present at our Prayers, Sermons, and Sacraments. What they thought in their hearts, He knew who knoweth hearts; but in outward conformity, they kept communion with the Church

The first beginning of Recusancie.

Church of England. In which ſenſe one may ſay, that the whole land was of one language, and one ſpeech. But now began the tower of Babel to be built, and Popery to encreaſe, which brought with it the diviſion of tongues, and the common diſtinction of Papiſt, and Proteſtant, the former now ſeparating themſelves from our publick Congregations; They went out from us, becauſe they were not of us, for, had they been of us, they would have continued with us. Indeed the Pope ſet his mark of favour on ſuch reputed ſheep, as abſented themſelves from our Churches, henceforward accounting them goats that repaired thither. And now began the word Recuſant to be firſt born and bred in mens mouths. Which (though formerly in being to ſignify ſuch as refuſed to obey the edicts of lawfull authority) was now confined in common diſcourſe, to expreſs thoſe of the Church of Rome.

Anno Dom. 1570. Anno Regin. Eliz. 13

Papiſts their own perſecutors.

30. Indeed hitherto the Engliſh Papiſts ſlept in a whole ſkin, and ſo might have continued had they not wilfully torn it themſelves. For, the late rebellion in the North, and the Pope thundring out his excommunication againſt the Queen, with many ſcandalous and pernicious pamphlets daily diſperſed, made Her Majeſty about this time, firſt to frown on Papiſts, then to chide, then to ſtrike them with penalties; and laſt to draw life-blood from them, by the ſeverity of Her laws. For, now the Parliament ſate at Weſtminſter, cutting (as one may ſay) with a three-edg'd-ſword, as making ſharp edicts againſt Papiſts, non-Conformiſts, and covetous-Conformiſts of the Church of England.

A Parliament cutting with three edges.

31. Againſt Papiſts it was [a] enacted, that to write, print, preach, expreſs, publiſh, or affirme, that the Queen was an Heretick, Schiſmatick &c. ſhould be adjudged treaſon. Alſo that it ſhould be ſo accounted, and puniſhed, to bring, and put in execution, any Bulls, writings, inſtruments, or other ſuperſtitious things from the See of Rome, from the firſt of July following. A ſevere Act alſo was made againſt Fugitives, who, being the natural borne ſubjects of this Realm, departed the ſame without licenſe, and fled into forraign parts. Againſt non-Conformiſts it was provided, that every Prieſt or Miniſter, ſhould before the Nativity of Chriſt next following, in the preſence of his Dioceſan, or his deputy, declare his aſſent, and ſubſcribe to all the Articles of Religion, agreed on in the Convocation, One thouſand five hundred ſixty and two, upon pain of Deprivation on his refuſal thereof. Againſt covetous-conformiſts it was provided, that no ſpirituall perſon, Colledge, or Hoſpitall, ſhall let leaſe, other than for the terme of twenty one years, or three lives; the rent accuſtomed, or more, reſerved payable yearly during the ſaid terme.

[a] See the ſtatutes 13 Eliz.

Covetous Clergie men bridled.

32. Indeed this law came very ſeaſonably, to retrench the unconſcionable covetouſneſs of ſome Clergy men, who by long, and unreaſonable leaſes (as the Statute tearmed them) dilapidated the lands of their Churches. Here it came to paſs what the Spouſe [b] complains, that the keepers of the walls tooke her vail away from her. It being true what one ſaid, that thoſe who ſhould have righted her of her wrongs, did wrong her of her rights. Many a Biſhoprick ſo bruiſed it ſelf when it fell vacant, that it loſt ſome land before a new Biſhop was ſetled therein; where the Elects contracted with their Promoters on unworthy conditions.

[b] Cant. 5. 7.

Covetouſneſs creeps in at a ſmall cranie.

33. But no armour can be made of proof againſt the darts of covetouſneſs, eſpecially when they come from an high and heavy hand of great men in authority. This law was not ſo cautiouſly drawn up, but that ſome Courtiers found a way to evade it, ſeeing the Crown was not expreſſed therein, and left capable of ſuch leaſes (as, God-willing [c] hereafter ſhall be largely related) by which ſingle ſhift they fruſtrated the effect of this law. Thus a ſhip may (though not as ſuddenly, as certainly) be ſunk with one, as with a thouſand leaks.

[c] Vide 1604. Secundo Reg. Jacobi.

34. We

Anno Regni Eliz. 14 | Anno Dom 1572

34. We return to the Queen of Scots, of whom we have heard nothing this three years of Eccleſiaſticall cognizance, nor now meet with any thing of that nature ſave this letter, which though ſomewhat long, yet becauſe never as yet printed, and acquainting us with ſome paſſages in her reſtraint, is not unworthy the peruſall.

The ſecond letter of Mary Q. of Scots to the Pope.

Moſt Bleſſed Father,

Octob 31. AFter the kiſſing of your moſt holy feet, about the begining of October, I received your Holineſs Letter, written the thirteenth of July, by which I underſtood not only the Benediction which your Holineſs ſent me, and which was, and ſhall be alwayes to me moſt acceptable, but alſo the great demonſtration of your good will to comfort me. I reſted therewith ſingularly comforted indeed, partly becauſe it was pleaſed earneſtly, to recommend both me, and the affairs of my eſtate to the moſt Potent Princes, and eſpecially to the moſt renouned Kings of France and Spain. But withall there is yet remaining on the other part to work ſo with Chriſtian Princes, that making a ſtrict league among themſelves, they ſhould ſpare no vigilance, nor Travels, nor expences, once to abate the moſt Cruell * Tyrant who continually thinketh of no other thing, then to move warr againſt us all. And might it pleaſe God, that all other things might correſpond with my will, beſides that I were to do the ſame alſo, your Bleſſednesſe ſhould ſee it with effect, which ſhould be, that not only I, but alſo my ſubjects, with a will conform to their body, and together with other Chriſtians, would put our ſelves forward to do our utmoſt force. But what thing is there to be ſeen more worthy of compaſſion, then to ſee my ſelf fallen into ſo great infelicity, from that happineſſe wherein I found my ſelf lately; What thing is more lamentable then from a Free-woman as I was, to become a Servant. To theſe miſeries is added, that my Country is at this day, wrapped in ſuch and ſo many calamities, and beaten down with ſo many inroads of the Engliſh, that many and many Towns have been ſet on fire, and flames, many Caſtles and moſt fair Churches ruinated to the very Foundations. But that which is worſe, my Inhabitants and Subjects, without ſcarce doing the leaſt offence unto them, have been more cruelly ſlain. But What? ſhall I ſay nothing of my ſelf? Is it not clear unto all men, how I have been continually in divers and ſundry perils. I call God to witneſſe, who knows with what greatneſs of miſeries I have been alwayes ſtifled, and that which yet makes this Tempeſt more cruel unto me is, that thoſe who had promiſed to make proviſions for my good, have afterwards failed me, nor given me the leaſt favour in the world, nor do I hope that ever they will do it, except perhaps theſe made or prepared for or journey moſt inclined to help me, ſhall not be moved to undertake ſuch enterpriſes in my behalf. But to ſay the truth of it, although there were ſuccours gathered together, and a moſt aſſured Army of-from beyond the Seas, certainly not without great perill, could they croſs the Ocean into Scotland in the winter time, which then is wont to be moſt turbulent and ſtormy. But the Engliſh on the other ſide, who are not ſeparated from the Scots, with any River interpoſed between them, are able not only in Summer, but in Winter time alſo to move warr againſt the Scots themſelves, who when there doth riſe up even the leaſt occaſion of diſcord between them, are wont ſuddenly to put themſelves effectually into Arms. Conſtrained

* This is meant of the Turke, and not (as ſome may ſuſpect) of Q. Elizabeth.

* This letter to the Pope was written in Latine, then tranſlated into Italian, then retranſlated into Engliſh. Wonder not therefore if it loſe ſome native luſtre thereof.

ſtrained therefore by theſe principall reſpects, without I ſhould expoſe the intereſt of my Life and Country, to the hazard of the greateſt dangers, I am by no means able to help it, but that even to my greateſt diſadvantage I muſt make peace with the Engliſh, ſaving alwayes (as they ſay) my honour and conſcience, becauſe honour doth regard the civill adminiſtration, whereby to be able afterwards to rule or govern the Commonwealth. Then the conſcience, as being the forme and force divine given to men to direct them to a good end, which admitting it to be ſometimes ſtraightned and bound with calamities; Yet neverthelefs may it neither for torments, nor for promiſes of rewards be ever expelled or deprived from the Communion, and obedience of the Catholick Church. But amongſt other things, it now happeneth that I muſt relate to your Holineſs one thing moſt truly bitter unto me, that is, that we are come to thoſe tearms of deſiring my only Son, the Heir of the Temporal Kingdoms, to be delivered by a certain time into the hands of the Engliſh, by way of Hoſtage or pledge, reſerving to me nevertheleſs, the liberty to appoint him ſuch Governours and Counſellours afterwards, as ſhall beſt pleaſe me. There is moreover granted leave of acceſſion unto him, not only for me, but likewiſe to all thoſe that for my ſatisfaction ſhall be ſent into England to viſit him. Let not your Holineſs for this cauſe have any doubt, but that he ſhall be not only full of good and holy converſation, but alſo (though he be amongſt an unluckie nation) a perfect member of the Catholick and Apoſtolick Church, and alwayes ready and prone to help the ſame. But becauſe that by this my letter, I may not extend my ſelf in greater length beyond my duty, I do conclude with this, that I have determined with my ſelf, nevertheleſs to give your Holineſs to underſtand of my eſtate, and of all theſe things which for the preſent do paſs between them and me, and if theſe alſo which ſhall happen in the journey of any importance, and becauſe it is a moſt difficult thing to put all my occaſions in writing, I have for that cauſe informed the Biſhop of Dublin with all mine occurrences, as him that is, and alwayes hath been, my moſt faithfull Nuncio, and moſt lovingly affected towards your Holineſs, and the ſeat Apoſtolick. May it pleaſe your Holineſs to give faith unto him, concerning all the things whereof he ſhall treat with you in my name. Mean time I pray our Lord God, that he by his moſt holy grace, protect the Catholick Church from all the wicked thoughts of her Adverſaries, in which caſe all we have fixed our eyes upon your Holineſs, as upon a moſt clear light, expecting of the ſame continually in name of his Divine Majeſty your moſt Holy Benediction. And all with the ſame minde do deſire unto your Holineſs a moſt long life, to the glory of the moſt mighty God, and comfort of all the faithfull. From Chattiſworth in England, the laſt of October 1570.

Anno Dom. 1571. Anno Regni Eliz. 14.

The moſt Devout Daughter of your Holineſs
Mary the Queen.

Who ſo conſults our State-Hiſtorians in this very juncture of time, ſhall finde the Queen of Scots on tolerable tearms (daily likely to amend) with Queen Elizabeth. Yea, now ſhe was in the Verticall of her favour, wherein hence-forward ſhe began to decline, principally for practiſing with the Pope and Forraign Princes.

35. This

Anno Regin Eliz. 15. Anno Dom. 1572.

Section. III.

To Mrs. Anne Danvers of Chelsey.

Madam,

Let not your Maiden modesty be betrayed to a blush, seeing your self here left alone, sorrounded on all sides with Masculine Dedications. It will keep you in countenance, if reflecting your eye, either on the first page of this Booke, or side Columnes of this page: Where you shall finde the Queen of Virgins in the front thereof, whose Reign in this Booke is described. Indeed a portion thereof, being designed to your late Brother, (now glorious Saint) falls of course to you, with his goods, and Chattells, as his sole Executrix. If any Latine Letters occurr in this Section, I doubt not, but God will seasonably provide you such a Consort, who, (amongst his many other Virtues) will change you to a happy wife, and translate them to your understanding.

1. About this time deceased William Alley Bishop of Exeter, a Painfull Preacher, and John Jewell of Salisbury, of whom largely before. He was borne in Devonshire, bred first in Merton, then Corpus Christi Colledge in Oxford, first Pupill to, afterwards Fellow Exile with Mr. Parkhurst in Germany. After Queen Maries death Parkehurst durst not for danger return with Jewell, but went a securer way (as he supposed) by himself. Though Jewell came safe and sound home, whilest Parkehurst was robbed of all in his return, and relieved by the other at his journies end, and soon after both of them were made Bishops. Mr. Parkehurst of Norwich, and Jewell of Salisbury.

The death of the Bps. of Exeter and Salisbury. * Vide supra in the first year of Queen Mary.

2. A Jewell (sometimes taken for a single precious stone) is properly a collective of many, orderly set together to their best advantage. So severall eminences met in this worthy man. Naturals, Artificials (amongst which I recount recount his ſtudied memory, deſerving as well as Theodectes the Sophiſter, the Sirname of Mnemonicus) Moralls, but principally Spirituall. So devout in the Pew where he prayed, diligent in the Pulpit where he preached, grave on the Bench, where he aſſiſted, milde in the Conſiſtory where he judged, pleaſant at the Table where he fed, patient in the bed where he died, that well it were if in relation to him, Secundam uſum Sarum * were made Precedentiall to all Poſterity. He gave at his death to Peter Martyr a golden roſe (yet more fragrant for the Worth of the Giver, then the value of the gift) To the City of Zurich a Preſent which they converted into a piece of Plate with Jewells Arms thereon. To ſeverall Scholars, large Legacies. To the Church of Saliſburie a fair Library, and another to the Church of England, I mean his learned APOLOGIE. It is hard to ſay, whether his ſoul, or his Ejaculations arrived firſt in Heaven, ſeeing he prayed dying, and died praying. He was buried in the Quire by Biſhop Wivill. Two Champions of the Church lying together, one who with his ſword proffered to maintain the Lands; The other, who with his penn defended the Doctrine thereof. In the abſence of Doctor Humfreys deſigned for that ſervice, Mr. Giles Laurence preached his Funeralls, who formerly (being Tutor to the Children of Sr. Arthur Darcy by Algate in London) in Queen Maries dayes preſerved Jewells life, and provided accommodation for his flight beyond the Seas.

The praise of Bp. Jewell.

Anno Dom. 1570. Anno Regni Eliz. 13.

* Laurence Humfrey in the larg life of Bp Jewell.

Subſcription why now more rigorouſly urged.

3. Hitherto, the Biſhops had been the more ſparing in preſſing, and others more daring in denying ſubſcription, becauſe the Canons made in the Convocation 1563, were not for 9. years after confirmed by act of Parliament. But now the ſame being ratified, by Parliamentall authority, they began the urging thereof more ſeverely then before, which made many diſſenters keep their private meetings in [a] woods, fields, their friends houſes &c. I ſay private meetings, for Conventicles I muſt not call them, having read what one hath written, that name (which agreeth to Anabaptiſts) is too light and contemptuous, to ſet forth ſuch aſſemblies, where Gods Word and Sacraments are adminiſtred, even by the confeſſion of their adverſaries.

a Bp. Bancroft in his Engliſh Scottizing, 3. Book 1. Cap.
b Tho. Cartwrights ſecond reply Pag. 38.

The true notion of a Conventicle.

4. Indeed no diſgrace is imported in the notation of the word Conventicle, ſounding nothing elſe but a ſmall Convention. And (ſome will ſay) can the Infant the [diminutive] be a tearm of reproach, where the mother the [primitive] is creditable in the acception thereof? However Cuſtome (the ſole mint-maſter of currant words) hath took of Conventicles from ſignifying a ſmall number, to denote the meeting of ſuch (how many ſoever) in a clandeſtine way, contrary to the commands of the preſent lawfull Authority.

T. C. preſents to the Parliament an [diſtaſted] admonition.

5. And now Thomas Cartwright (chief of the nonconformiſts) preſents the Parliament with a Book cal'd an admonition, ſome members taking diſtaſte at the Title thereof. For ſeeing Admonition is the loweſt of Eccleſiaſticall cenſures, and a preparative (if neglected) to Suſpenſion, and Excommunication, ſuch ſuggeſted, that if the Parliament complied not with this Admonitors deſires, his party, (whereof he the ſpeaker) would proceed to higher and lowder Fulminations againſt the Parliament. Whereas admonition is a ſoft word in the Common (but eſpecially in the ſcripture) acception thereof, and may with humility on juſt occaſion be tendered from Inferiours, to any ſingle Perſons or Chriſtian Corporation. This Admonition contained their grievances who preſented it, with a declaration of the only way to redreſs them, viz. by admitting that platforme which was there preſcribed. This not finding the entertainment it expected, was ſeconded by another, more importunate to the ſame effect.

Bandying of books betwixt two learned men chief of their parties.

6. It will not be amiſs to ſet down what writings, pro, and con, paſſed on the occaſion of this Booke, between two eminent Authors of oppoſite parties.

1. The

Anno Regin Eliz. 15. Anno Dom. 1572.

1. The Admonition, first, and second, made by Mr. Cartwright.
2. The Anſwer to the Admonition by Dr. John Whitgift.
3. The reply to the anſwer of the Admonition by Mr. Tho. Cartwright.
4. The defence of the anſwer by Dr. John Whitgift.

This laſt kept the field, and (for ought I can finde) received no ſolemn refutation.

7. Sundry reaſons are aſſigned of Mr. Cartwrights ſilence, all beleeving, as they are affected, and moſt being affected, as led by their intereſt. Some aſcribed it to his weakneſs, who having ſpent all his powder and ſhot in former fights, was forced to be quiet for the future. Others, to his pride (undervaluing, what he could not over-come) counting Whitgifts laſt anſwer, no anſwer, but a repetition of what was confuted before. Others imputed it to his Patience, ſeeing otherwiſe multiplying of Replies, would make brauls infinite, and whilſt women ſtrive for the laſt word, men pleaſe themſelves with the laſt reaſon. Others, to the policy of that party, reſolving to go a new way to work, and to turne their ſerious books, into Satyricall pamphlets. Some few attributed it to Mr. Cartwrights modeſt reſpect to his Adverſary, who had gotten the upper ground of him, (Whitgift being ſoon after made Bp. and Arch Biſhop) though in my minde this would more heighten, then abate their oppoſition.

Severall reaſons of Mr. Cartwrights not replying again.

8. The Nonconformiſts though over-powred for the preſent in Parliament, yet found ſuch favour therein, that after the diſſolution thereof, they preſumed to erect a Presbitery at [a] Wandſworth in Surrey. Eleven Elders were choſen therein, and their Offices, and generall rules (by them to be obſerved) agreed upon and deſcribed, as appears by a bill indorſed with the hand of Mr. Field, the Lecturer (as I take it) of that place, but living in London. Mr. Smith of Micham, and Mr. Crane of Roughampton, (neighbouring villages) are mentioned for their approbation of all paſſages therein. This was the firſt-born of all Presbyteries in England, and ſecundum uſum Wandeſworth, as much honoured by ſome, as ſecundum uſum Sarum by others.

The firſt Presbytery in England, ſet up at Wandſworth, in Surrey.

a Bp. Bancroft Engliſh Scottizing 3. Book. cap. 1.

9. It may ſeem a wonder that the Presbyterian diſcipline, ſhould ripen ſooner in this countrey Village then in London it ſelf, whereas yet they were not arrived at ſo formall a conſtitution, though we may obſerve two ſorts of Miniſters:

The chief non-conformiſts in London.

First Mr.	1 Field.	5 Bonham.	Afterwards Mr.	1 Charke.	5 Cheſton.
	2 Wilcox.	6 Scintloe.		2 Travers.	6 Crooke.
	3 Standen.	7 Crane.		3 Barber.	7 Egerton.
	4 Jackſon.	8 Edmonds.		4 Gardner.	8 ——

The former of theſe were principally againſt Miniſters attire, and the common prayer booke. The later, indeavoured the modelling of a new diſcipline, and it was not long, before both ſtreams uniting together, Nonconformity began to bear a large and great Channell in the City of London.

10. This ſame year happened a cruell maſſacre in Paris, the French Proteſtants being bidden thither under the pretence of a nuptiall ſolemnitie. But never were ſuch black favours given at a wedding. Admirall Coligny, (the pillar of the reformed Church) being ſlain in his bed on Bartholomew-eve, whoſe day then, and for ſome years after, was there remarkable for wet weather.

The maſſacre in Paris.

Bartholomeus flet, quia Gallicus occubat Atlas.
Bartholomew bemoans with rain
The Gallicke Atlas thereon slain.

Anno Dom. 1572. Anno Regin. Eliz. 15.

* Camdens Eliz. in hoc anno.

William Cecill Lord Burley * invited to be there, wisely kept himself at home, otherwise perchance our English Nestor, had been sent the same way with the French Atlas, and ten thousand Protestants of name and note slain in that City within three dayes.

Two impostresses discovered. a Stows Chronicle pag. 678. & alijs.

11. Let not the following passage be censured for superfluous in this our Booke, whose omission would be condemned as a defect by others, [a] Agnes Bridges a maid about 20. and Rachel Pinder a girle about 12. years old, so cunningly counterfeited themselves possest with the Devill, that they deceived many Ministers in London, from whom more wisdome and less credulity, might justly have been expected. Thus these liars, belied the father of lies by their dissimulation. And now what praying, and preaching, and fasting, was there to dispossesse them, to the no small derision of prophane persons when their forgery was discovered. However such scoffing may be punished, when the others shall have their erroneous judgement pardoned, and well-intended charity rewarded. Soon after those impostresses were detected, penance at S[t]. Pauls-cross on them imposed, by them publickly (and for outward view) penitently performed, the present beholders satisfied, the formerly deluded rectified, to be more wise, and wary for the future. 1573 16. Aug. 13.

Anabaptists discovered. a Stow his cronicle pag. 679.

12. Now began the Anabaptists wonderfully to increase in the land, and as we are sorry that any Countrymen should be seduced with that opinion, so we are glad that English as yet were free from that infection. For on Easter day was disclosed a Congregation of Dutch [a] Anabaptists without Algate in London, whereof seven and twenty were taken and imprisoned, and foure bearing faggots at Pauls Cross solemnly recanted their dangerous opinions. 1575 18. April & May 15.

Eleven of them condemned. b Idem. p. 680.

13. Next moneth one Dutchman [b] and ten women were condemned, of whom, One woman was converted to renounce her errours, eight were banished the Land, two more so obstinate, that command was issued out for their burning in Smithfield. But, to reprieve them from so cruel a death, a grave Divine sent the following letter to Queen Elizabeth, which we request the Reader to peruse, and guess at the Author thereof.

A Divines letter to the Queen to forbear burning them.

SEreniſsima, Beatiſsima Princeps, Regina illuſtriſsima, Patriæ Decus, Sæculi Ornamentum. Ut nihil ab animo meo omnique expectatione abfuit longius, quàm ut majeſtatis tuæ ampliſsimam excellentiam moleſta unquam interpellatione obturbarem: ita vehementer dolet ſilentium hoc, quo hactenus conſtanter ſum uſus, non eadem conſtantia perpetuo tueri ita ut volebam licuiſſe. Ita nunc præter ſpem ac opinionem meam neſcio qua infelicitate evenit, ut quod omnium volebam minime, id contra me maxime faciat hoc tempore. Qui cum ita vixerim hucuſque, ut moleſtus fuerim nemini, invitus nunc cogar contra naturam Principi etiam ipſi eſſe importunus, non re ulla aut cauſa mea, ſed aliena induſtus calamitate. Quæ quo acerbior ſit & luctuoſior hoc acriores mihi addit ad deprecandum ſtimulos. Nonnullos intelligo in Anglia hîc eſſe non Anglos, ſed adventitios, Belgas quidem opinor, partim viros, partim Fœminas, nuper ob improbata dogmata in judicium advocatos. Quorum aliquot fœliciter reducti publica luerunt pœnitentia, complures in exilium ſunt condemnati, idque rectiſsimè meo judicio factum eſſe arbitror. Iam ex hoc numero unum eſſe aut alterum audio, de quibus ultimum exuſtionis ſupplicium (niſi ſuccurrat rat tua pietas) brevi ſit ſtatuendum, Qua una in re duo contineri perſpicio, quorum alterum ad errorum pravitatem, alterum ad ſupplicii acerbitatem attinet. Ac erroribus quidem ipſis nihil poſſit abſurdius eſſe, ſanus nemo eſt qui dubitat, mirorque tam fœda opinionum portenta in quoſquam potuiſſe Chriſtianos cadere. Sed ita habet humanæ infirmitatis conditio, ſi divina paululum luce deſtituti nobis relinquimur, quo non ruimus præcipites? Atque equidem hoc nomine Chriſto gratias quam maximas habeo, quod Anglorum hodie neminem huic inſaniæ affinem video. Quod igitur ad phanaticas iſtas ſectas attinet, eas certe in republica nullo modo fovendas eſſe, ſed idonea comprimendas correctione cenſeo. Verum enim vero ignibus ac flammis, pice ac ſulphure æſtuantibus viva miſerorum corpora torrefacere judicii magis cæcitate quàm impetu voluntatis errantium, durum iſtud ac Romani magis exempli eſſe quam Evangelicæ conſuetudinis videtur, ac planè ejuſmodi, ut niſi à Romanis Pontificibus, authore Innocentio tertio primùm profluxiſſet, nunquam iſtum Perillitaurum quiſquam in mitem Chriſti eccleſiam importaviſſet. Non quod maleficiis delectet, aut erroribus cujusquam faveam dicta hæc eſſe velim, vitæ hominum, ipſe homo quum ſim, faveo ideoque faveo, non ut erret, ſed ut reſcipiſcat. Ac neque hominum ſolum, Utinam & pecudibus ipſis opitulari poſſem. Ita enim ſum (ſtultè fortaſsis hæc de meipſo, at verè dico) macellum ipſum ubi mactantur etiam pecudes, vix prætereo, quin tacito quodam doloris ſenſu mens refugiat. Atque equidem in eo Dei ipſius valde admiror, venerorque toto pectore clementiam, qui in jumentis illis brutis & abjectis, quæ ſacrificiis olim parabantur, id proſpexerat, nè prius ignibus mandarentur, quàm ſanguis eorum ad Baſim altaris effunderetur. Unde diſceremus in exigendis ſuppliciis, quamvis juſtis, non quid omnino rigori liceat, ſed ut clementia ſimul adhibita rigoris temperet aſperitatem.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 18. Anno Dom. 1575.

Quamobrem ſi tantum mihi apud Principis tanti majeſtatem audere liceret, ſupplex pro Chriſto rogarem clementiſsimam hanc regiæ ſublimitatis excellentiam pro authoritate hac mea, qua ad vitam multorum conſecrandam pellere, Te divina voluit clementia, ut vitæ ſi fieri poſſit (quid enim non poſſit iis in rebus authoritas tua?) miſerorum parcatur, ſaltem ut horrori obſiſtatur, atque in aliud quodcunque commutetur ſupplicii genus. Sunt ejectiones, incluſiones retruſæ, ſunt vincula, ſunt perpetua exilia, ſunt ſtigmata, & πλάγματα aut etiam patibula, id unum valde deprecor, ne piras ac flammas Smithfieldianas jam diu fauſtiſsimis tuis auſpiciis huc uſq; ſopitas ſinas nunc recandeſcere. Quod ſi nè id quidem obtineri poſſit, id ſaltem omnibus ſupplicandi modis efflagito τῶν τὰ πλαγματα pectoris tui implorans, ut meſsem tamen unum aut alterum nobis concedas, quo interim experiamur, an à periculoſis erroribus dederit Dominus ut reſanescant, ne cum corporum jactura, animæ pariter cum corporibus de æterno periclitentur exitio.

This letter was written by Mr. John Fox (from whoſe own hand I tranſcribed it) very loath that Smithfield formerly conſecrated with Martyrs aſhes, ſhould now be prophaned with Hereticks, and deſirous that the Papiſts might enjoy their own Monopolie of cruelty in burning condemned Perſons. But though Queen Elizabeth conſtantly called him Her Father Fox, yet herein was ſhe no dutifull Daughter, giving him a flat * deniall. Indeed damnable were their impieties, and ſhe neceſſitated to this ſeverity, who having formerly puniſhed ſome Traitours, if now ſparing theſe Blaſphemers, the world would condemn her, as being more earneſt in aſſerting her own ſafety, then Gods honour. Hereupon the Writ de Hæretico comburendo (which for ſeventeen years had hung only up in terrorem) was now taken down and put in execution, and the two Anabaptiſts burned in Smithfield, died in great [a] horrour with crying and roaring.

* As to the ſaving of their lives, if after a moneths reprieve and conference with Divines, they would not recant their errours.

[a] Stow ut prius

14. I am

Anno Dom. 1575. Anno Regni Eliz. 17.

Another usefull letter of the same Author.

14. I am loath this letter should stand alone, and therefore will second it with another (though nothing of this nature) which I may call a private-publick one, private for the Subject, publick for the use thereof. First to acquaint us with the character of Magdalen Colledge, and generally of all Oxford, (not to say England) in those dayes, secondly to shew that though Mr. Fox came not up in all particulars to cleave the pin of Conformity (as refusing to subscribe) yet he utterly distasted the factious People of that age. Lastly, that the Papists who miscalled him Iohn Lack-latine may appear as so many Lack-Truths by his fluent and familiar language.

The occasion thereof.

15. Only a word to the Reader, informing him with the cause of this letter. Samuel his eldest Son, Batchelour of Arts, and Fellow of Magdalen Colledge in Oxford, travelled beyond the Seas, without leave either from Father or Colledge. At his return he was causelessly accused for a Papist, and expelled the Colledge by a Faction of people, whose names I had rather the Reader should take from Mr. Fox his pen then mine own. And now as once Tully pro domo sua strained all the nerves of his Rhetorick, so see here how Pathetically this old man pro filio suo writes to a reverend Bishop of the Church.

* This I saw carefully transcribed out of the originall.

Quando, quomodo, quibus verbis, qua dicendi figura pares agam gratias singulari vixque credibili humanitati tuæ (Vir reverende, idemque Doctissime Præsul) qua me miserum tot, tantisque ærumnis obsitum, imo obrutum, literis tam amanter scriptis, & erigere jacentem, & erectum, refocillare volueris. In quo pulchrè tu quidem hoc exemplo repræsentas, quid sit verè Episcopum agere in Domo Domini. Quid enim Antistetem verè Christianum, verius vel arguit, vel commendat insigniùs, quàm charitas toties in Christianis literis exhibita. Aut ubinam hæc ipsa charitas vim suam poterit illustriùs explicare, quam in sacro hoc consolandi officio, ἐν τῷ παραμυθεῖσθαι τὸν ἀδυνατοῦντα, καὶ γὰρ ἐν τούτῳ ἀδυνάτων τίνι, ἐν τῷ ἐπείλλειν σι, ὅτι ἐνδέχεται τῶν ἴδιων ἴσως συμβῆναι ἐνιαυτῷ τινι, ἐν ἀκμαιοτέρᾳ τῶν τῆς θεοσεβείας σε ἑκάστων γεγενημένων, Usque adeo tot simul adversæ res omnem mihi & constantiam & patientiam penè expectorabunt. Cui enim, quamlibet adamantinum pectus, non consterneret inaudita hæc hominum ingratissimorum inhumanitas, in ea præsertim Academia, eóque Collegio, unde nihil unquam minùs expectabam quàm tale aliquid ab iis mihi eventurum. Quos si non meæ senectutis & paupertatis ratio commovere, at ipsorum tamen vel humanitas, vel literarum, quas profitentur, consuetudo polire ad humaniorem modestiam debuisset. Quod autem de meis, vel erga illos, vel erga alios meritis, honoranda tua pietas humanissimè prædicat in eo τὸ τῆς ἀνωμαλίας σου μέγεθος satis contemplor; In me nihil agnosco eorum quæ tribuis. Illud confiteor, semper cavisse me sedulò, ut si minùs prodesse multis licuerit, ne sciens tamen obessem cuiquam, tum minimè verò omnium Magdalensibus, quo magis id mihi admirationi habetur, quis tam turbulentus Genius factiosa ista Puritanorum capita afflaverit, ut sic violatis gratiarum legibus, spretis meis ad se literis & precibus, contempta ipsius Præsidis intercessione, nulla præmissa admonitione, nec causa reddita, tantam hanc in me, filiumque tyrannidem exercuerint. Atqui verò ut hoc ijs concedam, non tam purum esse & immunem ab omni nævo filium meum, atque sunt isti terpuri Puritani. At in his tamen nævis illius, nullum adhuc comperi τὸ μέγεθος tam magnum, quàm majores sortè τὸ ἀνωμαλὲς in moribus ipsorum conspicere liceat. Et ubi interim fraterna illa inter fratres admonitio, quam tantopere exigit Evangelica cautio, ubi disciplina illa Apostolica ἔλεγξον, ἐπίμεινον, παρακάλεσον? Certè plusquam atrox facinus intercedat oportet, quod tam atroci ejectionis vindicatione luendum sit; sed latet in hac herba alius fortasse anguis, quam quia ipsi

proferre

Anno Regin. Eliz. 18. Anno Dom. 1575.

proferre non audent, ego in lucem producam. Flagrat Collegium hoc horribili factione, cujus altera pars propenſioribus ſtudiis incumbit in ſuum Præſidentem. Altera iſtorum eſt quos dico τῶν καθαιρέσεων, qui modis omnibus dant operam ut partes ſui Præſidis labefactent, ipſumque vel in ſuam redigant poteſtatem, vel ſede prorſus evertant. Quia vero filius meus cum altero ejus Collega, Præfecto ſuo ita, ut par erat, inclinatior videbatur, propterea ſocietate exhæredatur. Accedit huic & alia cauſa, quam tam filio quam mihi ipſi imputo.

Quod ſi enim is eſſem, qui perbacchari cum eis contra Epiſcopos, & Archi-Epiſcopos, aut ſcribam me præbere illorum ordini, hoc eſt, inſanire cum illis voluiſſem, nunquam iſtos in me aculeos exacuiſſent. Nunc quia totus ab ijs alienus partes illas ſectari malui, quæ modeſtiæ ſunt, & publicæ tranquillitatis, hinc odium in me conceptum jam diu, in hanc demum eſſerbuit acerbitatem. Quod cùm ita ſit, non jam quid mea cauſa velitis facere, id poſtulo, quin potius quid veſtra ipſorum cauſa cogitandum ſit, Vos qui Proceres eſtis eccleſiæ etiam atque etiam deliberate. Quod ad me autem attinet, quamvis erepta filio ſocietas haud leni afficit animum ægritudine, tamen quia res privata agitur, hoc fero moderatius. Magis me commovet publica Eccleſiæ ratio. Videor enim ſuboriri quoddam hominum genus, qui ſi invaleſcant, viresque in hoc Regno colligant, piget hic referre, quid futuræ perturbationis præſagit mihi animus; Olim ſub Monachorum ſucata hypocriſi quanta ſit nata lues Religioni Chriſtianæ, minimè ignorat prudentia tua, Nunc in iſtis neſcio quod novum Monachorum genus reviviſcere videtur, tantò illis perniciоſius, quantò calidiore fallendi artificio ſub prætextu perfectionis perſonati iſti Hiſtriones gravius occultant venenum, qui dum omnia exigunt ad ſtrictiſſimæ ſuæ diſciplinæ, & conſcientiæ gnomones, haud videntur prius deſituri, donec omnia in Judaicam redigant ſervitutem. Sed de ijs alius fortaſsis pleniore manu ἐπισφίγξει ὁ λύκος.

Interim celeberimæ tuæ dignitati Vir honorande, cum publico eccleſiæ nomine, & animum iſtum, & ſedem quam tenes meritò gratulor, tum mea privatim cauſa ob ſingulare tuum in me ſtudium gratias habeo permaximas; Precorque Dominum omnium gratiarum fontem cumulatiſſimum, ut eccleſiam ſuam periculoſiſſimis ijs temporibus propugnet ac tueatur, ut Paſtores ſe dignos foveat, provehatque, tum intra iſtos, Te inprimis ſacris ipſius bonis, donisque indies magis magisque locupletet, ὡς κἂν ἀναπλήσῃ τὰς ἐνεμούσας αἰωλίας τῶν μεγιλάνων, ἓξ μὲν μοι περίεχει τὰ μεγαλεῖα τῶν γεγραμμένων σου. Ampliſsime, juxta ac ornatiſsime Præſul,

Tuus in Chriſto κατὰ πνεῦμα

Joannes Foxus.

If this good man appeareth too paſſionate herein, ſcore it neither on his old age, nor on his affection to his Son, but on the unjuſt affront offered unto him, who at laſt was reſtored Fellow by the Queen her Mandate, and he privately caſt out by a Faction, to his great diſgrace, was publickly brought in again by authority, to his greater reputation.

16. We may plainly perceive by this letter, how powerfull the Party of Non-conformiſts was grown at this time, and to what violences and extravagancies ſome went in their practices, inſomuch that Dr. Humphred then Preſident of Maudlins, and Mr. Fox himſelf (both which ſcrupled ſubſcription in ſome particulars) were deſerted by them as Luke-warme and remiſs in the Cauſe. Yea even of thoſe who were Duriores Puritani, all were not not equally rigid, but Coleman, Burton, Hallingham, and Benſon out-did all of their own opinions. Thus thoſe leaves which are ejuſdem farinæ (of the ſame meale, yea of one Batch, out of the ſame Oven) are not all hard and cruſtie alike. Anno Dom. 1575. Anno Regin. Eliz. 18.

The violence of rigid Non-conformiſts.

The death and praiſe of Matth. Parker.

17. The death of Matthew Parker, Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, added much to their increaſe. He was a Parker indeed, carefull to keep the fences, and ſhut the gates of Diſcipline againſt all ſuch Night-Stealers as would invade the ſame. No wonder then if the tongues and pens of many were whetted againſt Him, whoſe complaints are beheld by diſcreet men, like the exclamations of Truantly-Schollers againſt their Maſters ſeverity, correcting them for their faults. This Arch-Biſhop was an excellent Antiquarie (without any Anticknesſe) a great Benefactour to Bennet Colledge in Cambridge, on which he beſtowed many Manuſcripts, ſo that that Librarie (for a private one) was the Sun of Engliſh Antiquity in thoſe dayes, though now no more then the Moon, ſince that of Sr. Robert Cottons is riſen up. May 17.

His memory cauſeleſly aſperſed.

18. But a large Authour, though not daring to deny due praiſes to his memory, cauſeleſsly taxed him for being too Pontificall in his Buildings and Feaſtings. Particularly he charged him, that whereas the Pope thundred out an Excommunication againſt Queen Elizabeth, yet (ſaith he) I read of no refutation made of it by this Arch-Prelate, as if this were ſuch a ſin of omiſſion in him, and he bound by his place to anſwer every Romiſh railing Rabſhekah. But let him know that in his learned Book of Antiquitates Britanicæ, he hath laid down thoſe Hiſtoricall grounds, which may be improved to the baiting of the whole Herd of Popiſh Bulls, or if you will to make all thoſe Bubbles ſinke to nothing. A worke, out of which his Accuſer hath taken ſo much, that he cannot pretend to the commendation of Induſtrie (the pooreſt praiſe of a Writer) being no better then a lazie Tranſlatour. And as the Spleen is ſubſervient to the Liver, to take from it only the moſt putrid and feculent blood, ſo hath he ſolely tranſcribed thence (and from Bp. Godwins Catalogue) the faults and failings of all the Engliſh Prelacie, paſſing over in ſilence their due and juſt commendation. Ed. Grindall ſucceeded him in his place, a Prelate moſt PRIMITIVE in all his converſation.

a Mr. Prinne in his book of the treaſon of Prelates pag. 149.

His exemplarie wife.

19. We muſt not forget Margaret the Wife of Arch-Biſhop Parker, a patern for all Prelates Wives. In the reign of King Henry the eighth, though ſeven years contracted (by mutuall conſent forbearing marriage, then unlawfull for Clergie-men) ſuch her fidelity, that ſhe was deaf to richer proffers. When married under Edward the ſixth, ſo modeſt, that Bp. Ridley aſked, whether Ms. Parker had a ſiſter, intimating that ſuch a Conſort would make him recede from his reſolution of a ſingle life. In Queen Maries dayes, not only great her patience to partake of, but induſtry to relieve her Huſbands wants. In Queen Elizabeths time, ſo admirable her humility, as no whit elated with proſperity.

b In D. Parkers life, extant in Trin: Hall Library in Cambridge.

Priviledges obtained by Sr. F. E. for Engliſh Catholicks.

20. Sr. Francis Engleſield, of whom formerly in the Colledge of Valladolt, to leave a Monument to poſterity, of his induſtry and good will to the Catholick-Cauſe; He with William Allen obtained of Pope Gregory the thirtieth, thirteen Indulgencies for the Engliſh Nation and the will-wiſhers of their Converſion. Whereof this the firſt, 1576 d.

> That whoſoever ſhould carry about him ſuch conſecrated Beads, faſt on Wedneſday, forbear one meal on Saturday, pray for the Holy Father the Pope, the peace of the Church, and chiefly for the reconciling of England, Scotland, and Ireland, to the Church of Rome, ſhould have an hundred years pardon. But if this faſt be obſerved with bread and water, a thouſand years pardon.

It

Anno Regin Eliz. 18. Anno Dom. 1576.

It may ſeem in ſome ſort an argument for the Antiquity of thoſe Indulgences, that the reſent of the vivacity of the ancient Patriarks before the Flood in pardoning ſo many years above the poſſibility of our age. Now what becommeth of the Surplus-age of theſe Pardons after the Parties life, let others diſpute. Namely, whether Indulgentia moritur cum perſona, or whether they be bequeathable by will, and in caſe the perſon dies Inteſtate, fall like goods and Chattells to his next heir. Sure I am Sr. Francis is beheld by Catholicks as a Benefactour Generall to our Nation, and theſe Grants were ſolemnly paſſed ſub annulo Piſcatoris, and Glorierius atteſting the ſame. This Sr. Francis was afterwards buried in the Engliſh Colledge at Valadolid in Spain having bountifully contributed to the erecting thereof.

June 6.

21. James Pilkinton Bp. of Durham ended his life, formerly Maſter of Sr. Johns Colledge in Cambridge. He was (as appeareth by many of his letters) a great Conniver at Nonconformity, and eminent for commencing a Suite againſt Queen Elizabeth, for the lands and goods of the Earls of Northumberland and Weſtmerland after their attaindor, as forfeited to him Prince Palatine within his Dioceſs. But the Queen prevailed, becauſe on her charges ſhe had defended Biſhop and Biſhoprick againſt that Rebellion, when both his Infant-Daughters (conveyed away in Beggars cloaths) were ſought for to be killed by the Papiſts. Theſe afterwards with foure thouſand pounds apiece, were married (the one to Sr. James Harrington, the other to Mr. Dunce of Bark-ſhire) which portions the Courtiers of that age did behold with enviouseyes, for which the Biſhoprick ſped no whit the better.

The death of B. Pilkington.

22. The ſame year concluded the life of Edward Deering an eminent Divine, born of a very ancient and worthy family in Kent, bred Fellow of Chriſts Colledge in Cambridge, a pious man and painfull Preacher, but diſaffected to Biſhops and Ceremonies. Once preaching before Queen Elizabeth, he told her, that when in perſecution under her ſiſter Queen Mary, her Motto was Tanquam Ovis as a ſheep, but now it might be, Tanquam indomita juvenca as an untamed Heifer. But ſurely the Queen ſtill retained much of her ancient Motto as a ſheep, in that ſhe patiently endured ſo publick (and conceived cauſeleſs) reproof, in inflicting no puniſhment upon him, ſave commanding him to forbear further preaching at the Court.

And of Mr. Deering.

20. July 4. 5. 6. 1577.

23. Rowland Jenkes, a Popiſh Book-ſeller was indicted at the Summer Aſſiſes in Oxford, for diſperſing of ſcandalous Pamphlets defamatory to the Queen and State. Here, on a ſuddain happened a ſtrange mortality, whereof died,

A ſtrange mortality at Oxford.

Sr. Robert Bell, Lord Chief Baron, a great Lawyer.	Mr. De Oile. High Sheriffe.	Mr. Kerle.	Gentlemen of good account.
Sr. Robert De Oile.	Mr. Wenman.	Mr. Greenwood.
Sr. Will. Babington.	Mr. Danvers. Mr. Fettiplace. Mr. Hare-Court. Juſtices.	Mr. Foſter. Mr. Naſh.
		Sergeant Bernham an excellent Pleader.

Almoſt all the Jurie-men, and of other perſons there preſent three [a] hundred died in the Town, and two hundred more ſickning there died in other places within a Moneth. Amongſt whom not [b] either Woman or Child.

a Camden his Eliz. in hoc an. b Stows Chro. pag. 681. Improved by Papiſts to their advantage. De ſchiſmate pag. 375. Sr. Fra: Bacon his judgement of infectious ſmells.

24. Sanders calleth this, ingens miraculum, and aſcribeth it as a juſt puniſhment on the cruelty of the Judge for ſentencing the Stationer, to loſe his Ears. Adding moreover, that the Proteſtants (whoſe Philoſophers and Phyſitians could not finde the naturall cauſe thereof) gave it out, that the Papiſts by Magick arts had procured this infection. The beſt is, his words are no ſlanders.

Anno Dom. 1577. Anno Regni Eliz. 20.

De ſchiſmate pag. 375 Sr. Fra. Bacon his judgement of infectious ſmells.

25. But heare how a profound Scholler, no leſs happy in finding, then diligent in ſearching the myſteries of nature, and utterly unconcerned in this quarrel, delivereth his judgement in the like caſe.

a Naturall Hiſt. Cent tenth, Num. 914.

a The moſt pernicious infection next to the Plague, is the ſmell of the Jaile; when Priſoners have been long, and cloſe, naſtily kept. Whereof we have had experience twice or thrice in our time; when both the Judges that ſate upon the Jail, and numbers of thoſe that attended the buſineſs, or were preſent, ſickned upon it, and died. Therefore it were good wiſedome that in ſuch caſes, the Jaile were aired, before they be brought forth. Otherwiſe moſt dangerous are the ſmells of mans-fleſh, or ſweat putrified; For they are not thoſe ſtinckes, which the Noſtrills ſtreight abhor, and expell, which are moſt pernicious; But ſuch aires as have ſome ſimilitude with mans body; And ſo inſinuate themſelves and betray the Spirits.

Of theſe Mortalities mentioned by this Author, the firſt probably was this at Oxford (happening within the verge of youthfull memory) the other two at Hereford in the Reigns of King James, and King Charls. The like chanced ſome foure years ſince at Croydon, in Surrey, where a great depopulation happened, at the aſſiſes of Perſons of quality, and the two Judges, Baron Yates, and Baron Rigby getting their banes there, died few dayes after. Yet here no Papiſts were arraigned to amount it to a Popiſh miracle, ſo that Saunders his obſervation is no whit concluſive, naturall cauſes being afforded of ſuch caſualties.

Many a Prieſt executed.

26. We may remember how in the year, One thouſand five hundred ſeuenty and one, a ſevere Law was made againſt ſuch who brought any ſuperſtitious Trinkets (Badges of the Romiſh vaſſalage) into England. This Law lay Dormant for theſe laſt ſix years, and was never put into execution, that Papiſts might not pretend themſelves ſurpriſed into puniſhment through the ignorance of the Law, ſo long a time being allowed unto them, that they might take ſerious cognizance of the ſaid Statute in this behalf: And therefore let ſuch Catholicks who complaine of cruelty herein, produce a Precedent of the like lenity amongſt them uſed to Offenders. But now one Cuthbert Maine a Prieſt, was drawn, hanged and quartered at Lanſton in Cornwall, for his obſtinate maintaining of the Papall power, and one Tragian a Gentleman of that County, was condemned to loſs of all his goods and perpetuall impriſonment for affording harbour unto him.

None. 30.

The vivacity of Engliſh Proteſtant Biſhops. * We account in this number not any Popiſh Bps. nor Scory and Barlow, Proteſtants made in the reign of K Edward. The death of B Bullingham. b Sr. I. Haring. his addition to B. Godwin.

27. Hitherto the Engliſh Biſhops had been vivacious almoſt to wonder. For neceſſarily preſumed of good years, before entering on their office, in the firſt of Queen Elizabeth it was much that but five died for the firſt twenty years of her reign. Whereas now ſeven deceaſed within the compaſſe of two years. Thus when a generation of contemporary perſons begins to crack, it quickly falls, and the leaſes of their clay cottage, commencing it ſeems, much from the ſame date, at the ſame terme did expire. We will ſeverally reckon them up, the rather, becauſe all the Remarks of Church-Hiſtory for thoſe two years, is folded up in their characters.

28. Nicholas Bullingham began the breach, tranſlated from Lincolne to Worceſter, whereat my b Author doth much admire, conceiving [belike] ſuch advancement a degradation, and can only render this reaſon, that for his own eaſe he changed a larger, for a leſſer Dioceſs. But what if Worceſter were alſo the better Biſhoprick, and ſo the warmer ſeat for his old age?

29. William Bradbridge bred in Magdalen Colledge in Oxford, Biſhop of Exeter, was ſnatcht away with a ſudden death. And in the ſame year Edmond Gueſt, Bp. of Salisbury, bred in Kings Colledge in Cambridge, who wrote wrote many books (reckoned up by J. Bale) bought and bestowed more on the library of Salisbury, the case whereof, was built by Bp. Jewell.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 22. Anno Dom. 1578.

Bp. Cheyney a great Lutheran wrongfully accused to die a Papist.

Jan. 27. Feb. 28.

30. Richard Cheyney, Bishop of Bristol, holding Gloceſter therewith in dispensation, bred in Cambridge, of whom Mr. * Camden giveth this character, that he was Luthero addictiſſimus, Most addicted to Luther. Bishop * Godwin saith, Luthero addictior fortaſſe quàm par erat, Perchance more addicted to Luther then was meet. Adding moreover, that in the first convocation in the reign of Queen Mary, he so earnestly opposed Popery, that he wondereth how he escaped with life. But I wonder more, how since his death, the scandalous rumour is raised, that he died a Papist, suspended by Arch-Bishop Grindall from his Episcopall function, and this one (his successour in that See) will perswade others to believe.

* Camd. in his Eliz. 1559.

* In his Catalogue of the Bishops of Gloceſter.

* All my search cannot finde out such an Instrument in any office.

His vindication.

31. However the words of Mrs. Goldsborrough (widdow to Bp. Goldsborrough of Gloceſter) a grave Matron, prevail'd with me to the contrary. Who at a publick entertainment, in the presence of many, and amongst * them of my judicious friend, gave a just check to this false report, and avowed that to her knowledge he died a true and sincere Protestant.

Mr. Langley the worthy Schoolmaster of St. Pauls.

Eliz. 21. June 1. 1579.

32. Robert Horne succeeded. Borne in the Bishoprick of Durham, bred in St. Johns in Cambridge, one, valido & facundo ingenio, saith my Author. Of a spritefull and fruitfull wit. One who would go thorough whatsoever he undertook, be it against Papists or Nonconformists, and his adversaries playing with his name, (as denoting his nature hard, and inflexible) nothing moved him to abate of his resolution.

* Camdens Eliz. in Anno 1559.

Followed by Bp. Bentham.

Feb. 21.

33. Thomas Bentham followed him, Bishop of Coventry, and Leichfield, bred in Magdalen Colledge in Oxford, of whose christian valour in that Colledge, against superstition in Queen Maries reign, we have spoken before.

The death of Bishop Cox.

34. Richard Cox, Bishop of Ely, concludes this Bill of Mortality, Tutor to King Edw. the 6. of whom largely before in the troubles at Frankford. I am sorry so much is charged on his memory, and so little can be said in his vindication, and would willingly impute it, not to his want of innocence, but ours, of intelligence. It moves me much his accusation of * covetousness, dilapidating (or rather deligating his Bishoprick, cutting down the woods thereof) for which he fell into the Queens displeasure: But am more offended at his taking (if true) the many ancient manuscripts from Oxford, under the pretence of a visitation. He was an excellent poet, though the verses written on his own tombe, are none of the best, and scarce worth our translating.

* Said to feed his servants with powdered venison (shrewdly hurt) to save other meats Sr. I. Harring. in his additions to B. G.

Vita cadaca vile, ſalveto vita perennis,
Corpus terra tegit, ſpiritus alta petit.
In terra Chriſti Gallus Chriſtum reſonabam,
Da Chriſte in Cœlis, te ſine fine ſonem.

Frail life farewell, welcome life without end,
Earth hides my corps, my soule doth heaven ascend,
CHRISTS COCK on earth, I chanted Christ his name,
Grant without end, in Heaven I sound the same.

It seems some took exceptions at the Epitaph, as parcell-Popish, because (though supposing his possession) praying for the perpetuation of his happinesse, and on that account, twenty years after his death, it was partly demolished.

Gresham Col. founded by St. T. Gresham.

35. This year also St. Thomas Gresham ended his life, whose Royall-Exchange in London, with all the Magnificence thereof, could not properly intitle intitle him to a mention in this our Church-History; had he not also, by his will bequeathed maintenance, for the erecting of a Colledge in Bishops-gate-street, allowing an annuall Salary of fifty pound to severall Professors in Divinity, Civill Law, Physick, Astronomie, Geometry, Musick, and Rhetorick. It is therefore no mistake in * Mercator when counting three Universities, in England, Cambridge, Oxford, and London, seeing the last may be so esteemed, both in relation to the Inns-of-Court, and this Colledge.

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regin. Eliz. 23.

* In his Atlas pag. 66.

The obscure Original of the Familists.

36. The Family of love, began now to grow so numerous, factious, and dangerous, that the Privy Councell thought fit to endeavour their suppression. Being now to deduce the Originall of this Sect, we desire that the Clock of Time on the margin of our Book may stand still, intending not to discompose the method of years therein: though we go backward for awhile in our History, to fetch in the beginning of these Familists. Most obscure was their Originall, according to the Apostles [a] words, There are certain men crept in unawares, Crept in, shewing the slownesse of their pace, and the lowneese of their posture. The later proceeding partly from their Guiltinesi, not daring to go upright, to justifie, avouch, and maintain their doctrine, partly out of Policy, to worke themselves in, the [b] more invisibly. But these Creepers at first, turn'd Flyers afterwarde (flying Serpents no contradiction) so that the State accounted it necessary to cut down their arrogancy and increase, whose beginning with the means thereof we come now to relate.

a Jude 4.

b Isa. 30. 6.

Hen. Nicholas their first founder.

37. One Henry Nicholas born in Amsterdam, first vented this doctrine (about the year 1550.) in his own country. He was one who wanted learning in himself, and hated it in others, and yet was conceived, (which at first procured pitty unto him) though of wilde and confused notions, with absurd and improper expressions, yet of honest and harmless intentions. Men thought him unable, both to manage his Apprehensions whole (as to make sense of them) and too weak by distinctions to parcel and divide them (wanting Logick for that purpose) and yet they charitably conceived, his minde might be better then his mouth, and that he did mean better, then he could interpret his own meaning. For meeting with many [c] places in Scripture, which speak the union and communion of Christians with Christ, Christ with God (how quickly are mysteries made blasphemies, when unskilfull hands meddle with them?) he made of them a most carnall-spirituall exposition.

c John 17. 21, 22, 23. &c.

His mock Apostolick stile.

38. Yea in process of time, he grew so bad, that charity it self would blush to have a favourable thought of his Opinions. Not content to confine his Errours to his own Country, over he comes into England, and in the later end of the reign of King Edward the sixth, joyned himself to the Dutch Congregation in London, where he seduced a number of Artificers and silly women, amongst whom two daughters of one Warwick, (to whom he dedicated an epistle) were his principall Perverts. Mr. Martin Micronius, and Mr. Nicholaus Charineus, then the ministers of the Dutch Congregation, zealously confuted his errours, but it seems their Antidotes pierced not so deep as his poisons. Many of our English Nation were by him deceived, and may the Reader but peruse this his mock-Apostolick Stile, (his charm to delude silly people therewith) and let him tell me whether the Ape did not well deserve a whip, for his over-imitation therein.

d In his Evangelium Regni, or the joyfull message of the kingdom.

H. Nicholas through the grace and mercy of God, through the Holy Spirit of the love of Jesus Christ. Raised up by the highest God from the death, according to the providence of God, and his promises. Anointed with the Holy Ghost, in the old age of the holy understanding of Jesus Christ. Godded with

God

Anno Regin. Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

God in the Spirit of his love. Illuminated in the Spirit with the heavenly truth, the true light of perfect being. Made heir with Christ in the Heavenly goods, of the riches of God. Elected to be a minister of the gracious word, which is now in the last times raised up by God, according to his promises in the most holy service of God, under the obedience of his love.

The followers of this Nicholas assumed to themselves the Title of the family of Love. Family [a] of faith, we finde in Scripture, but this new-name was one first invented by, and falsely applied unto this Faction, who might more fitly, from Nicholas their father and founder, be stiled Nicolaitans, as their name-sakes (hated by [b] God for thir filthinesse) were called so, from [c] Nicolas the proselyte of Antioch. These Familists (besides many monstrosities they maintained about their Communion with God) attenuated all Scriptures into Allegories, and under pretence to turn it into Spirit, made them aery, empty, nothing. They counterfeited Revelations, and those not explicatory or applicatory of Scripture, (such may and must be allowed to Gods Servants in all ages) but additionall therunto, and of equal necessity and infallibility to be believed therewith. In a word, as in the small pox, (pardon my plain and homely, but true and proper comparison) when at first they kindly come forth, every one of them may severally and distinctly be discerned, but when once they run and matter, they break one into another, and can no longer be dividedly discovered; so though at first there was a reall difference, betwixt Familists, Enthusiasts, Antinomians (not to adde highflown Anabaptists) in their opinions, yet (process of time plucking up the Pales betwixt them) afterwards they did so interfere amongst themselves, that it is almost impossible to banke, and bound their severall absurdities.

a Gal. 6. 10.

b Rev. 2. 6.
c Acts 6. 5.

39. The practises of these Familists were worse than their opinions. They grieved the Comforter, charging all their sins on Gods Spirit, for not effectually assisting them against the same: accounting themselves as innocent as the [d] maid forced in the field, crying out, and having none to help her. Yea, St. Pauls [e] supposition, Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? was their position. What he started from, they embraced; what he branded with a God forbid, they welcomed with a well done good and faithfull servant: sinning on designe, that their wickednesse might be a foile to Gods mercy, to set it off the brighter.

The Familists worse in practice than opinion.

d Deut. 22. 27.
e Rom. 6. 1.

Octo. 10.

40. The Privie Councell therefore took them into consideration, and tendred unto them this following abjuration.

Their abjuration.

Whosoever teacheth that the dead which are fallen asleep in the Lord, rise up in this day of his judgement, and appear unto us in godly glory, which shall henceforth live in us everlastingly with Christ, and reign upon the earth, is a detestable heretick. Whosoever teacheth, that to be born of the Virgin Mary, out of the seed of David after the flesh, is to be expounded of the pure doctrine out of the seed of love, is a detestable Heretick. Whosoever teacheth, that Jesus Christ is come again unto us according to his promise, to the end, that they all which love God, and his righteousnesse, and Christ, and perfect being, might presently enter into the true rest, which God hath prepared from the beginning for his elect, and inherit the everlasting life, is a detestable heretick.

No fewer than ten of the Privy Councell tendered this abjuration to each Familist, but with what success I finde not. If any of these Familists were of of their opinion in Higher Germany, who were called [a] Liberi Fratres, Free Brethren, who maintain'd themselves delivered by Christ from all covenants, vows, and debts, (if from prison too on deniall of payment, it were excellent) all was to little purpose, seeing a bird may as soon be impounded, as these spirits confin'd by any oaths, or carnall obligation. Pass we from them to others more dangerous, because more learned, even the Jesuits (hoping at last to light on the temperate zone, when we have done with these dull, frozen, ignorant Sectaries, and fiery, torrid, overactive Papists) whereof two principall ones, Persons, and Campian, living at Rome, importun'd his Holiness for license to come over into England.

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regni Eliz. 23.

[a] See Rutherfords survey of the Spirituall Antichrist pag. 11.

Persons and Campian come into England. Their severall characters.

41. Having obtained this gracious faculty, over they come into England, and distill superstition, and disloyalty into the Queens Subjects. This Persons was a Summersetshire man, formerly of Baliol Colledge in Oxford, till for his [b] dishonesty he was expelled with disgrace. But, what Oxford cast away for dross, Rome received for gold, entertaining, and rewarding him as a man of a daring, and undertaking spirit, and of a nature turbulent, and seditious. Campian, born in London, and bred in S^t. Johns Colledge, of the same University (whereof he was Proctor Anno 1568.) was one of a sweet nature, constantly carrying about him the charms of a plausible behaviour: of a fluent tongue, and good parts, which he knew how to shew to the best advantage. These two effectually advanced the Roman cause, appearing in moe severall shapes than Proteus himself, in the disguised habits of Souldiers, Courtiers, Ministers of the word, Apparitours, as they were advised by their profit, and safety: and, as if his Holiness had infused an ubiquitarines into them, they acted in city, court, and country. Persons was the axe to hew knottie controversies, where deep learning was needfull; Campian was the plainer to come after him, and smooth matters with his eloquence; yea, the former frighted fearfull people into Popery with his fierceness, the later flattered them in it with his courteous behaviour. But, none can give a better account of Campians proceedings, then this his own letter which followeth.

[b] Camdens Eliz. Anno 1580.

To the right Reverend Father Everard Mercurian, Provost General of the Society of Jesus.

"AFter that, trusting on Gods goodness, I live now
"the fifth moneth in these parts, I thought it my "duty, Reverend Father, to acquaint you by letters, what
"the state of our matters is, and what it is likely to be.
"For I know ful well, that you desire to know, what I do,
"what I hope, how I profit, and that both out of constant "care for the common good, and also out of the great love
"you bear unto my self. The former I wrote from S^t.
"Omers, now receive in few words, what things have since "happened unto us.

"I impute it as proceeding from Divine Providence,
"that, whereas I had waited foure full dayes for a [c] pros"perous winde; at last on the fifth (which was the feast of
"John Baptist, and my tutelary Saint, to whom I had of"ten commended both my cause, and journey) at even we

[c] A good wind which blows a traitour to Tiburne.

put

Anno Dom. 1580.

"put forth to sea. The next day very early we arrived at "Dover, I and my little man, where we escaped very "[a] narrowly, that both of us were not taken. Being "commanded, we appear before the Major of the town, "he conjectures several all things, guessing us to be, what in-"deed we were, namely, enemies to the heretical party, "lovers of the old religion, that we had dissembled our "names, gone away for Religion, being return'd with de-"sire to propagate it. One thing he press'd that I was Allen, "which I denied, (and if need had been) I would have de-"posed the contrary on my oath.

"At last he determines, and this he often repeats, "that we ought to be sent with a guard to the Privie Coun-"cell. Nor do I know who altered his minde, except it "were God, to whom in the mean time I made my silent "supplication, using the intercession of S[t]. John, by whose "favour I came thither. Presently out came the [b] old "man (well fare his heart for it) it is our pleasure (said "he) that you shall be dismissed. Farewell. Away we "flew. These and the like things, which here I finde, "when I recount them with my self, I am confirm'd in this "opinion, that when the matter shall make more for "[c] Gods glory, then I shall be taken, and not before. I "arrive at London. A good Angel led me, without my "knowledge to the same house, which had formerly re-"ceived Father Robert. Many Gentlemen run to me, sa-"lute me, cloath me, [d] adorn me, arm me, send me out "of the city. Every day almost I ride about some coast "of the Country. The harvest is altogether very great. "Sitting on my horse I meditate a short Sermon, which "coming into the house, I perfectly polish. Afterward "if any come to me, I discourse with them, or hear their "confessions. In the morning, Service being done, I make "a Sermon, they bring thirstie ears, and most frequently "receive the Sacraments.

"In the administring of them we are assisted by the "Priests, whom we finde every where. Thus it comes to "pass, that both the people are pleased, and the worke is "made less wearisom unto us. Our Countriemen which "are Priests, being themselves eminent for learning, and "holiness, have raised such a reverend esteem of our Or-"der, that I conceive, that Veneration which the Catho-"licks give us, is not to be mentioned but with some [e] fear. "Wherefore the more care is to be taken, that such as shall "be sent as a supply unto us (whom now we very much "want) may be so [f] qualified, that they may well under-"take all these things. Above all things, Let them be "well exercised in preaching. We can not long [g] escape "the hands of Hereticks, so many are the eyes, the tongues, "and treacheries of our enemies.

"I am in a most antick habit, which I often [h] change, "as also my [i] name. Just now I read a letter, in whose "front it was written, Campian is taken. This old song "now so rings in mine ears, whersoever I come, that ve-"ry fear hath driven all fear from me. my life is alwaies "in my hand. Let them that shall be sent hither for our "supply, a Ominous that his foot should stumble at the threshold, newly landed in the Kingdom. Tis probable, he that was suspected at his coming in, will be detected before his going out.

b See how a crafty equivocating Jesuite, is an overmatch for a country well meaning Magistrate.

c Caiphas. Truly propheci-ed, if truly applyed.

d Heu, quanta patimur? Oh pitifull persecution, enough almost to make an Epicure complain of hard usage.

e Left the world should know, how simple people give, and shamless Jesuits take so much honour, where so little is due.

f With fair tongues, false hearts, cunning heads, and bold faces: Campian is the copie, and the rest must be like him.

g His Predictions were indicted from his guiltiness. Offenders fear what they deserve.

h His often Changing speaks him but a valiant coward in the cause.

i Homo multorum nominum, non boni nominis.

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regin. Eliz. 23.

"ſupply, bring this along with them, well thought on be"fore hand.

"But the comforts which are mingled in this matter,
"are ſuch, as not only do recompence the fear of pain, but "any pains whatſoever, with an infinite pleaſure; name"ly, a pure conſcience, unconquered ſtrength, incredible
"zeal. Eminent work we have effected, innumerable "number of converts, high, low, of the middle rank, of "all ages, and ſexes. Hence it is grown into a proverb
"amongſt the Hereticks themſelves, that if any of them be "better natur'd then others, they preſently call them [a] Ca-
"tholicks, who will pay the debts which they owe. Inſo-
"much, that if any Catholicks ſhould chance to uſe a man "hardly, he is expoſtulated with in this reſpect, that in "no caſe ſuch things ought to be done by men of their pro-
"feſſion.

"In brief, hereſie is ill reported of all, nor is there any
"ſort of men more vile, and rotten then are their [b] Mi"niſters. We are deſervedly full of indignation, that in "ſo bad a cauſe, men ſo unlearned, ſo wicked, ſo diſſo-
"lute, ſo vile, do domineere over moſt flouriſhing
"wits.

"Moſt threatening edicts are carried about againſt us.
"By warineſs, and the prayers of good people, and (which "is the main) by Gods goodneſs, we have in ſafety gone
"over a great part of the Iſland. I ſee many [c] forgetting "themſelves to be carefull for us. Something happened
"in thoſe dayes by Gods will, which I did not ſo much as "hope for.

"I had articulatly ſet down in writing our points, and "certain moſt equal demands, confeſſing my ſelf to be a
"Prieſt of the Society, coming with an intent to ampliſie
"the Catholick faith, teach the Goſpel, adminiſter Sacra"ments. I requeſted audience of the Queen, and the "Peers of the Realm, and [d] challenged my adverſaries to "the combate. I reſolved to keep one copy to my ſelf,
"that it might be carried to the Judges with me; another
"I had committed to my friend with this intent, that if "they took me, and my copy, the other ſhould preſently be "ſpread abroad.

"My friend did not conceal it, he publiſhed it; it is "worne in every mans hand. Our adverſaries are ſtark
"mad. Out of their Pulpits their Preachers anſwer, that "they indeed deſire it, but the Queen is not willing, that "matters now being ſetled, there ſhould be any farther
"diſputation. They rend us with their railings, call us
"Seditious, Hypocrites, yea and Hereticks alſo, which is
"moſt laughed at. The people in this point are altogether
"ours. This Errour hath made marvelouſly for our ad"vantage. If we be commanded on the Publick Faith,
"[e] dabimus non curiam. But they intend nothing leſs.

"All our Priſons are filled with Catholicks, new ones "are preparing. Now at laſt they openly maintain, that "it is better to deliver a few Traitors over to death, then "to betray the ſouls of ſo many men. Now they ſay no"thing of their own Martyrs, for we conquer in Cauſe,
"Number,

[a] Would the Catholicks would themſelves pay the twenty pound a moneth which they owe to the King for their Recuſancy.

[b] Thus when the herneſhaw cannot beat the hawk with ſtrength, ſhe dungs upon him. Railing muſt help where reaſon wants.

[c] Good affections ill imployed. God ſend them leſs heat, or more light.

[d] Barr challenging. They that long moſt for duells, firſt furfeit of them.

[e] So my printed copie wherein I ſuſpect ſome miſtake.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

"Number, Dignity, and the Opinion of all men.

"We produce, for a few Apoſtates, or Coblers burnt, "Biſhops, [a] [Regulos] petty Princes, Knights, and moſt "eminent of the Gentry, (mirrors of learning, honeſty, "and wiſdome) the choiſeſt youth, illuſtrious Matrons. "The reſt of middle eſtate almoſt innumerable, all of them "at once, or every day conſumed. Whilſt I write theſe "things, a moſt cruel perſecution rageth. The houſe is "ſad; for they preſage, either the death of their friends, "or that to ſave their lives, they muſt hide, be in priſon, "or ſuffer the loſs of all their goods; yet they go on cou-"ragiouſly.

"Very many even now are reconciled to our Church. "New Souldiers inliſt their names, and old ones freely "ſhed their blood. Herewith, and with theſe holy ſacri-"fices, God will be merited, and out of doubt, in ſhort "time we ſhall overcome. You ſee therefore Reverend "Father, how much we need your ſacrifices, prayers, and "heavenly aſſiſtance.

"There will be ſome in England, who may provide "for their own ſafety; and there will be thoſe, who may "promote the good of others. Man may be angry, and "the Devill mad: ſo long the Church here will ſtand, whi-"leſt the ſhepheards are not wanting to their ſheep. I am "hindred with a report of a moſt preſent danger, that I can "write no more at this time. Let God ariſe, and let his ene-"mies be ſcattered.

[a] Not one Popiſh Biſhop put to death, (nor Peer of the Realm, ſave for actuall rebellion) in all the Queens Reign. Whereas in the Marian dayes, we had an Arch-Biſhop, and foure Biſhops burnt, for meer matters of conſcience.

Farewell.
Edmond Campian.

* Secretary Walſingham, one of a ſteadie head (no more than needfull for him, who was to dive into ſuch whirle-pools of State) laid out for Campians apprehenſion. Many were his lime-twigs to this purpoſe. Some of his Emiſſaries were bred in Rome it ſelf. It ſeems his Holineſs was not infallible in every thing, who paid penſions to ſome of Walſinghams ſpies ſent thither to deteſt Catholicks. Of theſe, Sled and Eliot were the principal. Surely theſe Setters could not accompliſh their ends, but with deep diſſembling and damnable lying. If any account ſuch officers evils, I deny it not, but adde them to be neceſſary evils, in ſuch a dangerous juncture of time. Alwayes ſet a —— to catch a ——; and the greateſt dear-ſtealers, make the beſt Parke-keepers. Indeed theſe ſpies were ſo cunning, they could trace a labyrinth, without the guidance of a clew of thread; and knew all by-corners at home, and abroad. At laſt Eliot ſnapt Campian in his own lodging, and in great triumph he was carried to the Tower.

* Campian catcht by Walſinghams ſetters.

42. The Papiſts tell us of ſeven deadly racks in the Tower, all of them exerciſed on ſome or other their priſoners therein. One rack called the Duke of Exeters, the other the Scavengers daughter, and theſe haply had their grand-children: God keep all good men in the joyfull ignorance of them, and their iſſue. Campian is ſaid * thrice, or four times, to have been tortured on them, ad luxationem, ac quaſſationem omnium membrorum; if the report thereof be not rackt beyond the proportion of truth. However we requeſt the ingenuous;

Pretended cruelty in racking Papiſts.

* Sanders De Schiſ. Anglicano pag. 409.

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regin. Eliz. 23.

43. First, to consider, there scarce passed a leap-year, wherein the Papists did not lay their eggs, or hatch some treason against the Queen, which excuseth such severity used to detect conspiracies. Secondly, I finde when Father Briant, a Priest was [a] rack'd most cruelly, he confesseth, Se nihil quicquam doloris sensisse, That he felt no pain at all. Were this false, I wonder so religious a man would report it; were it true, I wonder that Campian (every inch as religious as Briant) had not the same miraculous favour indulged to him. Thirdly, Campian presently after his racking, wrote letters with his own [b] hand; which shews he was not so disjoynted, with such cruelty as is pretended. Lastly, those who complain of Campians usage have forgotten, or will not remember, how Anne Lake, and Cuthbert Simpson (on whom no shaddow of treason could be charged) were most cruelly, and causelessly rack'd by Popish persecutors, as a preface to their ensuing martyrdome.

Excused in some degree. a Ribadeneira his continuation of Sanders de Schis. Ang. in his Diarie An. 1581. Moneth of March.

b Camb. Eliz. in this year.

44. We leave Campian for a time in a safe place, where we are sure to finde him at our return, to behold how it fared with Father Persons, diligently sought for by Walsinghams setters, and therefore as eminent for making his three escapes, as writing his three conversions.

Persons his three wonderfull escapes.

1. By hiding himself in a stack of hay, hard by a publick Inne, whither messengers were sent to attach him.
2. Being amused with grief, and fear, and fright, he could not finde an [c] house in London (otherwise well known unto him) whither he intended to go, and by losing his way saved his life, that place being beset with souldiers to apprehend him.
3. When scarce gone out of an house on the Thames side, but the same was searched by the officers, who routed an armie of crucifixes, medalls, Agnus Dei's, and other Papish trinkets therein.

c Continuatio Sanderi De Schis. Ang. pag. 404.

To these a fourth may be added, more [d] miraculous than all the rest, when Persons was apprehended by a Pursevant at Northwich in Cheshire, and put into a chamber fast bolted, and locked upon him, the doore did, three times together, miraculously, and of its own accord flie open.

d Vide Sheld. of Mirac. pag. 25. & Gee his One foot out of the snare 71. Our observation on his fourth escape.

45. By the Readers favour, as I dare not deny belief to this passage attested by a Catholick Father: so I cannot but wonder thereat. Peter, and Paul, each of them had [e] once their prison doors open: Persons exceeds them both, three severall solemne times his prison was set open. Did he not tempt Divine providence, which once, and again offered unto him a way to escape, to expect a third call to come forth? Had Providence (angry that the courtesie twice tendred, was not accepted) left him alone, none would have pitied him if caught, and sent to keep company with his dear friend Father Campian in the Tower.

e Acts 12. 7. & Acts 16. 26.

46. But Persons knew full well, that miracles (though cordials in extremity) are no bill of fare for mens daily diet, and therefore he must not constantly expect such wonderfull deliverances. Besides, no doubt he remembred what pass'd in the fable; though this his good Genius had help'd him at a dead lift, yet the same intended not to wear out all his shooes, and to goe barefoot himself, in making a trade constantly to preserve him. Wherefore, Juniores ad labores, Let younger men take the task, and trouble upon them. This wary bird would not be catcht, to whistle in the cage to the tune of Walsingham. Wherefore over he went to Rome, and there slept in a whole skin, as good reason it was, so great a Generall should secure his person from danger.

Persons politickly returneth to Rome.

SECT.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

Section IIII.

To Mr. James Bovey of London Merchant.

ONe (if not the only) good which our civill warr hath produced, is, That on the ranſacking of Studies, many manuſcripts, which otherwiſe would have remained concealed, and uſefull only for private perſons, have been printed for the publick benefit. Amongſt which, ſome may ſuſpect the following letter of Arch-Biſhop Grindall to be one.

But to clear that ſcruple, I muſt avow, that a * Reverend perſon was proprietary of an authentick Copy thereof, before the thing plunder was owned in England, and may (I ſhall well hope) notwithſtanding his gray hairs remain ſo, after it is diſclaimed.

* A. B. of Armagh.

1. KNow that a Parliament and Convocation, beeing this year called, the latter appeared rather a trunke, than a body, becauſe Edmond Grindal, Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, groning under the Queens diſpleaſure, was forbidden acceſs to the Convocation. Whereupon, it began ſadly (not to ſay ſullenly) without the ſolemnity of a Sermon, abruptly entering on the ſmall buſineſſe they had to doe. Some hotſpurs therein motioned, that they ſhould refuſe to meet together, till their company were compleated, and the Arch-Biſhop reſtored unto them. But the gravity of the reſt ſoon retrenched this diſtemper, and at laſt all agreed, that Tobie Watthew, Dean of Chriſt-Church (commanding a pure, and fluent pen) ſhould in the name of the Convocation, draw an humble ſupplication to Her Majeſty for the reſtitution of the Arch-Biſhop to his place, which was done according to the tenour following.

A petition in the name of the whole convocation for the reſtitution of Arch-Biſhop Grindal.

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regin. Eliz. 23.

Sereniſsimæ, ac Potentiſsimæ Reginæ Elizabethæ, Angliæ, Franciæ, & Hiberniæ Reginæ, Fidei Defenſatrici &c.

ETſi Majeſtatem Regiam ſive verbo, ſive ſcripto interpellare (Sereniſſima Princeps Elizabetha ) non decere, niſi rariùs; non licere, niſi gravioribus de cauſis arbitramur: tamen cum præcipiat Apoſtolus, ut, dum tempus habeamus, benefacimus omnibus, maximè verò domeſticis fidei, committere nullo modo poſſumus, quin illud hoc tempore à Tua Celſitate humiliter contendamus, quod nobis ad petendum utile, & neceſſarium; totæ Eccleſiæ, & Reipublicæ ad obtinendum ſalutare, & fructuoſum; Tuæ denique Majeſtati ad concedendum, perfacile, & honorificum ſit futurum. Quanquam igitur acerbiſſimè dolemus, & contriſtamur, Reverendiſſimum Patrem, Cantuarienſem Archiepiſcopum, poſt tot annos, in tantam, tamque diuturnam Majeſtatis Tuæ offenſionem incidiſſe; tamen valde vehementer ſperamus, nos veniam adepturos, ſi pro uno multi, pro Archiepiſcopo Epiſcopi, pro tanto Præſule tot Miniſtri, ſeriò, & ſuppliciter intercedamus. Quod ſi deprecantium authoritas in petitione valeret, hæc cauſa jamdudum à nobilibus viris; ſi voluntas, ab amiciſſimis; ſi experientia, à prudentiſſimis; ſi religio, a reverendiſſimis; ſi multitudo, à plurimis: ſicut noſtræ partes nullæ nunc aliæ videantur, quàm ut orationem cum illorum rationibus, noſtras preces cum illorum petitionibus ſuppliciſſimè, ac demiſſiſſimè conjungamus.

Ut enim Cæſar Octavius jucundiſſimus propterea fuiſſe ſcribitur, quòd apud eum quoties quiſque voluit, dixit, & quod voluit, dum humiliter; ſic ex infinitis illis virtutibus, quibus Regium Tuum pectus abundè cumulatur, vix ulla vel Majeſtati Tuæ honorificentior, vel in populum Tuum gratioſior exiſtit, quàm in admittendis hominibus facilitas, in cauſis audiendis lenitas, prudentia in ſecernendis, in ſatisfaciendis pietas, & clementia. Nihil eſt enim tam populare quàm bonitas; atque Principes ad præpotentem Deum nulla re propiùs accedunt, quàm offenſionibus deponendis, & obliviſcendis injurijs; non dicimus ſepties, ſed ſeptuagies ſepties. Nam, ſi decem millia talentorum dimittantur nobis; nonne nos fratribus, conſervis, ſubditis, centum denarios condonabimus? Liceat enim nobis illud Chriſti præceptum, ad iſtud inſtitutum, bona Tua cum pace accommodare. Præſertim cum hortetur Apoſtolus, ut manſuetudo noſtra nota ſit omnibus; Chriſtuſque jubeat, ut miſericordes ſimus ſicut Pater noſter cœleſtis miſericors eſt. Vinum in vulnus infundere ſalutare eſt, & ſalutarius oleum; Chriſtus utrumque adhibuit. Judicium cantare, Domino jucundum eſt, ac jucundius miſericordiam; David utrumque perfecit. Gratioſa eſt in omnibus hominibus clementia, in Proceribus gratioſior, in Principe verò gratioſiſſima. Glorioſa eſt Regi manſuetudo, Reginæ glorioſior, Virgini verò glorioſiſſima: ſi non ſemper, at ſæpius; ſi non in omnes, at in pios; ſi non in vulgus, at in Magiſtratus, at in Miniſtros, at in eum qui in tam ſublimi loco conſtitutus, magnâ apud nos authoritate, magnâ apud alios exiſtimatione, ſummâ in Sacratiſſimam Tuam Majeſtatem fide, & obſervantia præditus; ut non ſæpe in vitâ deliquiſſe, ſed ſemel tantum in vitâ diſplicuiſſe videatur, idque non tam præſractâ voluntate, quam tenera conſcientiâ, cujus tantam eſſe vim, magni authores, & optimi quique viri ſcripſerunt, ut quicquid, eâ vel reclamante, vel errante, vel hæſitante fiat, non leve peccatum eſſe ſtatuerint. Ac ut, quod verum eſt, ingenuè genuè & humiliter attendamus; & illud omnium quod unam agitur, vel neceſſario ſilentio, vel voluntariâ oblectatione obruamus: Si laudabile eſt, vitam non modo ab omni crimine, ſed ſuſpicione criminis, liberam traduxiſſe, traduxit; ſi honeſtum, Religionem ab omni, non modo Papiſtica corruptela, ſed à ſchiſmatica pravitate, integram conſervare, conſervavit; ſi Chriſtianum, non modo, propter juſtitiam, perſecutionem paſſum eſſe, ſed per cæteras nationes propter Evangelium, oberraſſe; & paſſus eſt, & oberravit.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

Quæ cum ita ſint (Regina Clementiſſima) omnes hæ noſtræ voces ad Celſitudinem Tuam profectæ, hoc unum demiſſiſſimè, & quàm fieri poteſt ſubjectiſſimè comprecantur, idque per ſingularem naturæ Tuæ bonitatem, per anteactæ Tuæ vitæ conſuetudinem, per pietatem Regiam in ſubditos, per charitatem Chriſtianam in inimicos, perque eam, qua reliquos omnes & privatos, & Principes excellis lenitatem; ut velis Majeſtatem Tuam manſuetudine, juſtitiam miſericordiâ, iram placabilitate, offenſionem indulgentiâ mitigare; & Archiepiſcopum mœrore fractum, & debilitatum, non modo extollere jacentem, ſed Eccleſiam ipſi, ipſum Eccleſiæ, Tuis civibus, ſuis fratribus, exteris nationibus, denique pijs omnibus tandem aliquando reſtituere. Quod ſi fecerit Majeſtas Tua, vel potiùs cùm fecerit (quod enim ſummè cupimus, ſummè etiam ſperare jucundum eſt) non dubitamus, quin illum Reverendiſſimum Patrem, ſupplicem, & abjectum, non tam à pedes, quàm ad nutûs Tuos perpetuò ſis habitura. Ita Celſitati Tuæ perſanctè pollicemur, nobis neque in Eccleſia conſtituenda curam, neque in Religione propagandâ ſtudium, neque in Schiſmatibus tollendis diligentiam, neque in hoc beneficio præcipuè recolendo memoriam, neque in ferendo quas debemus gratias, gratam animi benevolentiam ullo unquam tempore defuturam.

Dominus Jeſus Majeſtatem Tuam, ad Reipublicæ tranquillitatem, ad Eccleſiæ conſervationem, ad ſuæ veritatis amplificationem, omni fœlicitatis genere diutiſſimè proſequatur.

This petition, though preſented with all advantage, found no other entertainment than delays, which ended in a final deniall; it being daily ſuggeſted to the Queen, that Grindal was a great patrone of propheſyings (now ſet up in ſeverall parts of the land) which, if permitted to take place, would in fine prove the bane of the Church, and Commonwealth.

2. Theſe propheſyings were founded on the Apoſtles[a] precept, For, ye may all propheſie one by one, that all may learn, and all be comforted; but ſo, as to make it out, they were fain to make uſe of humane prudential additions, modelling their propheſyings as followeth.

The model and method of propheſyings. [a] 1 Cor. 14. 13.

1. The Miniſters of the ſame precinct, by their own appointment (not ſtrictly ſtanding on the old diviſion of Deanries) met at the principal place therein.
2. The junior Divine went firſt into the pulpit, and for halfe an hour, more or leſs (as he could with clearneſs contract his meditations) treated upon a portion of Scripture, formerly by a joynt-agreement aſſigned unto him. After him, foure or five moe, obſerving their ſeniority ſucceſſively dilated on the ſame text.

3. At

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regni Eliz. 23.

3. At last a grave Divine, appointed on purpose (as Father of the Act) made the closing sermon, somewhat larger then the rest, praising the pains, and performance of such, who best deserved it; meekly, and mildly reproving the mistakes, and failings of such of those, if any were found in their Sermons. Then all was ended as it was begun with a solemn prayer: and at a publick refection of those Ministers together (with many of the Gentry repairing unto them) the next time of their meeting was appointed, text assigned, Preachers deputed, a new Moderator elected, or the old one continued, and so all were dissolved.

This exercise proved (though often long) seldome tedious; and peoples attentions, though travelling farr, were little tired, because entertained with much variety.

The inconveniences of propheſyings detected, or suspected.

3. However, some inconveniences were seen, and more foreseen by wise (or at least suspected by fearfull) men, if these propheſies might generally take place in the land.

1. Many modest Ministers, and those profitable Preachers in their private Parishes, were loath to appear in this publick way, which made them undeservedly sleighted and neglected by others.
2. Many young men, of more boldness than learning, readiness, than solidity, carried away the credit, to the great disheartning of those of more age, and ability.
3. This consort of Preachers kept not always time and tune amongst themselves, much jarring of personal reflections often disturbing their harmony.
4. Many would make impertinent excursions from their text, to inveigh against the present discipline, and government of the Church. Such Preachers being more plausible to the people, generally best pleased with them, who manifest their displeasure against the present authority.
5. A wise person was often wanting to moderate the Moderator, partially passing his censures, rather according to affection, than judgement.
6. People factiously cried up, some one Minister, some another, to the disgrace of Gods Ordinance.
7. These propheſyings, being accounted the faires for spiritual merchandizes, made the weekly markets for the same holy commodities, on the Lords day, to be less respected, and Ministers to be neglected in their respective Parishes.
8. In a word, the Queen was so perfectly prepossessed with prejudice against these propheſyings, (as if they foretold the rise of schisme, and faction) that she was implacably incensed against Arch-Bishop Grindal, as the principal Patrone, and promoter thereof.

However the good Arch-Bishop, to vindicate himself, and state the usefulness of these propheſyings, wrote a large letter to the Queen: and although we cannot exactly tell the just * time thereof; yet, knowing it will be welcome to the pious reader at any time, here we present the true copie thereof.

* To the day and moneth being confident this was the year.

20 Dec. 1576

With

Anno Dom. 1580.

The most remarkable letter of Arch-Bishop Grindall, in defence of Prophesies and Church-jurisdiction.

With most humble remembrance of bounden duty to your Majesty. It may please the same to be advertized, that the speeches which it pleased you to deliver unto me when I last attended on your Highness concerning the abridging the number of Preachers, and the utter subversion of all learned exercises, and conferences amongst the Ministers of the Church, allowed by the Bishops and Ordinaries have exceedingly dismayed and discomforted me: not so much for that, the said speeches sounded very hardly against my own person, being but one particular man, and not so much to be accounted of; but most of all, for that the same might tend to the publick harme of Gods Church, whereof your Majesty by office ought to be Nutricia, and also the heavy burden of your conscience before God if they should be put to strict execution. It was not your Majesties pleasure then (the time not serving thereto) to hear me at any length concerning the said two matters then expounded. I thought it therefore my duty by writing to declare some part of my mind unto your Highness, beseeching the same with patience to read over this which I now send written with my own rude scribling hand, which seemeth indeed to be of more length then it is: for I say with Ambrose Ad Valentinianum Imper: Scribo manu mea, quod sola legas. Madam, first of all I must, and will during my life, confess that there is no earthly creature to whom I am so much bounden as to your Majesty, who (notwithstanding mine insufficiency, which commendeth your grace the more) hath bestowed upon me so many and so great benefits, as I could never hope for, much less deserve. I do therefore according to my bounden duty, with all thanksgiving, bear towards your Majesty a most humble, thankfull, and faithfull heart, and that knoweth he, that knoweth all things: Neither do I intend ever to offend your Majesty in any thing, unless in the cause of God, or his Church by necessity of office and burden laid upon me, and burden of conscience, I shall thereunto be inforced, and in these cases, which I trust in God shall never be urged upon me. If I should use dissembling silence, I should very ill requite so many your Majesties, and so great benefits. For in so doing, both you might fall into perill towards God, and I my self into endless damnation. The Prophet Ezekiel termeth us Ministers of the Church Speculatores, and not Adulatores. If we therefore see the sword coming by reason of any offence towards God, we must of necessity give warning, else the blood of those that perish will be required at our hands. I beseech your Majesty thus to think of me, that I do not conceive any ill opinion of you, although I cannot assent unto those two Articles then expounded. I do with the rest of all your good Subjects acknowledge, that we have received by your government, many and most excellent benefits, as amongst others, freedome of conscience, suppression of Idolatry, sincere preaching of the Gospell, with publick peace and tranquillity. I am also perswaded that ever in these matters which you seem to urge, your meaning and zeal is for the best: the like hath happened to many of the best Princes that ever were, yet have not refused afterwards to be better informed, and instructed out of Gods word: King David so much commended in the Scriptures, had no evill meaning, when he commanded the people to be numbred, he thought it good policy in so doing, to understand what forces he had in store to imploy against Gods enemies, if occasion so required: yet afterwards saith the Scripture, his own heart stroke him, and God by the Prophet Gad, reprehended him for his offence, and gave him for the same, choice of three hard pennances, that is to say, Famine, Warr, and Pestilence. Good King Ezechias of curtesie, and good affection, shewed to the Embassadors of the King of Babylon, the treasures of the house of God, and of his own house, and yet the Prophet Isaiah told him, that God was therewith displeased. The godly King Jehosaphat making league

league with his neighbour King Ahab, and of like good meaning no doubt was likewise reprehended by Jehu the Prophet in this forme of words; Impio præbes auxilium, & ijs qui oderunt Dominum, amicitia jungeris. Ambrose writing to Theodosius the Emperor, useth these words; Novi pietatem tuam erga Deum, lenitatem in homines, oblectatus sum beneficijs tuis &c. and yet for all that, the said Ambrose doth not forbear in the same Epistle to perswade the said Emperour, to revoke an ungodly Edict, wherein he had commanded a godly Bishop to reedifie a Jewish Synagogue pulled down by the Christian people. And so to come to the present case, I may very well use to your Highness, the words of Ambrose above written, Novi pietatem &c. But surely I cannot marvell enough, how this strange opinion should once enter into your minde; that it should be good for the Church to have few preachers. Alass Madam, is the Scripture more plain in any thing, then that the gospell of Christ should be plentifully preached: and that plenty of labourers should be sent into the Lords harvest, which being great and large, standeth in need, not of a few, but of many workmen. There was appointed to the building of Solomons materiall Temple artificers and labourers, besides 3000. overseers: and shall we think, that a few preachers, may suffice to the building and edifying of the spirituall Temple of Christ, which is his Church: Christ when he sent forth his Disciples and Apostles, said unto them, Ite, prædicate Evangelium omni creaturæ; but all Gods creatures cannot be instructed in the gospell, unless all possible means be used to have multitudes of preachers and teachers to preach unto them. Sermo Christi inhabitet in vobis opulenter, Saith S. Paul Col. 3. and 2 Tim. 4. Prædica Sermonem, insta tempestivè, intempestivè, argue, increpa, exhortare &c. which thing cannot be done without often and much teaching and preaching. To this agreeth the practise of Christs Apostles, Qui constituebant per singulas Ecclesias presbyteros. Acts 14. S. Paul likewise writeth to Titus, 1. Hujus rei gratia, reliqui te in Creta, ut quæ desunt, pergas corrigere, & constituas oppidatim Presbyteros. And afterwards describes how the same presbytery were to be qualified, not such as we are compelled to admit for mere necessity, unless we should have a great many of Churches utterly desolate: but such indeed as were able to exhort, per suam doctrinam, & contradicentes convincere. And in this place, I beseech your Majesty to note one thing necessary to be noted, which is this. If the Holy Ghost prescribeth expressly, that preachers should be placed oppidatim; How can it then well be thought, that three or foure preachers may suffice for a shire: Publick and continuall preaching of Gods word, is the ordinary means, and instrument of the salvation of mankinde. S. Paul calleth it the Ministry of reconciliation of man unto God: by the preaching of Gods word, the glory of God is encreased and enlarged, faith nourished, and charity encreased; by it the ignorant are instructed, the negligent exhorted and incited, the stubborne rebuked, the weak conscience comforted, and to all those, that sin of malicious wickedness, the wrath of God is threatned: By preaching also, due obedience to God and Christian Princes, and Magistrates, is planted in the hearts of Subjects; for obedience proceedeth of conscience, conscience is grounded upon the word of God, and the word of God worketh his effect by preaching; so as generally where preaching wanteth, obedience faileth. No Prince ever had more lively experience hereof then your Majesty hath had in your time, and may have daily; if your Majesty comes to the City of London never so often, what gratulations, what joy, what concourse of the people is there to be seen? Yea, what acclamations and prayers to God for your long life; and other manifest significations are there to be heard, of inward and unfeined love, joyned with most humble and hearty obedience are there to be heard? whereof commeth this Madam, but of the continuall preaching of Gods word in that City, whereby that people hath hath been plentifully inſtructed in their duty towards God and your Majeſty. On the contrary, what bred the Rebellion in the North? was it not Papiſtry, and ignorance of Gods word, through want of often preaching in the time of that rebelling? were not all men of all ſtates that made profeſſion of the goſpel, moſt ready to offer their lives for your defence? in ſo much that one poore pariſh in York-ſhire, which by continuall preaching, hath been better inſtructed then the reſt. Halifax I mean was ready to bring three or foure thouſand able men into the field, to ſerve you againſt the ſaid rebels. How can your Majeſty have a more lively triall and experience of the effects of much preaching, or little or no preaching? the one worketh moſt faithfull obedience, the other working moſt unnaturall diſobedience and rebellion; but it is thought that many are admitted to preach, and few able to do it well, that unable preachers be removed is very requiſite, if ability and ſufficiency may be rightly weighed and judged, and therein I truſt as much is, and ſhall be done as can be; for both I for my own part, let it be ſpoken without any oſtentation, I am very carefull in allowing of ſuch preachers only, as be able both for the knowledge in the Scriptures, and alſo for teſtimony of their godly life and converſation; and beſides that, I have given very great charge to the reſt of my brethren, the Biſhops of this Province to do the like, we admited no man to the office of preaching, that either profeſſeth Papiſtry, or puritaniſme, the graduats of the Univerſities are only admitted to be preachers, unleſs it be ſome few, which have excellent gifts of knowledge in the Scriptures, joyned with good utterance and godly perſwaſions. I my ſelf procured above 40. learned preachers and graduats within leſs then theſe ſix years to be placed within the Dioceſs of York, beſides theſe I found there, and there I left them, the fruits of whoſe travell in preaching, your Majeſty is like to reap daily by moſt aſſured dutifull obedience of your ſubjects in thoſe parts. But indeed this age judgeth hardly, and nothing indifferently of the ability of preachers of our time, judging few or none to be able in their opinion, which hard judgement groweth upon divers ill diſpoſitions of men. St. Paul doth command the preaching of Chriſt crucified be abſque eminentia ſermonis, but in our time, many have ſo delicate eares, that no preaching can ſatisfie them, unleſs it be ſauced with much ſweetneſs and exornation of ſpeech, which the ſame apoſtle utterly condemneth, and giveth this reaſon, ne evacuetur crux Chriſti. Some there be alſo, that are miſlikers of the godly reformation in religion now eſtabliſhed, wiſhing indeed, that there were no preachers at all, and ſo by depraving of miniſters, impugne religion, non aperto Martis, ſed in cuniculis, much like to the Popiſh Biſhops in your fathers time, who would have had the engliſh tranſlation of the Bible called in, as evill tranſlated, and the new tranſlation thereof to be committed to them, which they never intended to performe. A number there is, and that exceeding great, whereof ſome are altogether worldly minded, and altogether bent covetouſly to gather worldly goods and poſſeſſions, ſerving all carnall, vain, diſſolute, and laſcivious life. Voluptatis amores, magis quam Dei, & ſemetipſos dediderunt ad patrandum omnem immunditiem cum aviditate. Eph. 4. 19. and becauſe the preaching of Gods word, (which to all Chriſtians conſcience is ſweet, and delectable) to them, having cauterizatas conſcientias is bitter and grievous, for as St. Ambroſe ſaith ſuper Pſal. 119. quomodo poſſunt verba Dei dulcia eſſe in faucibus tuis, in quibus eſt amaritudo? There they wiſh alſo that there were no preachers at all, but becauſe they dare not directly condemne the office of preaching, ſo expreſsly commanded by Gods word, for that the ſame were open blaſphemy, they turne themſelves altogether, and with the ſame meaning as others do, to make exceptions againſt the perſons of them that be admitted to preach. But God forbid Madam, that you ſhould open your eares to any of theſe wicked perſwaſions, or any way to diminiſh the preaching of Chriſts goſpell for that you would ruinate altogether altogether at length. Cum defecerit propheta, diſſipabitur populus. Pro. 27. ſaith Solomon. Now where it is though that the reading of godly Homilies, ſet forth by publick authority may ſuffice (I continue in the ſame minde I was, when I attended upon your Majeſty) the reading of Homilies hath his commodities, but it is nothing comparable to the office of preaching. The godly preacher is learned in the goſpell. Fidelis ſervus qui novit, Who can apply his ſpeech to the diverſity of times, places, and hearers, which cannot be done in homilies. Exhortations, reprehenſions, and perſwaſions are uttered with more affections to the moving of the hearers in ſermons, then in Homilies. Beſides, Homilies were deviſed by godly Biſhops in your brothers dayes, only to ſupply neceſſity, by want of preachers, and are by the ſtatute, not to be preferred, but to give place to ſermons, whereſoever they may be had, and were never thought in themſelves to contain alone ſufficient inſtruction for the Church of England; for it was then found (as it is found now) that this Church of England hath been by appropriations, and that not without ſacrilege ſpoiled of the livings, which at the firſt were appointed to the office of preaching and teaching, which appropriations were firſt annexed to Abbyes, and after came to the crown, and now are diſpoſed to private mens poſſeſſions, without hope to reduce the ſame to the originall Inſtitution. So that at this day in my opinion, where one Church is able to yield ſufficient living to a learned preacher, there are at the leaſt ſeven Churches unable to do the ſame, where there be * ſoules (the more is the pitty) there are not ſeven pounds a year reſerved for the Miniſter. In ſuch pariſhes as it is not poſſible to place able preachers for want of convenient ſtipend, if every flock might have a preaching paſtor, which is rather to be wiſhed then hoped for, then were reading of Homilies altogether unneceſſary, but to ſupply that want of preaching Gods word, which is the food of the ſoul, growing upon the neceſſities before mentioned, both in your brothers time, and in your time alſo, certain Homilies have been deviſed that the people ſhould not altogether be deſtitute of inſtruction, for it is an old proverb, better a loaf then no bread. Now for the ſecond point, which is concerning the learned exerciſes and conferences amongſt the miniſters of the Church, I have conſulted with divers of my brethren the Biſhops, who think of the ſame as I do, a thing profitable to the Church, and therefore expedient to be continued, and I truſt your Majeſty will think the like, when your Majeſty ſhall have been informed of the matter and order thereof, what authority it hath of the ſcriptures, what commodity it bringeth with it, and what diſcommodities will follow if it be clean taken away. The authors of this exerciſe are the Biſhops of the Dioceſs where this ſame is uſed, who by the law of God, and by the Canons and Conſtitutions of the Church now in force, have authority to appoint exerciſe to their inferiour Miniſters for encreaſe of learning and knowledge in the Scriptures, as to them ſeemeth moſt expedient, for that pertaineth ad diſciplinam clericalem; the time appointed for this exerciſe is once in a moneth, or once in twenty or fifteen dayes at the diſcretion of the Ordinary. The time of this exerciſe is two hours, the place the Church of the appointed for the Aſſembly, the matter entreated of, is as followeth; ſome text of Scripture before appointed to be ſpoken is interpreted in this order. Firſt, the occaſion of the place is ſhewed, Secondly, the end. Thirdly, the proper ſence of the place. Fourthly, the property of the words, and thoſe that be learned in the tongues, ſhewing the diverſity of interpretations. Fifthly, where the like phraſes are uſed in ſcriptures. Sixthly, places of ſcripture that ſeem to repugne are reconciled. Seventhly, the arguments of the text are opened. Eighthly, it is declared what vertues and vices are therein couched, and to which of the commandements they do appertain. Ninthly, how the like hath been wreſted by the adverſary if occaſion ſo require. Tenthly and laſtly, what doctrine of faith and manners the ſaid text doth contain; the concluſion is with a prayer for your Majeſty, and all eſtates as it

Anno Dom. 1581. Anno Regni 23.

Anno Regni Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regni Eliz. 23.

* The word not being eaſily legible, I have left a blank, (as ſometimes before and after) preferring to refer the ſence to the Judicious Readers own conjecture, then to impoſe my gueſs upon him.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

is appointed by the book of Common-Prayer, and a pſalm. Theſe orders following are alſo obſerved by the ſaid exerciſe, Firſt, two, or three of the graveſt and beſt learned paſtors are appointed of the Biſhops, to be Moderators in every Aſſembly, no man may ſpeak unleſs he be firſt allowed by the Biſhop with this proviſo, that no lay man be ſuffered to ſpeak at any time, no controverſy of this preſent time and ſtate, ſhall be moved and dealt withall, if any attempt the contrary, he is put to ſilence by the Moderator, none is ſuffered to glance openly or covertly at perſons publick or private; neither yet any one to confute one another, if any man utter a wrong ſence of ſcripture, he is privately admoniſhed thereof, and better inſtructed by the Moderators, and other his fellow Miniſters, if any man uſe immoderate ſpeeches, or unreverend geſture or behaviour, or otherwiſe be ſuſpected in life, he is likewiſe admoniſhed as aforeſaid: if any man do vilify or break theſe orders, he is preſented to the Biſhop to be corrected. The ground of this, or like exerciſe is of great and ancient authority; for Samuel did practiſe ſuch like exerciſes in his time at Naioth in Ramath and Bethel, 1 Sam. 10. 2, 19. So did Elizeus the prophet at Jerico, which ſtudious perſons in theſe dayes were called filij Prophetarum the diſciples of the Prophets, that being exerciſed in the knowledg and ſtudy of the ſcriptures, they might be able men to ſerve in Gods Church as that time required. St. Paul alſo doth make expreſs mention 1 Cor. 14. that the like in effect was uſed in the primitive Church, and giveth order for the ſame, that 2, or 3, ſhould ſpeak (by courſe he meaneth) and the reſt ſhall keep ſilence. That exerciſe in the Church in theſe dayes St. Paul calleth Prophetia, and the ſpeaker Prophetas, terms very odious in our dayes to ſome, becauſe they are not rightly underſtood, for indeed propheta in that and like places of the ſame Paul doth not, as it doth ſometimes ſignifie prediction of things to come, which thing, or which gift, is not now ordinary in the Church of God, but ſignifieth thereby the aſſent and conſent of the ſcriptures. And therefore doth St. Paul attribute unto theſe that be called Prophetæ in that chapter doctrinam ad ædificationem, exortationem, & conſolationem. This gift of expounding and interpreting the ſcriptures, was in St. Pauls time given unto many by a ſpeciall miracle without ſtudy, ſo was alſo by miracle the gift to ſpeak ſtrange tongues which they had never learned. But now miracles ceaſing, men muſt attain to the Hebrew, Greek and Latine tongues &c. by travell and ſtudy, God giveth the encreaſe; ſo muſt men alſo attaine by the like means to the gifts of expounding and interpreting the ſcriptures, and amongſt other helps, nothing is ſo neceſſary as theſe above named exerciſes and conferences amongſt the miniſters of the Church; which in effect are all one with the exerciſes of ſtudents in Divinity in the Univerſities, ſaving, that the firſt is done in a tongue underſtanded, to the more edifying of the learned hearers. Howſoever report hath been made to your Majeſty concerning theſe exereiſes, yet I and others of York, whoſe names are noted as followeth. 1. Cantuarienſis. 2. London. 3. Winc. 4. Bathon. 5. Litchfield. 6. Gloceſter. 7. Lincolne. 8. Cheſter. 9. Exon. 10. Meneven. als. Davids. Hereof as they have teſtified unto me by their letters, have found by experience, that theſe profits and commodities following have enſued of them. 1. The miniſters of the Church are more skillfull, and more ready in the ſcriptures, and more apt to teach their flocks. 2. It withdraweth them from idleneſs, wandring, gaming &c. 3. Some afore ſuſpected in doctrine, are brought to the knowledge of the truth. 4. Ignorant miniſters are driven to ſtudy, if not for conſcience, yet for ſhame and fear of diſcipline. 5. The opinion of lay men touching the ableneſs of the Clergy is hereby removed. 6. Nothing by experience beateth down popery more then that. 7. Miniſters, as ſome of my brethren do confeſs, grow to ſuch knowledge by means of theſe exerciſes, that where afore were not able Miniſters, not 3; now are 30, able, and meet to preach at Pauls-croſs, and 40, or 50, beſides able to inſtruct their own Cures; so as it is found by experience the best means to encrease knowledge in the simple, and to continue it in the learned, only backward men in religion, and contemners of learning, in the countries abroad do fret against it; which in truth doth the more commend it: the dissolution of it would breed triumph to the adversary, and great sorrow and grief to the favourers of religion, contrary to the counsell of Ezekiel 13. 18. who saith, Cor justi non est contristandum, and although some have abused this good and necessary exercise, there is no reason that the malice of a few should prejudice all. Abuses may be reformed, and that which is good may remain, neither is there any just cause of offences to be taken, if diverse men make divers sences of one sentence of scripture, so that all the senses be good, and agreeable to the analogie and proportion of faith, for otherwise we must needs condemne all the ancient Fathers, and divers of the Church, who most commonly expound one and the same text of scripture diversly, and yet all to the good of the Church. and therefore doth Basil compare, the scriptures to a well, out of which the more a man draweth, the better and sweeter is the water. I trust when your Majesty hath considered and weighed the premises, you will rest satisfied, and judge that no such inconveniences can grow of such exercises as these, as you have been informed; but rather the clean contrary, and for my own part, because I am well assured by reasons, and also by arguments taken out of the holy scriptures, by experience the most certain seal of sure knowledge, that the said exercises for the interpretation and exposition of the scriptures, and for the exhortation and comfort drawn out of the same, are both profitable to encrease knowledge among st ministers, and tendeth to the edifying of the hearers. I am inforced with all humility, and yet plainly to protest, that I cannot with safe conscience, and without the offence of the Majesty of God, give mine assent to the suppressing of the said exercises, much less can I send out any injunction for the utter and universall subversion of the same. I say with S. Paul, I have no power to destroy, but only to edifie, and with the same Apostle, I can do nothing against the truth, but with the truth. If it be your Majesties pleasure for this or any other cause to remove me out of this place, I will with all humility yield thereunto, and render again unto your Majesty that which I have received of the same. I consider with my self, quod terrendum est incidere in manus Dei viventis. I consider also, quod qui facit contra conscientiam (divinis in rebus) ædificat ad gehennam. And what shall I win if I gained, I will not say a Bishoprick, but the whole world, and lose my own soul? Beare with me I beseech you Madam, if I chuse rather to offend your earthly Majesty, then to offend the heavenly Majesty of God. And now being sorry that I have been so long and tedious to your Majesty; I will draw to an end, most humbly praying the same, that you would consider these short petitions following. The first that you would referr all these Ecclesiasticall matters which touch religion, or the Doctrine or Discipline of the Church unto the Bishops, and Divines of the Church of your Realm, according to the example of all Christian Emperours and Princes of all Ages: for indeed they are to be judged as an ancient Father writeth; in Ecclesia seu Synodo, non in Palatino. When your Majesty, hath questions of the laws of your Realm, you do not decide the same in your Court or Palace, but send them to your judges to be determined. Likewise, for the duties in matters in Doctrine or Discipline of the Church, the ordinary way is to defer the decision to the Bishops, and other head Ministers of the Church. Ambrose to Theodosius useth these words. Si de causis pecuniarijs comites tuos consulis: quanto magis, in causa religionis sacerdotes Domini æquum est consulas. And likewise to the Emperour Valentinian Epist. 32. Si de fide conferendum est. Sacerdotum debet esse justa collatio, si enim factum est Constantino Augustæ memoriæ principi qui, nullas leges ante præmisit, sed liberum dedit

Anno Dom. 1580. Anno Regni Eliz. 23.

Anno Regni Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

dedit judicium Sacerdotis. And in the same place, the same Father saith, that Constantius the Emperour, son to Constantine the great, began well, by reason he followed his Fathers steps at the first, but ended ill, because he took upon him difficile intra Palatium judicare, and thereby fell into Arianisme, a terrible example. The said Ambrose so much commended in all histories for a godly Bishop, goeth further, and writeth to the said Emperour in this forme. Si docendus est episcopus à laico, quid sequitur? laicus ergo disputet, & Episcopus audiat à laico: At certè, si vel scripturarum seriem divinarum, vel vetera tempora retractemus, quis est qui abundat in causa fidei, inquam fidei, episcopos solere de Imperatoribus christianis, non imperatores de episcopis judicare. Would God your Majesty would follow this ordinary, you should procure to your self much quietness of minde, and better please God, avoid many offences, and the Church should be more peaceable and quietly governed, much to the comfort and quietness of your Realm. The second petition I have to make to your Majesty is this, that when you deal in matters of faith and religion, or matters that touch the Church of Christ, which is the Spouse bought with so dear a price, you would not use to pronounce so resolutely and peremptorily, quasi ex authoritate, as you may do in civill and extern matters, but always remember, that in Gods cause, the will of God, and not the will of any earthly creature is to take place. It is the antichristian voice of the Pope. Sic volo, Sic jubeo, stet pro ratione voluntas. In Gods matters, all Princes ought to bow their Septers to the Son of God, and to ask counsell at his mouth what they ought to doe; David exhorteth all Kings and Rulers to serve God with fear and trembling. Remember Madam, that you are a mortall creature, look not only (as was said to Theodosius) upon the people, and princely array, wherewith you are apparreiled, but consider withall, what it is that is covered therewith. Is it not flesh and blood, is it not dust and ashes, is it not a corruptible body which must return to her earth again, God knoweth how soon? Must you not one day appear, ante tremendum tribunal crucifixi, ut recipias ibi prout gesseris in corpore, sive bonum sive malum. 2 Cor. 5. And although you are a mighty Prince, yet remember that he that dwelleth in heaven is mightier, as the Psalmist saith, 76. Terribilis est is qui aufert spiritum principum, terribilis super omnes reges. Wherefore I beseech you Madam in viscera Christi, when you deal in these religious causes set the Majesty of God before your eyes, laying all earthly majesty aside, determine with your self to obey his voice, and with all humility, say unto him, non mea, sed tua voluntas fiat. God hath blessed you with great felicity in your reign now many years, beware you do not impute this same to your own deserts, or policy, but give God the glory, and as to instruments and means, impute your said felicity; first, to the goodness of the cause which you set forth, I mean Christs true religion. And Secondly, to the sighs, and groans of the Godly in fervent prayer to God for you, which have hitherto as it were tied and bound the hands of God, that he could not pour out his plagues upon you and your people, most justly deserved. Take heed that you never think of declining from God, lest it be verified of you which is written of Joash 2 Cron. 24. who continued a Prince of good and godly government for many years together, and afterwards, cum corroboratus esset, elevatum est cor ejus in interitum suum & neglexit Deum. You have done many things well, but unless you persevere to the end, you cannot be blessed; for if you turn from God, then will he turn his mercifull countenance from you, and what remaineth then to be looked for, but only a horrible expectation of Gods judgement, and an heaping up of Gods wrath against the day of wrath. But I trust in God your Majesty will alwayes humble your self under his mighty hand, and goe forward in the godly and zealous setting forth of Gods true religion, always yeilding true obedience and reverence to the word of God, the only rule of faith and religion. And if you so doe, although God hath just cause many wayes to be angry with you, and us for our unthankfulness. Yet I doubt nothing, but for his own names sake, he will still hold his mercifull hand over us, shield and protect us under the shadow of his wings, as he hath hitherto done. I beseech God our heavenly Father plentifully to pour his principall spirit upon you, and always direct your heart in his holy fear.

and

Amen, Amen,

Anno Dom. 1582. Anno Regin. Eliz. 25.

What could be written with more spirit, and less animosity? more humility and less dejection? I see a Lambe in his own, can be a Lion, in God, and his churches Cause. Say not that orbitas and senectus, (the two things which made the man speak so boldly [a] to the Tyrant) only encouraged Grindall, in this his writing, whose necessary boldness did arise, partly from confidence in the goodness of the cause, for which, partly from the graciousnes of the Queen to whom he made his address. But alas all in vain, Leicester had so filled her Majesties eares with complaints against him, there was no room to receive his petition.

a Plutarch. Morals.

4. Indeed Leicester cast a covetous eye on Lambeth-House, alledging as good arguments for his obtaining thereof, as ever were urged by Ahab for Naboths-Vineyard. Now Grindall, though generally condemned for remissness in this kinde, (parting with more from his See, then ever his successors thanked him for) stoutly opposed the alienating of this his principal Palace, and made the Leicestrian Party to malice him, but more hereof [b] hereafter. Mean time may the Reader take notice, that a great Scholar and Statesman, and no Enemy to the Hierarchie, in his [c] worthy considerations about Church-Government, (tendred to King James) conceiveth, that such Prophesyings which Grindall did favour, might be so discreetly cautioned and moderated, as to make them without fear of faction profitable for advancing of learning and Religion. But so jealous were some Bishops of that Age, of these Prophecyings (as having too much Presbyterian Analogie, and classical Constitution therein) they decried the motion of them as Schismatical.

Lambeth house Grindals guilt.

b In Grindals character at his death.

c Sr. Francis Bacon.

5. I finde no mortality of Protestant Worthies this year. But amongst the Catholicks much moan for the death of Allan Cope, (Herpsfields great correspondent, and) Agent for those of his Religion at Rome, where he died, and was buried in the English Colledge, and George Bullock bred in S[t]. Johns in Cambridge, and after lived in Antwerpe in the Monastery of S[t]. Michaels.

The death of Cope and Bullock.

6. Now began Priests and Jesuites to flock faster into England, than ever before; having exchange of cloaths, and names, and professions. He, who on Sunday was a Priest, or Jesuite; was, on Monday, a Merchant, on Tuesday, a Souldier; on Wednesday, a Courtier; &c. and, with the sheers of equivocation (constantly carried about him) he could cut himself into any shape he pleased. But, under all their new shapes, they retained their old nature; being akinn in their turbulent spirits, to the wind pent in the subterranean concavities, which will never be quiet, untill it hath vented it self with a State-quake of those countries wherein they abide. These distilled traiterous principles into all people whersoever they came, and endeavoured to render them disaffected to Her Majesty; maintaining, that She Popish locusts swarme into England.

Anno Dom. 1580.

She neither had nor ought to have any dominion over Her Subjects, whileſt She perſiſted in an heretical diſtance from the Church of Rome.

Neceſſary ſeverity of the Parliament againſt them.

7. Hereupon the Parliament, which now met at Weſtminſter, was enforced, for the ſecurity of the State, to enact ſevere laws againſt them. Firſt, that it ſhould be treaſon to draw any from that faith eſtabliſhed in England, to the Romiſh religion. Secondly, that it ſhould be treaſon to be reconciled to the Romiſh religion. Thirdly, that to maintain, or conceal any ſuch perſon, longer then twenty days, ſhould be miſpriſion of treaſon. Fourthly, that ſaying maſs ſhould be two hundred marks penalty, and one years impriſonment. Fiftly, hearing Maſs ſhould be one hundred marks penalty, and one years impriſonment. Sixtly, abſence from the Church one moneth, fineable at twenty pounds. Seventhly, all they ſhalbe impriſoned, who will not, or cannot pay the forfeiture. Eightly, it was provided, that ſuch ſhould pay ten pounds a moneth, who kept a School-maſter in their houſe, who repaireth not to Church. Where by the way we may mention, that ſome ſince conceive themſelves to have diſcovered a defect in this law, becauſe no order is taken therein againſt Popiſh School-miſtriſſes. And although School-maſter may ſeem of the Common-gender, and inclusive of both ſexes, yet by the letter of the law all ſhe-teachers (which did miſchief to little children) evaded the puniſhment. Thus when authority hath carefully ſhut all doores, and windows imaginable, ſome little offenders will creep through the cranies thereof.

Many againſt mony-mulcts for conſcience.

8. When Sovereigns have made laws, Subjects ſometimes take the boldneſs to ſit in judgement upon them; to commend them for juſt, or condemne them for cruel, as here it came to paſs. Some (and thoſe far enough from all Popery) miſliked the impoſing of mony-mulcts on mens conſciences. If the Maſs were lawfull, let it freely be permitted; if unlawfull, let it wholy be prohibited. It is a ſad caſe to make men pay dear for their damnation, and ſo ſell them a licenſe to do that, which the receivers of their mony conceive to be unlawfull. It is part of the character of the Whore of [a] Babylon (which Proteſtants generally apply to Rome) that ſhe traded, or, made a mart of the ſouls of men: as this was little better.

[a] Rev. 18.13.

Others conceive the proportion of the fine unconſcionable.

9. Others, not diſliking a pecuniarie penalty, yet conceived the proportion thereof unreaſonable. Twenty pounds a moneth; a vaſt ſumm (eſpecially as exacted by lunarie moneths, conſiſting of twenty eight dayes, and ſo making thirteen moneths in the year) enough to ſhatter the contein-ment of a rich mans eſtate. They commended the moderation of the former Statute, which required twelve pence a Sunday of all ſuch, as could not give a reaſonable excuſe of their abſence from Church. That did ſmart, yet did not fetch blood, at the worſt, did not break bones. Whereas now twenty pounds a moneth, paid ſeverally by every Recuſant for himſelf, and as much for his wife (which, though one fleſh in Divinity, yet are two perſons in law) held ſo heavy as to cripple their eſtates. And as the rich hereby were almoſt undone: ſo the poore Papiſts (who alſo had ſouls to ſave) paſs'd wholy unpuniſhed, paying nothing, becauſe unable to pay all the penalty. And, although impriſonment was impoſed by law on perſons not ſolvable, yet officers were unwilling to caſt them into goale, where they might lie, and fill the goals, and rot without hopes of enlargement.

Arguments pro, and con, whether Jeſuites are to be put to death.

10. Larger were the debates both then, and ſince, in diſcourſe, and writing about the capital puniſhment, in taking away the lives of Jeſuites. Some being zealous for the vigorous execution of thoſe laws, and others as earneſt for the confining only of Jeſuits cloſe priſoners, during their life; conceiving it conducing moſt to the tranquillity of the Kingdom. But ſee their reaſons.

It is ſafeſt for England with vigour and rigour, to inſpirit the laws, and put Jeſuits to death.	It is ſafeſt for England to keep Jeſuits in perpetual durance, without taking away their lives.

1. Their

1.

Their breath is contagious to English aire, whose appearance in any Protestant-State, is as sure a presage (as the playing of Porpoises above water) that foul weather is to follow therein.

2.

It would render the reputation of our State lighter in the balance of the best friends thereof, if it should enact severe laws against offendors, and then hang those laws up (like forfeits in a Barbers shop) only to be look'd on, and laugh'd at, as never put in execution. What was this, but to make the sword of justice (which ought alwayes to be kept keen, & sharp) but to be like fencers swords, when they play in jeast-earnest, having the edge dunted, and the point button'd up? Might not felons, and murderers, even with some justice, promise much mercy unto themselves (whose offences are terminated in spoiling, or killing, of particular persons) if Priests, and Jesuits, publick incendiaries of the State, have such mercy indulged unto them?

3.

Favour in this kinde indulged to Jesuits, would be generally misinterpreted, to proceed (not from Her Majesties pitty, but) either from Her fearfulness, as not daring longer to enrage the Popish party; or from Her Guiltiness, Who, out of remorse of conscience, could not finde in Her heart to execute such cruel laws as She had enacted.

1.

All sinners are not Devils, and all Devils are not Beelzebubs. Some Priests and Jesuits are of a milder temper, and better metall'd, who by moderation may be melted into amendment.

2.

The point, and edge of the sword of justice [understand the law it self] may remain as sharp as it was before; Only the arme may, and ought to strike with lesse strength, and use more moderation in inflicting such severe punishments. The most wholesome laws would be poison (justice, hot in the fourth degree, is cruelty) if enforced at all times, and on all persons to the utmost extremity. Let the law stand unrepeal'd, only some mitigation be used in the execution thereof.

3.

Princes ought not to be affrighted from doing what is good, and honourable in it self, with the scarecrows of peoples misinterpretations thereof. If such misconstructions of Her Majesties mercy, be taken up wilfully, let such persons bear the blame, and shame, of their voluntary, and affected errours. If they be only ignorant mistakes of ingenuous persons, time will rectifie their judgements, and beget in them a better opinion of Her Majesties proceedings. However, better it is, that the Queens lenity should hazard such misconstructions thereof, than that otherwise She should be certainly censured for cruelty, and the State taxed as desirous to grow fat, by sucking the blood of Catholicks.

4. This

Anno Regni Eliz. 23. Anno Dom. 1580.

4.

This in all probability will be the moſt effectuall courſe to extirpate Jeſuitiſme out of the land. For, their Superiours beyond the ſeas, ſeeing all ſuch as they ſend hither impartially cut off by the hand of juſtice, will either out of pity forbear for the future, to thruſt moe men into the jaws of death; or elſe ſuch ſubject-Jeſuits, out of policy will refuſe to be ſent by them on unavoidable deſtruction.

4.

It will rather be the way to continue, and increaſe the ſame. The blood of Martyrs (whether real, or reputed) is the ſeed of that Church (true or falſe) in maintenance whereof they loſe their lives. We know, clamorouſneſs, and multitude do much in crying up matters; and herein the Papiſts (at home, and beyond the ſeas) will play their parts, to roare out ſuch men for Martyrs: A ſucceſſion of Jeſuits to be ſent over will never fail, ſeeing that ſervice amongſt erroneous judgements will never want Volunteers, where merit of heaven is the believed wages thereof.

5.

The dead doe not bite; and, being diſpatch'd out of the way, are forgotten. Whereas if Jeſuits be only condemned to perpetual durance, their party abroad will be reſtleſs in plotting, and practizing their brethrens enlargement. It is ſafer therefore to take away ſubjectum conatus, the ſubject, and object of their endeavours, by riding them quite out of the way, that their complices may deſpair to relieve them. For, though priſoners may be reſcued with much might, dead men cannot be revived without miracle.

5.

The greater rage moveth to the greater revenge, and the greater [apprehended] injury cauſeth the greater rage, It will rather ſharpen the edge of Popiſh zeal, more earneſtly to revenge their deaths, than to reſcue them from durance,

6.

No precedent could ever yet be produced of any Prieſt, or Jeſuite, who was converted with impriſonment. It is therefore but juſt, that they, who will not be mended with the goale, ſhould be ended with the gallows.

6.

Though the inſtance cannot be given of any Prieſt, or Jeſuite, who hath totally renounced his religion, yet ſome have been made ſemi-converts, ſo far as to diſclaim the treacherous part, and principles thereof. This is moſt viſible in the Secular Prieſts, the Queens lenity ſo working on many of them, that both in writing, and preaching, they have deteſted, and confuted all ſuch traiterous practices, as againſt the laws of God.

Anno Dom. 1581. Anno Regni Eliz. 24

7.

The rather, because no Jesuite is put to death for his religion, but rebellion, they are never examined on any article of their faith, nor are their consciences burdened with any interrogatories touching their belief; but only practices against the State are charged upon them,

7.

The death of Jesuits in such cases, may fitly be stiled, the childe of their rebellion, but the grandchilde of their religion, which is removed but a degree farther. For, their obedience to their superiours putteth them on the propagation of their religion, and by all means to endeavour the same, which causeth them out of an erroneous conscience, to do that which rendereth them offenders to our State. Now, in all ages, such as have suffered for their consciences, not only immediately, and in a direct line, but also at the second hand, and by implication, receive pity from all such as behold their sufferings (whether as a debt due, or as an almes given unto them, let others dispute) and therefore such putting of Jesuits unto death, will but procure unto them a general commiseration.

These, and many other reasons (too many, and tedious to be here inserted) were brought, and bandied on both sides, every one censuring as they stood affected.

The execution of this law moderated.

11. In the execution of these laws against Jesuits, Queen Elizabeth embraced a middle, and moderate way. Indeed when a new rod is made, some must be whipped therewith, though it be but in terrorem of others. When these Statutes were first in the state, or magisteriality thereof, they were severely put in practice on such offendours as they first lighted on. But some years after, the Queen and Her Judges grew remiss in the execution thereof. Witness the only confining of many of them to Wisbidge Castle, where they fell out amongst themselves. And in King James His dayes, this dormant law against Jesuits only awakened some once in foure, or five years (to shew the world that it was not dead) and then fairely fell asleep again, being very sparingly put in execution against some notorious offenders.

Worst of offenders scape best.

12. The worst was, the punishment hap'ned heaviest on those, which were the least offenders. For, whereas the greatest guilt was in the Senders, all the penalty fell on the Messengers; I mean on such novices which sent hither at their Superiours commands, and who, having lost their sight beyond the seas (by blinde obedience) came over to lose their lives in England. Now Jesuitisme is a weed, whose leaves, spread into our land, may be cut off, but the root thereof is out of reach, as fixed in Rome, and other forrain parts. For, in the mean time their Superiours, staying at Rome, ate, slept, wrote, rail'd, complain'd of persecution, making offaces, and they themselves crying out oh, whilest they thrust the hands of others of their own religion into the fire.

13. A loud

Anno Dom. 1580.

13. A loud Parliament is alwayes attended with a silent Convocation, as here it came to paſs. The activity of the former in Church-matters, left the later nothing to do. Only this account I can give thereof out of our records. Firſt, Arch-Biſhop Grindal appeared not at all therein, age, blindneſs, and diſgrace keeping the good father at home. Secondly, John Elmer Biſhop of London, was appointed his locum-tenens, or Deputy. Thirdly, this Convocation began in S^t. Pauls (where it continued without any removal) with reading the Letany vulgari ſermone, in the Engliſh tongue. Fourthly, the Biſhops commended three, namely, D^r. Humfries, Dean of Winchſter; D^r. * George Day, Dean of Windſor; and D^r. Goodman, Dean of Weſtminſter, to the inferiour Clergy, to choſe one of them for their Referendary, or Prolocutor. Fifthly, D^r. Day was elected, and preſented for that office. Sixthly, motion was made of drawing up ſome articles againſt the dangerous opinions of the Family of love, a ſect then much encreaſing, but nothing was effected. Seventhly, at ſeveral Seſſions they met, and prayed, and confer'd, and prorogued their meeting, and departed. Laſtly, the Clergy granted a Subſidie (afterwards confirmed by the Parliament) and ſo the convocation was diſſolved.

The acts of a ſilent Convocation.

* So called by miſtake in Records, otherwiſe his name was William.

1581

14. Now can I not ſatisfie my ſelf on my ſtricteſt enquiry, what Jeſuite, or Prieſt had the firſt hanſell of that ſevere Statute made againſt them. Indeed I finde a Prieſt, John Pain by name, executed at Chelmſford March the 31. (which was but thirteen dayes after the diſſolution of the Parliament) for certain ſpeeches by him uttered, but cannot avouch him for certainly tried on this Statute. More probable it is, that Thomas Ford, John Shert, and Robert Johnſon, Prieſts, executed at London, were the firſt-fruits of the States ſeverity.

Quere, on whom the law was firſt hanſelled.

15. No eminent Clergy-man Proteſtant died this year, ſave Gilbert Berkelay, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, who (as his Armes do atteſt) was allied to the ancient and honourable familie of the Berkelays.

1582

The death of Bp. Berkelay.

16. The Preſbyterian party was not idle all this while, but appointed a meeting at Cockfield (M^r. Knewſtubs Cure) in Suffolke, where three-ſcore Miniſters of Norfolke, Suffolke, and Cambridge-ſhire, met together, to conferr of the Common-Prayer-Book, what might be tolerated, and what neceſſary to be refuſed in every point of it, apparrel, matter, forme, dayes, faſtings, injunctions &c. Matters herein were carried with ſuch ſecrecy, that we can ſee no light thereof, but what only ſhineth thorough one creviſe, in a private letter [a] of one thus expreſſing himſelf to his friend. Concerning the meeting, I hope all things were ſo proceeded in as your ſelf would like of, as well for reverence to other brethren, as for other matters, I ſuppoſe before this time, ſome of the company have told you by word, for that was permitted unto you.

A meeting of the Presbyterians at Cockfield.

[a] Mr. Pigg in his letter to Mr. Field dated May 16.

17. We are alſo at as great a loſs, what was the reſult of their meeting at the Commencement at Cambridge, this being all we finde thereof in a [b] letter of one to his private friend, concerning the Commencement I like well the motion, deſiring it might ſo come to paſs, and that it be procured to be as generall as might be, which may eaſily be brought to paſs, if you at London ſhall ſo think well of it, and we here may underſtand your minde, we will, we truſt, as we can further it. M^r. Allen liketh well of the matter.

Another at Cambridge.

b Idem Ibidem

18. The year proved very active, eſpecially in the practices of Preſbyterians, who now found ſo much favour, as almoſt amounted to a connivence at their diſcipline. For, whileſt the ſeverity of the State was at this time intended to the height againſt Jeſuites, ſome lenity of courſe (by the very rules of oppoſition) fell to the ſhare of the Non-conformiſts, even on the ſcore of their notorious enmity to the Jeſuitical party.

The activity of the Preſbyterian.

19. The City of Geneva was at this time reduced to great difficulties by the Savoyard her potent adverſary, and forced to purchaſe peace on dear and bitter termes, ſaving that extremity ſweetens all things, and her preſent condition condition was incapable of better conditions. Hereupon, Mr. Beza, the tongue and pen of that State to forrain parts, addreſſed himſelf by letter to Mr. Walter Travers, whom I may terme the neck (allowing Mr. Cartwright for the head) of the Preſbyterian party, the ſecond in honour and eſteem, then Chaplain to the Lord Treaſurer, and of whom more hereafter. The tenour of the letter is here inſerted, ſubſcribed by Beza's own hand (and in my poſſeſſion) which though it be of forain extraction, carries much in it of Engliſh concernment.

Beza's letter to Travers in the behalf of Geneva.

Anno Dom. 1581. Anno Regin. Eliz. 24

Gratiam & pacem à Domino.

Si quoties tui et C. noſtri ſum recordatus, Mi Frater, toties ad te ſcripſiſſem, jam pridem eſſes literis meis obrutus. Nullus enim dies abit quin de vobis veſtriſque rebus ſolicitè cogitem, quod ita poſtulare non amicitia modo vetus noſtra, ſed etiam rerum ipſarum de quibus laboratis magnitudo videatur.

Sed cùm in ea tempora nos incidiſſe viderem, quibus ſilere me quam vobis ſcribere præſtaret ſilentium adhuc mihi invitiſſimo indixi. Nunc verò quum illum quorundam ardorem eundiam per Dei gratiam deſeruiſſe nolui hunc noſtrum abſque meis ad te literis pervenire, quibus eundem eſſe me qui fui, teſtiner, & abs te peterem, ut me viciſſim de rebus veſtris certiorem facere ne graveris. Sed & alia ſeſe præbuit ſcribendi occaſio, hujus videlicet Reip. maximæ, imo tantæ difficultates, ut, niſi aliunde ſublevetur, parva nobis admodum tuendæ inconſueto ſtatu Eccleſiæ ac ſchoolæ ſpes ſuperſit quod ita eſſe vel ex eo cognoſces quòd hæc planè in verecunda conſilia capere cogamur. Nam conceſſæ quidem nobis ſunt per Dei gratiam aliquæ induciæ, ſed parum, ut apparet, firmæ futuræ, & tantis veluti redemptæ ſumptibus ut in eris etiam alieni veluti freto jactati non temerè naufragium metuamus.

Amabo te igitur, mi frater, & precibus aſſiduis nos juvare perge, & ſiquid præterea apud nonnullos authoritate valet, quantùm non antes in Domino, quacunque honeſta ratione poteris oſtende. Scripſi verò etiam ego veſtris pluriſque præſulibus, & epiſcoporum quoque collegium ut ſi ſumus

Grace and peace from the Lord.

If as often dear brother as I have remembred thee and our Cartwright, ſo often I ſhould have written unto thee, long ſince you had been overwhelm'd with my letters. For there not paſſes a day wherein I do not carefully think both of you, and your matters; which not only our ancient friendſhip, but alſo the greatneſs of thoſe affairs, wherein you take paine ſeemeth ſo to require. But ſeeing I perceive, we are fallen into thoſe times wherein my ſilence may be ſafer for you then my writing, I have (though moſt unwillingly) commanded my ſelf ſilence hitherto. But now ſeeing that I hear that the heat of ſome men by Gods grace is abated, I would not have this my friend come to you without my letters, that I may teſtifie my ſelf ſtill the ſame unto you, what formerly I was, and that I may requeſt of you not to think much at his return to certifie me of your affairs. Alſo another occaſion of writing offereth it ſelf, namely the great ſtraits of this common wealth; yea ſo great, that except it be relieved from other parts, very ſmall hope remaineth unto us to maintain the Church and Univerſity in the former ſtate thereof. That theſe things are ſo, you may know from hence, that we are forced to adventure on theſe bold and unmannerly courſes for our ſupport. For by Gods grace a kinde of peace is granted unto us; but as it ſeems, not likely to laſt long, and that alſo purchaſed at ſo great a price, that toſſed as it were in the Sea of a great debt, we have great cauſe to fear ſhiprack thereby. I beſeech thee therefore my brother, both proceed to help us with thy daily prayers; and beſides, sumus communibus literis hac de re compellare: verùm quod sit mearum literarum pondus futurum vel ex eo conjicio, quod cùm Oxonienſi Scho-le ſuperiore vere meam ſim obſervantiam, miſſo venerandæ planè vetuſtatis novi teſtamenti græco-latini codice, teſtatus, qui publicæ bibliothecæ conſecraretur, ne literulam quidem inde accepi, ex qua meam hanc voluntatem ipſis non ingratam fuiſſe cognoſcerem. Cujuſmodi etiam quiddam apud unum & alterum ex prioribus veſtris ſum expertus, Sed hoc, quæſo, inter nos diſtum eſto. Ego verò fruſtra etiam quidvis tentare, quàm officio in hanc Rempub. Eccleſiam ac ſcholam deeſſe tam neceſſario tempore malui. Bene vale, mi cariſſime frater. D. Ieſus tibi magis ac magis, & omnibus ipſius gloriam ſerio cupientibus benedicat.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 25. Anno Dom. 1582.

beſides, if you have any power to prevail with ſome perſons, ſhew us by what honeſt means you may, how much you love us in the Lord. I alſo have written to moſt of your noble men, and we have been bold with our publick letters to accquaint your Colledge of Biſhops of this matter: but what weight my letters are likely to bear, I can gueſs by this, that when laſt ſpring I teſtified my reſpects to the Univerſity of Oxford, by ſending them a new teſtament greek and latine, truly of venerable antiquity, which ſhould be kept in their publick library, I did not ſo much as receive the leaſt letter from them, whereby I might know that this my good will was acceptable to them. And ſome ſuch requital alſo I have found from one or two of your noble men; but this I pray let it be ſpoken between us alone. For my part I had rather try any thing though in vain, then to be wanting in my duty to this State, Church, and Univerſity, eſpeciall in ſo neceſſary a juncture of time. Farewell my dear brother, the Lord Jeſus every day more and more bleſs thee, and all that earneſtly deſire his glory.

Genevæ Octobris.

Geneva, October

1582. *

* The figure of the day not legible.

Tuus Beza aliena jam manu ſæpe uti coactus, ſua ipſius vacillante.

Thine Beza, often uſing another mans hand, becauſe of the ſhaking of my own.

We muſt not let ſo eminent a letter paſs without ſome obſervations upon it. See we here the ſecret ſympathy betwixt England, and Geneva, about diſcipline: Geneva helping England with her prayers, England aiding Geneva with her purſe.

20. By the Colledge of Biſhops here mentioned by Beza, we underſtand them aſſembled in the laſt Convocation. Wonder not that Geneva's wants, found no more pitty from the Epiſcopal party, ſeeing all thoſe Biſhops were dead, who (formerly exiles in the Marian dayes) had found favour favour and relief in Geneva; and now a new generation arose, having as little affection, as obligation to that government. But, however it fared with Geneva at this time, sure I am, that some years [a] after, preferring her petition to the Prelacie (though frequent begging makes slender alms) that Common-wealth tasted largely of their liberality.

Geneva's ſuit was coldly reſented.

Anno Dom. 1582. Anno Regin. Eliz. 25.

[a] Vide pag. 1602. parag.

21. Whereas mention is made, of the heat of some abated, this relateth to the matter of subscription, now not pressed so earnestly, as at the first institution thereof. This remissnesse may be imputed, partly to the nature of all laws: for, though knives (if of good metall) grow sharper (because their edge thinner) by using; yet laws commonly are keenest at the first; and are blunted in process of time, in their execution: partly it is to be ascribed to Arch-Bishop Grindals age, and impotency, (who in his greatest strength did but weakly urge conformity;) partly to the Earle of Leicester his interposing himself Patron General to non-subscribers, being perswaded (as they say) by Roger Lord North, to undertake their protection.

Why the rigorous pressing of subscription was now remitted

SECT.

Anno Regni Eliz. 25. Anno Dom. 1582.

Section V.

To

DANIEL HARVEY Esq; High Sheriff of Surrey.

I am sufficiently sensible of the great distance and disproportion betwixt my meanesse and your worth, (as at all other times, so) now especially, whilst you are a prime Officer in publick employment. Despairing therefore that my pen can produce any thing meet for your entertainment, I have endeavoured in this Section, to accommodate you with Company fittest for your Converse, being all no meaner then Statesmen, and most of them Privie Councellours, in their severall Letters about the grand businesse of Conformity.

God in due time bless you, and your Honorable Consort with such issue as may be a Comfort to you, and a Credit to all your relations.

1. VEry strongly Leicester (though at the Councel table Politickly complying with the rest of the Lords, and concurring alwayes with their results, when sitting in Conjunction with them) when alone, engaged his Affections in favour of the Non-conformists, and improved his power at this time very great with the Queen to obtain great liberty for them. Hence it was, that many Bishops Active in pressing subscription in their Dioceses, when repairing to Court, were checkt and snibt by this great favourite to their no small grief and discouragement. Heartned hereat the Brethren, who hitherto had no particular platforme of discipline amongst themselves (as universally owned and practised by their party) began in a solemne Councell held by them (but whether at Cambridge or London uncertain) To conclude, on a certain forme, as followeth in these their decrees faithfully translated out of their own latine Copie.

A forme of Discipline considered of by the Brethren in a solemn Synod with the severall Decrees thereof.

The

Anno Dom. 1582. Anno Regni Eliz. 25.

The Title thereof, videlicet,

These be the things that (do seem) may well stand with the peace of the Church; The Decrees.

LEt no man (though he be an University man) offer himself to the Ministery, nor let any man take upon him an uncertain and vague Ministery, [a] though it be offered unto him. But such as be called to the Ministery by some certain Church, let them impart it unto that Classis or conference (whereof themselves are) or else to some greater Church-assembly: and if such shall be found fit by them, then let them be commended, by their letters unto the Bishop, that they may be ordained Ministers by him. Those ceremonies in the Book of Common-Prayer, which being taken from Popery are in controversie, do seem, that they ought to be omitted and given over, if it may be done without danger, of being put from the Ministery; But if there be any imminent danger to be deprived, then this matter must be communicated with the Classis in which that Church is; that by the judgement thereof, it may be determined what ought to be done. If subscription to the Articles of Religion, and to the Book of Common-Prayer, shall be again urged, it is thought, that the Book of Articles may be subscribed unto, according to the statute thirteenth Elizabeth, *that is, unto such of them only as contain the sum of Christian faith, and doctrine of the Sacraments. But for many weighty causes, neither the rest of the Articles in that Book, nor the Book of Common-Prayer may be allowed, no, though a man should be deprived of his Ministery for it. It seemeth that Church-wardens, and Collectors for the poor, might thus be turned into Elders, and into Deacons, when they are to be chosen; Let the Church have warning fifteen dayes before of the time of Election, and of the Ordinance of the Realm: but especially of Christs Ordinance; touching appointing of Watchmen and Overseers in his Church, who are to fore-see that none offence or scandall do arise in the Church: and if any shall happen, that by them it may be duly abolished. And touching Deacons of both sorts (*videlicet men and women) the Church shall be monished, what is required by the Apostle, and that they are not to chuse men, of Custome and of Course; or for their riches, but for their faith, zeal, and integrity, and that the Church is to pray (in the mean time) to be so directed, that they make choice of them that be meet. Let the names of such as are so chosen, be published the next Lords day: and after that, their duties to the Church, and the Churches towards them, shall be declared: then let them be received into the Ministery to which they are chosen, with the generall prayers of the whole Church. The Brethren are to be requested, to ordain a distribution of all Churches, according to these rules (in that behalf) that are set down in the Synodical Discipline, touching Classicall, Provinciall, Comitiall, or of Commencements, and assemblies for the whole Kingdome.

The Classes are to be required, to keep acts of memorable matters which they shall see delivered to the Comitiall assembly, that from thence, they may be brought by the Provinciall assembly; Also they are to deal earnestly with Patrones, to present fit men, whensoever any Church is fallen void in that that Classis; The Comitial assemblies are to be monished to make Collections for relief of the poor, and of Scholars, but especially for relief of such Ministers here, as are put out for not subscribing to the Articles, tendered by the Bishops, also for relief of Scottish Ministers and others; and for other profitable and necessary uses. All the Provinciall Synods must continually aforehand foresee in due time, to appoint the keeping of their next Provinciall Synods: and for the sending of Chosen Persons, with certain instructions, unto the nationall Synod, to be holden whensoever the Parliament for the Kingdome shall be called at some certain set time every year.

[a] Under Mr. Wights hand (a man of the brotherhood) cited by Bp. Bancroft his dangerous positions. pag. 46.

Anno Regni Eliz. 25. Anno Dom. 1582.

See we here the embryo of the Presbyterian Discipline, lying as yet (as it were) in the wombe of Episcopacy, though soon after it swell'd so great, that the mother must violently be cut, before the child could be delivered into the world, as to the publick practice thereof.

2. Many observables in these Decrees offer themselves to our consideration. First, that they were written in latine (whereof they had two elegant penners, Cartwright, and Travers) shewing themselves no enemies to that tongue, which some ignorant Sectaries afterward condemn'd for superstitious, counting every thing Romish, which was Romane; and very Cordials to be poison, if lapp'd up in latine. Several observations on these Decrees.

2. Probably, as Artists hang a curtain before their works, whilst yet imperfect: so these Synodists thought fit in latine as yet, to vail their Decrees from vulgar eyes, seeing nothing can be projected, and perfected together. Yea, the repetition of those words doth seem, and it seemeth, carrying something of uncertainty in them, sheweth these Decrees as yet admitted but as Probationers, expecting confirmation on their good behaviour.

3. The election of the people is here made the essence of a call to a Pastoral Charge, to which the presentation of the most undoubted Patrone, is call'd in but ad corroborandum. As for Institution from the Bishop, it was superadded (not to compleat his Ministeriall function in point of conscience, but) legally to enable the Minister to recover his maintenance from the detainers thereof.

4. Partiall subscription is permitted to the Articles of Religion, viz. only to the Doctrinal part thereof, but none to those wherein Discipline is mentioned, especially to the clause at the end of the twentieth Article, The Church hath power to decree Rites, and Ceremonies &c. accounted by the Brethren the very sting in the tail of the locusts.

5. Those words, If subscription shall be urged again, plainly intimate, that the reins of Episcopal government were but loosly held, and the rigour thereof remitted, for the reasons by us fore-alledged.

6. That Church-wardens, and Collectors for the poor, are so quickly convertible, even in their opinion, into Elders and Deacons only with a more solemn, and publick election, shows, the difference betwixt those officers, to be rather nominal, then real.

7. By Women-Deacons here mentioned, we understand such widows which the Apostle appointeth in the primitive Church, to attend strangers, and sick people; and which Mr. [a] Cartwright affirmeth ought still to be continued, although he confesseth, there be learned men think otherwise.

[a] In his Admonitions pag. 163. Section 2.

Anno Dom. 1582. Anno Regin. Eliz. 15.

8. Their Comitial Assemblies, kept in the Universities at the commencements, (wisely they had an eye on the two eyes of the land) were conveniently chosen, as safely shadowed under a confluence of people. See we here, though the matter of their Discipline might be Jure Divino, humane prudence concurred much in the making thereof, as in ordering a National Synod alwayes to run paralell with the Parliament.

9. Mention being made of relieving Scottish Ministers, if any ask what northern tempest blew them hither? know, they quitted their own country about this time, upon refusal of conformity, and found benevolence in England a better livelihood, than a Benefice in Scotland.

10. The grand designe driven on in these Decrees was, to set up a Discipline in a Discipline, Presbytery in Episcopacy; which (as appears in the Preface) they thought might well stand with the peace of the Church: but this peace prov'd but a truce, this truce but a short one, before both parties brake into irreconcileable hostility.

Thus it is impossible to make a subordination in their practises, who have an opposition in their Principles. For, though such spheres, and orbs, which agree in one center, may proportionably move one within another; yet such as are excentricall can never observe equall distance in their motion, but will sagg aside to grind, and grate one the other. But enough hereof at this time, having jetted out a little already into the next year: no offence (we hope) seeing it makes our History more entire in this subject.

A blasphemous Heretick reclaimed.

3. This year, Robert Dickons a Leicester-shire youth, but it seems, Apprentice at Mansell in Nottingham-shire having parts, and pregnancy above his Age and profession, arrived at such a height of Prophanenesse, as not only to pretend to visions, but account himself Eliah, sent from God to perfect some defects in the Propheſie of Malachy. But by Gods blessing on the endeavours of Mr. Henry Smith, (whom his Unkle Mr. Briant Cave, this year Sheriff of Leicester-shire employed therein) this Heretick was [a] reclaimed, renouncing his Blasphemies, by Subscription under his own hand and for ought I finde to the contrary, lived peacably, and painfully, the remainder of his life.

[a] See Mr. Smiths Sermon of the lost sheep found.

The Character of Mr. Henry Smith.

4. This is that Henry Smith, born at Withcock in Leicester-shire, of a worshipfull family, (and elder Brother to S[t]. Roger Smith still surviving) bred in Oxford, and afterwards became that famous Preacher at S[t]. Clements Danes in London, commonly called the silver-tongu'd-smith, being but one mettall, in Price and Purity, beneath S[t]. Chrysostome himself. Yea, whereas generally the sermons of those dayes are now grown out of fashion, (such is our Ages Curiosity, and Affectation of Noveltie) Smiths Sermons keep up their constant Credit, as appears, by their daily Impressions, calculated for all times, places, and persons; so solid, the learned may partly admire; so plain the unlearned may perfectly understand them. The wonder of his worth is increased by the consideration of his tender Age, dying very young [b] about 50. years agoe.

[b] About the year 1600, as I am inform'd by his brother.

The death of Rich. Briston.

5. I finde three of such, who seemed Pillars in the Romish Church, deceased this year. First, Richard Briston, born in Worcester-shire, bred in Oxford in Exeter Colledge, whence he fled beyond the Seas, and by Cardinall Allen was made overseer of the English Colledge, first at Doway, then at Rhemes. He wrote most in English, humili quidem stilo (such one of his own * Opinion) but very solidly; for proof whereof, let his Books against Dr. Fulke be perused. For the recovery of his health, he was advised to return into his native Land, and died quietly neere the City of London.

* Pitzeus de illustribus Angl. scriptor.

6. The

Anno Regni Eliz. 25. Anno Dom. 1582.

6. The second, Nicholas Harpsfield, bred first in Winchester School, then New Colledge in Oxford, where he proceeded Doctor of Law, and afterward, became Arch-Deacon of Canterbury. Under King Edward the 6th, he banished himself: under Queen Mary he returned, and was advanced: And, under Queen Elizabeth imprisoned for denying Her Supremacy. Yet such was his milde usage in restraint, that he had the opportunity to write much therein; and amongst the rest his Ecclesiastical History, no less learnedly, then painfully performed; and abating his Partiality to his own Interest, well deserving of all posterity. He wrote also six dialogues, in favour of his Religion; but, (because in durance) he durst not set it forth in his own, but under the Name of Alan Cope. Yet lest truth should be conceal'd, and friend defraud friend of his due praise, he caused these Capitall Letters to be ingraved at the end of his Book.

The death of Nicholas Harpsfield.

A. H. L. N. H. E. V. E. A. C.

Hereby mystically meaning.

Auctor Hujus Libri Nicholaus Harpesfeldus. Edidit Verò Eum Aalnus Copus.

He died this year at London in prison, after 20. years restraint, leaving behind him the general reputation of a Religious man.

7. The third, Gregory Martin, born at Maxfield in Sussex, bred with Campian in St. Iohns Colledge in Oxford; Tutor to Philip Earl of Arundel, eldest son to Thomas Duke of Norfolke. Afterwards he went over beyond Sea, and became Divinity Professor in the Colledge of Rhemes, died there October 28. and is buried with a large Epitaph, under a plain monument.

The death of Gregory Martin.

8. I shall now withdraw my self, or at leastwise stand by a silent spectator, whilst I make room for far my betters to come forth and speak in the present controversie of Church Government. Call it not Cowardize, but count it Caution in me, if desirous in this difference to lie at a close-guard, and offer as little play as may be on either side. Whilst the Reader shall behold the Masters of Defence on both sides engaged therein in these following letters of State. Baronius the great Roman Annalist was wont to say, Epistolaris Historia est optima Historia, that is the best History which is collected out of Letters, How much of the Acts of the Apostles (especially for the regulation of time) is contained in the Epistles of St. Paul? Of the Primitive History, the most Authenticall part is what is gathered out of the letters of the Fathers, and in like manner the true estate of Ecclesiasticall affairs in the dayes of Queen Elizabeth, may be extracted out of the following dispatches, and their returns, exhibiting the inclinations of their Authors in pure Naturalls without any adulterated addition, and therefore the surest for others instruction, and safest for my own protection.

Letter History best History.

9. But one thing I must clear in our entrance thereon, in excuse that these Letters are Dateless as to the day and moneth, a great omission which I have seen in many Originalls, whose Authors so minded the matter, that they neglected the time, the present dispatching of them being date enough to their purpose, though now the want thereof leaves Posterity at a loss. A Blew Coat without a Badge, is but a white Coat in effect; as nothing informing the Beholder to what Lord the Bearer thereof doth relate: And as little instructive (will some say) are these Letters as to the point of Chronologie. But be it known that no Readers stomack can be so sharp set on the Criticalness Objection against Letters want of Date answered.

ticalneſs of Chronologie, but that being fed with the certainty of the year, He will not be famiſht with the uncertainty of the moneth or day. Indeed as ſuch whoſe names are caſually omitted in the Regiſter, may recover the truth of their age by a Comparative Computation of their years, who were born about the ſame time; ſo by the mixture and comparing of theſe dateleſs Letters, with thoſe having date, of ſecular affairs I could Competently have collected, and inſerted the time, ſave that I loath to obtrude any thing conjecturall on the readers belief. But we muſt begin with the enſuing Petition as the ground-work of all the reſt.

Anno Dom. 1583. Anno Regin. Eliz. 14.

The Miniſters of Kent to the Privie Councel.

The petition of the Kentiſh Miniſters.

MAy it pleaſe your Honours, of your great and wonted favour towards the diſtreſſed, to conſider theſe following. Whereas we have been called to ſubſcribe in the County of Kent, to certain Articles propounded by my Lords Grace of Canterbury, unto the Miniſters and Preachers. The firſt concerning Her Majeſties authority. The ſecond, concerning no contrariety to the word of God, in the Book of Common-Prayer, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, the book of ordering Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons. And the third, that we beleeve all things in the book of the Articles of Religion, to be agreeable to the word of God: Whereupon, all have moſt willingly offered to ſubſcribe unto the other two. And being pronounced in the open Court, Contumaces reſervata pœni, and ſo referd to anſwer at Law the 11, and 13, of February. Which we feared would be proſecuted with much trouble, and no reſolution to our conſciences, we amongſt the reſt repaired with that carefull avoiding, that we could, of offence to his Lordſhips Grace, to whom when we had the firſt day made known ſome of our doubts concerning the firſt book only, (many moe in number, and as great in weight, concerning the firſt and ſecond, and ſome concerning the third, remaining beſide) we have upon our refuſall, and record taken by publick notary of one point only, from every particular refuſer, which moved him thereunto, and one place of Scripture adjoyned without collection, or the reaſon of the ſame, been ſuſpended from our Miniſtery, by which occaſion as we fear, that that account which hath been made of the conſequence of our cauſe, both in publick ſermons and pronouncing of ſentence againſt us, namely, that in denying to ſubſcribe to the two aforeſaid Articles, we ſeparated our ſelves from the Church, and condemned the right ſervice of God in prayer, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments in the Church of England, and the Miniſtry of the ſame, and diſobeyed Her Majeſties Authority, hath been intimated to your Honours. So we think it our bound duties, moſt humbly on our knees to beſeech your Honours, to know and make manifeſt in our behalf to Her Majeſty: that which we before the Lord in ſimplicity proteſt, we in all reverence judge of the authority which is eſtabliſhed, and the perſons which were Authors of thoſe books, that they did not only ſpeak, but alſo did highly to the glory of God promote the true Religion of God, and the Glorious Goſpell of Jeſus Chriſt, and that we ſo eſteem of thoſe books, and there is nothing in them to cauſe us to ſeparate our ſelves from from the unity of the Church, which in the execution of our miniſtry, in participation of the publick prayers, and Sacraments, we have in our own example teſtified, and by publick doctrine maintained; And that the miniſtery of the word preached, and publick adminiſtration of the Sacraments exerciſed in this land according to Authority, is as touching the ſubſtance of it, Lawfull and greatly bleſſed of God. And laſtly, that we have and alwayes will ſhew our ſelves obedient to Her Majeſties authority in all cauſes Eccleſiaſticall and civil to whomſoever it be committed, and therefore, that as poor, but moſt faithfull ſubjects to Her Majeſty, and Miniſters of Jeſus Chriſt the great cauſe we have in hand, and which conſequently (as we under your Honours correction judge) the neceſſary reformation of many things in the Church according unto Gods word, may have that ſufficient hearing, as all cauſes of our refuſall to ſubſcribe may be known, and equally out of Gods word judged of, and the lamentable eſtate of the Churches to which we appertain, with the hard condition of us, may in that manner, that your Honours moſt excellent wiſdom ſhall finde expedient in the pitty of Jeſus Chriſt, for the mean time be relieved. the Lord Almighty vouchſafe for Jeſus Chriſt his ſake long to continue, and bleſs your Honours wiſdom, and Councell to the great glory of God, and the happy government of Her Majeſtie, and flouriſhing eſtate of this Church of England.

Ann. Regni Eliz. 26. Anno Dom. 1583.

Your Honours daily and faithfull Orators, the Miniſters of Kent, which are ſuſpended from the execution of their Miniſtery.

The Lords of the Councell, ſent this Petition with another Bill of complaint exhibited unto them againſt Edmond Freak Biſhop of Norwich, unto the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury. What his anſwer was thereunto, the reader may informe himſelf out of the following letter.

To the Lords of the Councell.

Moſt Honorable,

The Arch-Biſhops letter in anſwer thereof.

UPon Sunday laſt in the afternoon, Mr. Teal brought unto me in your Lordſhips names two ſupplications, or Bills of complaint exhibited unto your Lordſhips: The one by certain Miniſters of Suff. againſt their Dioceſan there: The other by ſome of Kent againſt my ſelf, with this further meſſage, that it was your deſires I ſhould come to the Court on Sunday next; It may pleaſe your good Lordſhips to be advertiſed, that it ſeemeth ſomething ſtrange to me, that the Miniſters of Suffolk finding themſelves agrieved with the doings of their Dioceſan, ſhould leave the ordinary courſe of proceeding by Law (which is to appeal unto me) and extraordinarily trouble your Lordſhips in a matter not ſo incident (as I think to that moſt honourable Board, ſeeing it hath pleaſed Her Majeſty Her own

ſelf

Anno Dom. 1583. Anno Regin. Eliz. 26.

ſelf in expreſs words to commit theſe cauſes Eccleſiaſticall to me, as to one who is to make anſwer to God, to her Majeſty in this behalf, my office alſo and place requiring the ſame.

In anſwer of the complaint of the Suffolk men of their Ordinaries proceeding againſt them, I have herewith ſent to your Lordſhips a Copie of a letter which I lately received from his Lordſhip, wherein I think that part of their Bill to be fully anſwered, and his doings to have been orderly and charitable. Touching the reſt of their Bill, I know not what to judge of it, neither yet of what ſpirit it cometh: but in ſome points it talketh (as I think) modeſtly and charitably. They ſay they are no Jeſuits ſent from Rome to reconcile &c. True it is, neither are they charged to be ſo, but notwithſtanding they are contentious in the Church of England, and by their contentions miniſter occaſion of offence to thoſe which are ſeduced by Jeſuits, and give the arguments againſt the forme of publick prayer, uſed in this Church, and by law eſtabliſhed, and thereby encreaſe the number of them, and confirm them in their wilfullneſſe. They alſo make a Schiſm in the Church, and draw many other of her Majeſties ſubjects to a miſliking of her Laws and Government in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall, ſo far are they from perſwading them to obedience, or at leaſt, if they perſwade them to it in the one part of her authority, it is in cauſes civill, they diſſwade them from it as much in the other, that is in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall, ſo that indeed they pluck down with the one hand, that which they ſeem to build with the other: they ſay that they have faithfully travelled in perſwading to obedience &c. and have therein prevailed &c. It is but their own teſtimony, I think it were hard for them to ſhew whom they converted from Papiſtry to the Goſpell. But what ſtirrs, and diſcentions they have made amongſt thoſe which profeſſed the Goſpel before they were taught by them, I think it to be apparent. It is notorious that in King Edwards time, and in the beginning of her Majeſties Reign, for the ſpace of divers years, When this ſelf ſame book of publick prayers was uniformally uſed &c. by all learned Preachers maintained, and impugned by none, the Goſpell mightily prevailed, took great increaſe, and very few were known to refuſe to communicate with us in prayer, and participation of the Sacraments. But ſince this Schiſm and diviſion, the contrary effect hath fallen out, and how can it otherwiſe be, ſeeing we our ſelves condemn that publick form and order of prayer and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, as in divers points contrary to the word of God, from which (as in like manner condemning the ſame) the Papiſts do abſent themſelves. In the later part of their Bill conteining the reaſons why they cannot ſubmit themſelves, to obſerve the form preſcribed by the book in all points, I wonder either at their ignorance or audacity. They ſay that the Learned writers of our time have ſhewed their miſlikings of ſome of our Ceremonies. The moſt learned writers in our times have not ſo done, but rather reproved the miſlikers, thoſe few that have given contrary judgement therein, have done more raſhly then learnedly, preſuming to give their Cenſures of ſuch a Church as this is, not underſtanding the fruits of the cauſe. Nor alledging any reaſon worth the hearing, eſpecially one little Colledge in either of our Univerſities, containing in it more learned men then in their Cities. But if the authority of men ſo greatly move them, why make they ſo ſmall account of thoſe moſt excellent and learned Fathers, who were the penners of the Book? whereof divers have ſealed their Religion with their Blood, which none yet have done of the impugners of the Book. The Pope (ſay they they) hath changed his Officium B. Mariæ &c. And ſo it is, neither is there any man that doubteth, but the Book of Common-Prayer may alſo be altered, if there appear good cauſe why to thoſe in Authority. But the Pope will not ſuffer that Officium B. Mariæ &c. to be preached againſt, or any part thereof, till it was by publick order reformed, neither will he confeſs that he hath reformed it in reſpect of any errours, but ſuch only as did creep in to the ſaid Book through private mens affections, without authority. Therefore that argument is againſt them, and only uſed by them (as it ſeemeth) in contempt the reſt is frivolous, and argueth their preſumption in writing, this to ſo honourable a Board of ſo worthy and godly a Book, which hath an hundred learned men to juſtifie it, for one that will impugne it. And thus much concerning them which I have written rather to ſatisfie your Lordſhips, then that I thought the matter worthy my labour. The complaint which thoſe of Kent, being of my own Dioceſs, and by oath bound to me in Canonicall obedience, have exhibited unto your Lordſhips, doth make me more to wonder, that they moſt of them being unlearned, and young (ſuch as I would be loath to admit into the Miniſtry, if they were not already admitted thereunto, much leſs to allow as Preachers) dare preſume to bring my doings againſt them into queſtion before your Lordſhips, ſeeing I have done nothing but that which God, the Law, her Majeſty, and my duty forceth me unto, dealing with them not as an Arch-Biſhop with the Inferiour ſort of the Clergy, nor as a maſter of a Colledge with his fellows, nor as a Magiſtrate with his inferiours, but as a Friend, and a Brother, (which as I think) hath ſo puffed them up, and cauſed them to be ſo preſumptuous. They came to me unſent for, in a multitude, which I reproved, becauſe it imported a conſpiracy, and had the ſhew of a Tumult or unlawfull Aſſembly. Notwithſtanding I was content to hear their complaint, I ſpent with them the whole afternoon, from two of the clock till ſeven, and heard their Reaſons, whereof ſome were frivolous, and childiſh, ſome irreligious, and all of them ſuch as gave me occaſion to think that they rather ſought quarrell againſt the Book, then to be ſatisfied, which indeed is true, as appeareth by ſome of their own confeſſions, which I am able to ſhew, when I ſhall be thereunto urged. The two whole dayes following, I ſpent likewiſe for the moſt part in dealing ſeverally with them, requiring them to give unto me the Chief, and principal of their Reaſons which moved them not to ſubſcribe, meaning to hear them in the reſt, if I could have ſatisfied them in it, or elſe not to ſpend any further time; which reaſons (if I may ſo term them) they gave unto me, and I have, and mean to make known when occaſion ſhall ſerve; Whereas they ſay in their bill, that the publick adminiſtration of the Sacraments in this Land, is as touching the ſubſtance of it lawfull &c. They ſay no more then the Papiſts themſelves do confeſs, and in truth they ſay nothing in effect to that wherewith they are charged. And yet therein they are contrary to themſelves, for they have pretended matter of ſubſtance againſt the Book. But of what ſpirit cometh it, that they being no otherwiſe then they are, dare to the greateſt Authority in this land next to her Majeſty ſo boldly offer themſelves, thus to reaſon, and diſpute as in their bill they vaunt againſt the State eſtabliſhed in matters of Religion, and againſt the book ſo learnedly, and painfully penned, and by ſo great Authority from time to time confirmed. It is not for me to ſit in this place, if every Curate within my Dioceſs or Province may be permitted ſo to uſe me; neither is it poſſible for me to per-forme the duty which her Majesty looketh for at my hands, if I may not without interruption proceed in execution of that which her Highness hath especially committed unto me. The Gospell can take no success, neither the number of Papists be diminished, if unity be not procured, which I am not in doubt in short time to bring to pass, without any great adoe or inconvenience at all, if it be not hindred. The number of those which refuse to subscribe is not great, in most parts of my Province not one, in some very few, and in some none, whereof many also and the greater part are unlearned, and unworthy the Ministry; In mine own little Dioceſs in Canterbury threescore Preachers and above have subscribed, whereas there are not ten worthy the name of Preachers which have as yet refused, and most of them also not allowed Preachers by lawfull Authority, and so I know it to be in all other Dioceſses within my Province, the Dioceſs of Norwich only excepted; Wherein nevertheless the number of the disordered is far less, then the number of such as are obedient, and quietly disposed. Now if these few disordered, which the Church may well spare, having meeter men to place in their rooms, shall be countenanced against the best, the wisest in all respects, the worthiest, and in effect the whole state of the Clergy, it will not only discourage the dutifull and obedient persons, but so encrease the schism, that there will never hereafter be hope of appeasing the same. This disordered flocking together of them at this time from divers places, and gadding from one to another argueth a Conspiracy amongst them, and some hope of incouragement, and of prevailing, which I am perswaded is not meant, nor shall ever be by me willingly consented unto. Some of them have already (as I am informed) bruted abroad, that your Lordships have sent for me to answer their complaints, and that they hope to be delivered, wherein I know they report untruly, as the manner is; for I cannot be perswaded that your Lordships have any such intent as to make me a party, or to call my doings into question, which from her Majesty are immediately committed unto me, and wherein, as I suppose, I have no other Judge but her self; And for as much as I am by God and her Majesty lawfully without any ordinary or extraordinary, or unlawfull means, called to this place and function, and appointed to be your Pastor, and to have the greatest charge over you in matters pertaining to the soul; I am the more bold to move, and desire you to aid and assist me in matters belonging to my office, namely, such as appertain to the quietness of the Church, the credit of religion established, and the maintenance of the laws made for the same. And here I do protest and testifie unto your Lordships, that the three Articles, whereunto they are moved to subscribe, are such, as I am ready by learning to defend in manner and form as they are set down, against all mislikers thereof in England or elsewhere. And thus desiring your Lordships to take this my answer in good part, and to forbear my comming thither in respect of this advantage that may be taken thereof by these wayward persons, I beseech Almighty God long to prosper you.

Anno Regni Eliz. 26. Anno Dom. 1583.

forme

Your good Lordships in Christ

John Cantuar.

Anno Dom. 1583.

Who this Mr. Beal was, who brought these letters, is worthy our inquiry. I finde his Christian name Robert, his office Clark of the Councell, his abilities very great, as may appear by the publick negotiations wherein he was imployed, for he was joyned with Sr. William Winter Anno 1576, in a Commission to the Zealanders, about their repriſalls: And again Anno 1583. he was ſent to the Queen of Scots; Sharply to expoſtulate with her concerning ſome querulous letters. Well knew Queen Elizabeth what tools to uſe on knotty timber, our [a] Author giving Mr. Beal this Character, that he was Homo vehemens, & auſtera acerbus, a Eager man, and moſt auſterely bitter. His affections were wholy Preſbyterian, and I behold him as one of the beſt friends (of the ſecond Magnitude) that party had. What he wanted in authority, he had in activity on their ſides. And what influence ſometimes the Hands have on the Head (I mean Notaries on the Judges themſelves) at Councell Board, others may conjecture. He either compiled or countenanced a Book made againſt the Biſhops, and the reader may receive a further confirmation of his Character herein from the following Complaint.

The character of Mr. Beal, who brought the Bills.

[a] Camden in his Elizabetha pag. 359.

To the Lord Treaſurer.

My ſingular good Lord,

I have borne much with Mr. Beals intemperate ſpeeches, unſeemly for him to uſe, though not in reſpect of my ſelf, yet in reſpect of her Majeſty whom he ſerveth, and of the laws eſtabliſhed, whereunto he ought to ſhew ſome duty. Yeſterday he came to my houſe, as it ſeemed to demand the book he delivered unto me, I told him that the book was written to me, and therefore no reaſon why he ſhould require it again: eſpecially, ſeeing I was aſſured that he had a Copie thereof, otherwiſe I would cauſe it to be written out for him: whereupon, he fell into very great paſſions with me (which I think was the end of his coming) for proceeding in the execution of his Articles &c. and told me in effect, that I would be the overthrow of this Church, and a cauſe of tumult with many other bitter and hard ſpeeches, which I heard patiently, and wiſhed him to conſider with what ſpirit he was moved ſo to ſay; for I ſaid, it cannot be by the ſpirit of God, becauſe the ſpirit of God worketh in men humility, patience, and love, and your words declare you to be very Arrogant, proud, impatient, and uncharitable. Moreover the ſpirit of God moveth men to hear the word of God with meekneſs &c. And you have almoſt heard with diſdain every ſermon preached before her Majeſty this lent, gibing, and jeſting openly thereat even in the ſermon time, to the offence of many, and eſpecially at ſuch ſermons as did moſt commend her Majeſty and the State, and moved the Auditory to obedience, which he confeſſed and juſtified, accuſing ſome of the Preachers of falſe Doctrine, and wrong allegations of Scripture &c. Then he began to extoll his book, and ſaid we were never able to anſwer it, neither for the matter of Divinity, nor yet of Law; I told him, as the truth is, that there was no great ſubſtance in the book, that it might be very ſoon anſwered, and that it did appear neither his Divinity nor Law to be great. I further wiſhed him to be better adviſed of his doings, and told him indeed, that he was one of the principall cauſes of the waywardneſs of divers, becauſe he giveth incouragement incouragement to divers of them to ſtand in the matter, telling them that the Articles ſhall be ſhortly revoked by the Councell, and that my hands ſhall be ſtopped &c, which ſaying is ſpread abroad already in every place, and is the only cauſe why many forbear to ſubſcribe, which is true, neither could he deny it. All this while I talked with him privately in the upper part of my Gallery, my Lord of Worceſter, and divers ſtrangers being in the other part thereof. But Mr. Beal beginning to extend his voice that all might hear, I began to break off, then he being more, and more kindled, very impatiently uttered very proud and contemptuous ſpeeches, in the juſtifying of his book, and condemning of the orders eſtabliſhed to the offence of all the hearers, whereunto (being very deſirous to be rid of him) I made ſmall anſwer, but told him that his ſpeeches were miſerable, that he forgat himſelf, and that I would complain of him to her Majeſty, whereof he ſeemed to make ſmall account, and ſo he departed in great heat; I am loth to hurt him, or to be an accuſer, neither will I proceed therein further then your Lordſhips ſhall think it convenient; but I never was abuſed more by any man at any time in my life, then I have been by him ſince my coming to this place, in hardneſs of ſpeech for doing my duty, and for all things belonging to my charge. Surely my Lord this talk tendeth only to the increaſing of the contention, and to the animating of the wayward in their waywardneſs, caſting out dangerous ſpeeches, as though there were likelihood of ſome tumult in reſpect thereof; Whereas in truth God be thanked the matter groweth to greater quietneſs then I think he wiſheth, and will be ſoon quieted, if we be let alone, and they not otherwiſe encouraged. It ſeemeth he is ſome way diſcontented, and would work his anger on me. The tongues of theſe men taſt not of the Spirit of God, your Lordſhip ſeeth how bold I am to impart unto you my private cauſes. Truly if it were not that my conſcience is ſetled in theſe matters, and that I am fully perſwaded of the neceſſity of theſe proceedings in reſpect of the peace of the Church, and due obſervation of Gods laws, and that I received great comfort at her Majeſties hand (as I did moſt effectually at my laſt being at the Court) and that I were aſſured of your Lordſhips conſtancie in the cauſe, and of your unmoveable good will towards me, I ſhould be hardly able to endure ſo great a burden, which now (I thank God) in reſpect of the premiſes ſeemeth eaſie unto me, neither do I doubt but God will therein proſper me. Thus being deſirous to impart this matter to your Lordſhip, to whoſe conſideration I leave it, I commit you to the tuition of Almighty God.

Arch. Biſhop Whitgift his Letter complaining of Beals inſolent carriage towards him.

John Cantuar.

Nor have I ought elſe to ſay of this Mr. Beal, but that afterwards I finde one of his name and quality [a] dying 1601, and buried in London at Allhallows in the wall, who by all probability ſhould be the ſame perſon. Now that the Preſbyterian party was not unfriended at the Councell Board, but had thoſe there, which either out of Dictates of their conſcience, or reaſons of State, or reflections on their private intereſts, endeavoured to mitigate the Arch-Biſhops proceedings againſt them. Let their enſuing letter to him be peruſed.

[a] Robert Beal Eſq; Stow his ſurvey of London pag. 183.

After

Anno Dom. 1583.

The Privie Councellers Letter to the Arch-Bishop in favour of the nonconformists.

After our hearty commendations to both your Lordships, although we have heard of late times sundry complaints out of divers Countries of this Realm, of some proceedings against a great number of Ecclesiasticall persons, some Parsons of Churches, some Vicars, some Curates, but all Preachers; whereby some were deprived of their livings, some suspended from their Ministry, and preaching, yet we have forborn to enter into any particular examination of such complaints, thinking that howsoever inferior officers, as Chancellours, Commissaries, Arch-Deacons and such like, whose offices are of more value, and profit by such like kinde of proceedings, might in such sort proceed against the Ministers of the Church. Yet your Lordship the Arch-Bishop of that province of Canterbury, have besides your generall Authority some particular interest in the present Jurisdiction of sundry Bishopricks vacant. And you also the Bishop of London, both for your own authority in your Dioces, and as head Commissioner Ecclesiastical, would have a pastorall over the particular officers, to stay and temper them in their hasty proceedings against the Ministers, and especially against such as doe earnestly profess, and instruct the people against the dangerous sects of Papistry. But yet of late, hearing of the lamentable estate of the Church in the County of Essex, that is, of a great number of zealous and learned Preachers there suspended from their Cures, the Vacancy of the place for the most part, without any Ministry of Preaching, Prayers, and Sacraments. And in some places of certain appointed to those void Rooms, being persons neither of learning nor of good name, and in other places of that County, a great number of Parsons occupying the Cures being notoriously unfit, most for lack of learning, many charged or chargable with great, and erroneous faults, and drunkennes, filthines of life, gamsters at Cards, haunting of Ale-houses, and such like, against whom we hear not of any proceedings, but that they are quietly suffered, to the slander of the Church, to the offence of good people, yea to the famishing of them for lack of good teaching; and thereby dangerous to the subverting of many weaklings from their duties to God, and the Queens Majesty by secret Jesuits, and counterfet Papists. And having thus in a generall sort heard out of many parts of the like of this lamentable estate of the Church, yet to the intent we should not be deceived with the Generality of reports, we sought to be informed of some particulars, namely, of some parts of Essex, and having received the same credibly in writing, we have thought it our duties to her Majesty, and the Realm for the Remedy hereof without intermedling our selves with your Jurisdiction Ecclesiasticall, to make report unto your Lordships, as persons that ought most specially to have regard thereto, as we hope you will, and therefore have sent you herewith in writing a Catalogue of the names of persons of sundry natures, and conditions, that is, one sort, being reported to be learned, zealous, and good preachers deprived, and suspended, and so the Cures not served with meet Persons. The other sort a number of Persons, having Cures, being in sundry sorts far unmeet for any offices in the Church for their many defects, and imperfections, and so as it seems by the reports have been, and are suffered to continue without reprehension or any other proceedings against them, and thereby a great number of Christian people untaught, A matter very lamentable in this time. In a third sort a number having double livings with Cure, and so not resident upon their Cures. But yet enjoying the benefit of their Benefices without any personall attendance upon their Cures. Against all these sorts of lewd, and evill, and unprofitable, corrupt members, we hear of no inquisition, nor of any kinde of proceeding to the Reformation of those horrible offences in the Church, but yet of great diligence, yea, and extremity used against those that are known diligent Preachers. Now therefore we for the discharge of our duties, being by our vocation under her Majesty bound to be carefull that the universall Realm may be well governed, to the honour and glory of God, and to the discharge of her Majesty being the principal governor, over all her subjects under Almighty God, do most earnestly desire your Lordships, to take some charitable consideration of these causes, that the people of the Realm may not be deprived of their Pastors being diligent, learned, and zealous, though in some points Ceremoniall, they may seem doubtfull only in Conscience, and not of wilfulness. Nor that their Cures be suffered to be vacant without good Pastors, nor that such as be placed in the Rooms of Cures be insufficient for learning, or unmeet for their conversation. And though the notes which we send you be only of Parsons belonging to Essex, yet we pray you to look into the rest of the Country in many other Dioceses, for we have, and do heare daily of the like in generality in many other places, but we have not sought to have their particulars so manifestly delivered of other places as of Essex, or rather, to say the truth, of one corner of the Country. And we shall be most glad to hear of your cares to be taken for remedy of these Enormities, so as we be not troubled hereafter, or hear of the like complaints to continue; and so we bid your good Lordships right heartily farewell.

Anno Dom. 1583. Anno Regni Reginæ 26.

Your Lordships Loving friends, Will. Burleps,
George Shrewsbury, A. Warwick. R.
Leicester. C. Howard. I. Croft. Chr.
Hatton. Fra. Walsingham.

Amongst these Privy Councellors, I miss one who was mainly materiall, namel, S^r. Francis Knowls, treasurer of the Queens Household, and K^nt. of the Garter: Father in law to the Earl of Leicester, and no less considerable in himself then in his relations, this Knight being bred a banished man in Germany during the Reign of Queen Mary, and conversing with M^r. Calvin at Geneva, was never after fond of Episcopacy, and though now casually absent from the Councell Board, was a great Patron of the Nonconformists. But see the Arch-Bishops answer to their letter.

The Arch-Bishops answer to the Privy Councellours Letter.

IT may please your good Lordships to be advertized, that I have received your letters of the twentieth of this moneth, with a Schedule inclosed therein, concerning certain Ministers in Essex, whereunto as yet I cannot make any full answer, by reason of the absence of my Lord of London, to whom the letter is also directed, and the parties parties therein named beſt known as being in his Dioceſs. Nevertheleſs in the mean time, I thought it my part to ſignifie unto your Lordſhips that I hope the information to be in moſt parts unjuſt. Certain men being in and about Maulden, becauſe they cannot have ſuch among them as by diſorderlineſs do beſt content their humours, did not long ſince in like manner in a generality, make an information to the ſame effect, which coming to mine, and others hands of the Eccleſiaſtical commiſſion, we did direct our letters to ſome of the principal of them by name, requiring them to exhibite unto us at the beginning of this next tearm, now next enſuing the names of ſuch offencive Miniſters, as they thought to be touched with ſuch diſhoneſt converſation, together with their proofs thereof, promiſing on our parts to ſee the ſame redreſſed accordingly: It ſeemeth by this which is exhibited now to your Lordſhips, they have prevented the time, hoping thereby to alter the courſe; whereunto it tendeth, I leave to your Lordſhips conſideration: ſurely if the Miniſters be ſuch as this Schedule reporteth, they are worthy to be grievouſly puniſhed. And for my own part, I will not be ſlack or remiſſe (God willing) therein, But if that fall out otherwiſe upon tryal, and that they, or many of them in reſpect of their obedience to her Majeſties laws, be thus depraved by ſuch as impugne the ſame, then I doubt not but your Lordſhip will judge thoſe amuſers to deſerve juſt puniſhment. This I can aſſure your Lordſhips of, that my Lord of London affirmed in my hearing, that not long ſince upon that occaſion that none or few at his, or his Arch-Deacons viſitations had at any time by the Churchwardens or ſworn men, been detected or preſented for any ſuch miſdemeanours as are now ſuppoſed againſt them. Of the Preachers, which are ſaid to be put there to ſilence, I know but few. Notwithſtanding I know thoſe few to be very factious in the Church, contempners in ſundry points of the Eccleſiaſticall laws, and chief authors of diſquietneſs in that part of the Country; And ſuch as I for my part cannot (doing my duty with a good conſcience) ſuffer without their further conformity to execute their miniſtry. But your Lordſhips God willing ſhall have a more particular anſwer to every point of your letter, when my Lord of London (who is now at his houſe in the Country) and I ſhall meet and have conferred thereupon. In the mean time I truſt, that neither there, nor elſewhere within this province, either by my ſelf or others of my brethren any thing is or ſhall be done, which doth not tend to the peace of the Church, the working of obedience to laws eſtabliſhed, the encouragement of the moſt, the Godlieſt, and moſt learnedſt Miniſters in this Church of England, and to the Glory of God; To whoſe protection I commit your good Lordſhips.

Anno Dom. 1583.

Now although we finde S^r. Chriſtopher Hatton (for companies ſake, as we humbly conceive it) amongſt the Privie Councellors, ſubſcribing for moderation to non-conformiſts, yet we take him to be a zealous Stickler for the preſſing Church Ceremony. And although I look on the words of the Jeſuite as a meer ſcandal, when he ſaith, that this Hatton was Animo Catholicus a Papiſt in his heart, yet I know him to be no favourer of the Preſbyterian party; But a great countenancer of Whitgifts proceedings againſt them, as appears by the following Addreſs of the Arch-Biſhop unto him.

Peter Ribadeneira in his Appendix to Sanders pag. 41.

To

Anno Dom. 1583.

To Sr. Christopher Hatton.

Right Honorable,

The Arch-Bishops gratulatory letter to Sr. Christopher Hatton.

I give you most hearty thanks for that most friendly message which you sent unto me by your man Mr. Kemp, I shall think my self bound unto you therefore as long as I live. It hath not a little comforted me, having received not long since unkinde speeches where I least looked for them, only for doing my duty in the most necessary business which I have in hand: I marvell how it should come to passe, that the selfsame persons will seem to wish peace, and uniformity in the Church, and to mislike of the contentious, and disobedient sort, cannot abide that any thing should be done against them, wishing rather the whole Ministry of the land to be discountenanced and discouraged then a few wayard persons (of no account in comparison) suppressed and punished. Men in executing the laws according to their duties were wont to be encouraged, and backed by such, but now it falleth out clean contrary. Disobedient wilfull persons (I will tearm them no worse) are animated, Laws contemned, her Majesties will and pleasure little regarded, and the executors thereof in word and deed abused, howbeit these overthwarts grieve me, yet I thank God, they cannot withdraw me from doing that duty in this cause, which I am perswaded God himself, her Majesty, the laws, and the State of this Church, and Commonwealth, do require of me. In respect whereof, I am content to sustain all these displeasures, and fully resolved not to depend upon man, but upon God, and her Majesty. And therefore your honour in offering me that great curtesie, offered unto me as great a pleasure as I can desire. Her Majesty must be my refuge, and I beseech you that I may use you as a means when occasion shall serve, whereof I assure my self, and therein rest.

John Cantuar.

As for the Lord Burleigh, such was his moderation, that both parties beheld him as their friend, carrying matters not with Passion, and prejudice, but prudently as became so great a Statesman. He was neither so rigid as to have conformity prest to the Height, nor so remiss as to leave Ministers to their own liberty. He would argue the case both in discourse, and by letters, with the Arch-Bishop. Amongst many of the latter kinde, let not the Reader grudge to peruse this here inserted.

The Treasurers Letter to the Arch Bishop, for some indulgence to the Ministers.

IT may please your Grace, I am sorry to trouble you so often as I doe, but I am more troubled my self, not only with many private petitions of sundry Ministers recommended for persons of credit, and for peaceable persons in their Ministry, and yet by complaints

Anno Dom. 1584.

plaints to your Grace, and other your Colleagues in Commission greatly troubled: But also I am daily now charged by Councellers, and publick persons to neglect my duty, in not staying of those your Graces proceedings, so vehement, and so Generall against Ministers and Preachers, as the Papists are thereby greatly incouraged, and all evill disposed persons amongst the Subjects animated, and thereby the Queens Majesties safety endangered; with these kinde of arguments I am daily assayled: against which I answer, That I think your Grace doth nothing, but being duly examined, tendeth to the maintenance of the Religion established, and to avoid schism in the Church. I also have for example shewed by your papers sent to me, how fully the Church is furnished with Preachers, and how small a number there are that do contend for their singularity. But these reasons do not satisfie all persons, neither do I seek to satisfie all persons, but with reason, and truth. But now my good Lord, by chance I have come to the sight of an instrument of 24 Articles of great length and curiosity, formed in a Romish stile, to examine all manner of Ministers in this time without distinction of Persons, which Articles are intituled apud Lambeth Maij. 1584. to be executed, Ex officio mero &c. and upon this occasion I have seen them. I did recommend unto your Graces favour two Ministers Curates of Cambridge-shire, to be favourably heard, and your Grace wrote to me that they were contentious, Seditious, and persons vagrant maintaining this controversy, wherewith I charged them sharply, and they both denied those charges, and required to be tryed, and so to receive punishment: I answered, that your Grace would so charge them, and then I should see afterwards what they should deserve, and advised them to resort to your Grace, comforting them that they should finde favourable proceedings, and so I hope upon my former commendations the rather. What may be said to them I know not, nor whether they have been so faulty as your Grace hath been informed do I know, Neither do I mean to treat for to favour such men, for pardon I may speak upon their amendment. But now they coming to me, I offer how your Grace proceeded with them. They say, they are commanded to be examined by the Register at London, and I asked them whereof? they said of a great number of Articles; But they could have no Copies of them: I answered that they might answer to the truth; they said that they were so many in number, and so divers, as they were afraid to answer them, for fear of captious interpretation. Upon this I sent for the Register, who brought me the Articles, which I have read, and finde so curiously penned, so full of Branches, and Circumstances, that I think the inquisitions of Spain use not so many questions to comprehend, and to intrap their preyes. I know your Canonists can defend these with all their particles: But surely under your Graces correction, this Juridicall and Canonicall subtilnet of poor Ministers, is not to edifie and reform. And in Charity I think they ought not to answer to all these nice points, except they were very notorious offenders in Papistry or heresy. Now good my Lord, bear with my scribling: I write with testimony of a good conscience, I desire the peace of the Church, I desire concord, and unity in the exercise of our Religion. I fear no sensuall and wilfull recusant: But I conclude, that according to my simple Judgement, this kinde of proceeding is too much favouring the Romish inquisition, and is rather a device to seek for offenders, than to reform any. This was not that charitable instruction that I thought was intended of these poor poor Ministers should in some few points have any scrupulous conceptions to be removed, this is not a charitable way, to send them to answer to your common Register, upon so many Articles at one instant, without commodity of instruction by your Register, whose office is only to receive their answers, by which the parties are first subject to condemnation before they be taught their errors. It may be I say that Canonists may maintain this proceeding by rules of their laws: But though omnia licent, omnia non expediunt. I pray your Grace bear this, (and perchance a fault) that I have willed them not to answer these Articles, except their consciences may suffer them: And yet I have sharply admonished them, that if they be disturbers in their Churches, they must be corrected. And yet upon your Graces answer to me Ne sutor ultra crepidam, neither will I put falcem in alterius messem: my paper teacheth me to make an end, your Grace must pardon my hasty writing, for that I have done this Raptim and without Correction.

Anno Dom. 1583. Anno Regni 26.

Your Graces at command,

William Burghley.

One may say, is not the hand of Mr. Travers in all this? Who being the Lord Burghleys Chaplain, by him much respected, and highly affected to the Geneva Discipline, was made the mouth of the Ministers, to mediate to his Lord in their behalf. But it seems the Arch-Bishop had set up his resolution (called constancy, by some, Cruelty, by others, as they stand affected) whose unmoveableness herein will appear by his following Letter.

To the Lord Treasurer.

The return of the Arch-Bishop of Cant. to the L. Treasurers Letter.

MY singular good Lord, in the very beginning of this action, and so from time to time, I have made your Lordship acquainted with all my doings, and so answered all objections, and reasons to the contrary, as I perswade my self no just reply can be made thereunto. I have likewise by your Lordships advise, chosen this kinde of proceeding with them, because I would not touch any for not subscribing only, but for breach of order in celebrating of Divine service, administring the Sacraments, and executing other Ecclesiasticall functions, according to their fancies, and not according to the form of law prescribed, which neither your Lordship, nor any other seemed to mislike, but to wish and require: And therefore I am much troubled at your last Letters, which seem so to be written, as though your Lordship had not been in these points already answered. The complaints which your Lordship saith are made of me, and other my Colleagues, have hitherto been generall, and therefore cannot otherwise be answered, but by a bare deniall. But if any man shall charge me or them with particularities, I doubt not but we are, and shall be ready to answer them, and to justifie our doings. My proceedings are neither so vehement, nor so generall against Ministers, and Preachers, as some pretend; doing me therein great injury, I have divers times satisfied your Lordship therein therein if any offence be, it is in bearing too much with them, and using of them so friendly, which causeth them thus contrary to their duties to trouble the Church, and to withstand me their Ordinary, and lawfull Judge. The objection of incouraging the Papists &c. hath neither probability nor likelihood. For how can Papists be animated by urging of men to subscribe against the Popes supremacy, and to the justifying of the book of Common-Prayers, and Articles of Religion which they so greatly condemne. But Papists &c. are animated, because they see these kind of persons, which herein after a sort come in with them, so greatly so many borne with, and so animated, and maintained in their disordered doings, against both Gods Laws, and mans; and against their Chief Governours both Civill, and Ecclesiasticall. This I say incourageth the Papists, and maketh much for them; the other is but a fallacy, à non causa ad causam. O my Lord, I would to God some of those who use this argument, had no Papists in their Families, and did not otherwise also countenance them; whereby indeed, they receive incouragement, and do become too malepert. Assure your self the Papists are rather grieved at my proceedings, because they tend to the taking away of their chief Argument; that is, that, we cannot agree among our selves, and that we are not of the Church, because we lack unity: And I am credibly informed, that the Papists give incouragement to these men, and commend them in their doings, hereof I have also some experience. But if these reasons, and sundry others, notwithstanding some will not be satisfied thereby: I am sure your Lordship thinketh it not convenient to yield unto their wills, but unto their reasons. Touching the 24, Articles which your Lordship seemeth so to mislike, as written in a Romish stile, smelling of a Romish inquisition &c. I cannot but greatly marvell at your Lordships vehement speeches against them, I hope without cause. The men are Preachers, peaceable, your Lordship saith, and that they are orderly, and observe the Books, as some of them say of themselves: and you think it not meet that being such persons, they should be deprived for not subscribing only, wherein I have yielded unto you, and therefore have caused these Articles to be drawn according to Law, by the best learned in the Laws: who I dare say hate the Romish doctrine, and the Romish inquisition, to the intent I may truly understand whether they are such manner of men or no, as they pretend to be, which I also take to be the ordinary course in other Courts: as in the Star-Chamber, and other places. Sure I am it is most usuall in the Court of the Marches (Arches rather) whereof I have the best experience. And without offence be it spoken, I think these Articles more tolerable, and better agreeing with the rule of justice, and charity, and less captious then those in other Courts, because there men are often examined at the relation of a private man, concerning private crimes, & de propriâ turpitudinè: whereas here men are only examined of their publick actions in the publick calling, and Ministry, and much more in the cause of Heresie: because the one toucheth life, and the other not. And therefore I see no cause why our Judiciall, and Canonicall proceedings in this point should be misliked. Your Lordship writeth, that the two for whom you write are peaceable persons, that they deny the things wherewith they are charged, and desire to be tried &c. Now they are to be tried, why do they refuse it? Qui malè agit, odit Lucem; Indeed they shew themselves to be such as I have before shewed to your Lordship, the most troublesome persons in all that Countrey: and one of them M^r Brown is preſented for his diſorders by the ſworn men of the pariſh, as I am informed by the Official there. Wherefore I beſeech your Lordſhip not to believe them againſt me, either own words, or teſtimony of any ſuch as animate them in their diſobedience, and count diſorder order, and contention peace, before they be duly and orderly tried according to that Law which is yet in force, and will hardly in my opinion, in theſe Judicial actions be bettered, though ſome abuſe may be in the Execution thereof, as there. I elſewhere alſo; and that peradventure more abundantly. Your Lordſhip ſaith theſe Articles are a devilee rather to ſeek for offenders, then to reform any: The like may be ſaid of the like orders in other Courts alſo; but that were the fault of the Judg, not of the Law. And I truſt your Lordſhip hath no cauſe to think ſo evil of me. I have not dealt with any as yet, but ſuch as have given evident tokens of contempt of Orders and Laws. which my Acts remaining on Record will teſtifie; and though the Regiſter do examin them (as I think other officers do in other Courts likewiſe, and the Law doth allow of it) yet are they repeated before a Judg, where they may reform, add or diminiſh, as they think good; neither hath there been any man thus examined, or otherwiſe dealt with, who hath not been conferred with, or might not have been if he would, theſe two eſpecially; And if they have otherwiſe reported to your Lordſhip, they do but antiquam obtinere, which is to utter untruths; a quality wherewith theſe kinde of men are marvelouſly poſſeſſed, as I on my own knowledg, and experience, can juſtifie againſt divers of them. I know your Lordſhip deſireth the peace of the Church, and unity in Religion, but how is it poſſible to be procured (after ſo long liberty, and lack of diſcipline) if a few perſons ſo meanly qualified, as moſt of them are, ſhall be countenanced againſt the whole eſtate of the Clergie, of greateſt account both for learning, years, ſtayedneſs, wiſdom, Religion, and honeſty? And open breakers, and impugners of the Law, yong in years, proud in conceit, contentious in diſpoſition, maintained againſt their Governours, ſeeking to reduce them to order, and obedience; Hæc ſunt initia hæreticorum, & ortus atque conatus Schiſmaticorum malè cogitantium, ut ſibi placeant, ut præpoſitum ſuperbo tumore contemnant; ſic ab Eccleſia receditur, ſic altare profanum collocatur foris. ſic contra pacem Chriſti & ordinationem atque unitatem Dei rebellatur; for my own part, I neither have done, nor do any thing in this matter, which I do not think in my conſcience, and duty, I am bound to do, which her Majeſtie hath with earneſt charge committed unto me, and which I am not well able to juſtifie to be moſt requiſite for this State and Church, whereof next to her Majeſtie, though moſt unworthy, or at leaſt moſt unhappy, the chief, is committed unto me, which I will not by the grace of God neglect, whatſoever come upon me. Therefore I neither care for the honour of the place (which is onus to me) nor the largeneſs of the Revenues, nor any other worldly thing. I thank God, in reſpect of doing my duty, neither do I fear the diſpleaſure of man, nor the evil tongues of the uncharitable, who call me Tyrant, Pope, Knave, and lay to my charge things which I never thought, Scio hoc enim opus eſſe diaboli, ut ſervos Dei mendacio lacteret, & opinionibus falſis glorioſum nomen infamet, ut qui conſcientiæ ſuæ luce clareſcunt, alienis rumoribus ſordidentur. So was Cyprian himſelf uſed, and other ancient and Godly Biſhops, to whom I am not comparable. The day will come, when all mens hearts ſhall be opened; in the mean time I will depend on him, who never forſakes thoſe that put their truſt in him. If your Lordſhip

Anno Dom. 1583.

Anno Dom. 1583.

Anno Dom. 1583.

Lordſhip ſhall keep thoſe two from anſwering according to the order ſet down, it will be of it ſelf a ſetting at liberty of all the reſt, and of undoing of all that which hitherto hath been done; neither ſhall I be able to do my duty according to her Majeſties expectation; And therefore I beſeech your Lordſhip to leave them unto me; I will not proceed againſt them, till I have made you privy to their anſwers, and further conferred with you about them; becauſe I ſee your Lordſhip ſo earneſt in their behalf; whereof alſo they have made publick boaſts (as I am informed) which argueth what manner of perſons they are: I beſeech your Lordſhip to take not onely the length, but alſo the matter of this Letter in good part, and to continue to me as you have done, whereof I doubt not: for aſſuredly if you forſake me (which I know you will not after ſo long triall and experience, with continuance of ſo great friendſhip) eſpecially in ſo good a cauſe, I ſhall think my coming to this place, to have been for my puniſhment; and my hap very hard, that when I think to deſerve beſt, and in a manner to conſume my ſelf, to ſatisfie that which God, her Majeſtie, the Church, requireth of me, ſhould be ſo evil rewarded, Sed meliora ſpero. And I know your Lordſhip doth all, as you are perſwaded, for the beſt; I beſeech God long to bleſs and preſerve you.

John Cantuar.

It ſeemes the Lord Treaſurer took exceptions at ſome paſſages herein, I dare not ſay with thoſe, That the Letter was brought to him when he was indiſpoſed with the fit of the Gout, which made him ſo offended. But whatſoever was the cauſe of his paſſion, ſee ſome ſigns thereof in what followeth.

The L. Treaſurers ſmart Letter to the Arch-Biſhop.

I Have Received your Graces long Letter, anſwering ſundry ſpeeches, as I think, delivered by your Chaplain, Doctor Cozens, and I perceive you are ſharply moved to blame me, and clear your ſelf: I know I have many faults, but I hope I have not given ſuch cauſe of offence, as your Letter expreſſeth. I deny nothing that your Grace thinketh meet to proceed in, with theſe whom you call factious; and therefore there is no controverſie between you, and me, expreſſed in your Letter: the controverſie is paſſed in your Graces Letter in ſilence; and ſo I do ſatisfie; your Grace promiſed me to deal, I ſay onely with ſuch as violated order, and to charge them therewith, which I allow well of. But your Grace not charging them with ſuch faults, ſeeketh by examination to urge them to accuſe themſelves; and then I think you will puniſh them: I think your Graces proceeding is, I will not ſay rigorous or captious, but I think it is ſcant charitable; I have no leiſure to write more, and therefore I will end, for writing will but increaſe offence, and I mean not to offend your Grace, I am content that your Grace, and my Lord of London, where I hear Brown is, uſe him as your wiſdoms ſhall think meet; If I had known his fault, I might be blamed for writing for him, but when by examination onely it is meant to ſift him with twenty four Articles, I have cauſe to pitty the poor man.

Your Graces as friendly as any,
WILL. BURLEY.

a Eccles. 7. 9. Short but sharp. I see though anger only resteth a in the Bosome of Fools, it may light on the Brest of a wise man. But no fear that these friends will finally fall out, who alternately were passionate, and patient. So that now it came to the turn of Whitgift to be calme, as he expressed himself in the following return. Anno Dom. 1584. Eliz. 26.

To the Lord Treasurer.

My singular good Lord,

The Arch-Bishops calm Letter to the half-angry Treasurer.

GOd knoweth how desirous I have been from time to time to satisfie your Lordship in all things, and to have my doings approved to you. For which cause since my coming to this place, I have done nothing of Importance without your advice, I have risen early, and sat up late, to write unto you such objections, and answers as on either side were used, I have not the like to any man, and shall I now say I have lost my labour, or shall my just dealing with two of the most disordered Ministers in a whole Dioceis (the obstinacy, and contempt of whom, especially of one of them, you your self would not bear in any subjected to your authority) cause you so to think, and speak of my doings: yea, and of my self, no man living should have made me believe it. Solomon saith, an old friend is better then a new, and I trust your Lordship will not so lightly cast off your old friends, for any of these new fangled, and factious sectaries, whose fruits are to make divisions whersoever they come, and to separate old, and assured friends. Your Lordship seemeth to charge me with breach of promise, touching my manner of proceeding, whereof I am no way guilty, but I have altered my first course of depriving them for not subscribing only, justifiable by the Law, and common practice both in the time of King Edward, and from the beginning of her Majesties Reign, and chosen this only to satisfie your Lordship. Your Lordship also objecteth, that it is said, I took this course for the better maintenance of my book, my enemies say so indeed, but I trust my friends have a better opinion of me; what should I seek for any confirmation of my book, after twelve years, or what should I get thereby more then already? And yet if subscription may confirme it, it is confirmed long agoe by the subscription of all the Clergy almost in England before my time, even of Brain also who now seemeth to be so willfull. Mine Enemies and tongues of this slanderous and uncharitable sect report, that I am revolted and become a Papist, and I know not what, but it proceedeth from their lewdnesse, not from any desert of mine; and I disdain to answer to any such notorious untruths, which the best of them dare not avouch to my face. Your Lordship seemeth further to burden me with wilfulnes, I am sure that you are not so perswaded of me, I will appeal to your own conscience. There is difference betwixt wilfullnes, and constancie, I have taken upon me the defence of the Religion, and rights of the Church of England, to appease the sects of schisms therein, and to reduce all the Ministers thereof to uniformity, and due obedience herein, I intend to be constant, and not to waver with every winde; The which also my place, my person, my duty, the laws, her Majesty, and the goodnes of the cause doth require of me, and wherein your Lordship and others others (all things considered) ought in duty to assist, and countenance me. It is strange that a man in my place, dealing by so good warranties as I do, should be so incountred, and for not yielding to be counted wilfull, but I must be contented, Vincit qui patitur, and if my friends forsake me herein, I trust God will not, neither the Law, nor her Majesty who hath laid the charge on me, and are able to protect me. But of all other things it most grieveth me, if your Lordship should say, that two Ministers fare the worse because your Lordship hath sent them. Hath your Lordship ever had any cause so to think of me? It is needless for me to protest my heart, and affection towards you above all other men, the world knoweth it, and I am assured that your Lordship nothing doubteth thereof: I have rather cause to complain to your Lordship of your self, that upon so small an occasion, and in the behalf of two such you will so hardly conceive of me, yea, and as it were countenance persons so meanly qualified in so evill a cause against me, your Lordships so long tried friend, and their Ordinary. That hath not so been in times past, now it should least of all be, I may not suffer the notorious contempt of one of them especially, unless I will become Esops Block, and undoe all that which hitherto have been done. Well, because I would be loath to omit any thing whereby your Lordship might be satisfied, I have sent unto you herein inclosed certain reasons to justifie the manner of my proceedings, which I marvel should be so misliked in this cause, having been so long practised in the same, and never before this time found fault with. Truly my Lord I must proceed this way, or not at all, the reasons I have set down in this paper. And I heartily pray your Lordship, not to be carried away, either from the cause, or from my self upon unjust surmises, and clamours, lest you be the occasion of that confusion which hereafter you would be sorry for. For mine own part I desire no further defence in these occasions: neither of your Lordship, nor any other, then Justice, and Law will yield unto me. In my own private affairs, I know I shall stand in need of friends, especially of your Lordship, of whom I have made alwayes an assured account; but in these publick actions, I see no cause why I should seek for friends, seeing they to whom the care of the Commonwealth is committed, ought of duty therein to joyne with me. To conclude, I am your Lordships assured, neither will I ever be perswaded, but you do all even of hearty good will towards me.

Anno Dom. 1583.

John Cantuar.

Now amongst all the favourers of the Presbyterians, surely honesty, and wisdom, never met more in any then in Sr. Francis Walsingham, of whom it may be said (abate for the disproportion) as of Sr. Paul, though poore yet making many rich. Having but one only Daughter (whose extraordinary handsomnesse, with a moderate portion would considerably prefer her in marriage.) He neglected wealth in himself, though I may say, he enriched many (not only his dependants but,) even the English Nation, by his prudent steering of State affairs. How he interceded to qualifie the Arch-Bishop, for a Semi-nonconformist, we learn from his following Letter.

Sr. Fra. Walsingham a good friend to nonconformists.

It

Ann. Dom. 1583.

Sr. Francis Walsinghams Letter to the Arch-Bishop in favour of non-conformists.

IT may please your Grace to understand, that this bearer M^r. Leverwood, of whom I wrote unto your Grace, hath been here with me, and finding him very conformable, and willing to observe such orders as are appointed to be used in the Church, as your Grace shall partly perceive by certain Articles subscribed with his own hand, and herein inclosed, I willed him to repair unto your Grace; And in case these Articles may be allowed, then I pray your Grace to be his good Lord, and that with your good will and favour he may proceed in his suit; upon knowledge whereof, I do mean to deal further therein with her Majesty thereof for him, as I have already begun to do, upon the good report I heard of the man, before your Graces message sent to M^r. Nicasius for the stay thereof. And so I humbly take my leave.

Your Graces at command
Francis Walsingham.

What this Letter effected, the next will informe us.

The Arch-Bishops answer to secretary Walsingham's Letter.

Right Honourable,

I thank you heartily for your letter, written unto me in the behalf of Leverwood, wherein I perceive the performance of your honorable speeches to my self, in promising to joyne with me, against such as shall be breakers of the orders of the Church established: and movers of contentions therein upon that, and other like speeches of yours with me at your last being at Lambeth, I have forborn to suspend or deprive any man already placed in any cure or charge, for not subscribing only, if hereafter he would promise unto me in writing, the observing of the Book of Common-Prayer, and the orders of the Church by law set down: and I do now require subscription to the said Articles, of such only as are to be admitted to the Ministry, and to Ecclesiasticall livings, wherein I finde my self something eased of my former troubles: and as yet none or very few of the last named persons, to refuse to subscribe to the said Articles, though some of them have been accounted heretofore very precise. I also very well remember that it was her own wish, and desire, that such as hereafter should be admitted to any living, should in like manner be tied to the observing the orders: which as it hath already wrought some quietness in the Church, so I doubt not but that it will in time perfect the same. And I cannot break that order in one, but other will look for the like favour, to the renewing, and increasing of the former Atheisme, not yet already extinguished. Wherefore I heartily pray you to joyn with me herein. Touching the Articles inclosed in your letter, whereunto Leverwood hath subscribed: they are of no moment, but such as may easily be deluded. For whereas he first saith, that he will willingly subscribe as far as the law requireth at his hand, his meaning is, that the law requireth no such subscription, for so I am informed that some Lawyers (therein deceived) have perswaded him and others,

and

Anno Dom. 1583.

and in saying that he will alwayes in the Ministry use the Book of Common-Prayer, and none else, his meaning is, that he will use but so much of the Book as pleaseth him, and not that he will use all things in the Book required of him. I have dealt with him in some particularities, which he denieth to use, and therefore his subscription is to small purpose. I would, as neer as I can, promise, that none should hereafter come into the Church to breed new troubles, I can be better occupied otherwise. And God would bless our labours more amply, and give better success to the word so commonly and diligently preached if we could be at peace, and quietness among our selves, which I most hartily wish, and doubt not to bring to pass by Gods grace, the rather through your good help, and assistance, whereof I assure my self, and so with my hearty prayers &c.

John Cantuar.

A transition to other matter.

Thus have we presented to the Reader some select Letters out of many in my hand, passing betwixt the highest persons in Church matters. I count it a blessing that providence hath preserved such a treasure unplundred, esteem it a favour in such friends as imparted them unto me, and conceive it no ungratefull act in our communicating the same to the Reader. And now we (who hitherto according to good manners have held our peace, while such who were farr our betters, by their pens spake one to another) begin to resume our voice, and express our selves as well as we may in the following History.

Good Grindal his death.

10. By the changing of Edmond into John Cantuar. It plainly appears, that as all these letters were written this year, so they were indited after the sixth of July, (and probably about December) when Bp. Grindal deceased. Our English Eli, for office (highest in spirituall promotion) age (whereby both were blinde) and manner of his death, thus far forth as heart-broken with sorrow. Grindals grief proceeded from the Queens displeasure, undeservedly procured by the practises of his malicious enemies. There want not those who will strain the paralel betwixt Eli and Grindal in a fourth respect, both being guilty of dangerous indulgence, and lenity to offenders. Indeed Grindal, living, and dying sole, and single, could not be cockering to his own children; but as a Father of the Church, he is accused for too much conniving at the factious disturbers thereof. Sure I am, he was an impartial corrector of mens vicious conversations: witness his sharp reproving of Julio the Italian Physician, for marrying another mans wife. Which bitter, but wholsome pill, the Physician himself not being able to disgest, incensed the Earl of Leicester, and he the Queens Majesty against the good Arch-bishop. But all was put on the account of Grindals non-conformity, for favouring the factious meetings, called Propheſyings. Grindal, sensible of the Queens displeasure, desired to resigne his place, and confine himself to a yearly pension: not, as some may pretend, that it was against his conscience to keep it; but because above his impotent age to mannage so great a charge. The place was proffered to Whitgift, but he in the presence of the Queen utterly refused it: yet, what he would not snatch, soon after fell into his hands by Grindals death.

11. Who

A plea for Grindals poverty.

11. Who so beholds the large revenues conferr'd on Grindal, the long time he enjoyed them (Bishop of London, Arch-Bishop of York, and Canterbury, above eighteen years) the little charge incumbring him, dying a single man, will admire at the mean estate he left behind him. Yea, perchance they will erroneously impute this to his prodigality, which more truly is to be ascribed to his contempt of the world, unwilling to die guilty of much wealth; not to speak of fat Servants made under a lean Master. The little he had, as it was well gotten, was well bestowed, in pious uses on Cambridge, and Oxford, with the building, and endowing of a School at St. Bees in Cumberland, where he was born. Yea, he may be beheld as a benefactour to the English nation, for bringing Tamarix first over into England. As the inventers of evill things are justly taxed by the [a] Apostle: so the first importers of good things deserve due commendation; That plant being so soveraign to mollifie the hardnes of the spleen; a malady whereof Students (betrayed thereunto by their sedentarie lives) too generally do complain.

[a] Rom. 1. 13.

SECT.

Anno Dom. 1583.

Section VI.

To the Master, Wardens, and all the Members of the Honorable Company of Mercers of London.

AS it would be a ſin of omiſſion in me (ſo much obliged to your ſociety) ſhould no ſhare in my Hiſtory be allowed unto you, ſo I ſhould commit a great incongruity, if aſſigning it any where elſe, then in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. Whoſe great Grandfather Sr. Godfrey Bollen (1458. Major of London) generally believed one of your Company, ſo that the Crowned Maidenhead in your Arms, may in ſome ſort ſeem Prophetical, Preſaging ſuch a Queen-Virgin ſhould be extracted from one of your Society, as the Chriſtian-World could not paralel in all particulars.

Indeed much of credit is imported in your very Name. For ſeeing all Buyers and Sellers, are Mercers à Mercando, Cuſtom hath confined and fixed the term Eminently on your Corporation, as alwayes the prime Chapmen of our Nation, in which reſpect you have the precedency of all other Companies.

I will detain you no longer from better Cuſtomers, wiſhing you ſound wares, quick vent, good prizes, ſure payment. One Commodity alone excepted, I mean the Truth it ſelf, * this buy and ſell it not, Purchaſe it on any terms, but part with it on no Conditions.

* Pro. 23. 23.

Jan. 13. 1583.

ABout four a clock in the afternoone on the Lords day, a ſad accident happned in Paris-garden, on the ſouth-ſide of Thames, over againſt London. Whileſt multitudes were beholding the baiting of the bear, the old under-propped Scaffolds overladen with people, ſuddenly fell down, killed [a] eight outright, hurt, and bruiſed many moe, to the ſhortning of their lives. The [b] aſſertors of the ſtrict obſervation of the Sabbath, vigorouſly improve this (as well they may) againſt them who prophane the Lords-day, which afterwards (the joyfull effect of a dolefull cauſe) was generally kept with more carefulneſs.

Warning to Sabbath-breakers.

a Holinſhed pag. 1353.
b Dr. Bound.

Robert Brown first appears. a Camden Brit. in Lincoln-shire.

2. Robert Brown began at this time to broach his opinions. he was born in Rutland-shire, of an ancient and worshipfull family (one whereof founded a fair Hospital in Stamford) nearly allied to the Lord Treasurer Cicil. He was bred for a time in Cambridge (I conceive in Corpus Christi Colledge) but question, whether ever a Graduate therein. He used some time to preach at Bennet-Church, where the vehemency of his utterance passed for zeal among the Common people, and made the vulgar to admire, the wise to suspect him. Dr. Still, afterwards Master of Trinity (out of curiosity, or casually present at his preaching) discovered in him something extraordinary, which he presaged would prove the disturbance of the Church, if not seasonaly prevented. Some years after, Brown went over into Zealand, to purchase himself more reputation from forraign parts. For, a smack of travail gives an high taste to strange opinions, making them better relished to the licourish lovers of novelty. Home he returns with a full crie against the Church of England, as having so much of Rome, she had nothing of Christ in her discipline.

Anno Dom. 1581. Anno Regni Eliz. 24.

A

Norfolke was the first place whereon Brown (new flown home out of the Low-Countries) pearched himself, and therein in the City of Norwich. A place which then spake [illegible] more then mediterranem linguæ, having almost as many dutch strangers, as English natives inhabiting therein. Brown beginning with the Dutch, soon proceeded to infect his own Country-men, for which he was confined, as the following letter of the Lord Treasurer Burghly, to Bp. Phreke of Norwich will informe us.

After my very hearty commendations to your Lordship, whereas I understand that one Brown a Preacher is by your Lordship and others of the Ecclesiasticall Commission committed to the custody of the Sheriff of Norfolk, where he remains a prisoner, for some matters of offence uttered by him by way of preaching, wherein I perceive by sight of some letters written by certain godly preachers in your Lordships Diocess he hath been dealt with, and by them dissuaded from that course he hath taken. Forasmuch, as he is my kinsman; if he be son to him whom I take him to be, and that his errour seemeth to proceed of zeal rather then of malice, I do therefore wish he were charitably conferred with and reformed, which course I pray your Lordship may be taken with him, either by your Lordship or such as your Lordship shall assigne for that purpose. And in case there shall not follow thereof such success, as may be to your liking, that then you would be content to permit him to repair hither to London, to be further dealt with as I shall take order for upon his coming, for which purpose I have written a letter to the Sheriff, if your Lordship shall like thereof. And so I bid your Lordship right heartily farewell. From the Court at Westminster this 21. of April. 1581.

A

Your Lordships very loving friend

W. B.

After

Anno Dom. 1583.

Brown being thus brought up to London, by the advice of his friends was wrought to some tolerable compliance, and being discharged by the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, was by the Lord Treasurer sent home to his father Anthony Brown at Tolethorp in Rutland Esquire. One I assure you of ancient, and right worshipfull extraction, having my self seen a charter granted by King Henry the eighth, (the 16th. of July, in the 18th. of his reign) and confirmed by act of Parliament, to Francis Brown father to the aforesaid Anthony, giving him leave to put on his cap, in the presence of the King or his heirs, or any Lord Spirituall or Temporall in the land, and not to put it off but for his own ease, and pleasure. But let us see the Lord Treasurers letter in the behalf of Brown to his father.

After my very hearty commendations, understanding that your son Robert Brown, had been sent for up by my Lord Bishop of Canterbury, to answer to such matters as he was to be charged with-all, contained in a Book made by him, and published in print (as it was thought) by his means: I thought good, considering he was your Son, and of my blood, to send unto my Lord of Canterbury in his behalf, that he might finde what reasonable favour he could shew him; before whom I perceive he hath answered in some good sort; and although I think he will not deny the making of the Book, yet by no means will he confess to be acquainted with the publishing or printing of it. He hath besides yielded unto his Lordship such further contentment, as he is contented (the rather at my motion) to discharge him, and therefore for that he purposeth to repair to you, I have thought good to accompany him with these my letters, and to pray you for this cause, or any his former dealings, not to withdraw from him your fatherly love and affection, not doubting but with time he will be fully recovered, and withdrawn from the Reliques of some fond opinions of his, which will be the better done, if he be dealt withall in some kinde, and temperate manner. And so I bid you very heartily farewell. From my house neer the Savoy this eighth of October 1585.

Your loving friend and Cousin,
William Burghley.

But it seems Browns errours were so inlaid in him, no conference with Divines could convince him to the contrary, whose incorrigibleness made his own father weary of his company. Men may wish, God only can work, children to be good. The old gentleman would own him for his Son no longer, then his Son owned the Church of England for his Mother, desiring to rid his hands of him, as by the insuing letter will appear.

After my very hearty Commendations, I perceive by your letters, that you have little or no hopes of your sons conformity, as you had when you received him into your house, and therefore you seem desirous that you might have liberty to remove him further off from you, as either to Stamford, or some other place, which I know no cause but you may very well and lawfully do, where I wish he might better be perswaded to conforme himself for his own good: and yours, and his friends comfort. And so I very heartily bid you farewell. From the Court this seventeenth of February, 1585.

Your very loving friend and cousin
William Burghley.

Thus to make our Story of the troublesome man the more entire, we have trespassed on the two following years, yet without discomposing our Chronologie on the Margin. Anno Dom. 1583.

Brown his opinions.

3. With his assistant Richard Harrison, a petty Pedagogue, they inveighed against Bishops, Ecclesiasticall Courts, Ceremonies, Ordination of Ministers, and what not? fancying here on earth a platform of a perfect Church, without any faults (understand it thus, save those that are made by themselves) therein. The Reader, if desirous to know their opinions, is referred to the large, and learned Treatises written against them; particularly to the pains of Dr. Fulke, proving, that the Brownists (so named from this Brown, their ringleader) were in effect the same with the ancient Donatists, only newly reviv'd. Thus there is a circulation, as in fashion of clothes; so of opinions, the same after some years return: Brownisme being no more than Donatisme vamped with some new additions. The Queen, and Her Councell seriously set themselves, first by gentleness to reduce, and (that not succeeding) by severity to suppress the increase of this faction. Brown himself used to boast, that he had been committed to thirty two prisons, and in some of them he could not see his hand at noon day. Yet for all this he came off at last both with saving his life, and keeping his living (and that none of the meanest, Achurch in Northampton-shire) unto the day of his death.

Extraordinary favour indulged unto him.

4. One may justly wonder, when many meaner Accessaries in this schism were arraigned, condemned, executed, how this Brown, the Principal, made so fair an escape, yea, enjoyed such preferment. I will never believe, that he ever formally recanted his opinions, either by word or writing, as to the main of what he maintained. More probable it is, that the promise of his general compliance with the Church of England (so far forth as not to make future disturbance therein) met with the Arch-Bishops courteous acceptance thereof, both which effectually improved by the countenance of Thomas Cecil, Earl of Exeter (Brown's near kinsman, and patron) procured this extraordinary favour to be indulged unto him. His Parsonage he freely possess'd allowing a sufficient salary for one to discharge the cure; and (though against them in his judgement) was contented (and perchance pleased) to take the tithes of his own parish.

The authors observation on him.

5. For my own part (whose nativity Providence placed within a mile of this Brown his pastorall charge) I have, when a youth, often beheld him. He was of an imperious nature, offended, if what he affirm'd, but in common discourse, were not instantly received as an oracle. He was then so far from the Sabbatarian strictness, to which some precisers Brownists did afterwards pretend, that both in judgement, and practise, he seemed rather libertine therein. In a word, he had in my time a wife, with whom, for many years he never lived, parted from her on some distaste: and a Church, wherein he never preached, though he received the profits thereof.

The occasion of his late death.

6. As for his death in the prison in Northampton, many years after (in the reign of King Charles Anno 1630.) it nothing related to those opinions he did, or his followers do maintain. For as I am credibly informed, being by the Constable of the Parish (who chanced also to be his God-son) somewhat roughly and rudely required the payment of a rate, he happ'ned in passion to strike him. The Constable (not taking it patiently as a castigation from a God-father, but in anger as an affront to his office) complained to Sr. Rowland Sr. John, a neighbouring Justice of the peace, and Brown is brought before him. The Knight of himself, was prone rather to pity, and pardon, than punish his passion; but Browns behaviour was so stubborn, that he appeared obstinately ambitious of a prison, as desirous (after long long abſence) to renew his familiarity with his ancient acquaintance. His Mittimus is made, and a cart with a feather-bed provided to carry him, he himſelf being ſo infirme (above eighty) to goe, too unweldie to ride, and no friend ſo favourable, as to purchaſe for him a more comly conveyance. In Northampton jayle he is ſent, where, ſoon after he ſickned, died, and was buried in a neighbouring Church-yard: and it is no hurt to wiſh, that his bad opinions had been interred with him.

Anno Dom. 1583.

7. The Tenents of Browniſts daily increaſing, their books were prohibited by the Queens authority. Notwithſtanding which prohibition, ſome preſumed to diſperſe the ſame, and paid dearly for their contempt therein. For, Elias [a] Thacker was hanged on the fourth, and John Coping on the ſixth of June, at the ſame place, S[r]. Edmonds Burie, and for the ſame offence, the ſcattering ſuch ſchiſmatical pamphlets.

Two Browniſts executed.
a Stow Chronicle pag. 697.

8. John Whitgift ſucceeding in the Arch-Biſhoprick, found it much ſurcharged in the valuation, and empaired in the revenues, through the negligence of his predeceſſour, who would pay willingly what they aſked of him, and take contentedly what any tendered to him. Firſt therefore Whitgift [b] procured an order out of the Exchequer, for the abatement of an hundred pound for him, and his ſucceſſours in the payment of his firſt-fruits. Afterwards he encountred no meaner man, than that great Courtier, Souldier, and Privie Counſellour S[r]. James Crofts; or rather he legally conteſted with the Queen in him, and recovered from both, long [c] Beachwood in Kent (containing above a thouſand acres of land) detained from his predeceſſours under colour of a leaſe from Her Majeſty.

Whitgift ſucceedeth him.
b S[r]. George Paul in his life pag. 28.
c Idem p. 29.

9. This [d] year Nicholas Sanders (more truly Slanders) had in Ireland a wofull end of his wretched life. He was borne in Surrey, bred firſt in Wincheſter, then in New Colledge in Oxford, where he was Kings-Profeſſor of Canon-Law, but afterwards, baniſhing himſelf, fled to Rome, there made Prieſt, and D[r]. of Divinity. He accompanied Cardinal Hoſius, to the Councel of Trent, and there is ſaid, by diſputing, and declaiming to have gained himſelf great reputation. At laſt he was ſent over, Popes Nuncio into Ireland, conceived then a deſperate employment, and therefore many Catholicks regreted thereat. Yea, ſome were overheard to ſay (but it is [e] Pitzeus Sander's own ſiſters ſon, who reports it) Why does his Holineſs ſend our Sanders into Ireland? we value him more then all Ireland is worth. There amongſt the bogs, and mountains was he ſtarved to death, juſtly famiſhed for want of food, who formerly had furfited on improbable lies, by him firſt forged on the nativity of Queen Elizabeth.

Death of Sanders.
d Camdens Eliz. in hoc Anno.
e De ſcriptor. Anglican. ætat 16. pag. 773.

10. We muſt not forget, how this year, one John Lewes was burnt at Norwich for denying the Godhead of Chriſt, and holding other deteſtable hereſies. He called himſelf [f] Abdait (let him tell you what he meant thereby) alluding therein to the promiſe of a new [g] name, which no man knoweth but him that receiveth it, having in it a little mock-Hebrew, to make himſelf the more remarkable.

Lewes burnt at Norwich.
f Stows Chron. pag. 697.
g Rev. 2. 17.

1584.

11. Now, ſo great was the malice of the Jeſuits againſt Her Majeſty, that at this time they ſet forth many ſlanderous libels, ſtirring up Her Subjects, and Servants to do the ſame to Her, as Judith did to [h] Holofernes. One of their principal pamphlets was intitled, A Treatiſe of Schiſm. The ſuſpicion of making it, fell on Gregory Martin, one probable enough for ſuch a prank (as being Divinity Profeſſor in Rhemes) did not his Epitaph there [i] enſure me, he was dead and buried, two years before. Though it is poſſible, his poſthume work might be born abroad, after the death of the author thereof. But, whoever made it, William Carter, the Stationer, paid dearly for publiſhing it, being executed at Tiburn. And in the next moneth five Seminaries, John Fen, George Haddock, John Munden, John Nutter, and Thomas Hemmerford, were hanged, bowelled, and quartered for treaſon;

Popiſh libels.
h Camdens Eliz. in hoc Anno.
i Pitzeus De ſcript. Anglic. pag. 782.

treason, at Tiborn; and many others about the same time, executed in other places. Anno Dom. 1584. Anno Regni Eliz. 27.

The Queen Her eminent mercy.

12. Yet, even in the midst of this necessarie severity, Her Majesty was most mercifull unto many Popish malefactors, whose lives stood forfeited to the Laws, in the rigour thereof. For, no fewer then seventy Priests (some of them actually condemned to die, all legally deserving death) were, by one act of Grace, pardoned, and sent over beyond sea. Amongst these were a Camdens Eliz. 1584.

1. Gaspar Heywood, son to that eminent Epigrammatist, the first [a] Jesuite that ever set foot in England.
2. James Bosgrave.
3. John Hart, a learned man, zealous to dispute, not dangerous to practice for his religion.
4. Edward Rishton, ungrateful wretch, who afterwards railed in print on the Queen, who gave him his life.

Her Majesties mercy herein was the more remarkable, because done at a time, when treasons against her person (by Arden Summerfield, Throgmorton &c.) did follow, or rather, tread one on another. If hereafter the edge of justice fall sharper on Jesuits, let them thank their own trechery, which whetted it against themselves.

Two fruitless Conferences.

13. This year two conferences or disputations were kept, (the last at Lambeth) about the Disciplin and Ceremonies of the Church.

1. Whitgift, Arch-Bishop of Canterbury. Sandys of York, and Cooper of Winchester for the same.
2. Unconforming Ministers (whose names I cannot certainly attain) against it.
3. The Lords of Her Majesties Privie Councell, and some other persons of Honour Auditors thereof.

This Conference effected nothing on the disputants (as to the altering of their opinions) little on the Auditors, but as much on all as any judicious person ever expected. What Eliah said passionately, [b] I am no better then my Fathers, may be soberly said of this conference. It was no happier then any of its Ancestors, which went before it. Let me add also, and no unhappier than its successors that shall come after it. It being observed, that meetings of this nature before or after this time, never produced any great matter on persons present thereat: who generally carry away the same judgement they brought with them. And yet the Lords were pleased to say their judgements were satisfied in the point on the Bishops behalf, not conceving their adversaries arguments so slight and triviall, as now they appeared. This was in some of them but a Court-Complement, who afterwards secretly acted against the Arch-Bishop, in favour of the other party.

b 1 King. 19.4

Subscription severely prefsed.

14. Whitgift finding this first way unsuccessfull, fell from other reasoning to a flat argument from Authority, enjoyning all admitted to the Ecclesiasticall Orders, and Benefices, the subscription of the following Articles.

1. That the Queen had supream authority over all persons born within Her Dominions, of what condition so ever they were; and that no other Prince, Prelate, or potentate, hath, or ought to have any Jurisdiction, Civil, or Ecclesiasticall, within Her Realms, or Dominions.

2. That

Anno Dom. 1584.

2. That the Book of Common-Prayer, and the Ordination of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, containeth nothing contrary to the Word of God, but may lawfully be used; and, that they will use that, and none other.

3. That the Articles of Religion agreed in the Synod holden at London, in the year of our Lord 1562. and published by the Queens authority, they did allow of, and beleeve them to be consonant to the Word of God.

The severe inforcing of subscription hereunto, what great disturbance it occasioned in the Church, shall hereafter by Gods assistance be made to appear, leaving others to judge whether the offence was given, or taken thereby.

15. Now came forth the Rhemish Translation of the New Testament. A Translation which needeth to be translated, neither good Greek, Latine, or English, as every where bespeckled with hard words (pretended not renderable in English without abatement of some expressiveness) which transcend common capacities. Besides, it is taxed by our Divines as guilty of abominable errours therein. It was printed in large paper, with a fair letter and margent, all which I have charity enough to impute to their desire to do it, for the more dignity of Gods word; whilest others interpret it, that thereby purposely they inhaunced the price, to put it past the power of poore mens purses to purchase it. Another accident paised the dearness thereof, because so many books being seized on by the Queens Searchers, the whole price of the Edition fell the more heavie on the remainder. But, suppose a poor Lay-Catholick so rich through his industry, as secretly to purchase one of these Rhemish Testaments, he durst not avouch the reading thereof, without the permission of his Superiors licensing him thereunto.

The Rhemish Translation comes forth.

16. Secretary Walsingham, by his letters solicited Mr. Thomas Cartwright, to undertake the refuting of this Rhemish Translation: and the better to enable him for the work, sent him an hundred [a] pounds out of his own purse. A bountifull gift for one, who was though a great Statesman, a man of small estate, contracting honourable [b] poverty on himself, by his expence on the publick, as dying not so engaged to his private creditors, as the whole Church, and State was indebted to his endeavours. Walsingham his letters to Cartwright were seconded by another from the Doctours, and Heads of Houses (and Dr. Fulke amongst the rest) at Cambridge, besides the importunity of the ministers of London, and Suffolk, solliciting him to the same purpose. Hereupon Cartwright buckled himself to the employment, and was very forward in the pursuance thereof.

Cartwright invited to answer it.
a See the preface to Cartwright's book.
b Camdens Elizabeth Anno 1590.

17. No sooner had Whitgift gotten notice, what Cartwright was a writing, but presently he prohibited his farther proceeding therein. It seems, Walsingham was Secretary of State, not of Religion, wherein the Arch-Bishop overpowred him. Many commended his care, not to intrust the defence of the Doctrine of England, to a pen so disaffected to the Discipline thereof. Others blamed his jealousie, to deprive the Church of so learned pains of him, whose judgement would so solidly, and affections so zealously confute the publick adversary. Distastfull passages (shooting at Rome, but glancing at Canterburie) if any such were found in his book, might be expunged, whilest it was pity so good fruit should be blasted in the bud, for some bad leaves about it. Disheartened hereat, Cartwright desisted; but some years after, encouraged by a Honourable Lord, resumed the work; but prevented by death, perfected no further then the fifteenth chapter of the Revelation. Many years lay this worthy work neglected, and the copy thereof mouse-eaten in part, whence the Printer excused some defects therein in his edition; which though late, yet at last came forth Anno 161[illegible]. A book, which notwithstanding the foresaid defects, is so compleat, Whitgift stoppeth his book.

compleat, that the Rhemists durst never return the least answer thereunto.

Anno Dom. 1584. Anno Regni Eliz. 27.

18. Mean time whilest Cartwright his refutation of the Rhemish was thus retarded, Dr. William Fulke, Master of Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge, entered the list against them, judiciously, and learnedly, performing his undertaking therein. His daughter, and (as I take it) the only surviver of his children, lately set forth, the fourth and fairest edition of this his Confutation, and dedicated it to King Charls.

Dr. Fulke first effected it.

19. The Rhemists profess, in their preface to the New Testament, that the Old Testament also lieth by them for lack of good means to publish the whole in such sort, as a work of so great charge and importance requireth; which seemeth strange to a judicious consideration. For, had a voluminous legend of Saints-lives (with pictures as costly as superstitious) been to be set forth, a mass, a mint, a mine of mony could easily be advanced to defray the expences thereof. Thus Papists can be poor, or rich, as they please themselves. Some behold this their promise, to set forth the Old Testament, as not really intended, but given out to raise mens expectations, which in process of time would fall of it self, and the profer by degrees be forgotten. Others interpret their resolutions real, but purposely revoked, seeing the ill success of their New Testament, so canvassed, and confuted by the Protestant Divines. Perceiving that their small pinace, which they first set forth, met at sea with such boisterous weather, wisely they would not adventure a greater vessel after it: but rather left it to rot on the dock, than they would lanch it forth in such danger. A third sort behold this their promise, as a modest, and mannerly, (alias) a crafty, and cunning begging of a contribution of the Catholick party, for setting forth of the same, which never as yet came into publick view. Yea, the Old Testament some said would be old indeed, before the translation thereof in English were by them set forth: insomuch that some conceived, a lease of land, till this their promise be performed almost as good as the fee-simple thereof.

A promise never performed.

Confidence of many at last deceived.

20. But now though men were so generally confident, that these long expected Rhemish notes on the Old Testament, would not come forth till the Greek Calends, they have since found themselves deceived, seeing some twenty years after, that long-lookt for work crept forth into the World, little notice being taken thereof by the Protestants. Partly, because no great eminency therein to intitle it to their perusall; Partly, because that moity of the Bible is of least concernment in the controversies betwixt us, and the Church of Rome.

The death of George Etheridge.

21. I finde not this year the death of any eminent English Protestant-Divine. Amongst the Papists, George Etheridge departed this life, much lamented by those of his own perswasion. He was Bachelor of Physick in Corpus-Christi Colledge in Oxford, and Kings-professor of Greek in that University, which place he quitted at the coming in of Queen Elizabeth, and betook himself there to a private life. His house was an Hospital to relieve those of his own Religion, on whom he expended his estate. He was one of the primitive Catholicks (saith my [a] author) persecuted for his conscience. As he started soon, he ran long in the race of patience, used to all the jayles in Oxford, and London, for thirty years together. In so much that he professed, that the variety of prisons was some pleasure, and the custome of durance had made fetters to be freedom unto him.

[a] Pitseus de Anglic. Script. pag. 785.

Mr. Rogers writeth on our Articles.

22. This year came forth the exposition of Mr. Thomas Rogers, on the Articles of the Church of England; which at first met not with that welcome entertainment, which seemed due to his endeavours. For, besides the two extremes, Papists, and Schismaticks, highly enraged, many Protestants of a middle temper were much offended thereat. Some conceiv'd it presumption for any private Minister, to make himself the mouth of the Church

Anno Regni Eliz. 28. Anno Dom. 1585.

Church, to render her ſenſe in matters of ſo high concernment. Others were offended, that his interpretation confin'd the charitable latitude, formerly allowed in thoſe Articles. The compoſers whereof, providently foreſeeing, that doctrinal differences would inevitably ariſe, in ſo large a Church as England was, even betwixt Proteſtants agreeing in fundamentals of Religion, purpoſely couched the Articles in general terms (not that falſehood ſhould take ſhelter under the covert thereof, but) to include all ſuch diſſenters within the comprehenſiveneſs of the expreſſions. Whereas now Mr. Rogers his reſtrictive Comment, ſhut out ſuch from their concurrence with the Church of England, which the diſcreet laxity of the Text admitted thereunto. However the worth of the work, in ſome years wrought it ſelf into good eſteem, as dedicated to, and countenanced by the Arch-Biſhop, though the author thereof never got any higher preferment.

23. Three great Societies at this time in London were buſily imployed, the two former of them avouched by Law, and the third avouching it ſelf, namely.

Three great Corporations now on foot together.

The Parliament.	The Convocation.	The aſſembly of Miniſters
Begun and holden at Weſtminſter, the twenty third day of November laſt, and there continued till the twenty ninth of March following, wherein the Statute againſt Jeſuits, and Prieſts their departing out, and not coming into the Realm, was made, with penalty for the relieving them.	Kept in S[t]. Pauls in London, beginning with a moſt learned Latin [a] ſermon preached by John Copcot, D[r]. of Divinity (afterwards Maſter of Bennet Colledge in Cambridge) taking for his text 1 Tim. 6. 13. Præcipio tibi coram Deo. &c. Hence the Convocation was removed to the Collegiate Church of S[t]. Peters in Weſtminſter, where D[r]. Goodman, Dean thereof, made a ſolemn proteſtation with his fellow Prebends, that the ſaid meeting ought not to be prejudiciall to the priviledges of his Church, his Proteſtation was accepted, and aſſurance given that the ſaid Convocation met not there in any manner to infringe their Immunities, but only for the maturation of buſineſs with the more expedition through the conveniency of the place. William Redman, D[r]. of Divinity, Arch-Deacon of Canterbury was choſen and preſented Prolocutor.	The certain place of their convening not known, being clandeſtine, Arbitrary and changeable, as adviſed by their conveniences; they are better diſcovered by their moving then by their meeting, and their practices more conſpicuous then their places. Some Agent for them were all day at the dore of the Parliament houſe, and ſome part of the night in the Chambers of Parliament men, effectually ſoliciting their buſineſs with them.

[a] Venuſta & eloquens Concio, ſaith the Regiſter of Canterbury out of which I tranſcribed it.

Anno Dom. 1585. Anno Regin. Eliz. 28.

The Arch-Bishop afraid of alteration in Church Discipline writes to the Queen.

24. Wonder not if Arch-Bishop Whitgift repaired seldome to, and resided but a short time in the Convocation, having other work to do in the Parliament, where what impression was made by the Agents of the Ministers, will appear by his ensuing Letter to her Majesty.

To the Queens most excellent Majesty.

Out of Bp. Whitgifts manuscripe of his own Letters afterwards in Sr. Peter Manwoods, & since in my own possession.

MAy it please your Majesty to be advertised, that notwithstanding the charge of late given by your Highness to the lower house of Parliament for dealing in causes of the Church, Albeit also according to your Majesties good liking, we have set down orders for the admitting of meet men into the Ministry hereafter; yet have they passed a Bill in that house yesterday, touching the matter, which, besides other great inconveniences, (as namely the trial of the Ministers sufficiency by twelve lay-men, and such like) hath this also, that if it pass by Parliament, it cannot hereafter but in Parliament be altered, what necessity soever shall urge thereunto; which I am perswaded in short time will appear, considering the multitude of livings, not fit for men so qualified, by reason of the smallness thereof: whereas if it pass but as a Canon from us, by your Majesties Authority, it may be observed or altered at your pleasure. They have also passed a Bill giving liberty to marry at all times of the year, without restraint, contrary to the old Canons, continually observed amongst us; and containing matter which tendeth to the slander of this Church: as having hitherto maintained an errour. There is likewise now in hand in the same house, a Bill concerning Ecclesiasticall Courts, and Visitations by Bishops, which may reach to the overthrow of Ecclesiasticall Jurisdiction, and study of the Civill Laws: The pretence of the Bill is against excessive fees, and exactions in Ecclesiasticall Courts, which fees are none other then have been of long time accustomed to be taken, the Law already established, providing a sharp and severe punishment, for such as shall exceed the same; Besides an order also which we at this present have taken amongst our selves for the better performance thereof. I therefore most humbly beseech your Majesty, to continue your gracious goodness towards us, who with all humility submit our selves to your Highness, and cease not daily to pray for your happy estate, and long and prosperous Reign over us.

Mar. 14.

Your Majesties Chaplain and daily Orator most bounden
John Cantuar.

Thus, the old year (on the last day whereof this Letter was dated) ended sadly, and suspiciously, with the Prelates; but the next year began Cheerfully, and presented good tidings unto them.

Her Majesty will alter nothing materiall to church government.

25. For, the Queen, to verifie her Motto, SEMPER EADEM, and to disprove that Inconstancy generally charged on her sex, acquitted Her self more then Woman in Her masculine resolutions: and nothing of moment was altered in Church discipline. Many things indeed were offered to both houses, debated, agitated, and (as it seems) passed the Commons; but but nothing in fine was effected. Thus the Major may propound what it pleaseth, and the Minor assume what it listeth, but no conclusive argument could then be framed, without the Ergo of the royall Assent, which the Queen refused to affix to any materiall Alteration.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 28. Mar. 25. Anno Dom. 1585.

26. And few dayes after the session of the Parliament for the present broke off, wherewith ended the assembly of the Ministers. And now all of them had leave to depart to their own homes: Otherwise such members thereof, as formerly went away without leave, were obnoxious to censure. Witness one of them in his Ingenious confession: [a] Touching my departure from that holy assembly without leave &c. I crave pardon both of you and them &c: And thus commending this holy Cause to the Lord himself, and your Godly Councell to the President thereof, I take my leave.

Parliament dissolved.

a Mr. Gelibrand to Mr. Field, cited by Bp. Bancroft in his dangerous positions. pag. 75.

27. The next day the Convocation ended, having effected nothing of moment, save that in the 9th. session thereof, John Hilton Priest, made a solemn Abjuration of his blasphemous heresies, according to the tenour ensuing.

John Hilton in Convocation abjureth his hereticall opinions.

Mar. 30.

[b] In Dei nomine Amen. Before you most reverend father in God, Lord John Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, Primate and Metropolitane of all England, and the reverend fathers in God, the Bishops of this your Province of Canterbury, here Congregated and Assembled together in this holy Synod and Convocation, I John Hilton, Priest, of my pure heart, and free will, voluntarily and sincerely, knowledge, confess, and openly recognize, that in times past, I thought, believed, said, held, and presumptuously affirmed, and preached the Errors, Heresies, Blasphemies, and damnable opinions following, &c.

b This was by me faithfully transcribed out of the records of Canterbury.

Here he distinctly read a Schedule containing his heresies, (which what they were may be collected by that which ensueth) and then proceeded as followeth.

Wherefore I the said John Hilton, detesting and abhorring all and every such my said Heresies, Blasphemies, and damned opinions; willing, and with all my power affecting, hereafter firmely to believe in the true and perfect faith of Christ, and his holy Church, purposing to follow the doctrine of Christ, and his holy Apostles, with a pure and free heart, voluntary minde, will and intent, utterly forsake, relinquish, renounce, and despise, the said detestable Errours, Heresies, Blasphemies, and Abominable opinions.

Granting, and confessing, that the blessed Trinity consisteth in three distinct persons, and one Godhead; as God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, coequall in power and might.

Secondly, that Jesus Christ is both God and man, and my Saviour and Redeemer, and of all other baptized and believing in him. Who of his Father of his own substance in his humanity was conceived by the Holy Ghost, incarnate, and for our Redemption being very God became man.

And that by the death of Jesus Christ, we be not only made partakers of his Testament, and so deduced to the knowledge of his godly will, and power but also, that we have full Redemption, and Remission of our sins in his bloud.

And, where I did most ungodly, detestably, and blasphemously affirme, that the Old and New Testaments were Fables; now being most sorry for that abominable, and damnable assertion, I do most humbly and [c] ——— believe the same Testaments to contain all truths necessary to salvation, and that I and all others are bound to believe the same, as the undoubted word of God, and that without that I cannot be saved.

c Here the record is so ill written that this word is not legible.

Anno Dom. 1585. Anno Regni Eliz. 28.

And therefore the said Errours, Blasphemies, and all other Heresies, false doctrines, and damned opinions in generall, contrary and repugnant to the faith of Christ I utterly abjure, forsake, and purely renounce, before you most Reverend father in God, and the rest of this holy Synod here assembled. And moreover, I swear by this holy Evangelist, by me here bodily touched, that from henceforth I shall never hold, teach, believe or affirme the said Errours, Heresies, Blasphemies, or damned opinions, or any other against, contrary or repugnant to the holy faith of Christs Church. Nor yet shall I by my self or any other person, privately or openly defend, maintain, succour, favour, or support any person, that to my knowledge holdeth, believeth, affirmeth or teacheth, any such Heresies, Errours, or damned opinions: So help me God, and these holy Evangelists. In witness whereof to this my present Abjuration, and renunciation, I have with my own hand voluntarily subscribed my proper name.

JOHN HILTON.

Pennance imposed upon him.

28. Upon this his Abjuration, Pennance was imposed on him, first that he should attend at Pauls Crosse upon the Preacher, Sunday next all the time of the Sermon, and there penitently stand before the said Preacher, with a faggot on his shoulders. Secondly, that he should not preach, minister Sacraments, nor exercise any Ecclesiasticall function in the Church, except specially licensed by the Arch-Bishop thereunto. Thirdly, that he should recant the said heresies, and damnable opinions, in the Church of S^t. Martins in the fields, at a sermon there to be made by the Arch-Deacon, and there to shew himself very penitent. I finde in the Records a recognizance of five hundred pounds drawn up to the Queen, whereby the said Hilton bound himself for the performance hereof; but because the rude draught of the bond is crossed, I conceive it not insisted on, and (finding nothing to the contrary) presume the aforesaid pennance by him exactly performed.

Exchange of important Letters betwixt the Earl of Leicester, and the Arch-Bishop.

29. The Ministers or Brethren now missing their mark, abated much of their former activity, in so much as that M^r. Cartwright, (whom I conjecture the President mentioned in the last assembly) began to make by the mediation of the Earl of Leicester, (who now designed him master of his new-built hospital in Warwick) compliance with Whitgift, though the wary Arch-Bishop, not over-fond of his friendship, kept him at distance, as these two Letters here inserted will sufficiently informe us.

My good Lord,

Taken out of the manuscript of Bp. Whitgifts Letters, belonging to Sir Peter Manwood, and since in my possession.

I Most heartily thank you, for your favourable and courteous usage of M^r. Cartwright, who hath so exceeding kindly taken it also, as I assure your Grace he cannot speak enough of it; I trust it shall do a great deal of good, and he protesteth and professeth to me to take no other course, but to the drawing of all men to the unity of the Church, and that your Grace hath so dealt with him, as no man shall so command him, and dispose of him as you shall: and doth mean to let his opinion publickly be known even in the Pulpit, if your Grace so permit him, what he himself will, and would all others should do for obedience to the Lawes established; and if any little scruple be, it is not great and easie to be reformed by your Grace, whom I do most heartily intreat to continue your favour and countenance

Anno Regin. Eliz. 28. Anno Dom. 1585.

nance towards him, with ſuch acceſſe, ſometimes, as your leaſure may permit. For I perceive he doth much deſire, and crave it. I am to thank your Grace alſo very heartily for Mr. Fenne: albeit I underſtand he is ſomething more opinionate then I wiſh him: But I truſt he will alſo yield to all reaſons: And I mean to deal with the Biſhop of Coventry and Lichfield to make ſome triall of him: for ſurely he is an honeſt man. Thus my good Lord, praying to God to bleſs his Church, and to make his ſervants conſtant, and faithfull, I bid your Grace farewell. At the Court this 14th, July. July. 14.

Your Graces very aſſured friend

R. Leiceſter.

My ſingular good Lord.

MAſter Cartwright ſhall be welcome to me at all times, and uſing himſelf quietly as becometh him, and as I hope he will, he ſhall finde me willing to do him any good. But to grant unto him as yet, my Licence to preach, without longer triall, I cannot, eſpecially ſeeing he proteſteth himſelf to be of the ſame minde he was at the writing of his Book, for the matter thereof, though not for the manner. My ſelf alſo I thank God not altered in any point by me ſet down to the contrary; and knowing many things to be very dangerous; wherefore notwithſtanding I am content, and ready to be at peace with him, ſo long as he liveth peaceably, yet doth my conſcience and duty forbid me to give unto him any further publick approbation, untill I be better perſwaded of his Conformity. And ſo being bold to uſe my accuſtomed plainneſs with your Lordſhip, I commit you to the tuition of Almighty God this 17th of July, 1585.

John Cantuar.

Sept. 15. Anno Regin. 28. Dec. 1.

30. Seminaries and Prieſts to the number of thirty two, late priſoners in the Tower, Marſhalſy, Kings-Bench, and other places, were pardoned, enlarged, and tranſported over into Normandie, though occaſionally they were forced to land at Bulloigne. Seminaries enlarged and tranſported.

31. The Earl of Leiceſter, who hitherto had done but little good in England, went now over to do leſs in the Low-Countries, commanding a great Army and Name, with the illuſtrious Title of Generall of the Auxiliaries of the Queen of England; he was not ſo much pleaſed with his place there, but that ſome of his Back-friends were as much delighted with his roome here. Mean time the Miniſters loſt the beſt ſtake in their hedge, in his Abſence their Patron Paramount: For though by Letters he might ſolicit their Cauſe, yet the greateſt ſtrength is not ſo extenſive, but to have the vertue thereof abated at ſuch a diſtance; And afterwards it fared worſe with the Miniſters, when Whitgift Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, was ſworne of the Privy Councell, (an honour which his Predeceſſour Grindall never obtained, yea never deſired) by the Procurement, (as it is believed) of the Lord Burghley. Feb. 5. 1583. 6

32. Now

The Liturgy supported by its oppoſers.

32. Now for the preſent, I will trouble the Reader no longer with theſe brawls about diſcipline, only one ſtory muſt not be omitted: Though it be fathered rather on publick report, then fixed on any particular Author in thoſe dayes avowing the ſame. Some complained againſt the Liturgy to the Lord Burleigh, of whom he demanded, whether they deſired the taking away thereof. They anſwered, No. But only the amendment of what was offenſive therein. He required them to make a better, ſuch as they would have ſetled in the ſtead thereof. Whereupon.

The firſt Claſſis framed a new one, Somewhat according to the form of *Geneva*h.

[a] See the view of the Directory printed at Oxford. 1646.

The ſecond Claſſis diſliking it, altered it in ſix [a] hundred particulars.

The third, quarrelled at theſe alterations, and reſolved on a new Modell.

The fourth Claſſis diſſented from the former.

Thus becauſe they could not agree amongſt themſelves, That wiſe States-man put them off for the preſent, untill they ſhould preſent him a pattern with a perfect conſent.

Accuſations not to be believed in full latitude.

33. Three Proteſtant Biſhops this year exchanged this life for another. The firſt was Richard Curteys (ſomtimes fellow of S^t. Johns in Cambridge) Biſhop of Chicheſter. The ſecond, Nicholas Robinſon Biſhop of Bang r, and John Scory Biſhop of Hereford. Of the two former we have not enough to furniſh out their Character. Of the later too much, (if all be true) which I finde charged upon him. Sure I am he began very well, being an Exile and Confeſſour in the dayes of Queen Mary, but is accuſed afterwards to be ſo guilty of Oppreſſions, Extortions, and Symonies, that a Bill was put up againſt him in the Starr-Chamber, conteyning matter enough not only to diſgrace, but degrade him if proſecuted. But he bought out his innocence with his money. Here know, that our [b] Author (though a perſon of witt and worſhip) deriveth his intelligence from a French writer diſaffected in religion, and therefore not to be believed in full latitude. When calling him Scoria or Droſſe, in alluſion to his name: but as all is not Gold that Gliſters, all is not Droſſi, reputed ſo by our Popiſh Adverſaries.

[b] Sr. John Harrington in his Character of Bp. p. 131.

The death of John Fecknam.

34. The ſame year alſo John Fecknam late Abbot of Weſtminſter ended his life, whereon we muſt enlarge our ſelves, if not for His, for Hiſtory ſake. Seeing he was a land-mark therein. His perſonall experience being a Chronicle: who like the Axiltree ſtood firme, and fixed in his own judgement: whilſt the times like the wheels turn'd backwards and forwards round about him. He was born in Worceſterſhire, in the Forreſt of Fecknam (whence he fetcht his name.) Bred, a Benediktine Monke in the Abbey of Eveſham, where he ſubſcribed with the reſt of his Order, to the reſignation of that houſe, into the hands of King Henry the eighth. Afterwards he ſtudied in Oxford, then applied himſelf firſt to Bell Biſhop of Worceſter, and after his death to Bonner of London, where he croſſed the Proverb, like Maſter, like Man, the Patron being Cruel, the Chaplain Kinde to ſuch who in Judgement diſſented from him, he never diſſembled his religion, being a zealous Papiſt, and under King Edward the ſixth ſuffered much for his Conſcience.

His Courteſy to Proteſtants.

35. In the Reign of Queen Mary, he was wholy imployed in doing good offices for the afflicted Proteſtants, from the higheſt to the loweſt. The Earle of Bedford, and (who afterwards were) of Warwick and Leiceſter, Anno Regin Eliz. 28.

Anno Dom. 1585.

ceſter, taſted of his kindneſſe: ſo did Sr John Cheek, yea and the Lady Elizabeth her ſelf; So interpoſing his intereſt with Queen Mary for her enlargement, that he incurred her Graces diſpleaſure. Hence it is that Papiſts complain, that in the reign of Queen Elizabeth he reaped not a Cropp of Courteſie proportionable to his large ſeed thereof in the dayes of Queen Mary.

36. Queen Mary afterwards preferred him from being Dean of Pauls, to be Abbot of Weſtminſter, which Church ſhe erected and endowed for Benedictine Monks, of which order fourteen only could be found in England, then extant ſince their diſſolution, which were unmarried, unpreferred to Cures, and unaltered in their opinions. Theſe alſo were brought in with ſome difficulty at firſt and oppoſition, for the Prebendaries of Weſtminſter, legally ſetled in their places would not reſigne them, till Cardinall Poole partly by compulſion, partly by compenſation obteined their removall.

Made Abbot of Weſtminſter. a Sanders de ſchiſmate Ang. in the Reign of Q. Mary.

37. Queen Elizabeth coming to the Crown, ſent for Abbot Fecknam to come to her, whom the meſſenger found ſetting of Elmes in the Orchard of Weſtminſter Abbey. But he would not follow the meſſenger till firſt he had finiſhed his Plantation, which his friends impute to his ſoul imployed [b] in myſticall meditations, that as the Trees he there ſet ſhould ſpring and ſprout many years after his deceaſe; So his new Plantation of Benedictine Monks in Weſtminſter ſhould take root and flouriſh, in defiance of all oppoſition: which is but a bold conjecture of others at his thoughts. Sure I am thoſe Monks long ſince are extirpated, but how his Trees thrive at this day is to me unknown. Coming afterwards to the Queen, what diſcourſe paſſed betwixt them, they themſelves knew alone, ſome have confidently gueſſed ſhe proffered him the Arch-Biſhoprick of Canterbury on condition he would conform to her laws, which he utterly refuſed.

Q. Elizabeth ſendeth for him and proffers him preferment.

b Reinerius in Apoſt. Bened. pag. 235.

38. In the Treaty between the Proteſtants and Papiſts primo Elizabethæ, he was preſent, but in what capacity I cannot ſatisfie my ſelf. Surely more then a Diſputant. (amongſt whom he was not named) Yet not ſo much as a Moderator. And yet his judgement, perchance becauſe Abbot and ſo, principall man in that place, was [a] aſked with reſpect, and heard with reverence. His Moderation being much commended. Now althongh he was often confined ſometimes to the Tower, ſometimes to friends houſes (and died it ſeems at laſt in reſtraint in Wisbeeich Caſtle) Yet generally he found fair uſage from the Proteſtants. He built a Conduit in Holborn, and a Croſſe in Wisbeeich, and relieved the poor whereſoever he came. So that Flies flock not thicker about ſpilt honey, then beggars conſtantly crouded about him.

Kindly uſed in reſtraint. c Fox Acts & Mon.

39. Abbot Fecknam thus being dead, the Engliſh Benedictines beyond the ſeas began to beſtirr themſelves, (as they were concerned) about the continuation of their Order: we know ſome maintain, that if any one ſpecies or kinde of Creatures be utterly extinct, the whole Univers by Sympathy therewith, and conſciouſneſſe of its own imperfection, will be diſſolved. And the Catholicks ſuſpected what a ſad conſequence there would be, if this Ancient Order of Engliſh Black Monks ſhould ſuffer a totall and finall defection. The beſt was Unus homo Nobis, there was one, and but one, Monke left, namely Father Sigebert Buckley: and therefore before his death, proviſion was made for others to ſucceed him, and they (for fear of failing) diſpoſed in ſeverall Countries in manner following.

A recruit of Engliſh Benedictines made after Fecknams death.

In

Anno Dom. 1585. Anno Regni Eliz. 28.

Reynerius de Apoſt. Bene. pag. 242.

In Rome.	In Valladolit in Spain.
1. Father Gregory Sayer.	1. Father Auſtine S^t. John.
2. Father Thomas Preſton.	2. Father John Mervin.
3. Father Anſelme of Mancheſter.	3. Father Marke Lambert.
4. Father Anthony Martin commonly called Athanaſius.	4. Father Maurice Scot.
	5. Father George Gervis.

From theſe nine new Benedictines the whole Order (which hung formerly on a ſingle ſtring) was then repleniſhed to a competent, and ſince to a plentifull number.

Engliſh Papiſts why they fell off from the Queen of Scots.

40. Hitherto our Engliſh Papiſts affectionately leaned (not to ſay fondly doted) on the Queen of Scots, promiſing themſelves great matters from her, towards the advancing of their Religon. But now they began to fall off in their affections, partly becauſe beholding her a confined perſon, (unable to free her ſelf, and more unlikely to help others) partly becauſe all Catholicks come off with loſſe of life, which practized her enlargement. As for her Son, the King of Scots, from whom they expected a ſettlement of Popery in that land, their hopes were lately turned into deſpairs, who had his education on contrary principles.

Unto the King of Spain.

41. Whereupon hereafter they diverted their eyes from the North to the Weſt, expecting (contrary to the courſe of nature) that their Sun ſhould riſe therein, in magnifying the might of the King of Spain, and his zeal to propagate the Roman Catholick faith. And this was the practiſe of all Jeſuites to poſſeſs their Engliſh proſelytes with high opinions of the Spaniſh power, as the Nation deſigned by Divine providence, to work the reſtitution of their Religion in England.

Pretending a Title to the Crown of England.

42. In order hereunto, and to hearten their Countrimen, ſome (for it appears the reſult of ſeverall perſons employed in the deſigning and effecting thereof) drew up a Title of the King of Spains, to the Engliſh Crown, are much admired by their own party, as ſlighted by the Queen and her Loyall Subjects, for being full of falſehoods and forgeries. Indeed it is eaſie for any indifferent Herauld, ſo to derive a pedigree, as in ſome ſeeming probability to intitle any Prince in Chriſtendome to any Principality in Chriſtendome, but ſuch will ſhrink on ſerious examination. Yea, I beleeve Queen Elizabeth might pretend a better Title to the Kingdoms of Leon and Caſtile in Spain (as deſcended by the houſe of Yorke, from Edmond Earl of Cambridge and his Lady Coheir to King Peter) then any Claime that the King of Spain could make out to the Kingdome of England. However much miſchief was done hereby, many Papiſts paying their good wiſhes, where they were not due, and defrauding the Queen, (their true creditor) of the allegiance belonging unto her.

43. Now

Anno Regni Eliz. 30. Anno Dom. 1587.

43. Now did the Queen summon a Parliament: wherein her Majesty appeared not in person. But passed over the presidentship of that her great Councel, unto John whitgift Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, william Cecill Lord treasurer, and to the Earle of Darby. A thing done without precedent, when the King at home and in health. But the pleasure of so powerful a Princess might create a leading case in things of this nature. An Act without precedent.

44. Wonder not if the Nonconformists were very quiet in this Parliament. Beholding the Arch-Bishop their great adversary in so great power and place. However their activity in the next, will make their party amends for their stilness in this Session. Good reason why the Nonconformists were quiet.

45. This year ended the doleful life of a distressed Lady, Mary Queen of Scots, whose Triall and Death belongeth to the State Historian: She was aged fourty six years, passing the last twenty in Imprisonment, One of a sharp wit; undaunted Spirit; comely person, beautiful Face, Majestick, presence, one Reason why Queen Elizabeth declined (what the other so much desired) a personal conference with Her, as unwilling to be either out-shone or even-shone in her own Hemisphear. For her morals, the belief of moderate men embraceth as middle Courts betwixt Buchanan aspersing, and Causinus his Hyperbolical Commending her, because zealous in his own Religion. The death of Mary Queen of Scotland.

46. She was an excellent Poet, both Latine and English, of the former I have read a distick made, and written by her own hand on a Pane of Glass at Buxton well. Her Poetry.

Buxtona quæ calidæ celebraris nomine Lymphæ,
Forte mihi posthac non adeunda, Vale.

Buxton, who dost with waters warme excell,
By me, perchance, never more seen, Farewell.

* So it is in the Glass I had in my hand, though it be celebrabere, in Camd. Brit. in Derby-shire.

And at Fotheringhay-Castle I have read written by Her in a window, with a pointed Diamond.

From the Top of all my Trust,
Mishap hath lai'd me in the dust.

But her Adversaries conceive; had she not been laid there, the happiness of England had been prostrated in the same place. She was buried in the Quire of Peterborough, and Doctor Wickham Bishop of Lincolne preached her funeral sermon; causelessly carped at by the Martin Mar-Prelate, as too favourable concerning her final condition, though he uttered nothing inconsistent with Charity and Christian discretion.

47. Some twenty years after, King James caused her Corps to be solemnly removed from Peterborough to Westminster, where in the south-side of the Chappel of King Henry the seventh, he erected a stately monument to her memory, and thereon this Epitaph, wherein such cannot but commend the Piety of her Son, who will not believe all the praises of his Mother. Her Body removed to Westminster.

D. O. M.

MAriæ Stuartæ, Scotorum Reginæ, Franciæ Dotariæ, Jacobi V. Scotorum Regis Filiæ, & Hæredis unicæ Henrici VII. Ang. Regis ex Margareta majori Natu Filia (Jacobi IIII Regi Scotorum matrimonio copulata) proneptis, Edwardi IIII. Angliæ Regis ex Elizabetha Filiarum natu maxima abneptis, Francisci II. Gallorum Regis conjugis, Coronæ Angliæ, dum vixit, certæ & indubitatæ hæredis, & Jacobi magnæ Brittanniæ monarchæ potentissimi matris:

Anno Dom. 1587. Anno Regni Eliz. 30.

Stirpe verò Regiâ & antiquissima prognata erat, maximis Totius Europæ Principibus Agnatione & Cognatione conjuncta, & exquisitissimis Animi & corporis actibus & ornamentis cumulatissima. Verum, ut sunt variæ rerum humanarum vices, postquam annos plus minus viginti in custodia detenta, fortiter & strenuè, (sed frustrà) cum malevolorum abtrectationibus, timidorum suspitionibus, & inimicorum capitalium insidijs conflictata esset; tandem inaudito & infesto Regibus exemplo securi percutitur.

Et contemptò mundo, devictâ morte, lassato Carnifice, Christo Servatori animæ salutem, Jacobo Filio spem Regni & posteritatis, & universis cædis infaustæ spectatoribus exemplum patientiæ commendans, piè & intrepidè Cervicem Regiam securi maledictæ subjecit, & vitæ caducæ sortem cum cœlestis Regni perennitate commutavit.

Besides this, there is a long inscription in verses, one distich whereof I remember, because it is the same in effect with what was made of Maud the Empress.

On Maud.

Magna Ortu, major Viro, sed maxima Partu,
Hic jacet Henrici Filia, Sponsa, Parens.

On Queen Mary.

Magna Viro, major Natu, sed maxima Partu, Conditur hic Regis Filia, Sponsa, Parens.

So that it is no disgrace for a Queen to weare part of an Epitaph at the second hand, with some little alteration.

A designe propounded.

48. About this time it was, that some Privie Councellors endeavoured to perswade Queen Elizabeth, to raise and foment a difference betwixt the Pope and King of Spain, and to assist the former (not as Pope, but temporal Prince) by her shipping to regain Naples, detained from him by the Spanish King. They alledged the designe advantagious, to work a diversion of Spanish forces, and prevent an invasion of her own Land.

And blasted by the Queen.

49. But her Majesty would not listen to the motion to entertain Compliance in any capacity, on any Conditions with the Pope: as dishonourable in her self, distastful to the Protestant Princes; nor would she touch Pitch in jest, for fear of being defiled in earnest, but crushed the designe in the birth thereof.

Conformity to the height.

50. A first onset was now made by the Nonconformists against the Hierarchie, though the more they opposed it, the more the Queen did Countenance their persons and preserve their power: In so much that she would not in Lent feed on any fish, (as forbidden by the Canons of the Church) until she had first attained a solemn * Licence from the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, and every year of her life renew'd the same.

* Camdens Eliz. Manuscript shortly likely to be Printed.

51. The power of the high Commission began now to extend far, and penalties to fall heavie on offenders. Whereupon the favourers of the Nonconformists, much opposed it in their printed books, some questioning the Court as not warranted by Law, others taxing their proceedings, as exceeding their Commission: but hear their Arguments on both sides.

Against

Anno Regni Reginæ Elizabethæ 30.

Anno Dom. 1587.

Against the High Commission.

It is pretended founded on the Statute, primo Elizabethæ, wherein the Parliament impowered the Queen by her Letters patents to appoint Commissioners to punish Offenders in Ecclesiastical Causes. But no mention therein of Temporall penalties, and therefore the Commissioners are to confine themselves to Church Censures, by Excommunicating &c. illegally inflicting any other punishments.

Such Commissioners proceeding against Offender, by Attachment, Fine, or Imprisonment, are contrary to the expresse words of Carta Magna, providing that no free man shall be taken or imprisoned, or be dissesed of his free hold and liberty, and but by the lawful judgement of his Peers, or of the Law of the Land.

Their whole Commission is void in Law; because it beareth date in July, but was not signed till November next after, contrary to the Statute, which enjoyneth, that Letters patents should be dated the day of their delivery into Chancery, or else they shall be void.

For the High Commission.

The words in the Statute run thus; they shall have full power and authority by vertue of this Act, and of the Letters patents under your Highness, your Heirs, and successors, to Exercise, Use, execute all the premises according to the Tenor and effect of the said Letters patents, any matter or cause to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding. Now their Letters patents inable them to Attach, Fine, or Imprison, &c. in doing whereof they are sufficiently impowered by the Commission.

When Carta Magna was made, Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, though it was, de jure, it was not de facto, in the King. Whereby it plainly appears, that those words related not to the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction, but only to Crimes belonging to the Common Law. But since the Parliament hath declared Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction in the Queen, the Ecclesiastical persons might impose such penalties even to the Condemning of *Heretick*s, though never tri'd by a Jury.

It appeareth by the Preamble of that Statute, that the words cannot be stretched to Letters patents of that nature, but belong only to such; to private persons, wherein Grantees are unjustly expelled out of their right, by colour of Letters patents bearing an elder date.

But the most general exception against the High Commission was this; that proceeding, ex officio mero, by way of enquiry against such whom they pleased to suspect, they tendered unto them an Oath, which was conceived unjust, that in Cases Criminal, a party should be forced to discover what might be penal to himself. The Lawfulness of which Oath was learnedly canvassed with Arguments on both sides.

Against the Oath ex Officio.

The Common Laws have ever rejected and impugned it, never put in ure by any civil Magistrate in the Land, but as it is corruptly crept in amongst other abuses by the sinister practises and pretences, of the Romish Prelates and Clergimen. And where loss of Life, Liberty, or good Name, may ensue

For the Oath ex officio.

It is true. To give this Oath to the Defendent in Causes of Life and Death, is contrary to the Justice of the Land. But where Life or Limbe is not concerned, it is usually tendered in Chancery, Court of Requests, Councel of Marches, and Councel in the North, yea in other Courts of Record at Westminster; where the Judges (time out of minde) by Corporal Oath the Common Law hath forbidden such Oath.

Against the Oath ex Officio.

It is contray to the Fundamental Law of Liberty. Nemo tenetur seipsum prodere.

It appeareth by the Lord Dyer's Book, that one Hynde called before the Commissioners Ecclesiastical for Usury, refused to swear, whereupon he was committed. But upon an Information in the Common pleas, he had a Corpus cum causa, to remove him, so (as it seemeth) the Judges were then of Opinion, that the Commissioners could not give him such an Oath.

Though such proceedings ex officio were practised by the Popish Prelates, against the Saints and Servants of God; Yet it was never used by Protestants in their Ecclesiastical Censures.

* Fox Act. & Mon. fol. 1512.
* Fox Acts. & Mon. fol. 1516.
* Fox Acts & Mon. fol. 1536.

The Justice of the Land detesteth that the Judge should himself be an Accuser. (For by Law no man may be Accuser, and witness; Inditer and Jurer; therefore much less Judg & Accuser) which notwithstanding he is, that tendereth the Oath ex Officio.

For the Oath ex Officio.

Anno Dom. 1587. Anno Regni Eliz. 30.

did examine any person whom (in discretion) they suspected to have dealt lewdly, about any writ, Returne, entrie of Rule, pleading, or any such like Matter, (not being Capital.)

It is granted. But with all proditus per denuntiationem, Famam, &c. tenetur seipsum offendere. Some faults are simply secret, no way bruited or published abroad, in which cases the person guilty is not bound to make Confession thereof, though urged on his Oath to any Officer Civil or Ecclesiastical. But if once discovery be made by Presentment Denunciation, Fame &c. according to Law, then is not the fault meerly secret, but revealed (in some sort) to the Magistrate, or abroad, who for avoiding Scandal to Christian Religion, and Reformation of the Party, may thus inquire of the Offence, to see it redressed and punished.

There is no such report in the Lord Dyer, all that is extant is only this Marginal Note, upon Skroggs his case in Michaelmas Terme, 18. of Elizabeth; Simile M. 18. fol. per Hynde qui noluit jurare coram justiciariis Ecclesiasticis, super Articulos pro usura. Which seems added by some unskilful person, it being improbable so learned a Judge, would have termed the Commissioners Justiciarios Ecclesiasticos. Besides, this cause of Hynde can no where else be found.

Certain Commissioners (whereof some Bishops, some private Counsellers, some Civilians, and some Judges; and Common Lawyers) in the Reign of K. Edward the sixth, charged Bp. Bonner with a corporal Oath, * ex Officio, to answer to questions ministred unto him; and for refusal he was pronounced * contumacious; The like Oath in matter criminal and Penal was tendered to * Stephen Gardener, as appeareth by the sentence of his deprivation of the Bishoprick of Winchester.

The Laws Civil and Ecclesiastical, hold not the Judge proceeding of office to be an Accuser; but that whereupon the Enquiry is grounded to represent the Accusation.

Even

Anno Regin. Eliz. Anno Dom. 1587.

Against the Oath ex Officio.

Even the Heathen Romans were so Christian, that by ancient custome no Vestal Virgin or * Flamen of Jupiter was restrained to swear, whereof * Plutarch rendreth three Reasons. First, because an Oath is a kinde of torture to a free man. Secondly, it is absurd in smaller matters, not to credit their words, who in higher matters touching God are believed. Thirdly, an Oath in case they were forsworne, draweth a curse on them, a detestable Ominatian towards the Priests of God. And why may not as much be allowed to the true Ministers of the Gospel.

The Scripture which ought to be the Rule of our Actions, affords neither precepts nor precedent, of such proceedings, where witnesses were produced, and the Accusers brought face to face.

William Tindal a worthy Martyr in his * Comment on the fifth of Matthew saith plainly, that a Judge ought not to compel a man to swear against himself.

No Protestant Church beyond the Seas hath made use of such tyrannical proceedings.

For the Oath ex Officio.

By the granting of this peculiar priviledge to these Persons, it plainly appeareth, that all others might by Magistrates be put to their Oaths. Besides, such were superstitiously free'd from swearing absolutely, (and not only in matters criminal, here controverted) an unreasonable Immunity, which none will challenge to themselves.

* Gellius. lib. 10 cap. 15.
* Plutarch problems. 43.

It is not necessary that a positive or affirmative warrant, be cited out of Scripture, for all our practises: sufficeth it that may be done, which is not contrary to Gods word, and conformable to the politick laws of the Land. Yet have we some footsteps of inquiry in the Judaical Law. When one was found secretly murthered in the Field, and the Murtherer neither known nor suspected; the Elders of the next City (of whose guiltiness there was no detestation nor cause of presumption, save only the Vicinage and nearness of the place) were solemnly and secretly to swear before the * Priest, conceptis Verbis, that their hands had not shed this Blood &c. if this was equall in matters Capital, how can it be challenged for Tyrannical, in matters Criminal?

* Deut. 21. 7.

Allowing all due respect to Tindals memory, his Judgement much failed him in matters of Oaths; For in the following words, he taketh away all necessary Oaths (and leaveth none but voluntary) which no wise man will defend.

* Pag. 208.

Even Geneva it self doth sometimes proceed by Oaths, ex Officio, against such suspected Offenders, as in the two following cases will appear.

There was one Camperel of Geneva ordained Minister for a Parish in that Territory, called Drallian, who had a secret designe under hand to place himself in the State of Berne, which in him was esteemed a hainous fault. The Consistory coming at some notice hereof, ministred unto him an Oath of Office to answer to several Questions. But because Camperel answe-swered not directly to those Interrogatories (two whereof concerned the very very Cogitations of his heart) and because there were Vehementia Judicia, great presumption in the Common fame, the Consistory pronounced that they had just cause to depose him from his Ministry.

Inter Epistol. Calvini in fol. pag. 421. 422. A memorable story in Geneva.

52. There was a worthy man living in Geneva called Balthasar, in whose house there was a Dancing held, which is a grief unto mine heart in that Church, and condemned by their last form of Discipline. Amongst these dancers one was a Syndick (one of the foure chief Magistrates of the City) the other an Elder (Henrie by name) of the Church for that year. The matter coming to Calvin's ears, they were all convented before the Consistory without any Accuser or Party, and therefore of Mere Office put to their Corporal Oath to confess the Truth. The Elder pleaded for himself the words of S. Paul, receive not an Accusation against an Elder under two or three witnesses; which would nothing bestead him, so that he was deposed from his Eldership, and the Syndick from his Magistracy, until he should shew some publick Testimony of his Repentance.

a Calvin in his Letter to Pharellus Pag. 64.

53. But enough of this unwelcome subject, only I must add that some there were, not offended with the Oath in it self, which took exceptions at the Injurious manner of offering it. They complained (how justly God knows) of some created-fames on no grounds, and pretended Suspicions of Crimes against those persons to whom they bare all affection, and then tendered this Oath (the Picklock of Conscience) unto them, merely to finde matter to insnare them.

First grievance complained of in tendering the Oath.

54. Secondly, they complained, that to discover their Complices (in their disciplinary Assemblies,) Children were on their Oaths interrogated against their own Fathers, contrary to the Rule in Civil Laws, Filius non torquetur in caput Patris, a Child ought not to be tortured in point of peril to his Fathers life. And although these Accusations were not Capital, yet because their Parents Credit was so deeply concerned therein, such proceedings had a strong tang of Tyranny.

Second grievance.

55. Thirdly, the party to whom the Oath was given, might not before hand be acquainted (a favour usually afforded in the Star Chamber) with the particulars whereon they were to be examined. And if by the Rule of * Solomon, He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is shame and folly unto him: much more is it indiscreet, to swear to answer a matter, before a man hear it.

Third grievance.

* Prov. 18. 13.

56. Fourthly, they complained this Oath ex Officio (like what is said of black Witches) had only power to do mischief, not to heal and help any. For none were cleared by the taking thereof, if denying what was charged upon them: but the Judges Ecclesiastical oft times proceeded to a further inquiry by examinination of Witnesses, on the points denied by the Parties.

Fourth grievance.

57. The Nonconformists who refused to take this Oath, may be ranked into foure forms. First, such as would answer neither, Yea, nor nay, what they would resolve to do concerning the Oath; but returned, if our faults be hidden, tarry til the Lord Come, and make the counsels of our hearts * manifest. But if they be manifest, let our Accuser, and the witnesses come forth before us.

Foure ranks of Refusers of this Oath.

* 2 Cor. 4. 5.

58. A Second sort refused not the Oath in a Cause Criminal, but did it with this limitation and Protestation, that they intended not to be bound thereby, to accuse either themselves or their Brethren.

Second.

59. A Third sort conceived themselves bound to reveal their own and Brothers Crimes and offences to remove evil from the land as they said, but as for such Actions of their Brothers falsely reputed offences, which were none in the Judgement of the Party examined, these they held themselves not bound to reveal.

Third.

60. The last sort, though they took the Oath as to other things, yet protested, they counted not themselves bound to answer to any such things, whereon

The last rank.

Anno Dom. 1581.

whereon witnesses may be had; but if the crime was so hidden and secret that witnesses may not be had, they thought they might lawfully be charged. For Instance, they held a Preacher might not be examined on Oath, concerning any thing he had preached in publick, alledging the words of our * Saviour, Why askest thou me? ask them that heard me, they know what I said. It is hard to make the opinion of the first and last forme to dwell peaceably together.

* Joh. 17. 21.

61. We take our leave of this Subject, when we have told the Reader, that some twenty years since, one being urged by Arch-Bishop Laud to take the Oath ex Officio, refused it on this reason, An Oath saith he by the * words of the Apostle is an end of all strife, whereas this saith he is the beginning of strife, yeelds matter for the Lawyers to molest me: But since the High Commission and this Oath are taken away by Act of Parliament, it is to be hoped, that (if such swearing were so great a grievance) Nihil analogum nothing like unto it, (which may amount to as much) shall hereafter be substituted in the room thereof.

* Heb. 6. 16.

Nonconformists persecuted in the Star-Chamber.

62. Let it not here be forgotten, that because many did question the legality and Authority of the High Commission; Arch-Bishop Whitgift so contrived the matter, that the most sturdy and refractory Non-conformists (especially if they had any visible Estates) were brought into the Star-Chamber, the power whereof was above dispute. Where some of them, besides imprisonment, had very heavie fines imposed upon them. And because most of the Queens Councel were present at the Censures, This took off the Odium from the Arch-Bishop (which in the high Commission lighted chiefly, if not only upon him, and fell almost equally on all present therein.

The death of Mr. Fox.

63. John Fox this year ended his life, to whom in some respect, our History of him may resemble it self. For he in his lifetime was so large a reliever of poor people, (to, and above his estate) that no wonder, if at his death (with some Charitable Churles) he bequeathed no Legacies unto them. Thus have we been so bountifull in describing the life, and transcribing the Letters of this worthy Confessor, that the Reader will excuse us, if at his death we give no farther Character of his piety and painfulness. Only let me adde, that whereas there passeth a Tradition (grounded on good Authority) that M^r Fox fore-told the ruine and destruction of the Invincible (so called) Armado in the eighty eight. The story is true in its selfe, though he survived not to see the performance of his own prediction.

64. Nor will it be amiss to insert his Epitaph, as we finde it on his Monument in S. Giles nigh Cripple-Gate in London.

Christo S. S.

Johanni Foxo Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ Martyrologo fidelissimo, Antiquitatis Historicæ Indagatori sagacissimo, Evangelicæ veritatis propugnatori acerrimo, Thaumaturgo admirabili, qui Martyres Marianos, tanquam Phœnices, ex cineribus redivivos præstitit.

And of D. Humfrey.

65. His dear friend D. Laurence Humfrey, may be said to die with him, (though his languishing life lasted a year longer) so great his grief, to be parted from his fellow-Collegue bred together in Oxford, and banished together into Germany. But see more of his character in the year 1596, where by mistake, (which here I freely confess) his death is inserted.

The first Protestant Hospitall.

66. About this time M^r William Lambert finished his Hospital at Greenwich, founded and endowed by him for poor people. He was the first Protestant, who erected a charitable House of that nature, as our * Antiquary observeth, observeth, though I cannot wholly concur with his observation, seeing King Edward the sixt founded Christ-Church and S^t. Thomas Hospital.

* Camd. Brit. in Kent.

Anno Dom. 1587. Eliz. 30.

Beautifull Buildings begin in England.

67. Indeed now (pardon a short digression) began beautifull Buildings in England, as to the generality thereof, whose Homes were but homely before, as small and ill-contrived, much Timber being needlesly lavished upon them. But now many most regular Pieces of Architecture were erected, so that (as one saith) they began to dwell latiùs and lautiùs, but I suspect not Lætiùs, Hospitallity daily much decaying.

68. Amongst other Structures Wimbleton House in Surrey was this yeer begun (and finished the next, as appeareth by an inscription therein) by S^r. Thomas Cecil afterward Lord Burghley. On the self same token that many years after Gondomar (treated therein by the Lord with a plentiful feast) was highly affected with his entertainment, and much commended the uniformity of the fabrick, till the DATE thereof, shewed unto him, dashed all, as built when the Spanish Armado was defeated.

Non-conformists stirr.

69. Indeed at this time there was more uniformity in the Buildings, than conformity in the Church-behaviour of men, the Ritclers against the Hierarchy appearing now more vigorous, though for a time they had concealed themselves.

SECT.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 31. Anno Dom. 1587.

Section VII.

To Mr. Hamond Ward, and Mr. Richard Fuller of London Merchants.

IT is usuall for the Plaintiffe, to put two or three names upon the same Writ taken out of the Upper-Bench (alwayes provided the persons dwell in the same County*) and this is done to* save Charges. My thanks doth here imbrace the same way of thrift. That so, the small stock of my History, may hold out the better amongst my many Friends and Favourers. And this my Ioynt-Dedication is the more proper, because you live in the same City, are of the same profession, and (if not formerly*) this may minister the welcome occasion of your* future acquaintance.

1. BUt now a Session of Parliament was held at Westminster, wherein the House of Commons presented to the Lords Spirituall and Temporall a Petition. Complaining how many Parishes, especially in the North of England and Wales, were destitute of Preachers, and no care taken to supply them. Sixteen were the particulars, whereof, the six first were against insufficient Ministers, very earnestly pressing their taking the same into their serious consideration, for speedy redress of the grievances therein contained.

A Sixteen fold Petition presented by the Commons to the Lords in Parliament.

7. That no oath or subscription might be tendered to any at their enterance into Ministry, but such as is expressely prescribed by the statutes of this Realm, except the oath against corrupt entring.
8. That they may not be troubled for omission of some rites or portions prescribed in the Book of Common-Prayer.
9. That they may not be called and urged to answer before the officials, and Commissaries, but before the Bishops themselves.
10. That such as had been suspended or deprived for no other offence, but only for not subscribing, might be restored; and that the Bishops would forbear their Excommunication, ex officio mero, of godly and learned Preachers, not detected for open offence of life or apparent errour in doctrine.

11. That they might not be called before the High-Commission, or out of the Diocess where they lived, except for some notable offence.

12. That it might be permitted to them in every Arch-Deaconry, to have some common exercises and conferences amongst themselves, to be limited and prescribed by the Ordinaries.

13. That the High censure of Excommunication, may not be denounced or executed for small matters.

14. Nor by Chancellours, Commissaries, or officials, but by the Bishops themselves with assistance of grave persons.

15. } That Non-residency may be quite removed out of the Church, or at least that
16. } according to the Queens Injunctions (Artic. 44.) No Non-resident having already a licence or faculty may enjoy it, unless he depute an able Curate, that may weekly preach and catechize, as is required in her Majesties injunctions.

Of all these particulars the house fell most fiercely on the Debate of Pluralities, and (the effect thereof) Non-Residents.

The Arch-Bishops plea for Non-residents.

2. Arch-Bishop Whitgift pleaded, that licences for Non-Residency, were at the present but seldome granted. And yet in way of recovering health by changing of Aire, of study for a time in the Universitty, of mortall enmity borne by some in the parish, of prosecution of Law, or of being imployed in publick Affairs, they cannot be wholy abrogated. That there were in England foure thousand five hundred Benefices with Cure, not above ten, and most of them under eight pounds in the first fruits-book, which cannot be furnished with able Pastors, as the Petitioners desire, because of the smallness of their livings. Moreover he affirmed, that what ever was pretended to the contrary, England at that time flourished with able Ministers more then ever before, yea had more then all Christendome besides.

The Lord Gray his rejoynder.

3. The Lord Grey rejoyned to this Assertion of more learned Ministers in the Church of England then ever heretofore, nay then in all the reformed Churches in Christendome, this, That it was not to be attributed to the Bishops or their actions, but to God, who now opened the hearts of many to see into the truth, and that the Schools were better observed.

The Lord Treasurer his moderation.

4. The Lord Treasurer Burghley seeming to moderate betwixt them, after a long and learned oration concluded, that he was not so scrupulous, as absolutely to like of the bill against Pluralities without any exception: for he did favour both learning, and wished a competent reward to it. And therefore could like, and allow a learned man to have two Benefices, so they were both in one parish, that is to say, in one Diocess, and not one in the Diocess of Winchester, and another in the North, where the severall Diocesans would have no regard of them, whereas being both in one Diocess, the Bishop would look unto them.

Others interpret.

5. Here it was signified that her Majesty was acquainted with the matter, and that she was very forward to redress the faults, and therefore required the Bishops, not to hinder her good and gracious purpose, for that her Majesty would conferr with them.

The Lord Grays (quere whether of Wilton, or what most probable, of Ruthen afterwards Earl of Kent) replyed.

6. The Lord Gray again said, he greatly wondred at her Majesty that she would make choice to confer with those, who were all enemies to Reformation; for that it meerly touched their freeholds, and therefore he thought it good, the house should make choice of some to be joyned with them; Also he wished the Bishops might be served as they were in in King Henry the 8th dayes, when as in the case of præmunire they were all thrust out of doores.

7. Then the Lord Treasurer said, that the Bishops if they were wise would themselves be humble suiters to her Majesty, to have some of the Temporall Lords joyned with them.

8. The

Anno Regin. Eliz. 30. Anno Dom. 1587.

8. The Lord Chamberlain utterly diſliked the Lord Grayes motion, alledging that it was not to be liked of, that the Lords ſhould appoint her Majeſty any to confer withall, but that it ſhould be left to her own election.

9. Matters flying thus high, the Arch-Biſhop, with the reſt of the Clergy, conceived it the ſafeſt way to apply themſelves by Petition to the Queen, which they preſented as followeth. The Biſhops providently petition the Queen.

To the Queens moſt excellent Majeſty.

THe woefull and diſtreſſed ſtate whereinto we are like to fall, forceth us with grief of heart in moſt humble maner, to crave your Majeſties moſt ſoveraign Protection. For the pretence being made the maintenance and increaſe of a learned miniſtry, when it is throughly weighed, decayeth learning, ſpoileth their livings, taketh away the ſet form of prayer in the Church, and is the means to bring in confuſion and Barbariſme. How dangerous innovations are in a ſetled eſtate, whoſoever hath judgement perceiveth Set dangers apart, yet ſuch great inconveniences may enſue, as will make a ſtate lamentable and miſerable. Our neighbours miſeries might make us fearfull, but that we know who rules the ſame. All the reformed Churches in Europe, cannot compare with England in the number of learned Miniſters. Theſe benefits of your Majeſties moſt ſacred and carefull Government with hearty joy we feel, and humbly acknowledge; ſenceleſs are they that repine at it, and careleſs who lightly regard it. The reſpect hereof made the Prophet to ſay; Dii eſtis. All the faithfull and diſcreet Clergy ſay, ô Dea certè. Nothing is impoſſible with God. Requeſts without grounded reaſons are lightly to be rejected. We therefore not as directors, but as humble Remembrancers beſeech your Highneſs favourable beholding of our preſent ſtate: And what it will be in time to come, if the Bill againſt Pluralities ſhould take any place.

To the Petition were annexed a catalogue of thoſe inconveniences to the State preſent, State to come, Cathedrall Churches, Univerſities, to her Majeſty, to Religion, in caſe pluralities were taken away, here too large, to be inſerted. So that in effect, nothing was effected, as in relation to this matter, but things left in ſtatu quo prius, at the diſſolution of this Parliament.

10. Amongſt the mortalities of this year, moſt remarkable the death of Richard Barnes Biſhop of Durham, one commendable in himſelf, but much ſuffering for the * corruption, and viciouſneſs of John Barnes his brother and Chancellour. This Biſhop was bred in Braſen-noſe Colledge, made Suffragan of Nottingham, (the laſt I beleeve who wore that title,) and behaved himſelf very gravely in his Dioceſs. A great friend at laſt to Bernard Gilpin, (though at firſt by ſome ill inſtruments incenſed againſt him) and ſeeing they were loving in their lives, their memories in my Book ſhall not be divided, though I confeſs the later died ſome three years before. The death of Bp. Barns.

* See the life of Bernard Gilpin p. 190.

11. This Bernard Gilpin, born of a right worſhipfull family, at Kentmire in Weſtmerland, had Cuthbert Tonſtall Biſhop of Durham for his great Uncle, he was bred firſt in Queens Colledge, then Chriſts-Church in Oxford, and no doubt the prayers of Peter Martyr conduced to his converſion, to be a Proteſtant. For he hearing this Gilpin diſpute cordially on the Popiſh party, deſired of God that ſo good affections might not be miſguided, and at laſt obtained his deſire. And of Bernard Gilpin.

Hardly escaped in Queen Maries dayes.

12. He Weathered out the Raign of Queen Mary; partly with his travels beyond the seas, (chiefly residing at Lovain, and Paris) partly, after his return by the favour of his Uncle Tonstall. Before whom he was often cited, (chiefly about the Eucharist) but was discharged by confessing the reall presence, and that the manner thereof transcended his apprehension. Tonstall not inforcing him to the particularity of Transubstantiation, as using himself to complain on Pope Innocent, for defining, de modo to be an article of faith. However his foes so hardly beset him, that once he ordered his servant to provide for him a long shroud, not for his winding, but burning sheet, as expecting at last he should be brought to the stake for his religion, But men may make cloaths either for mirth, or for mourning, whilst God alone orders whether or no they shall wear them.

Anno Dom. 1587. Anno Regin Eliz. 30.

A single man, yet a true father.

15. After the coming of Queen Elizabeth to the Crown, he with more earnestnes refused a Bishoprick, then others affected it. His parsonage at Haughton, as it might seem a Bishops Palace for building, so was it no less for hospitality. Fourteen Villages belonging to that mother Church, the poor whereof (besides many others) were daily relieved at his door, twenty Scholars he commonly boarded in his house, which seemed a little Colledge. In a word, he was commonly called Father Gilpin, and well deserved it, for his paternall affections to all. Making his yearly progress into Rheadsdale, and Tinsdale in Northumberland, (where people sat in darkness of ignorance, and shaddow of death) and instructing them by his heavenly preaching.

The brave coming forth of the Spanish Armado.

14. Now began that fatall year generally foretold that it would be wonderfull as it proved no less. Whence the Astrologers fetcht their intelligence hereof; whether from Heaven, or Hell, from other Stars, or from Lucifer alone, is uncertain: this is most sure, that this prediction, though hitting the mark, yet miss'd their meaning, who both first reported, and most believed it. Out comes their invincible Navie and Army, perfectly appointed for both Elements, Water, and Land, to Sail and March compleat in all warlike Equipage: so that formerly, with far less provision, they had conquered another new world. Mighty was the bulk of their ships, the sea seeming to groan under them, (being a burden to it, as they went, and to themselves, before they returned) with all manner of artillery, prodigious in number, and greatness, so that the report of their guns do stil, and ought ever, to sound in the ears of the English, not to fright them with any terrour, but to fill them with deserved thankfulness.

1588 31.

The shameful fight and return thereof. a 1 Kings 19. 33.

15. It is said of Senacherib, coming against Hierusalem with his numerous army, by [a] the way that he came shall he return, and shall not come into this City saith the Lord: as the later part of this threatning was verified here, no Spaniard setting foot on English ground, under other notion then a prisoner; so, God did not them the honour to return the same way, who coming by South-East, a way they knew, went back by South-West, a way they sought, chased by our ships, past the 57th Degree of Northen Latitude, then and there left to be pursued after by hunger and cold. Thus having tasted the English valour in conquering them, the Scotch constancy in not relieving them, the Irish cruelty in barbarous butchering them, the small reversion of this great navie which came home, might be look'd upon by religious eyes, as reliques, not for the adoration, but instruction of their nation hereafter, not to account any thing invincible which is less then infinite.

This deliverance principally wrought by Gods arm.

16. Such as lose themselves by looking on second causes impute the Spanish ill success, partly to the Prince of Parma, who either mind-bound or wind-bound, staying himself, or stopt by the Hollander, would or could not come to their seasonable succour, and partly to the Duke of Medina's want of commission to fight with the English, (save on the defensive) till joyned joyned with Parma. Thus when God will have a deſigne defeated, amidſt the plenty, yea ſuperfluity of all imaginable neceſſaries, ſome unſuſpected one ſhall be wanting to fruſtrate all the reſt. We will not mention (ſave in due diſtance of helps) the induſtry, and loyalty of the Lord Howard Admirall, the valour of our captains, the ſkill of our pilots, the activity of our ſhips, but aſſigne all to the goodneſs of God, as Queen Elizabeth did. Leave we her in the Quire of Pauls church, devoutly on her knees with the reſt of her Nobles in the ſame humble poſture, returning their unfeigned thanks to the God and giver of all victory, whilſt going abroad, we ſhall finde ſome of her ſubjects worſe employed in implacable enmity about Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline one againſt another. And let not the mentioning of this deliverance be cenſured as a deviation from the Church-Hiſtory of Britain. Silence thereof being a ſin, for had the deſigne took effect, neither Proteſtant Church in Britain had remained, nor Hiſtory thereof been made at this preſent.

Anno Dom. 1588.

17. But bullets did not fly about ſo much at ſea, as baſtardly Libels by land, ſo fitly call'd, becauſe none durſt father them, for their iſſue. They are known, though not by their Parents, by their names.

Scurrilous Pamphlets diſperſed.

1 The Epitome (ſcipline)
2 The demonſtration of di-
3 The Supplication
4 Diotrephes
5 The Minerals
6 Have you any work for the (Cooper?
7 Martin Seignior } Mar-
8 Martin Junior } prelate.
9 More work for the Cooper
&c.

The main drift and ſcope of theſe pamphlets, for know one and know all (theſe foule mouth'd papers, like Blackmoors, did all look alike) was to defame and diſgrace the Engliſh Prelates, ſcoffing at them for their garb, gate, apparel, vanities of their youth, naturall defects, and perſonall infirmities; it is ſtrange how ſecretly they were printed, how ſpeedily diſpers'd, how generally bought, how greedily read, yea and how firmly beleeved, eſpecially of the common ſort, to whom no better muſick then to hear their betters upbraided.

Their reaſons for the lawfulneſs of ſuch pamphlets.

18. Some preciſe men of that ſide thought theſe jeering pens well employed. For having formerly, (as they ſay) tried all ſerious and ſober means to reclaim the Biſhops, which hitherto proved uneffectuall: they thought it not amiſs to try this new way, that whom they could not in earneſt make odious, in ſport they might render ridiculous. Wits will be working, and ſuch as have a Satyricall vein, cannot better vent it then in laſhing of ſin. Beſides, they wanted not a warrant (as they conceived) in Holy Writ, where it was no ſoloecisme to the gravity of Eliah to mock [a] Baals prieſts out of their ſuperſtition chiefly, this was conceived would drive on their deſigne, ſtrengthen their party by working on the peoples affections, which were marvelouſly taken with the reading thereof.

a 1 Kings 18. 27.

These Books diſclaimed by the diſcreet ſort and why.

19. But the more diſcreet and devout ſort of men, even of ſuch as were no great friends to the Hierarchy, upon ſolemn debate then reſolved, (I ſpeak on certain knowledge from the mouths of ſuch whom I muſt believe) that for many foul falſehoods therein ſuggeſted, ſuch Books were altogether unbeſeeming a pious ſpirit, to print, publiſh, or with pleaſure peruſe, which ſuppoſed true both in matter and meaſure, charity would rather conceal, then diſcover. The beſt of men being ſo conſcious of their own badneſs, that they are more carefull to waſh their own faces, then buſie to throw durt on others. Any man may be witty in a biting way, and thoſe that have the dulleſt brains, have commonly the ſharpeſt teeth to that purpoſe. But ſuch carnall mirth, whilſt it tickles the fleſh, doth wound wound the ſoul. And which was the main, theſe baſe books would give a great advantage to the generall foe, and Papiſts would make too much uſe thereof againſt Proteſtant religion, eſpecially ſeeing an [a] Arch-Angell thought himſelf too good to bring, and Sathan not bad enough to have railing ſpeeches brought againſt him.

Anno Dom. 1588. Anno Regni Eliz. 31.

[a] Jude 9.

The inſtruments employed in making theſe Books, heavily puniſhed.

20. But leaving private men to abound in their own ſenſe, how highly the ſtate (as it then ſtood) diſtaſted theſe books, will plainly appear by the heavie cenſures inflicted on ſuch as were but acceſſarie thereunto. To paſs by John Penry, and John Udall miniſters, accuſed for making ſome of them, (of whom in due place) together with the Printers, and Humphry Newman, a Cobler, chief diſperſer of them: The Starr-Chamber deeply fined Sr. Richard Knightly, and Sr. Wigſton for entertaining and receiving the Preſs Gentelmen, whom their [b] adverſaries allow qualified with piety, gravity, and wiſdome, which made many admire how their diſcretion could be deluded, and more bemoan that their goodneſs ſhould be abuſed by others, who had deſignes upon them. Here Arch-Biſhop Whitgift beſtirr'd himſelf to improve his intereſt with the Queen, till his importunity had angred her & till his importunity had pleaſed her again, that they might be delivered out of priſon, and eaſed of their fines, which upon their ſubmiſſion was performed. Whoſe mildneſs to mediate for his adverſaries, as it was highly commended by ſome, ſo there wanted not thoſe, who imputed his moderation therein to declining of envie, gaining of applauſe, and remorſe of his own conſcience for over rigorous proceedings: it being no charity to cure the wound he hath cauſed, and ſolicit the remitting of thoſe fines, which he had procured to be impoſed. Thus impoſſible it is to pleaſe froward ſpirits, and to make them like the beſt deed, who diſlike the doer thereof; and if any deſire to know the motions and ſtages of the Preſs, which printed theſe books, know it was firſt ſet up at [d] Moulſey near Kingſton in Surrey, thence conveyed to Fauſt in Northamptonſhire, thence to Norton, and afterwards to Coventry. Hence it was removed to Welſtone in Warwick-ſhire, whence the Letters were ſent to another Preſs, in or near Mancheſter, and there diſcovered by Henry Earle of Darby, in the printing of more work for the Cooper. No wonder then if many Errata's were committed by this (call it as you pleaſe Pilgrime or Vagabond) Preſs, when it ſelf was ever in a wandring and ſtragling condition.

[b] Sr. G. Paul in the life of Arch-Biſhop Whitgift pag. 40.

[c] Camdens Elizabetha in Ann 1588.

[d] Sr. G. Paul pag. 39.

21. A Synod of the Presbyterians, of the Warwick ſhire Claſſis, was call'd at Coventry, die decimo, quarto; that is, on the 10th of April: wherein the queſtions, brought the laſt year from the Brethren of Cambridge Synod, were reſolved in manner as followeth.

Acts of the Synod of Coventry.

1. That [e] private Baptiſme was unlawfull.
2. That it is not lawfull to read Homilies in the Church.
3. That the ſigne of the Croſs is not to be uſed in Baptiſme.
4. That the faithfull ought not to communicate with unlearned Miniſters, although they may be preſent at their ſervice, if they come of purpoſe to hear a ſermon, the reaſon is, becauſe Laymen as well as Miniſters may read publick ſervice.
5. That the calling of Biſhops &c. is unlawfull.
6. That as they deal in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall, there is no duty belonging unto, nor any publickly to be given them.
7. That it is not lawfull to be ordained Miniſters by them, or to denounce either ſuſpenſions, or excommunications ſent from them.
8. That it is not lawfull to reſt in the Biſhops deprivation of any from the Miniſtry, except (upon conſultation with the neighbour Miniſters adjoyning and

[e] Tranſcribed out of Bp. Bancrofts book called Englands Sentizing for Diſcipline by practiſe p. 86. and 87. who may ſeem have had the originall in latin.

Anno Regni Eliz. 31. Anno Dom. 1588.

and his flock) it seems so good unto them: but that he continue in the same untill he be compell'd to the contrary by civill force.

9. That it is not lawfull to appear in a Bishops Court, but with protestation of their unlawfulness.

10 That Bishops are not to be acknowledged either for Doctors, Elders, or Deacons, as having no ordinary calling.

11. That touching the restauration of their Ecclesiasticall Discipline, it ought to be taught to the people as occasion shall serve.

12. That (as yet) the people are not to be solicited (publickly) to the practise of the Discipline, (till) they be better instructed in the knowledge of it.

13. That men of better understanding are to be allured privately to the present embracing of the Discipline, and practise of it, as far as they shall be well able, with the peace of the Church.

Likewise in the same assembly the aforesaid Book of discipline was approved to be a draught essentiall and necessary for all times; and certain articles (devised in approbation, and for the manner of the use thereof,) were brought forth, treated of, and subscribed unto, by Mr. Cartwright, and others, and afterwards tendered far and near to the severall Classes, for a generall ratification of all the Brethren.

22. Now if Rebeccah found her self strangely affected when [a] twinns strugled in her wombe, the condition of the English Church must be conceived sad, which at the same time had two disciplines, both of them pleading Scripture and Primitive practise, each striving to support it self, and suppress it's rivall. The Hierarchy commanded by authority, established by law, confirmed by generall practise, and continued so long by custome in this land, that had one at this time lived the age of Methuselah he could not remember the beginning thereof in Britain. The Presbytery, though wanting the stamp of authority, claiming to be the purer metall founded by some Clergie men, favoured by many of the Gentry, and followed by more of the Common sort, who being prompted with that naturall principle, that the weakest side must be most watchfull, what they wanted in strength, they supplied in activity. But what won them most repute, was their Ministers painfull preaching in populous places: It being observed in England, that those who hold the Helme of the pulpit, alwayes steere peoples hearts as they please. The worst is, that in matters of fact, all relations in these times are relations, I mean much resent of party and interest to the prejudice of truth. Let me minde the Reader to reflect his eye on our Quotations, (the Margin, in such cases being as materiall as the Text, as conteining the authors) and his judgement may, according to the credit or reference of the Author alledged believe, or abate, from the reputation of the report. Let me add, that though it be a lie in the Clock, it's but a falsehood in the Hand of the Diall, when pointing at a wrong hour, if rightly following the direction of the wheele which moveth it. And the fault is not mine, if I truly cite what is false on the credit of another. The best certainty in this kinde we are capable of, is, what we finde in the confessions of the parties themselves, deposed on oath, taken by publick notaries, and recorded in court: for such, who herein will flie higher for true intelligence, then the Starr-Chamber, must fetch it from heaven himself.

[a] Gen. 25. 22. The English Church distracted betwixt contrary disciplines.

23. In that Court we finde confessed by one Mr. [b] Johnson, (formerly a great Presbyterian, but afterwards, it seems falling from that side, he discovered many passages to their disadvantage) how that when the Book of Discipline came to Northampton to be subscribed unto, there was a generall censuring used amongst the brethren there, as it were to sanctifie themselves; partly partly by ſuſtaining a kinde of pennance and reproof for their former conformity to the Orders of the Church; and partly to prepare their mindes for the devout accepting of the aforeſaid Book. In which courſe of cenſuring uſed at that time, there was ſuch a ripping up one of anothers life, even from their youth, as that they came to bitterneſs, and reviling tearms amongſt themſelves; one growing thereby odious to another, and ſome did thereupon utterly forſake thoſe kinds of Aſſemblies. O, how wofull the Veſſel of the Engliſh Church, whilſt her ὑπηρέται, her miniſters, and under-rowers, ſome tugged it one way, and others towing it another; enough almoſt to ſplit her in pieces, with the violence of their contrary Diſcipline.

The success of the solemn humiliation of the ministers at Northampton.

[b] See Englands Scottizing for discipline, 3. Cap. 6. pag. 88.

Anno Dom. 1588. Anno Regni Eliz. 31.

The Contents of the admonition to the Catholicks of England.

24. Leave we them for a while, to behold how the Popiſh Clergy were employed, who in the beginning of this year, were as buſie as Bees, newly ready to ſwarme. A Book was ſet forth called the admonition, diſperſed amongſt Catholicks, and highly cried up, conſiſting of ſeverall Parts, not unfit to be here recited.

1. The Authors make their entrance into the diſcourſe, with a moſt odious and ſhamefull declamation againſt her Majeſty, ſtirring up her ſubjects hearts to contempt of her highneſs, as being one odious to God and man.
They threaten the Nobility, Gentry &c. with loſs of all their goods, their Lands, their Lives, and with damnation beſides; except that preſently upon the landing of the Spaniards, they joyned themſelves, and all their forces, men, munition, victuals, and whatſoever elſe they could make with their Catholick Army, '(forſooth) for the words be theſe. If you will avoid (ſay they) 'the Popes, the Kings, and other Princes high indignation; let no 'man of what degree ſoever, abet, aid, defend or acknowledge 'her &c. adding that otherwiſe they ſhould incurr the Angels 'Curſe and Malediction, and be as deeply excommunicated as any, 'becauſe that in taking her Majeſties part, they ſhould fight againſt 'God, againſt their lawfull King, againſt their Countrey, and that 'notwithſtanding all they ſhould do, they ſhould but defend her 'highneſs bootleſs to their own preſent deſtruction, and eternall 'ſhame.
2. After all thoſe, and many other ſuch threats, in a high and military ſtile, to ſcarr fools with, then they come to ſome more milde perſwaſions, and promiſe the noble men, that ſo they joyn with the duke of PARMA upon the receipt of their Admonition, they will intreat that their whole houſes ſhall not periſh. For Perſons did inſtigate the Engliſh Cardinall to ſwear by his Honour, and in the word of a Cardinall, that in the fury of their intended Maſſacre, there ſhould as great care be taken of every Catholick and penitent perſon, as poſſibly could be, and that he was made a Cardinall of purpoſe to be ſent then into England for the ſweet managing of thoſe Affairs.
3. Other arguments they uſed drawn from the certainty of the victory, as that all the Proteſtants would either turn their Coats, Copies, arms, or fly away, in fear and torment of the Angel of God proſecuting them; that although none of her Majeſties ſubjects ſhould aſſiſt the Spaniards, yet their own forces, which they brought with them were ſtrong enough, their proviſion ſufficient, their appointment ſo ſurpaſſing: that they had more expert Captains, then her Majeſty had good ſouldiers, all reſolute to be in the Cauſe, which they had had undertaken: that the Blood of all the blessed Bishops shed in this Land, and all the saints in heaven prayed for the Spaniards victory, that all the vertuous Priests of our Country, both at Home and Abroad, had stretched forth their sacred hands to the same end: that many priests were in the Camp to serve every spiritual mans necessity: that their forces were guarded with all Gods Holy Angels; with Christ himself in the soveraign Sacrament, and with the daily most holy oblation, of Christs own dear body and blood: that the Spaniards being thus assisted with so many helps, though they had been never so few they could not lose, and that her Majesty and her Assistants wanting these helps, although they were never so fierce, never so proud, never so many, never so well appointed, yet they could not prevail. Fear you not (say they to such as would take their part) they cannot. And thus far out of their said Jesuiticall Admonition.

Anno Regin. Eliz. 31. Anno Dom. 1588.

The Book goes under the name of Cardinall Allen, though the secular Priests say he was but the Cloak-father thereof, and that [a] Parsons the Jesuite made it. Others conceive it equivocally begotten, as the result and extract of severall brains. No doubt had the Spanish Invasion succeeded, happy he who could have laid claim to so prophetical a piece: and they would have fallen out as the two * Harlots about the living Child, who should have been Parent thereof. Whereas now on the miscarriage of their great Navie, all disclaimed the Book, and Parsons procured the whole impression to be burnt, (save some [b] few sent abroad before hand to his friends) that it might not remain a monument of their falsehood. And now the Popish Priests, some lurk't here in holes, other fled into forraign parts, their confusion being the greater for their former confidence. Thus * Sisera comes off the more coldly, when stript out of the garment of divers colours wherewith his mother had arrayed him, in her fancy running faster, then the wheels of her sons Charriot to his imaginary conquest.

a Watsons Quodlibets pag. 240.

* 1 Kings 3.

b Watson ut prius.

* Judg. 5.30.

Aug. 1. 25. This year died Edwin Sands Arch-Bishop of Yorke, born in Lancashire of worshipfull Parentage, bred in Cambridge, banished to Germany, after this promoted to be Bishop of Worcester, then succeeded Grindal in London, and Yorke, an excellent and painfull preacher, and of a pious and Godly life, which increased in his old age, so that by a great and good stride, whilst he had one foot in the Grave, he had the other in Heaven. He was buried in Southwell, and it is hard to say, whether he was more eminent in his own Vertues, or more happy in his Flourishing Posterity.

The death of Edw. Sands, Arch-Bishop of York.

1589. 26. The next year produced not any great Church matters in its self, but was only preparatory to the ripening of business, and raising the charges against the principall Patrons of Nonconformity. Indeed Arch-Bishop Whitgift according to his constant custome and manner, repaired daily to the Councell-Table early in the morning, and after an usuall appreciation of a Good-morrow to the Lords, he requested to know if there were any Church business to be debated, and if the answer were returned in the Affirmative, He stayed and attended the issue of the matter. But if no such matter appeared, he craved leave to be dispensed withall, saying, Then my Lords, here is no need of me, and departed. A commendable practise clearing himself from all aspersions of civill-pragmaticallness, and tending much to the just support of his reputation.

Arch-Bishop Whitgift, his discretion.

1590. Sept. 1. 27. On the first of September Mr. Cartwright, Batchelor in Divinity, was brought before Her Majesties Commissioners, there to take his oath, and give in his positive answer to the following Articles.

Articles objected against Mr. Thomas Cartwright.

Anno Dom. 1590. Anno Regin. Eliz. 33.

[a] The copy of these Articles were found by a friend, in Mr. Travers his study, after his death, who as kindly communicated as I have truly transcribed them.

1. Imprimis, [a] We do object and articulate against him, that he, being a Minister (at least a Deacon) lawfully called, according to the godly laws, and orders of this Church of England hath forsaken, abandoned, and renounced the same orders Ecclesiastical, as an antichristian, and unlawfull manner of calling, unto the Ministry, or Deaconship.

2. Item, that he departing this Realm into forraign parts, without license, as a man discontented with the form of Government Ecclesiasticall here by law established, the more to testifie his dislike and contempt thereof, and of the manner of his former Vocation, and Ordination, was contented in forraign parts (as at Antwerpe, Middleburgh, or elsewhere) to have a new Vocation, Election, or Ordination, by imposition of hands unto the Ministry, or unto some other order or degree Ecclesiasticall, and in other manner and form, than the laws Ecclesiasticall of this Realm do prescribe. Let him declare upon his oath the particular circumstances thereof.

3. Item, that by vertue or colour of such his later Vocation, Election, or Ordination, becoming a pretended Bishop, or Pastor, of such Congregation as made choice of him, he established, or procured to be established at Antwerp, and at Middleburgh among Merchants, and others, Her Majesties Subjects, a certain Consistory, Seminary, Presbytery, or Eldership Ecclesiastical, consisting of himself, being Bishop, or Pastor, (and so President thereof) of a Doctor, of certain Ancients, Seniours, or Elders for government Ecclesiastical, and of Deacons for distributing to the poor.

4. Item, that the said Eldership, and the authority thereof, certain English-born Subjects were called, elected, or ordained by imposition of hands, to be Ministers, or Ecclesiastical Doctors (being not of that degree before) as Hart, Travers, Grise, or some of them; and some that were also Ministers afore, according to the orders of the Church of England, as Fenner, Allen, were so called, and other English Subjects were also called, and likewise ordained Elders, and some others were ordained Deacons, in other manner and form, than the laws Ecclesiasticall of the Realm do prescribe, or allow of.

5. Item, that such Eldership so established, under the Presidentship of him the said Thomas Cartwright, had used (besides this authority of this Vocation, and Ordination of Officers ecclesiasticall) the Censures, and keyes of the Church, as publick admonition, suspension from the Supper, and from execution of offices ecclesiastical, and the censures of excommunication; likewise authority of making laws, degrees, and orders ecclesiastical, and of dealing with the doctrine, and manners of all persons in that Congregation, in all matters whatsoever so far as might appertain to conscience.

6. Item, that he the said Thomas Cartwright, in the publick administration of his Ministry there, among Her Majesties Subjects, used not the forme of liturgie, or Book of Common-Prayer, by the laws of this land established, nor in his government ecclesiasticall, the laws and orders of this land, but rather conformed himself in both to the use and form of some other forraign Churches.

7. Item, that since his last return from beyond the Seas, being to be placed at Warwick, he faithfully promised (if he might be but tolerated to preach) not to impugne the laws, orders, policy, government, nor governours in this Church of England, but to perswade, and procure, so much as he could, both publickly, and privately, the estimation, and peace of this Church.

8. Item, That he, having no Ministry in this Church (other then such as afore before he had forſaken, and ſtill condemneth as unlawful) and without any licenſe (as Law requireth) he hath ſince taken upon him to preach at Warwick, and at ſundry other places of this Realm.

Anno Regni Eliz. 33. Anno Dom. 1590.

9. Item, That ſince his ſaid return, in ſundry private conferences, with ſuch Miniſters and others, as at ſundry times by word, and letter, have asked his advice, or opinion, he hath ſhewed miſlike of the Laws, and Government Eccleſiaſtical, and of divers parts of the Liturgie of this Church; and thereby perſwaded, and prevailed alſo with many in ſundry points, to break the orders and form of the Book of Common-Prayer, who obſerved them before, and alſo to oppoſe themſelves to the Government of this Church, as himſelf well knoweth, or verily believeth.

10. Item, That in all, or moſt of ſuch his Sermons, and Exerciſes, he hath taken occaſion to traduce, and enveigh againſt the Biſhops, and other governours under them in this Church.

11. Item, That he hath grown ſo far in hatred, and diſlike towards them, as that at ſundry times, in his prayer at Sermons, and namely, Preaching at Banbury, about a year ſince, in ſuch place as others well diſpoſed pray for Biſhops, he prayed to this, or like effect; Becauſe that they, which ought to be pillars in the Church, do bend themſelves againſt Chriſt, and his truth, therefore O Lord give us grace, and power, all as one man, to ſet our ſelves againſt them. And this in effect (by way of emphaſis) he then alſo repeated.

12. Item, that preaching at ſundry times and places, he uſually teacheth at all occaſions, to deprave, condemn, and impugn the manner of Ordination of Biſhops, Miniſters and Deacons; ſundry points of the Politie, Government, Laws, Orders, and rights Eccleſiaſtical, and of the publick Liturgie of the Church of England, contained in the Book of Common-Prayer; as namely, the uſe of the Surplis, the Interrogatories to God-Fathers, &c. in the name of the Infants, the Croſs in Baptiſm, the Ring in Marriage, the Thankſgiving after Child-birth, Burials by Miniſters, the Kneeling at Communion, ſome points of the Letany, certain Collects and Prayers, the reading of portions of Scripture for the Epiſtle and Goſpel, and the manner of Singing in Cathedral Churches, and others.

13. Item, That preaching at the Baptizing of one of Job Throgmortons children, he ſpoke much of the unlawfulneſs, and in derogation of the Government, Politie, Laws, and Liturgy Eccleſiaſtical of this Realm; and to the juſtification of a Government by Elderſhips in every Congregation, and by Conference, and Synods, &c. abroad, as Divine Inſtitutions commanded by Chriſt, and the onely lawful Church-government; ſeeking to prove and eſtabliſh ſuch Elderſhips out of that word in one of the Pſalms, where Thrones are mentioned.

14. Item, That by toleration, and impunity, he did grow ſo confident, and withal implacable againſt the Laws, Government, and Orders of this Church of England, that he could not endure M^r Bourdman, and others (preaching ſundry times at Warwick) to ſpeak in defence thereof, but took upon him to confute in ſundry Sermons there, theſe things which the ſaid Bourdman had truly, and dutifully, in that behalf ſpoken, and delivered.

15. Item, That in his Sermons at Warwick, and elſewhere, within the ſaid time, he often delivered many frivolous, ſtrange, and undiſcreet poſitions; as namely, that to kneel down and pray when a man comes into the Church, or pray there privately, was but to offer the ſacrifice of fools. That it was requiſite, all the hearers that were able ſhould ſtand upon their feet during Sermons; and diſcourſing about women, and their child-birth, &c. did ſpeak thereof ſo indiſcreetly, and offenſively, that ſundry of them in great grief, had conſpired to have miſchieved him with ſtones in the open ſtreets.

16. Item, That by his perſwaſions, privately and publickly delivered, ſundry perſons in and about Warwick, were appointed to impugn, both in words and deeds, the Laws, Orders, and rights preſcribed by the Book of Common-Prayer; inſomuch as both his own wife by his procurement and conſent, refuſed after child-birth, to come, and give thanks in ſuch place of the Church, and in that ſolemn manner as thereby is preſcribed; and ſome other women alſo of that Town, by ſuch perſwaſion, and example, did uſe the like contempt.

17. Item, That ſundry times (or at leaſt once) when he communicated at the Lords Supper there, he ſate, or ſtood upon his feet; and divers others, induced by his perſwaſions, and example, both then and at other times did the like. And, that at other times there, or in other places where he hath communicated, both himſelf and others, (as he had appointed or perſwaded afore) did walk along, and receive the Sacrament of the Miniſter as they paſſed by him.

18. Item, That for theſe, and ſuch like diſorders, he was preſented to the Biſhop of Wigorne, his Ordinary. Before whom being convented in the Conſiſtory there, he ſpake to the juſtification, and upholding of ſuch doing of his, and of others: and there very publickly, and offenſively affirmed, and diſputed, That the Book of Common-Prayer, &c. is not eſtabliſhed by Law.

19. Item, That when by authority from the ſaid Biſhop, for his contempt he was ſuſpended from preaching, & ab omni functione Miniſterii, he appealed from the ſaid ſuſpenſion, yet did not proſecute within a year after, whereby (the cauſe being according to Law remitted again to the Biſhop) he, the ſaid Thomas Cartwright, according to the former proceedings, falling again into the ſentence of ſuſpenſion (which was alſo intimated, and made known unto him) nevertheleſs in contempt of the Authority Eccleſiaſtical, he hath preached at Warwick, Coventry, and elſewhere ſince the ſaid time.

20. Item, When one of his men-ſervants had committed Fornication, and gotten a baſtard in his houſe, he, taking upon him the authority of the Ordinary, did appoint unto the delinquent a publick form of penance, or ſatisfaction, in Saint Maries-Church at Warwick, and cauſed him to perform the ſame.

21. Item, Since his placing at Warwick he, with others (at ſuch times as they thought fit) have agreed to have, and ſo have had, divers publick Faſts, without the Queen her Authority, and have invited, and perſwaded both ſundry perſons to be there preſent, and alſo certain to preach, to the number of three, four, or five, ſucceſſively one after another, being all noted to be ſuch, as miſlike and impugn ſundry points of the Laws, Government, and Liturgy Eccleſiaſtical of this Church of England. In which Sermons, both he the ſaid Cartwright, and ſuch others alſo as then preached, did impugn, and enveigh againſt the preſent Laws, Government, Politie, and Liturgy Eccleſiaſtical of this Church of England.

22. Item, That from time to time, ſince his abode in Warwick, by his practice and dealing, he hath nouriſhed a faction, and heart-burning of one inhabitant there againſt another, ſevering them in his own, and his followers ſpeeches, by the names of The Godly, or Brethren favouring ſincerity, and The Profane.

23. Item, That he doth know, or credibly heard, who were the penners, printers, or ſome of the diſperſers of the ſeveral Libels, going under the

Anno Regin. Eliz. 13 Anno Dom. 1590.

the name of Martin Mar-Prelate, of the Demonſtration of Diſcipline, of Diotrephes, and ſuch like books, before it was known to Authority; and yet in favour of ſuch, and contempt of good laws, did not manifeſt the ſame to any who had authority to puniſh it.

24. Item, that being aſked his opinion of ſuch books, he anſwered thus in effect, or ſomthing tending this way, viz. (meaning the Biſhops, and others there touched) would not amend by grave books, and advertiſements, and therefore it was meet they ſhould thus be dealt with, to their further reproach and ſhame.

25. Item, that for, and in the behalf of the Church of England he penned, or procured to be penned, all or ſome part, of a little book intituled in one part, Diſciplina Eccleſiæ ſacrâ Verbo Dei deſcripta; and in the other part, Diſciplina Synodica ex Eccleſiarum uſu &c. And, after it was peruſed by others, whom he firſt acquainted therewith, he recommended the ſame to the cenſures, and judgements of moe brethren (being learned Preachers) and ſome others, aſſembled together by his means, for that and other like purpoſes: Which, after deliberation, and ſome alterations, was by them, or moſt of them, allowed, as the only lawfull Church government, and fit to be put in practice; and the wayes and means for the practiſing thereof in this Realm, were alſo then, or not long after, agreed or concluded upon by them.

26. Item, that for the better and more due practiſe of it within the ſpace of theſe ſeven, ſix, five, foure, three, two, or one year laſt paſt, the ſaid Thomas Cartwright, and ſundry others (as aforeſaid according to former appointment and determinations by them made) have met in Aſſemblies, termed Synods, more general (as at London, at Terms, and Parliament times; in Oxford at the Act; in Cambridg at the times of Commencement, and Sturbridge fair) and alſo more particular, and Provinciall Synods, and at Claſſes, or Conferences of certain ſelected Miniſters, in one, or moe places of ſundry ſeverall ſhires, as, Warwick, Northampton, Rotland, Oxford, Leiceſter, Cambridge, Norfolke, Suffolke, Eſſex, and others.

27. Item, that at ſuch Synods and Conferences, it hath been concluded, that all the Miniſters, which ſhould be received to be either of the ſaid generall Synods, or of any more particular and Provincial, or of a Claſſis, or Conference, ſhould ſubſcribe to the ſaid Diſcipline, that they did allow it, would promote it, practiſe it, and be governed by it. And according to the form of a ſchedule hereunto annexed, or ſuch like, both he the ſaid Thomas Cartwright, and many others, at ſundry, or ſome generall Aſſemblies, as at Provincial, and at ſeveral conferences, have within the ſaid time, ſubſcribed the ſame, or ſome part thereof.

28. Item, that at ſuch Synods and all other Aſſemblies, a moderator of that meeting, was firſt by him and them choſen, according to the preſcription of the ſaid book. And at ſome of ſuch meetings, and Aſſemblies amongſt other things, it was reſolved, and concluded; that ſuch particular conferences in ſeverall Shires ſhould be erected; how many perſons, and with what letters from every of them, ſhould be ſent to the generall Aſſembly; and that one of them, at their coming home to their Conference, ſhould make known the determinations of the generall Aſſembly, to be by every of them followed, and put in practice: which courſe in ſundry places of this Realm hath (within the time aforeſaid) been accordingly followed and performed.

29. Item,

29. Item, that he with others in ſome ſuch Claſſis or Conference; or in a Synod, or more generall Aſſembly holden, did treat, and diſpute (among other points) theſe ſix Articles conteined in another ſchedule annexed, and ſet down their reſolution, and determination of them.

30. Item, that he, with others aſſembled in ſuch a generall Aſſembly, or Synod at Cambridge, did conclude, and decree (as in another ſchedule annexed, or in ſome part thereof is conteined) which decrees were made known afterwards at Warwick, to ſundry Claſſes there by his means aſſembled, and allowed alſo by them then met together in the ſame or like form.

31. Item, that all ſuch ſeverall meetings, Synods, and Conferences, within the ſaid time, many other determinations, as well what ſhould be done and performed, or omitted; as alſo what ſhould be holden conſonant to Gods word, or diſagreeing from it, have been ſet down by the ſaid Thomas Cartwright and others. As namely, that all admitted to either Aſſembly ſhould ſubſcribe the ſaid book of Diſcipline, Holy, and Synodicall: that thoſe who were ſent from any Conference to a Synod, ſhould bring letters fiduciarie, or credence: that the laſt Moderator ſhould write them: that the ſuperſcription thereof ſhould be to a known man of the Aſſembly then to be holden: that no book made by any of them ſhould be put in print, but by conſent of the Claſſis at leaſt: that ſome of them muſt be earneſt, and ſome more milde and temperate, whereby there may be both of the ſpirit of Elias, and Elizeus: that all admitted amongſt them, ſhould ſubſcribe, and promiſe, to conform themſelves in their proceedings, adminiſtration of Sacraments, and of Diſcipline, to the form of that Book; and that they would ſubject themſelves to the cenſuring of the Brethren, both for doctrine and life: and laſtly, that upon occaſion, when any their brethren ſhall be ſent by them upon affairs of the Church (as to the great meetings, Parliament &c.) they all would bear their charges in common: that there might be no ſuperiority amongſt them, and that the Moderatorſhip (as it happ'ned) is not a ſuperiority, or honour, but a burden: that no profane writer, or any other, than Canonical Scripture may be alledged in Sermons: that they ſhould all teach, that the miniſtry of thoſe who did not preach, is no miniſtry, but a meer nullity: that it is not lawfull to take any oath, whereby a man may be driven to diſcover any thing penal to himſelf, or to his brother, eſpecially if he be perſwaded the matter to be lawfull, for which the puniſhment is like to be inflicted; or having taken it in this caſe, need not diſcover the very truth: that to a Biſhop, or other Officer eccleſiaſticall (as is uſed now in the Church of England) none obedience ought to be given, neither in appearing before them, in doing that which they command, nor in abſtaining from that which they inhibit: that in ſuch places as the moſt of the people favoured the cauſe of ſincerity, Elderſhip ſhould warily and wiſely be placed and eſtabliſhed, which Conſiſtory in ſome places hath been either wholy, or in part erected accordingly; yea, in ſome Colledges in the Univerſity, as he knoweth, hath heard, or verily beleeveth.

Theſe Articles were tendered to M^r. Cartwright in the Conſiſtory of Pauls, before John Almare Biſhop of London, the two Lord Chief Juſtices, Juſtice Gawdy, Sergeant Puckering (afterwards Lord keeper) and Attorney-Generall Popham.

28. Theſe

Anno Regin. Eliz. 33. Anno Dom. 1590.

28. These Commissioners did move him to give in his answer (the rather because the chief points in the Interrogatories were delivered in general terms unto him) and they severally assured him on their credits, that by the Laws of the Realm, he was to take his oath, and to answer as he was required. But Mr. Cartwright desired to be born withall; pleading, that he thought he was not bound by the laws of God so to do. Hereupon he was sent to the rest of his brethren to the Fleet, where he secretly, and silently took up his lodging; many admiring at the pannick peaceableness, and so quiet a calm, where so violent a tempest was feared to arise.

Mr. Cartwright refuseth to answer an oath.

Nov. 4.

29. Some soon after expected the appearance of the Presbyterian party, accounting it more valour to free, than to keep their friends from prison. The rather, because of a passage in a letter of Mr. Wigingtons to one Mr. Porter at Lancaster.

Wigington his ridling words.

> Mr. Cartwright is in the Fleet for the refusall of the oath, (as I hear) and Mr. Knewstubs is sent for, and sundry worthy Ministers are disquieted, who have been spared long. So that we look for some Bickering ere long, and then a Battle which cannot long endure.

Words variously expounded, as mens fancies directed them. Some conceived that this Bickering, and Battle did barely import a passive conflict, wherein their patience was to encounter the power of their adversaries, and to conquer by suffering. Parallel to the Apostles [a] words Without were fightings, meaning combats to wrastle with in many difficulties opposing their proceedings. Others expounded the words literally (not of a tame, but wilde Battle) and of some intended violence, as if shortly they would muster their (hitherto invisible) forces to storm the Fleet, and rescue their friends therein. A third sort beheld Wigington the writer of these words, as one, but of the soberer sort of distracted men, and therefore in vain do staid heads make serious comments on light mens random-expressions, where the knot is neither to be untied, nor cut, but cast away.

[a] 2 Cor. 7. 5.

30. Now the principall pillars of the Presbyterian party, being some in restraint, more in trouble, all in fear; applied themselves by their secret solicitors to James King of Scotland, and procured his letter to the Queen in their behalf, seconded with another to the same effect. They conceived so potent a Petitioner must needs prevail, especially in this juncture of time; the Queen having lately (since she put his mother to death) Adulced him with fair language, and kind carriage. This Letter was sent to one Mr. Johnson a Scotch Merchant in London, by him presented to the Queen, perused by her Majesty, and remitted to her Privie-Councell; but behold the Tenour thereof.

The king of Scots writs in favour of the Non-conformists.

34. 1591.

> Right Excellent, high and mighty Princess, our dearest Sister and Cousin in our heartiest manner, We recommend us unto you. Hearing of the apprehension of Mr. Udall and Mr. Cartwright, and certain other Ministers of the Evangel within your Realm; Of whose good erudition and faithfull travels in the Church, we hear a very credible commendation, howsoever that their diversity from the Bishops and others of your Clergy, in matters touching them in conscience hath been a mean by their dilation, to work them your misliking; at this present we cannot (weighing the duty which we owe to such as are afflicted for their conscience in that profession) but by our most effectuous and earnest Letter interpone us at your hands to stay any harder usage of them for that cause. Requesting you most earnestly, that that for our cause and intercession it may please you to let them be relieved of their present strait, and whatsoever further accusation or pursuit depending on that ground, respecting both their former merit, in setting forth the Evangell, the simplicity of their conscience in this defence which cannot well be, their let by compulsion, and the great slander which could not fail to fall out upon their further streighting for any such occasion. Which we assure us your zeal to Religion, besides the expectation we have of your good will to pleasure us, will willingly accord to our request, having such proofs from time to time of or like disposition to you in any matters which you recommend unto us, and thus right excellent, right high, and mighty Princes, our dear sister and Cousin, we commit you to Gods protection.

Edenburgh June 12. 1591.

This letter prevailed little with the Queen, nor do I finde that the king of Scotland was discontented thereat. Princes politickly understanding their mutual secret language (not to say silent signs) whose desires to forraign Princes for private persons carry this tacite reservation, if it may stand with the conveniency and pleasure of him to whom it is written. Besides, they know by their own experience, that often there is the least of themselves in their own letters, as granted meerly for quietness sake to satisfie the importunity of others.

Mr. Cartwright discharged the Star-Chamber by the intercession of Arch Bishop Whitgift.

31. One word from Arch. Bp. Whitgift befriended Mr. Cartwright more then both the letters from the King of Scotland. This Prelate reflecting on his abilities, and their ancient acquaintance in Trinity College: and remembring (as an honorable Adversary) they had brandished pens one against another, and considering that both of them now were well stricken in years, and (some will say) fearing the success in so tough a conflict, on Mr. Cartwrights generall promise to be quiet, procured his dismission out of the Starr-Chamber, and prison wherein he was confined. Henceforward Mr. Cartwright became very peaceable, not that he began to desert the cause, but the cause him. The Original state of the point of Non-conformity being much altered and disguised from its self, and many state businesses (which Mr. Cartwright disclaimed) by turbulent spirits shuffled into it.

A preface to the ensuing discourse.

32. Next followeth the just death of Hacket for his damnable Blasphemy, and I am sensible of a sad dilemma concerning the same. For not relating the story, will be interpreted favouring of him, and wronging the truth. Relating it, may be accounted gracing his impieties by recording them. And seeing it is hard for one soul to attend two things at once, some will say, no Author can write and detest, nor Reader peruse and detest these his blasphemies so at the same instant, but that there will be a short intervall betwixt them, yet long enough to have Piety wounded therein. However arming our selves and others with caution premised, we enter on this sorrowfull subject. The rather because the best may be bettered by the worst of men. When considering that naturall corruption in their hearts, is not less headstrong, but more bridled. Think not that Hacket and his two Companions were worse by nature then all others of the English nation. I tell you nay, for if Gods restraining grace be taken from us we shall all runn unto the same excess of riot.

The Character of Hacket.

33. This William Hackes was born at Oundale in Northhampton-shire, of so cruel and fierce a nature, that he is reported to have bit off, and eat down the Anno Dom. 1591. the noſe of his Schoolmaſter. A Maulſter by trade, which calling being too narrow for his active ſoul; He undertook to be a Diſcoverer of, & Informer againſt Recuſants. An imployment which often procured his admittance into the preſence of great perſons, when his betters were excluded. One of a bold and confident nature, who though but an invited gueſt where many Clergie men were preſent, would allwayes preſume to ſay grace and pray before them. A great ſtickler for the Geneva diſcipline, being very great with Wigginton and other the moſt violent of that faction. Always inculcating that ſome extraordinary courſe muſt be preſently taken with the obſtructors thereof. Once he deſperately took his dagger and violently ſtruck the ſame into the picture of the Queen, aiming at her heart therein by proportion. He pretended alſo to revelations, Immediate Raptures and diſcourſes with God, as alſo to buffetings of Satan, atteſting the truth thereof, with moſt direfull oaths and execrations.

His monſtrous opinions and practiſes.

34. One Argument Hacket uſed to alledge to prove his own Invulnerability, Becauſe he profered leave to any one to kill him that would. The cunning Impoſtor knowing full well that it was death for any to do it, being ſecured from ſuch violence, not by any ſecret quality in himſelf, but by the good laws of the Queen, againſt whom he ſo bitterly enveighed. He railed alſo againſt the Arch-Biſhop Whitgift and Chancellour Hatton, with other of the Privie Councellors, pretending himſelf ſent from Heaven to reform Church and State, and bring in a new diſcipline into both by extraordinary means.

Proclaimed by his two Prophets.

35. Afterwards he gave it out, that the principall ſpirit of the Meſſias reſted in him, and had two Attendants. Edmund Coppinger (the Queens ſervant and one of good deſcent) for his prophet of mercy. And Henry Arthington a York-ſhire Gentleman for his prophet of Judgment. Theſe proclaimed out of a Cart in Cheap-ſide, that Chriſt was come in Hacket, with his fan in his hand, to purge the godly from the wicked, with many other precedent, concomitant and conſequent impieties. For who can otherwiſe conceive but ſuch a prince-principall of Darkneſs muſt be proportionably attended with a black guard of monſtrous Opinions and expreſſions. They cryed alſo, Repent England, Repent. Good counſell for all that heard, but beſt for them that gave it. With much adoe (ſuch the preſs of people) they got home to broken-wharf where Hacket lay, and next day all three were ſent to Bridewell, though ſome conceived Bedlam the more proper place for them. And ſome dayes after, Hacket being ſolemnly arraigned before the Judges at Weſtminſter, demeaned himſelf very ſcornfully, but was found guilty on a double inditement and condemned.

An adventure with more boldneſs then diſcretion.

36. During his impriſonment in Bridewell, one Dr. Childerly Rector of St. Dunſtans in the Eaſt repaired unto him, and proffered to gripe arms with him and try the wriſts, which Hacket unwillingly ſubmitted to do. Though otherwiſe boaſting himſelf invulnerable and impenetrable. The Doctor (though with ſome difficulty, Hacket being a foul ſtrong lubber, yet) fairly twiſted his wriſts almoſt to the Breaking thereof, but not to the bowing of him to any confeſſion or remorſe. Whilſt the other preſently haſteth home to his houſe, lock'd himſelf up in his Study, and with faſting and prayer beg'd pardon of God for his pride and boldneſs, that having neither promis'd precept, or precedent for his practiſe in ſcripture, he ſhould adventure on ſuch a triall wherein juſtly he might have been worſted for his preſumption, and diſcreet men will more commend the relenting tenderneſs of his heart, then the ſlight and ſtrength of his hands.

Hacket's execution.

37. Hacket was brought to the Gibbet near to the Crosse in Cheap-side, and there belched forth most blasphemous execrations, till the halter stopped his breath. I know what one Lawyer pleadeth in his behalf, though it be little credit to be the Advocate of such a Client, That the Bishops had made him madd with persecuting of him. Sure it was, if he were madd, not any learning but overmuch pride made him so, and sure it is, he discovered no distemper in other particulars, personating at least wise, if not performing all things with a composed gravity. But there is a madness which Physicians count most uncurable, and call it Modesta Insania, when one is mad, as to one particular point alone, whilst serious and sober in all other things. Whether Hacket were not toucht with this or no, I will not decide, but leave him to stand or fall, to his own master. Coppinger died in Bridewell, starving himself (as it is said) by wilfull abstinence. Arthington (the prophet of judgment) lived to prove the object of Gods and the Queens mercy, and printed a plain book of his hearty repentance. Happy herein that he met with a generall belief of his serious sorrow and sincere amendment.

Anno Dom. 1591. Anno Regin. Eliz. 34.

This accident unhappily improved against him the Nonconformists.

38. This businesse of Hacket happened very unseasonably for the Presbyterians. True it is, they as cordially detested his blasphemies as any of the Episcopall party. And such of them as loved Hacket the Nonconformist, abhorred Hacket the Heretick, after he had mounted to so high a pitch of Impiety. But (besides the glutenous nature of all aspersions to stick where they light) they could not wash his odium so fast from themselves, but their Adversaries were as ready to rub it on again. This rendred them at this time so hated at Court, That for many moneths together no Favourite durst present a petition in their behalf to the Queen, being loath to lose himself, to save others, so offended was her Majesty against them.

Mr Stone by his confession discovereth the meeting of the Brethren, with the circumstances thereof.

39. The same day wherein Hacket was executed, Thomas Stone, Parson of Warkton in Northhampton-shire (by vertue of an Oath tendered him the day before by the Queens Atturney, and solemnly taken by him) was examined by the Examiner for the Starr-Chamber in Grayes Inne, from six of the clock in the morning, till seaven at night, to answer unto thirty three Articles, but could only effectually depose to these which follow, faithfully by me transcribed out of a confession written with his own hand, and lately in my Possession.

July 27.

1 Interrog.

Anno Regin Eliz. 34. Anno Dom. 1591.

1. Interrog.

Who and how many assembled and met together with the said Defendents, T. C. H. E. E. S. &c. all or any of them where, when, how often &c?

The answer of T. S. to the Interrog. touching the Circumstances of 1 Places of meeting

- 1 Greater
  - 1 In London — 1 Travers, 2 Egertons, 3 Gardeners, 4 Barbers — Houses
  - 2 In Cambridge S^t Johns College
- 2 Lesse,
  - 1 In Northampton — 1 Johnsons, 2 Snapes — Houses
  - 2 In Kettering or near it — 1 Dammes, 2 Stones — Houses

2 Times.
1. Since the beginning of the last Parliament.
2. Sundry times at London, how oft he remember'd not.
3. Sundry times at Northampton, how oft not remembred.
4. Sundry times at Kettering, how not remembred.
5. Once at Cambridge, about Sturbridge fair time was 1. or 2. years.
6. Once at London, a little before M^r Cartwright was committed at M^r Gardeners house.
7. Once at this Deponents house, the certain time not remembred.

3 persons

1 Meeting in London joyntly or severally.
- M^r Travers, M^r Clark, M^r Egerton, M^r Gardener, M^r Barber, M^r Brown, M^r Somerscales
- M^r Cartwright, M^r Chatterton, M^r Gyfford, M^r Allen, M^r Edmunds, M^r Gylybrand.
- M^r Culverwell, M^r Oxenbridge, M^r Barbon, M^r Fludd, This Deponent.

2 Meeting in Camb.
- M^r Chatterton and others of Cambridge, M^r Cartwright, M^r Gyfford, M^r Allen
- M^r Snape, M^r Fludde, This Deponent.

3 Meeting in Northampton joyntly or severally.
- M^r Johnson, M^r Snape, M^r Sybthorpe, M^r Edwards, M^r Fludde, This Deponent
- M^r Spicer, M^r Fleshware, M^r Harrison, M^r Littleton, M^r Williamson, M^r Rushbrook
- M^r Baxter, M^r Barbon, M^r King, M^r Proudfome, M^r Massie, M^r Bradshaw

4 Meeting at Kettering or nere to it.
- M^r Dammes, M^r Pattison, M^r Okes, M^r Baxter
- M^r Rushbrook, M^r Atkinson, M^r Williamson, M^r Massie.
- This Deponent.

Anno Dom. 1591. Anno Regin. Eliz. 34.

2 Interrog.

Who called these Assemblies, by what Authority, how, or in what sort?

Answer.

That he knew not by whom they were called, neither knew he any other Authority therein, saving a voluntary, or free motion, one giving another Intelligence as occasion served, sometimes by letters, and sometimes by word of mouth.

3 Interrog.

Who were Moderators in them, and what their Office?

Answer.

That he remembred not who where Moderators in any meeting particularly, saving once at Northampton, when M^r Johnson was admonished, and that was either himself, or M^r Snape, he knew not well whether.

4 Interrog.

What things were debated in those meetings or Assemblies?

Answer.

That the things Chiefly and most often considered of in those Assemblies were these. First, The subscription to the Book of Common-Prayer; how farr it might be yielded unto, rather then any should forgoe his Ministery. Secondly, The Book of Discipline was often perused, discussed &c. Thirdly, Three petitions or supplications were agreed upon to be drawn. First, to her Majesty. Secondly, to the Lords of the Councell. Thirdly, to the Bishops. The things debated of in particular, he remembred not more then these. First, the perfecting of the Book of Discipline, and purpose to subscribe to it at Cambridge. Secondly, this question disputed, whether it were convenient for M^r Cartwright to reveal the Circumstances of the Conference, a little before he was committed. Thirdly, The admonishing of M^r Johnson once at Northampton. Fourthly, The debating of this question, whether the Books called Apocrypha were warrantable to be read publickly in the Church as the Canonical Scriptures.

5 Interrog.

Whether any Censures were exercised, what kinds, when, where, upon whom, by whom, for what cause?

Answer.

That he never saw any Censure exercised, saving admonition once upon M^r Johnson of Northampton, for misdemeaning himself in his conversation, to the Scandall of his Calling, neither was that used with any kinde of Authority, but by a voluntary yielding unto it, and approving of it, as well in him that was admonished, as in him which did admonish.

6 Interrog.

Anno Dom. 1591.

6 Interrog.

Whether any of the ſaid Defendents had moved or perſwaded any to refuſe an Oath, and in what caſe &c ?

Anſwer.

That he never knew any of the Defendents to uſe words of perſwaſion to any to refuſe an Oath; only Mr Snape ſent him down in writing certain reaſons drawn out of the Scripture, which moved him to refuſe the generall Oath, ex officio, which I ſtood perſwaded, that he ſent to none other end, but to declare that he refuſed not to ſwear, upon any contempt, but only for Conſcience ſake.

I have inſiſted the longer on this Depoſition, becauſe the firſt and fulleſt that I finde in the kinde thereof, conteining their Claſſes more formally ſetled in Northampton-ſhire, then any where elſe in England. For as the weſt part of that ſhire is obſerved to be the higheſt place of England, as appeareth by the Rivers riſing there, and running thence to the four winds; ſo was that County a probable place (as the middeſt of the land) for the Preſbyterian Diſcipline, there erected, to derive it ſelf into all the quarters of the kingdom.

40. But when the news of Mr Stones anſwer was brought abroad, he was generally cenſured by thoſe of his party, as well ſuch as were yet at liberty, conceiving themſelves endangered by his diſcovery, as by thoſe already in priſon, complaining that he added affliction to their bonds. Yea his embracing a different courſe from the reſt, caſt an Aſperſion on others of his ſide, as leſs ſound in Judgement, or tender in conſcience, becauſe peremptorily concealing, what he thought fitting to confeſs. Many that highly eſteemed him before, hereafter accounted him no pretious but a counterfet ſtone: So that he found it neceſſary in his own vindication to impart the reaſons of his Confeſſion to ſuch as condemned him, if not for a Traytor, at leaſt for a Goward in the Cauſe. The reaſons why Mr Stone made this confeſſion againſt the hope and expectation of the Breth.

1. [a] He judged it unlawfull to refuſe an oath, limitted and bounded within the compaſs of the conferences, being required before a lawfull Magiſtrate in a Plea for the Prince to a lawfull end. 1, to trie out the truth in a doubtfull fact, ſuſpected and feared to be dangerous, both to Church and Common-Weal, but ſuch was that oath which was tendered to him, ergo.
2. He being lawfully ſworn, judged it unlawfull to be mute, much more to ſpeak any untruth.
3. If he had not been urged by oath to reveal, yet did he judge that ſilence unlawfull, which juſtly cauſeth ſuſpition of evill, as of Treaſon, Rebellion, Sedition, &c.
4. He judged that concealment unlawfull which was not only ſcandalous, but alſo dangerous, as this that might occaſion and incourage wicked perſons to hide their Complices in their worſt attempts.
5. He judged that the clearing of a doubtfull fact, requireth the clearing of the Circumſtances, which cannot be cleared till they be known.
6. He judged that ſilence unlawfull, which leaveth the truth friendleſs, or few friends when ſhe hath need of many.

[a] Carefully by me tranſcribed out of his own Letters to his friends.

7. He

Anno Dom. 1591. Anno Regni Eliz. 33.

7. He judged it a point or note of Puritanisme for any to stand so upon the integrity of their own Actions, as that they should not be doubted of, suspected, examined, censured &c.

8. He saw no probability nor possibility in reason to have the circumstances longer concealed. 1. Because many of them are already made known, partly by the letters and writings of the B. in Bonds, which have been intercepted, partly also by certain false brethren, and lastly by certain faithfull, but weak brethren, whose confessions are to be seen under their own hands. 2. Because the Magistrate is resolutely set to search them out, and lastly, because divers are to be called and to answer upon Oath, which approve not the concealing of them.

9. He judged the inconveniences which come by the concealing, to be (if not moe in number) yet greater in weight, and more inevitable then those that come by revealings, which as it may appear in some of the former Reasons alledged to prove the unlawfulness of concealing: so may it further appear in these that follow.

10. The good name and credit of any (of a Minister much more) ought to be dearer to him, and to all those that love him then his liberty &c. but by this concealing the credit of many good Ministers is eclipsed.

11. This concealing hath caused the continuance of some in bonds and imprisonment hitherto, would cause others to be committed, and withall causeth suspition of evills, Treason, Rebellion, Sedition, &c. and thereby also evill report, slander &c.

12. As by concealing the aforesaid suspition and slander lieth still upon us all which have been in these actions: so doth the same grow every day more grievous by the wicked attempts of hypocrites, and prophane persons, which carry the name of Puritans, Precisians &c. as those of late in Cheap-side.

13. Although it be very like, that the revealing will bring punishment upon the rest, yet is it not certain nor necessary, but the concealing doth certainly cause suspition, slander &c.

14. The concealing argueth either some guiltiness, or at the least some faintness and fear to be seen or known in these Actions.

15. It leaveth the truth (which now travaileth) poor, naked, destitute, and void of friends, it casteth the care, credit, countenance, defence and maintenance of it upon those few which are in prison, which ought to be supported and maintained by all.

16. It leaveth the burden upon eight or nine mens shoulders, which ought to be eased by many.

What satisfaction this gave to his party I know not, sure I am the Bishops till his dying day beheld him as an ingenuous man, carrying his conscience with the reason thereof in his own brest, and not pinning it on the president of any other: whereupon they permitted him peaceably to possess his parsonage, (being none of the meanest) though he continued a stiffe Non-conformist, only quietly enjoying his own opinion. Indeed he was a down-right Nathanael, if not guilty of too much of the dove in him: faulty in that defect, wherein more offend in the excess, not minding the world so much, as became a provident parent. But we leave him when we have told the Reader, that he was bred a Student in Christ-Church, and was [a] Proctor of Oxford, Anno 1580, and died quietly an old man Anno 1617 at Warkton in Northampton-shire.

[a] Brian Twine in Appendice Ant. Ac. Oxon.

41. Thus

Anno Dom. 1591.

41. Thus one link being slipp'd out, the whole chain was quickly broken and scattered. Stone his discovery marr'd for the future all their formal meetings, as Classically, or Synodically methodized. If any of these Ministers hereafter came together, it was for visits, not visitations; to enjoy themselves, not enjoyn others orders to be observed by them. Synodicall meetings finally blasted.

42. Whereas Mr Stone confesseth their meeting in Cambridge, with Mr Chatterton and others, I finde some of these others [a] elsewhere specified, namely Mr Perkins, and Mr Thomas Harrison, afterwards the reverend Vice-Master of Trinity-Colledge, both of them concurring, though neither of them very active in this cause. Mr Perkins, whatsoever his judgement was in point of Church-discipline, never publickly medled with it in his preaching; and, being pressed by others about the lawfullness of subscription, he declined to manifest his opinion therein, glad to enjoy his own quiet, and to leave others to the liberty of their own consciences. Solomons observation found truth in him, [b] When a mans wayes please the Lord, he maketh even his enemies to be at peace with him; whose piety procured freedom to his preaching, and fair respect to his person, even from those who in affections differed, and in opinion dissented from him: for all held Perkins for a Prophet; I mean for a painfull, and faithfull dispenser of Gods will in his word. Perkin's piety procures his peace.

[a] Dr Bancroft in his book of dangerous positions chap. 7. p. 39.

[b] Prov. 16. 7.

43. But I am weary of writing these sad dissentions in our Church, and fain would pass over to some more pleasing subject: from the renting of Gods Church, to the repairing of it, from the confounding thereof, to the founding, and building, of some eminent place for learning, and religion. But finding none of that nature this very year in England, I am fain to seek one beyond the seas, and at last have lighted on the University, and Colledge of Dublin, which now began to be erected. Transition to a more pleasant subject.

44. Anciently Ireland was the Seminary of Saints, people from all parts of Christendome repairing thither, there to finde, and thence to fetch the perfect pattern of Monastical devotion. Many hundred years after, namely, in the Reign of King Edward the Second, Alexander Bickner, Arch-Bishop of Dublin, obtained licence of the Pope, to erect an University in Dublin; but the designe succeeded not according to his desire, and others expectation. Now at the last the same was effected by Royall Authority, and a Colledge there erected, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity. This mindeth me of a pleasant passage: In the Reign of King Henry the eighth, it was enjoyned, that all Churches dedicated to S[t] Thomas Becket, should be new named, and consigned over to some real Saint. Now whilest country people sate in consultation, what new Saint such Churches should assume, being divided in their opinions, to whom the same should be dedicated, an old man gave this advice, Even dedicate it to the Holy Trinity, which will last and continue, when all other Saints may chance to be taken away. The foundation of an University in Dublin.

45. Many eminent persons concurred to advance so worthy a work. And because we are to speak of a Colledge, wherein seniority takes place, we will rank these persons, not according to their dignity, but time of their benefaction. The severall Benefactors thereto.

1. Henry Usher, then Arch-Deacon of Dublin, bred in Cambridge (afterward Arch-Bishop of Armagh, and uncle to James Usher the present Arch-Bishop thereof) took a journey with much danger into England, and with more difficulty procured the Mort-main from
2. Queen Elizabeth, who graciously granted it, naming the Corporation, Collegium Sanctæ ac Individuæ Trinitatis, ex fundatione Reginæ Elizabethæ, juxta Dublin.

Anno Dom. 1591. Anno Regni Eliz. 33

3. William Cecil Baron of Burleigh, and treasurer of England, is appointed in the Mort-main first Chancellour of the University, as being an active instrument to procure the same.

4. S^r William Fitz-Williams, Lord Deputy of Ireland (whose Arms are deservedly graven over the Colledge gate) issued out his letters for collection to all the Counties in Ireland, to advance so good a designe; and the Irish (though then generally Papists) were very bountifull thereunto.

5. M^r Luke Chaloner, Fellow of Trinity Colledge in Cambridge, received, and disbursed the monies, had the oversight of the fabrick, which he faithfully procured to be finished, meriting that verse inscribed on his fair monument in Dublin Colledge Chappel, built by his * daughter.

* Since married to the Arch-Bishop of Armagh.

Conditur hoc Tumulo Chaloneri triste Cadaver,
Cujus ope, & precibus, conditur ista domus.

This Tomb within it here contains,
Of Chaloner the sad Remains.
By whose prayer, and helping hand,
This House erected here doth stand.

6. The Major, and Aldermen of Dublin, bestowed on the Colledge the sight thereof (with some accommodations of considerable grounds about it) being formerly a Religious house, termed Allhallows, which at the suppression of Abbies was bestowed on their Corporation.

7. Adam Loftus, Fellow of Trinity Colledge in Cambridge, at this present Arch-Bishop of Dublin, and Chancellour of Ireland, was the first Master of the Colledge, holding it as an honorarie title, though not so much to receive credit by, as to return lustre to the place.

8. S^r Warham Saint-Leger, was very bountifull in paying yearly pensions, for the maintenance of the first students thereof, before the Colledge was endowed with standing revenues.

9. S^r Francis Shane, a mere Irish man, but good Protestant, was a principal Benefactor, and kept this infant-foundation from being strangled in the birth thereof.

10. Robert Devereux Earl of Essex, Lord Lievetenant of Ireland, and second Chancellour of this University, bestowed at the intreaty of the Students of this Colledge, a Cannoneers pay, and the pay of certain dead places of Souldiers, to the value wellnigh of foure hundred pounds a year, for the Scholars maintenance, which continued for some years.

11. King James, that great Patrone of learning, to compleat all, confirmed the revenues of this Colledge in perpetuum, endowing it with a great proportion of good land in the Province of Ulster.

Thus thorough many hands this good work at last was finished, the first stone whereof was laid May 13. 1591. and in the year 1593. Schollars were first admitted, and the first of them James Usher, since Arch-Bishop of Armagh, that mirrour of learning, and religion, never to be named by me, without thanks to him, and to God for him. Nor must it be forgotten, that, what Josephus [a] reports of the Temple built by Herod, καὶ ἐκεῖνον τὸν καιρὸν οἰκοδομουμένου τοῦ ναοῦ, τὰς μὲν ἡμέρας οὐχ ὑετὸν, ἐν δὲ ταῖς νυξὶ γίνεσθαι τοὺς ὄμβρους ἐφ' ὅσον ἐκ μὲν ἡμέρας ἐκαλύπτετο τὸ ἔργον, during the time of the building of the Temple, it rained not in the day time, but in the night, that the showrs might not hinder the work; I say, what by him is reported, hath been avouched to me by witnesses above exception, that the same happened here from the founding, to the finishing of this Colledge; the officious Heavens always smiling by day (though often weeping by night) till the work was completed.

[a] Antiq. Jud. lib. 15. cap. 20.

Anno Dom. 1591.

46. The whole Species of the University of Dublin, was for many years preserved in the Individuum of this one Colledge. But since this instrument hath made better musick, when (what was but a monochord before) hath got two other smaller strings unto it, the addition of New-Colledge, and Kildare-Hall. What remaineth? but that I wish that all those worthy Divines bred therein, may have their [a] Doctrine drop as the rain; and their speech distill as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb, and as the showrs upon the grass. The addition of two emissarie Hostells.

a Deut. 32. 2.

47. Let none censure this for a digression from our Church-History of England. His discourse that is resident on the Son, doth not wholy wander from the Father, seeing none will deny, but that proles is pars parentis, the childe is part of the parent. Dublin University, was a Colonia deducta from Cambridge, and particularly from Trinity Colledg, therein (one motive perchance to the name of it) as may appear by the ensuing Catalogue of the Provosts thereof. Dublin a Colonie of Cambridge.

1. Adam Loftus, Fellow of Trinity Colledge, first Provost.
2. Walter Travers, Fellow of the same Colledge, second Provost,
3. Henry Alvy, Fellow of S^t Johns Colledge in Cambridge, third Provost.
4. S^r William Temple, who wrote a learned Comment on Ramus, Fellow of Kings Colledge, fourth Provost.
5. Joseph Stede, Fellow of Christ-Colledge in Cambridge, chosen Provost, but refused to accept it.
6.
7. William Chapel, Fellow of the same Colledge, seventh Provost.

Know also that this University did so Cantabrize, that she imitated her in the successive choice of her Chancellours, the daughter dutifully approving, and following the judgement of her mother therein.

48. This year was fatall to no eminent Protestant Divine, and I finde but one of the Romish perswasion dying therein; Arthur (shall I say?) or Laurence Faunt, born of worshipfull parentage at Folston in Leicester-shire, bred in Merton-Colledge in Oxford, whence he fled (with M^r Pots, his Tutor) to Lovain, and never more returned into England. From Lovain he removed to Paris, thence to Minchen, an University in Bavaria (where William the Duke exhibited unto him) thence to Rome, where he was admitted a Jesuite. Hence Pope Gregory the thirteenth sent him to be governor of the Jesuits Colledge at Posna in Poland, newly erected by Sigismund King thereof. Yea, so great was the fame of this Faunt, that (if his own letters may be beleeved) three Princes courted him at once, to come to them. He altered his Christian name of Arthur, because (as his [b] kinsman tells us) no Kalender-Saint was ever of that name, and assumed the name of Laurence, dying this year at Vilna in Lituania, leaving books of his own making, much prized by those of his own profession. The death of Arthur Faunt.

b Burton in Description of Leicester-shire pag. 10.

49. Now began the heat, and height, of the sad contest betwixt M^r Richard Hooker Master, and M^r Walter Travers Lecturer of the Temple. We will be the larger in the relating thereof, because we behold their actions not as the deeds of private persons, but the publick Champions of their The contest betwixt Hooker and Travers.

Anno Dom. 1591. Anno Regni Eliz. 34

Party. Now as an Army is but a Champion diffused, so a Champion may be said to be an Army contracted. The Prelaticall Party wrought to the height in and for Hooker, nor was the Presbyterian power less active in assisting Mr Travers, both sides being glad they had gotten two such eminent Leaders, with whom they might engage with such credit to their cause.

Hooker his Character.

50. Hooker was born in Devon-shire, bred in Oxford, Fellow of Corpus Christi Colledge; one of a solid judgement, and great reading. Yea, such the depth of his learning, that his Pen was a better Bucket than his Tongue to draw it out. A great defender both by preaching and writing of the Discipline of the Church of England, yet never got (nor cared to get) any eminent dignity therein, conscience, not covetousness engaging him in the controversie. Spotless was his conversation, and though some dirt was cast, none could stick on his reputation. Mr Travers was brought up in Trinity Colledge in Cambridge, and because much of Church matter depends upon him, I give the Reader the larger account of his carriage.

Travers takes his orders beyond Seas.

51. Travers meeting with some discontents in the Colledge after the death of Dr Beamond (in whose time he was elected fellow) took occasion to travail beyond Seas, and comming to Geneva, contracted familiarity with Mr Beza, and other forraign divines, with whom he by letters continued correspondency till the day of his death. Then returned he and commenced Batchelor of Divinity in Cambridge, and after that went beyond sea again, and at Antwerp was ordained minister, by the Presbytery there, whose Testimoniall I have here faithfully transcribed out of the Originall.

Quam multis de causis sit & æquum & consultum unumquemque eorum qui ad verbi Dei ministerium asciscuntur, vocationis suæ testimonium habere, Asserimus, coacta Antuerpiæ ad 8. Maij 1578. duodecim Ministrorum verbi cum totidem fere senioribus Synodo, præstantissimum pietate & eruditione virum ac fratrem reverendum Doctorem Gualterum Traverseum, omnium qui aderant suffragiis ardentissimis, votis, consueto ritu fuisse in sancto verbi Dei ministerio institutum, precibusque ac manuum impositione confirmatum. Postero autem die post sabbatum ab illo in frequenti Anglorum coetu concionem, rogante eo qui a Synodo delegatus erat Ministro, propensissimisque totius Ecclesiæ animis acceptum fuisse. Quod quidem Domini ac fratris nostri colendi apud Anglos Ministerium, ut benignitate sua Deus omnipotens donorum suorum incrementis & amplissimo functionis ejus fructu ornare dignetur, enixè precamur per Iesum Christum Amen. Dat. Antwerpiæ 14. Maij. 1578.

Det. Logelerius Vilerius verbi Dei Minister & Johannes Hochelcus verbi Dei minister.

Johannes Taffinus Verbi Dei Minister.

Thus put in orders by the Presbytery of a forrain Nation, he continued there some years, preached (with Mr Cartwright) unto the English factory of Merchants at Antwerpe, untill at last he came over into England, and for seven years together became Lecturer in the Temple (refusing all presentative preferment to decline subscription) and lived domestick chaplain in the house of the Lord Treasurer Cicel, being Tutor for a time to Robert his son, afterwards Earl of Sarisbury. And although there was much heaving and shuffing at him (as one disaffected to the discipline) yet Gods goodness, his friends greatness, and his own honesty, kept him, (but with much difficulty) in his ministeriall imployment.

52. Yea

Anno Regis Eliz. 34 Anno Dom. 1591.

52. Yea now so great grew the credit and reputation of Mr Travers, that (by the advice of Mr Andrew Melvin) he and Mr Cartwright were solemnly sent for, to be Divinity professors in the University of St Andrews, as by this autograph (which I have in my hands, and here think fit to exemplifie) may plainly appear.

He with Mr Cartwright invited to be Divinity professors in St. Andrews.

MAgno quidem, fratres charissimi, gaudio nos afficit constantia vestra, & invicta illa animi fortitudo, quâ contra Satanæ imperium & reluctantem Christi imperio mundi fastum armavit vos domini spiritus, in asserenda apud populares vestros Ecclesiæ suæ disciplina. Sed permolestum tamen nobis semper fuit, pertinaci inimicorum odio & violentia factum esse, ut cum latere & solum subinde vertere cogimini, minus aliquanto fructus ex laboribus vestris ad pios omnes perveniat, quam si docendo publicè & concionando destinatam ecclesiæ Dei operam navare licuisset. Hoc quia in patria vobis negatum videbamus, non aliud nobis magis in votis erat, quàm ut exulanti in vobis Christo hospitium aliquod in ultima Scotia præberetur. Quod ut fieri non incommodè possit, speramus longo nos conatu perfeciisse.

Vetus est & non ignobilis apud nos Academia Andreana; in quâ cùm aliæ artes, tum philosophia imprimis ita hucusque culta fuit, ut quod ab exteris nationibus peteretur, parum nobis, aut nihil in eo genere deesset. Verum divina illa sapientia, quam vel solam, vel præcipuam colere christianos decet, neglecta diu in scholis jacuit; quod à prima statim religionis instauratione, summus omnium ardor exstaret in erudienda plebe; in aliis ad sacrum verbi ministerium instituendis paucissimi laborarent: non leve ut periculum subesset, ne (quod propitius nobis Deus avertat) concionatorum aliquando inopia periret, quod tanta cum spe in hominum animos conjectum est veræ pietatis semen.

Animadvertit hoc tandem ecclesiasticus Senatus, & cum rege regnique proceribus diligenter egit, ne hanc officij sui & solicitudinis partem desiderari amplius paterentur. Placuit & summo omnium applausu in proximis ordinum comitiis decretum est, ut quod amplitudine ceteris & opulentia collegium præstat theologiæ perpetuo studiis consecretur: utque ad verbi Dei ministerium nemo admittatur, nisi linguarum, utriusque testamenti & locorum communium curriculo prius confecto: constat autem quadriennii spacio à quinque professoribus posse. Ex hoc numero adhuc desunt Thomas Cartwrigtus & Gualterus Traversus: reliquos nobis domi ecclesia nostra suppeditabit. Messem hic videtis singulari vestra eruditione & pietate non indignam. Ad quam pius vos princeps & proceres nostri; ad quam boni vos omnes & fratres vestri; ad quam Christi vos ecclesia & Christus ipse operarios invitat. Reliquum est, ut humanissimè vocantes sequi velitis; & ad docendi hanc provinciam, vobis honorificam, ecclesiæ Dei salutarem maturetis; magnas à principe, majores à Christi ecclesia, maximas & immortales à maximo & immortali Deo gratias inituri. Quod ut sine mora facere dignemini, per eum ipsum vos etiam atque etiam obtestamur, cui acceptum ferri debet, quod ecclesiæ filii sui prodesse tantopere possitis. Valete. Edinburgi.

Ja Glasgney Academiæ
Cancelarius. Alaynus Rector.
Thomas Smetonius Decanus

Andreas Melvinus Collegij præfectus
Mr David Wems minister Glascovienſis.

Anno Dom. 1591. Anno Regni Elizæ 34.

This proffer both joyntly refuſed, with return of their moſt affectionate thanks, and ſuch who know leaſt are moſt bold in their conjectures, to adventure at the reaſons of their refuſall. As that they would not leave the Sun on their backs, and remove ſo far North, or they were diſcouraged with the ſlenderneſs of the ſalary aſſigned unto them. In plain truth they were loath to leave, and their friends loath to be left by them, conceiving their pains might as well be beſtowed in their native Country; and Travers quietly continued Lecturer at the Temple till Mr Hooker became the Maſter thereof.

The character of Hooker as to his preaching.

53. Mr Hooker his voice was low, ſtature little, geſture none at all, ſtanding ſtone-ſtill in the Pulpit, as if the poſture of his body were the emblem of his minde, unmoveable in his opinions. Where his eye was left fixed at the beginning, it was found fixed at the end of his Sermon: In a word, the doctrine he delivered, had nothing but it ſelf to garniſh it. His ſtile was long and pithy, driving on a whole flock of ſeverall Clauſes before he came to the cloſe of a ſentence. So that when the copiouſneſs of his ſtile, met not with proportionable capacity in his auditors, it was unjuſtly cenſured, for perplext, tedious, and obſcure. His ſermons followed the inclination of his ſtudies, and were for the moſt part on controverſies, and deep points of School Divinity.

The deſcription of Travers.

54. Mr Travers his utterance was gracefull, geſture plauſible, matter profitable, method plain, and his ſtile carried in it indolem pietatis a Genius of grace flowing from his ſanctified heart. Some ſay, that the congregation in the Temple, ebb'd in the fore noon, and flowed in the afternoon, and that the auditory of Mr Travers was far the more numerous, the firſt occaſion of emulation betwixt them. But ſuch as knew Mr Hooker, knew him to be too wiſe to take exception at ſuch trifles, the rather becauſe the moſt judicious is always the leaſt part in all auditories.

They claſh about matters of Doctrine.

55. Here might one on Sundayes have ſeen, almoſt as many writers as hearers. Not only young ſtudents, but even the graveſt Benchers (ſuch as Sr Edw. Cook and Sr James Altham then were) were not more exact in taking inſtructions from their clients, then in writing notes from the mouths of their Miniſters. The worſt was, theſe two preachers though joyned in affinity (their neareſt kindred being married together) acted with different principles, and claſhed one againſt another. So that what Mr Hooker delivered in the forenoon, Mr Travers confuted in the afternoon. At the building of Solomons Temple 1 King. 6. 7. neither hammer, nor axe, nor tool of iron was heard therein. Whereas, alaſs in this Temple, not only much knocking was heard, but (which was the worſt) the nailes and pins, which one maſter-builder drave in, were driven out by the other. To paſs by leſſer differences betwixt them about Predeſtination.

Hooker maintained.	Travers defended.
The Church of Rome, though not a pure and perfect, yet is a true Church, ſo that ſuch who live and die therein * upon their repentance of all their ſins of ignorance may be ſaved.	The Church of Rome is no true Church at all, ſo that ſuch as live and die therein, holding Juſtification in part by works, cannot be ſaid by the Scriptures to be ſaved.

* Being weak, ignorant, and ſeduced.

Thus much diſturbance was cauſed to the diſquieting of peoples conſciences, the diſgrace of the ordinance, the advantage of the common enemy, and the diſhonour of God himſelf.

56. Here

Anno Regin. Eliz. 34. Anno Dom. 1591.

56. Here Arch-Biſhop Whitgift interpoſed his power, and ſilenced Travers from preaching either in the Temple or any where elſe. It was laid to his charge: 1. That he was no lawfull ordained Miniſter according to the Church of England. 2ly. That he preached here without licence. 3ly. That he had broken the order (made in the 7th year of her Majeſties reign. Wherein it was provided, that erroneous Doctrine, if it came to be publickly taught, ſhould not be publickly refuted, but that notice thereof ſhould be given to the Ordinary, to hear and determine ſuch cauſes, to prevent publick diſturbance.

Travers is ſilenced by the Arch-Biſhop.

57. As for Travers, his ſilencing, many which were well pleaſed with the deed done, were offended at the manner of doing it. For all the Congregation on a Sabbath in the after noon were aſſembled together, their attention prepared, the Cloath (as I may ſay) and napkins were laied, yea, the gueſts ſet, and their knives drawn for their ſpirituall repaſt, when ſuddenly as Mr Travers was going up into the pulpit, a ſorry fellow ſerved him with a letter, prohibiting him to preach any more. In obedience to Authority, (the milde and conſtant ſubmiſſion whereunto won him reſpect with his adverſaries) Mr Travers calmly ſignified the ſame to the Congregation, and requeſted them quietly to depart to their chambers. Thus was our good Zacheus ſtruck dumb in the Temple, but not for infidelity, unpartial people accounting his fault at moſt but indiſcretion. Mean time, his Auditory (pained that their pregnant expectation to hear him preach, ſhould ſo publickly prove abortive, and ſent ſermonleſs home) manifeſted in their variety of paſſion, ſome grieving, ſome frowning, ſome murmuring, and the wiſeſt ſort, who held their tongues, ſhaked their heads, as diſliking the managing of the matter.

Many pleaſed with the deed, but not with the manner of doing it.

58. Travers addreſſed himſelf by petition to the Lords of the privie Councell (where his ſtrength lay, as Hookers in the Arch-Biſhop of Cant. and high Commiſſion) grievouſly complained that he was puniſhed before he was heard, ſilenced (by him apprehended the heavieſt penalty) before ſent for, contrary to equity and reaſon. The [a] Law condemning none before it hear him, and know what he hath done.

Travers his plea in his petition.

[a] Joh. 7. 51.

1. To the exception againſt the lawfulneſs of his Miniſtry, he pleaded that the communion of Saints allows Ordination legall in any Chriſtian Church, Orders herein are like degrees, and a Doctor graduated in any Univerſity, hath his title and place granted him in all Chriſtendome.
2. For want of licence to preach, he pleaded that he was recommended to this place of the Temple by two letters of the Biſhop of London the Dioceſan thereof.
3. His Anti-preaching in the afternoon againſt what was delivered before; he endeavoured to excuſe by the example of St Paul, [b] who gave not place to Peter, no not an hour, that the truth of the Goſpell might continue amongſt them.

[b] Gal. 2. 5.

But we are too tedious herein, eſpecially ſeeing his petition is publickly extant in print, with Mr Hooker his anſwer thereunto, whither we referr the reader for his more ample ſatisfaction.

59. By the way, it muſt not be forgotten, that in the very midſt of the Paroxiſme betwixt Hooker and Travers, the latter ſtil bare (and none can challenge the other to the contrary) a reverend eſteem of his adverſary. And when an unworthy aſperſion (ſome years after) was caſt on Hooker, (if Chriſt was daſht, ſhall Chriſtians eſcape clean in their journey to heaven) Mr Travers being aſked of a private friend, what he thought of the truth of

A charitable adverſary.

of that accuſation, In truth, (ſaid he) I take Mr Hooker to be a holy man. A ſpeech with coming from an adverſary, ſounds no leſs to the commendation of his charity who ſpake it, then to the praiſe of his piety of whom it was ſpoken. Anno Dom. 1591. Anno Regni Eliz. 34.

Travers muſt have no favour.

60. The Councell table was much divided about Travers his petition. All Whitgifts foes were ipſo facto made Travers his favourers, beſides he had a large ſtock of friends on his own account. But Whitgifts finger moved more in Church matters, then all the hands of all the privie Councellers beſides, and he was content to ſuffer others to be beleeved (and perchance to beleeve themſelves) great actors in Church-government, whilſt he knew, he could and did do all things himſelf therein. No favour muſt be afforded Travers on any terms. 1. Dangerous was his perſon, a Cartwright junior, none in England either more loving Geneva, or more beloved by it. 2ly. Dangerous the place, the Temple being one of the Inns (therefore a publick) of Court (therefore a principall) place, and to ſuffer one oppoſite to the Engliſh diſcipline, to continue Lecturer there, what was it but in effect to retain half the Lawyers of England to be of Councell againſt the eccleſiaſtical government thereof. 3ly. Dangerous the Precedent this leading caſe would be preſumed on for others to follow, and a ranks breaking, may be an armies ruining.

Whitgift his politick carriage.

61. This was the conſtant cuſtome of Whitgift, if any Lord or Lady ſued to him to ſhew favour for their ſakes to Non-conformiſts, his anſwer to them was rather reſpectfull to the requeſter, then ſatisfactory to the requeſt He would profeſs how glad he was to ſerve them, and gratifie them in compliance with their deſire, aſſuring them for his part all poſſible kindneſs ſhould be indulged unto them; but in fine, he would remit nothing of his rigour againſt them. Thus he never denied any great mans deſire, and yet never granted it, pleaſing them for the preſent with generall promiſes, and (in them not diſſembling, but uſing diſcreet and right expreſſions) ſtill kept conſtant to his own reſolution. Hereupon afterwards the nobility ſurceaſed making more ſutes unto him, as ineffectuall, and even left all things to his own diſpoſall.

Travers goeth into Ireland, and returneth.

62. Thus Mr Travers, notwithſtanding the plenty of his potent friends, was overborn by the Arch-Biſhop, and (as he often complained) could never obtain to be brought to a fair hearing. But his grief hereat was ſomething abated, when Adam Loftus, Arch-Biſhop of Dublin, and Chancellor of Ireland, (his ancient Collegue in Cambridge) invited him over, to be Provoſt of Trinity-Colledge in Dublin. Embracing the motion, over he went, accepting the place, and continued ſome years therein; till diſcompoſed with the fear of their civil wars, he returned into England, and lived here many years very obſcurely (though in himſelf a ſhining light) as to the matter of outward maintenance. 1598 35.

His contented life, and quiet death.

63. Yet had he Agurs wiſh, neither poverty, nor riches, though his enough ſeemed to be of ſhorteſt ſize. It matters not whether mens means be mounted, or their mindes deſcend, ſo be it that both meet as here in him in a comfortable contentment. Yea, when the right Reverend, and Religious James Uſher (then Biſhop of Meath, ſince) Arch-Biſhop of Armagh (brought up, under him, and with him agreeing in doctrine, though diſcenting in Diſcipline) profered mony unto him for his relief, Mr Travers returned a thankfull refuſall thereof. Sometimes he did preach, rather when he durſt, than when he would, debarred from all cure of ſouls by his non-conformity. He lived, and died unmarried, and though leaving many nephews (ſome eminent) Schollars, bequeathed all his books of Oriental languages (wherein he was exquiſite) and plate worth fifty pounds to Sion-Colledge in London. Oh! if this good man had had an hand to his heart, or rather a purſe to his hand, what charitable works would he have left behinde him?

But,

Anno Regin. Eliz. 35

Anno Dom. 1592.

But in pursuance of his memory, I have intrenched too much on the modern times. Only this I will adde, perchance the Reader will be angry with me for saying thus much, and I am almost angry with my self for saying no more of so worthy a Divine.

64. Return we to the year 1592. which we finde in London fill'd with funeralls; so that within twelve moneths, moe than ten thousand were swept away therein of the plague; And amongst them, reverend Mr Richard Greenham, the reason why we finde not the exact date of his death. In contagious times, the corpses of those who living were best beloved, are rather hurried, than carried to the grave; and in such confusions, those Parishes who have the best memories, prove forgetfull, their Registers being either carelessly kept, or totally omitted. Thus our Greenham was mortally visited with the plague (whereof we finde Munster, Franciscus Junius, Chimidantius, and other worthy Divines formerly deceased in Germany) that patent of preservation against the pestilence [a] A thousand shall fall at thy side, and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee, running (as all other temporall promises) with this secret clause of revocation, if God in his wisdome were not pleased otherwise to countermand it.

The death of worthy Mr Greenham of the plague:

a Psal 91. 7.

65. It may be said of some persons in reference to their history, that they were born men, namely such of whose birth, and youth, we finde no particular account. Greenham is one of these, for, for want of better intelligence we finde him full grown at the first, when Anno Domini, he was admitted into Pembroke Hall in Cambridge. In which House some years after, the youth of Mr Lancelot [b] Andrews (afterwards Bishop of Winchester) was well acquainted with Mr Greenham: and I dare boldly say, if Greenham gained any learning by Andrews, Andrews lost no religion by Greenham. He afterwards left the University, and became Minister three miles off at Drie-Drayton.

Fellow of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge.

b Some say he had an hand in making some of Mr Greenhams works.

66. Drie-Drayton indeed, which though often watered with Mr Greenhams tears, and oftner with his prayers, and preaching, moistened the rich with his counsel, the poor with his charity, neither produced proportionable fruitfulness. The generality of his Parish remained ignorant, and obstinate, to their Pastours great grief, and their own greater damage and disgrace. Hence the Verses,

He is humbled with an obstinate parish.

Greenham had pastures green,
But sheep full lean.

Thus God alone is the good shepheard, who doth feed, and can fat his sheep, and can make them to thrive under his keeping.

67. He used often, at the intreaty of some Doctors to preach at St Maries in Cambridge, where sometimes so great his zeal in pressing important points, that he hath lost himself in the driving home of some application, even to the forgetting of his text (as himself would confess) till he recovered the same on some short recollection. He alwayes bitterly inveighed against Non-Residents; professing, that he wondered how such men could take any comfort in their wealth. For, me thinks (saith he) they should see written on every thing which they have, Pretium sanguinis, this is the price of blood. But his master-piece was in comforting wounded consciences. For, although Heavens hand can only set a broken heart, yet God used him herein as an instrument of good to many, who came to him with weeping eyes and went from him with chearefull souls. The breath of his gracious counsel blew up much smoking flax, into a blazing flame.

His dexterity in healing afflicted consciences.

68. Hereupon

He leaving his Cure cometh to London.

68. Hereupon the importunity of his friends (if herein they proved so) perswaded him to leave his Parish, and remove to London, where his publick parts might be better advantaged for the general good. They pleaded the little profit of his long pains to so poore and peevish a Parish. Pitie it was so good a fisher-man should cast his nets elsewhere, than in that ocean of people. What was Drit-Drayton but a bushel to hide, London an high candlestick to hold up the brightness of his parts? Over-intreated by others (even almost against his own judgement) he resigned his Cure to a worthy successour, and repaired to London. Where, after some years preaching up and down in no constant place, he was resident on no Cure, but the curing of consciences. I am credibly [a] informed, he in some sort repented his removall from his Parish, and disliked his own erratical, and planetary life, which made him fix himself Preacher at last at Christ-Church in London, where he ended his dayes.

Anno Dom. 1593. Anno Regin. Eliz. 35.

69. He lived Sermons, and was most precise in his conversation; a strict observer of the Lords-day, and a great advancer thereof thorough the whole Realm, by that Treatise which he wrote of the Sabbath. No book in that age made greater impression on peoples practice, as [b] one (then a great wit in the University, now a grave wisdome in our Church) hath ingeniously expressed.

a By my own father Mr Thomas Fuller, who was well acquainted with him. A great instrument of the good keeping of the Lords-day.

b Mr Joseph Hall.

On Mr Greenhams book of the Sabbath.

While Greenham writeth on the Sabbaths rest,
His soule enjoyes not, what his penn expresst:
His work enjoyes not what it self doth say,
For it shall never finde one resting day.
A thousand hands shall tosse each page, and line,
Which shall be scanned by a thousand eine;
That, Sabbaths rest, or this Sabbath's unrest,
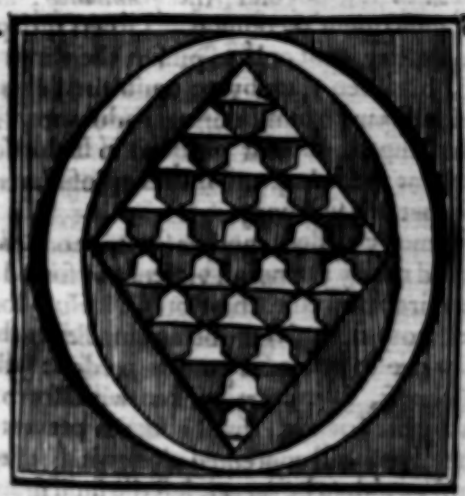
Hard is to say whether's the happiest.

Thus godly Greenham is fallen asleep: we softly draw the curtains about him, and so proceed to other matter.

SECT.



Anno Regin. Eliz. 25 Anno Dom. 1582

Section VIII.

To the Lady Anne Archer of Tanworth in Warwickshire.

Madam,

You, beeing so good a Housewife, know, far better then I, how much strength and handsomness good hemming addeth to the end of a cloath. I therefore being now to put a period to this long and important Century, as big as the whole Book besides (but chiefly containing her Reign, the Honour of your Sex and our nation) have resolved (to prevent the unraveling thereof,) to close and conclude it, with this Dedication to your Ladiship. On which account alone you are placed last in this Book, though otherwise the first and freest in incouraging my weak endeavours.

H. 1582. I.  Mr Udal come we now to treat, though thorough some defect in the [a] Records (transposed, or lost) we cannot tell the certain day of his condemnation, and death. But this appears in the office, that two years since (viz. 32 of Eliz. July 23.) he was indicted and arraigned at Croydon, for defaming the Queen Her government in a book by him written, and intituled, A Demonstration of the Discipline which Christ hath prescribed in his Word for the government of his Church, in all times and places, untill the worlds end. But the marital words (as I may terme them) are found in the preface of his book, written to the supposed governors of the Church of England, Arch-Bishops, Bishops &c. and are inserted in the body of his Indictment as followeth.

The uncertain date of Mr. Udals death.

[a] Searched by me, and my friends in the office of the Clerk of Assise for Surrey.

Anno Dom. 1592. Anno Regni Reg. 35.

"Who can without blushing deny you to be the cause of all ungod-
"lines? seeing your government is that which giveth leave to a man "to be any thing, saving a found Christian. For, certainly it is "indifferent in these dayes to be a Papist, or Brownist, or of the Family of "love, yea any most wicked wretch whatsoever, rather than that which we should be.
"And I could live these twenty years any such in England (yea in a "Bishops house it may be) and never be much molested for it; so
"true is that which you are charged with in a Dialogue lately come "forth against you, and since burned by you, that you care for no"thing but the maintenance of your dignities, be it to the damna-
"tion of your own soules, and infinite millions moe.

To this indictment he pleaded not guilty, denying himself to be the Author of the Book. Next day he was cast by the Jurie, and submitted himself to the mercy of the Court, whereby he prevailed that judgement against him was respited till the next Assises, and he remanded to the Marshalsey.

Mr Udal his supplication to the Lords of the Assises.

2. March following (the 33d of Queen Elizabeth) he was brought again to the Bar before the Judges, to whom he had privately presented a petition with all advantage, but it found no entertainment. Insomuch, that in this moneth of March (the day not appearing in the Records) he, at the Assises held in Southwark, was there condemned to be executed for a felon.

Various censures on his condemnation.

3. Various were mens censures on these proceedings against him. Some conceived it rigorous in the greatest (which at the best is cruel in the least) degree, considering the worth of his person, and weakness of the proof against him. For he was a learned man, blameless for his life, powerfull in his praying, and no less profitable, than painfull in his preaching. For, as Musculus in Germany (if I mistake not) first brought in the plain, (but effectual) manner of preaching by Use and Doctrine: so Udal was the first who added reasons thereunto, the strength and sinews of a Sermon. His English-Hebrew-Grammar he made whilst in prison, as appears by a subscription in the close thereof. The proof was not pregnant, and it is generally believed that he made only the preface (out of which his indictment was chiefly framed) and not the body of the book laid to his charge. Besides, it was harsh to inflict immediate, and direct death, for a consequential, and deductory felonie, it being pen-housed out beyond the foundation, and intent of the Statute to build the indictment thereupon. Others thought that some exemplary severity was necessary, not only to pinion the wings of such pamphlets from flying abroad, but even thereby to crush their eggs in the nest. Surely the multitude of visits unto him, during his durance, no whit prolonged his life. For, flocking to popular prisoners in such cases, is as ominous a presage of their death, as the flying, and fluttering of Ravens, near, and about the house, and chamber of a sick body.

He died peaceably in his bed.

4. But an higher Judge had formerly passed another sentence on Udals death, that his soul and body should not by shamefull violence be forced asunder, but that they should take a faire farewell each of other. How long he lived after his condemnation we know not, (there being a tradition that Sr Walter Rawleigh procured a Reprieve in a fair way to his pardon:) this is certain, that without any other sickness, save heart-broken with sorrow, he ended his dayes. Right glad were his friends, that his death prevented his death; and the wisest of his foes were well contented therewith, esteeming it better, that his candle should goe, than be put out, lest the snuff should be unsavoury to the survivers, and his death be charged as a cruel act on the account of the procurers thereof.

5. The

Anno Regni Eliz. 36. Anno Dom. 1593.

5. The Ministers of London flocked to his funeralls, and he was decently interred in the Church-yard of S^t George's in Southwark, not far from Bishop Bonners grave. So near may their bodies, when dead, in posture be together, whose mindes, when living, in opinion were farr asunder. Nor have I ought else to observe of him, save that I am informed, that he was father of Ephraim Udal a solid and pious Divine, dying in our dayes, but in point of discipline of a different opinion from his father.

His solemn buriall.

6. And now the Sword of Justice being once drawn, it was not put up again into the Sheath, before others were executed For Henry Barrow Gentleman, and John Greenwood Clerk, (who some dayes before were indicted of felony at the Sessions Hall without Newgate, before the L^rd Major, and the two chief Justices, for writing certain Seditious Pamphlets) were hanged at Tyburn. And not long after John Penry a Welchman, was apprehended at Stebunhith by the Vicar thereof, arraigned and condemned of felony at the Kings-Bench at Westminster, for being a principal penner and publisher of a libellous Book called Martin-mar-prelates, and executed at S^t Thomas Waterings, Daniel Studely Girdler, Saxie Billot Gentleman, and Robert Bowley Fishmonger were also condemned for publishing scandalous Books, but not finding their execution, I beleeve them reprieved and pardoned.

H. B. I. G. & I. P. executed.

Stow his Chronicle pag. 765.

7. About this time, if not somewhat sooner, (for my enquiry cannot arrive at the certain date) Queen Elizabeth took her last farewell of Oxford, where a Divinity Act was kept before her, on this question, Whether it be lawfull to dissemble in matters of Religion? One of the opponents endeavoured to prove the affirmative by his own example, who then did what was lawfull, and yet he dissembled in disputing against the Truth, the Queen being well pleased at the wittines of the Argument. D^r Westphaling, (who had divers years been B^p of Hereford) coming then to Oxford, closed all with a learned determination wherein no fault, except somewhat too copious, (not to so lay tedious) at that time her Highness intending that night to make a Speech, and thereby disappointed.

The Queens last coming to Oxford.

S^r I. Harrington in his additional supply to Bp. Godwin p. 134.

1594. 8. Next day her Highness made a Latin oration to the Heads of Houses, (on the same token she therein gave a check to D^r Reynolds for his non-conformity) in the midst whereof perceiving the old Lord Burleigh stand by, with his lame legs, she would not proceed till she saw him provided of a stool [a], and then fell to her speech again, as sensible of no interruption, having the Command as well of her Latin tongue, as of her loyal Subjects.

Her Latin Oration.

[a] Idem p. 136.

9. John Pierce Arch-Bishop of York ended his life, Dean of Christ-Church in Oxford, Bishop of Rochester, Sarisbury, and Arch-Bishop of York. When newly beneficed a young man in Oxford-shire, he had drowned his good parts in drunkenness, conversing with his country parishioners, but on the confession of his fault to a grave Divine, reformed his conversation, so applying himself to his studies, that he deservedly gained great preferment, and was highly esteemed by Queen Elizabeth, whose Almoner he continued for many years, and he must be a wise and good man whom that thrifty Princess would intrust with distributing her mony. He was one of the most grave and reverent prelates of his age, and after his reduced life, so abstemious, that his Physitian in his old age could not perswade him to drink wine. So habited he was in sobriety, in detestation of his former excess.

10. The same year died John Elmar Bishop of London, bred in Cambridge, well learned, as appeareth by his Book, titled the Harborough of Princes. One of a low stature, but stout spirit, very valiant in his youth, and witty all his life. Once when his Auditory began at sermon to grow dull in their attentions, he presently read unto them many verses out of the Hebrew Text, whereat they all started, admiring what use he meant to make thereof. Then shewed he them their folly, that whereas they neglected English, whereby they might be edified, they listened to Hebrew, whereof they understood understood not a word. He was a stiff and stern champion of Church Discipline, on which account, none more mocked by Martin Mar-Prelate, or hated by Non-conformists. To his eldest son he left a plentiful estate, and his second, a Dr of Divinity was a worthy man of his profession. Anno Dom. 1594. Anno Regin. Eliz. 37.

The death of Bp. Elmar.

The death of Will. Reginald. a Pitzeus de illustribus Anglia Scriptoribus in Anno 1594.

11. But of the Romanists, two principal Pillars ended their lives beyond the Seas. First William Reginald, alias Rose, born at a Pinho in Devon-shire, bred in Winchester School, then in New-Colledge in Oxford. Forsaking his Country he went to Rome, and there solemnly abjur'd the Protestant Religion, and thereupon was permitted to read, (a favour seldome or never bestowed on such novices) any Protestant Books, without the least restriction, presuming on his zeal in their cause. From Rome, he removed to Rhemes in France, where he became professor of Divinity and Hebrew, in the English Colledge, where (saith my b Author) with studying, writing, and preaching against the Protestants, perchance he exhausted himself with too much labour, and breaking a vein almost lost his life with vomiting of blood. Recovering his strength, he vow'd to spend the rest of his life in writing against Protestants, and death at Antwerp ceased on him (the 24th of August the 50th year of his age) as he was a making of a book, called Calvino-Turcismus, which after by his dear friend, William Gifford, was finished, set forth and dedicated to Albert Duke of Austria.

b Idem, ibidem.

The death of Cardinal Allen.

12. William Allen, (commonly called the Cardinall of England) followed him into another world, born of honest Parents, and allied to noble Kindred in Lancashire: Brought up at Oxford in Oriall Colledge, where he was Proctor of the University, in the dayes of Queen Mary, and afterwards Head of St Mary-Hall, and Canon of Yorke. But on the change of Religion, he departed the land, and became Professor of Divinity at Doway in Flanders, then Canon of Cambray, Master of the English Colledge at Rhemes, made Cardinall 1587. August. the 7th by Pope Sixtus Quintus, the King of Spain bestowing on him an c Abby in the Kingdom of Naples, and nominating him to be Arch-Bishop of Machlin; But death arrested him to pay the debt to Nature d October 16th, and he was buried in the Church of the English Colledge at Rome. This is that Allen whom we have so often mentioned, conceived so great a Champion for their Cause, that Pope Gregory the 13th said to his Cardinalls, c Venite fratres mei, Ostendam vobis Alanum: which the Author thus translates, or rather Comments on, Come my brethren, and I will shew you a man, in England born, to whom all Europe may give place for his high prudence, reverend Countenance and purport of Government. His loss was much lamented by the Catholicks, not without cause, whose Gravity, and Authority had done many good offices, in composing the Grudgings which began to grow betwixt Secular Priests and Jesuits; which private heart-burnings soon after his death, blazed out in the prison of Wisbich, into an open Scandal, as now we come to Report.

c Camd. Eliz. in hoc Anno.
d Pitzeus de illust. Ang. Script. pag. 793 e Watsons Quodlibets pag. 97.

A sad subject to write of Christian discords.

13. Here I protest (though uncertain how far to finde belief,) that I take no delight in relating these discontents, much less shall my pen widen the wound betwixt them: for though I approve the opinions of neither, yet am I so much friend to the persons of both parties, as not to make much to my self of their Discords: The rather because no Christian can heartily laugh at the factions of his fiercest enemies, because that sight at the same time pincheth him, with the sad remembrance that such divisions that have formerly, do at the present, or may hereafter, be found amongst those of his own profession; such is the frailty of humane Nature in what side soever. However hereafter let not Papists without cause or measure vaunt of their unity, seeing their pretended Ship of St Peter, is not so solidly compacted, but that it may spring a Leake. Nor let them boast so confidently of their sufferings, and blame our severity unto them, as if enduring such hard usage in their imprisonment: Surely like f Joseph their feet were not hurt in the 1595. 38.

f Psal. 105. 18.

Anno Regni Eliz. 36. Anno Dom. 1594.

the Stocks, the Iron did not enter into their Soul; neither with [g] Jeremy, were they cast into a dirty dungeon, where they sunk in mire: nor with [h] Peter were they bound with two Chains; nor with [i] Paul and Silas were they thrust into the inner prison, and made fast; but had in their Durance, Liberty, List, and Leasure, to begin, foment, and prosecute, this violent Schisme betwixt themselves.

g Ier. 38. 6.
h Acts 12. 6.
i Acts 16. 24.

14. Untill this time the prime Catholicks in Wisbich Castle, had lived there in restraint, with great Unity and Concord. And the Papists do brag that then and there the English Church was most visible, untill one Father Weston alias Edmonds, a Jesuite, coming thither, erected a government amongst them, making certain Sanctions and Orders, which all were bound to observe; secretly procuring subjects to himself, and claiming a Superiority over all the Catholicks there. Yet so cunningly he contrived the matter, that he seemed not ambitiously to affect, but religiously to accept this Authority profered unto, yea seemingly forced upon him. For one of his friends writes to Father Henry Garnet, Provincial, then living in England, to this effect.

The beginning of the Schism betwixt the Secular and the Jesuits.

Good Father Weston in the humility of his heart, lies on his bed, like the man sick of the Palsie, in the Gospel. Nor will he walk confidently before others in the way of the Righteous, except first he be let down through the Tiles, and it be said unto him from the Provinciall, arise, take up thy Bed and walke.

Yet if the Seculars may be beleeved, he did not only arise but run, before that word of Command given him by Garnet, and put his Jurisdiction in execution. Besides those of his own society, many of the Secular Priests submitted themselves unto him, seduced (say [k] some) by the seeming sanctity of the Jesuits, and having their Judgements bribed to that side by unequal proportions of mony received, besides promising themselves that in case the land was invaded, by the activity of the Jesuits, all power and preferment would be at their dispose, and so they should be sooner and higher advanced.

k Declaratio motuum ac turbarum &c. ad Clem. octavum exhibita pag. 12.

15. But the greatest number, and learned sort of the Secular Priests stoutly resisted his superiority, affirming how formerly it had been offered to Thomas Watson Bishop of Lincolne, (late prisoner amongst them) and he refused it, as inconsistent with their present Condition, affliction making them equalls and a Prison putting a parity betwixt them; if any order might pretend to this Priority, it was most proper for the Benedictines, extant in England above a thousand years agoe: that the Jesuits were Puisnies, and if all Orders should sit down as Jacobs children, at the Table of Joseph, the eldest according to his Age, and the youngest according to his Youth; the last and least place of honour was due unto them; That the Secular Priests had borne the heat of the day, in preaching and persecution; some of them having endured above twenty years imprisonment for conscience sake, (as Mr Bluet for [m] one) before some of the Jesuits knew what durance meant. That Weston was not eminent for Learning, Religion, or any prime quality, save only the affecting that place, which his betters had declined. That it was monstrous, that he being a Jesuite, and so a member of another society, should be made a head of their body. The Lay-Catholicks were much offended

The Secularis refuse to obey Weston, and why.

l Gen. 34. 33.

m Watsons Quodlibet. pag. 4.

fended with the Schisme some withheld, others threatning to withhold their charity from both parties, conceiving it the ready means, when maintenance was detained from both sides, to starve them into agreement

Anno Dom. 1594. Anno Regni Eliz. 37.

Weston imployed but as a Scout to discover the temper of the secular priests.

16. One might admire why father Weston should so earnestly desire so silly a dominion, having his power, as well as his own person confin'd within the walls of Wisbich Castle, a narrow Diocess, only to dominere over a few Prisoners. The Goaler, yea the very Turnkey being his superior to controll him, if offering to exceed that compass. But Oh the sweetness of Supremacy, though in never so small a Circuit! It pleased his pride to be Prior of a Prison, but [n] Agent was the Title, wherewith he stiled himself; Indeed the English Jesuits both abroad in England, and beyond the Seas, made use of Westons forwardness to trie the temper of the Secular Priests, and to make this bold Jesuite, to back and break a Skittish Colt for further designes. If Weston were unhors'd, his fall would be little lamented, and he might thank his own boldness in adventuring, and the ill managing of his place: if he sat the beast, and it proved tame, then others would up and ride: and Father Garnet Provincial of the Jesuits, intended in like manner to procure from the Pope a Superiority over all the Secular Priests in England. Wisbich Prison would be enlarged all over the kingdom, and the Precedent would reach farr in the consequence thereof, which encreased the Secular Opposition against this leading case of Jurisdiction.

n Declaratio motuum &c. pag. 17.

He will not stand to the determination of a grave priest chosen Umpire.

17. About this time came to Wisbich an aged Priest, who had given great Testimony of the Ability of his judgement, and ardency of his affections to the Catholick Cause, being the Generall Collector of the charitable contributions unto the Prisoners. In which place he had been so diligent in gathering, secret in conveying, faithfull in delivering, unpartiall in dispensing such sums committed unto him, that deservedly he had purchased reputation to himself: Who as he had been a Benefactor to both Parties, so now he was made an Arbitrator betwixt them; with promise of both sides to rest satisfied with his decision. He condemneth the Jesuits guilty of a scandalous separation, and that Weston ought to desist from his Superiority. But the Jesuits would not stand to his sentence, confessing their separation Scandalous, but only per accidens, and therefore not to be left off. And whereas the aforesaid Priest had determined, that that separation could not be continued without sin, the Jesuits in derision demanded of him, whether he meant a venial sin or a mortall; and so the whole business took no effect.

At last is forced by letters from his provincial to leave off his Agency.

18. Some moneths after, two reverend Priests often sent for by both sides, were by joynt consent made Judges in this Cause, who resolved that Westons Agency should be abolished as the original of evill, and seminary of much discord: and because Weston refused to obey their order, these two Priests posted up to London, (where Garnet the Jesuits Provincial did lodge) and from him with much adoe, obtained peremptory letters to Weston, presently to leave off his pretended superiority. A message which went to the proud Jesuits heart, who was formerly heard to say, that he [o] had rather threw himself headlong from the Castle wall, then desist from his office. But now there was no remedy but he must obey, desiring only he might make a speech to his society, exhorting them to unity and concord, and in the midst of his Oration, as if he would have surrendred his soul and place both together, he fell speechless into a [p] swoond and hardly recovered again; so mortall a wound it is to a proud heart to part with Authority. Thus ended Westons Agency, the short continuance whereof was the best commendation of his command.

o Declaratio motuum ac &c. pag. 20.

p. Ibidem.

The Schism notwithstanding continues and increases.

19. But this was but a palliate cure to skin the sore over, which festered within: the enmity still continued, Seculars complaining, that the Jesuits traduced them to Lay-Catholicks, as cold and remiss in the cause, only dull to follow beaten paths, not active to invent more compendious wayes, for the Anno Regni Eliz. 38.

Anno Dom. 1595.

the advance of Religion. The Jesuits also boasted much of their own merit, how their order though last starting, had with its speed overtook, and over-run all before them. Indeed they are excellent at the art of self-praising, not directly, but by certain consequence, for though no man blazed his own praise, (for one to be a herauld to commend himself, the same on the same in false blazon, as well against the rules of modesty as prudence) yet every one did praise his partner, laying an obligation on him to do the like, who in justice must do as much, and in bounty often did more gratefully repaying the commendations lent him withinterest; And thus mutually arching up one another, they fill'd the ears of all Papists with loud relations, of the transcendent Industry, Piety, Learning, of the men of their society, to the manifest derogation of all other orders. But more of these discords in the year following.

20. About this time thorowout England, began the more Solemne and strickt observation of the Lords day, (hereafter both in writing and preaching, commonly called the Sabbath) occasioned by a Book this year set forth by one D. Bound Doctor of Divinity (and enlarged with Additions Anno 1606.) wherein these following opinions are maintained. The strickt keeping of the Sabbath first revived.

1. That the commandement of Sanctifying every seventh Day, as in the Mosaicall Decalogue, is morall and perpetual.
2. That whereas all other things in the [a] Jewish Church were taken away, (Priesthood, Sacrifices and Sacraments) this Sabbath was so changed that it still remaineth. [a] Dr Bounds Book of the Sabbath. p. 91.
3. [b] That there is a great reason why we Christians should take our selves as streighely bound to rest upon the Lords day, as the Jews were upon their Sabbath, it being one of the morall Commandements, where all are of equall Authority. [b] pag. 247.
4. [c] The rest upon upon this day must be a notable and singular rest, a most carefull exact and precise rest, after another manner then men are accustomed. [c] pag. 124.
5. [d] Schollers on that day not to study the liberall Arts, nor Lawyers to consult the case, nor peruse mens evidences. [d] pag. 163.
6. [e] Sergeants, Apparitours and Sumners to be restrained from executing their offices. [e] pag. 164.
7. [f] Justices not to examine Causes for the conservation of the peace. [f] pag. 166.
8. [g] That ringing of more bells then one that day is not to be justified. [g] pag. 102.
9. [h] No Solemn feasts, nor wedding dinners to be made on that Day [with permission notwithstanding of the same to [i] Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen of Quality,] which some conceive not so fair dealing with him. [h] pag. 106. 209. [i] pag. 211.
10. [k] All honest recreations, and pleasures lawfull on other dayes (as shooting, fencing, bowling,) on this day to be forborn. [k] pag. 102.
11. [l] No man to speak or talk of pleasures, or any other worldly matter. [l] pag. 272. 275.

It is almost incredible how taking this Doctrine was, partly because of it's own Purity, and partly for the eminent piety of such persons as maintained it; so that the Lords Day, especially in Corporations, began to be precisely kept, people becoming a Law to themselves, forbearing such sports, as yet by statute permitted; yea many rejoycing at their own restraint herein. On this day the stoutest fencer laid down the buckler, the most skillful Archer unbent his bow, counting all shooting besides the Marke; May-games and Morisdances grew out of request, and good reason that Bells should be silenced from gingling about mens leggs, if their very Ringing in Steeples were adjudged judged unlawfull: some of them were ashamed of their former pleasures, like children which grown bigger, blushing themselves out of their rattles and whistles. Others forbare them for fear of their Superiors, and many left them off out of a Politick Compliance, least otherwise they should be accounted licentious. Anno Dom. 1595. Anno Regni Reginæ 37.

21. Yet learned men were much divided in their judgements about these Sabatarian Doctrines, some embraced them as ancient truths consonant to Scripture, long disused and neglected, now seasonably revived for the encrease of piety: Others conceived them grounded on a wrong bottome, but because they tended to the manifest advance of Religion, it was pitty to oppose them, seeing none have just reason to complain, being derived into their own good. But a third sort flatly fell out with these positions, as pulling mens necks with a jewish yoak, against the liberty of Christians: That Christ as Lord of the Sabbath had removed the Rigour thereof, and allowed men lawfull recreations: That this Doctrine put an unequall Lustre on the Sunday on set purpose to eclipse all other Holy dayes to the derogation of the authority of the Church: That this strickt observance was set up out of Faction to be a Character of Difference, to brand all for libertines who did not entertain it.

Tho: Rogers first publickly opposeth Dr Bounds opinion.

22. However, for some years together in this controversie, Dr Bound alone carried the Garland away, none offering openly to oppose, and not so much as a feather of a quill in print did wag against him. Yea as he in his second edition observeth, that many both in their Preachings, Writeings, and Disputations, did concurr with him in that argument: and three several profitable treatises, (one made by Mr Greenham,) were within few years successively written, by three godly learned [a] Ministers. But the first that gave a check to the full speed of this doctrine, was Thomas Rogers of Horningar in Suffolk; in his preface to the Book of Articles. And now because our present age begins to dawn, and we come within the view of that Truth, whose footsteps heretofore we only followed at distance, I will interpose nothing of my own, but of an historian only turn a Notarie, for the behoof of the Reader, faithfully transcribing such passages, as we meet with in order of time.

[a] Dr Bound in his preface to the Reader 2 edition.

Notwithstanding what the [b] Brethren wanted in strength, and learning, they had in wiliness, and though they lost much one way in the general, and main point of their Discipline, yet recovered they not a little advantage another way by an odde and new device of theirs in a special Article of their Classical instructions. For while worthies of our Church were employing their engins and forces, partly in defending the present Government Ecclesiastical, partly in assaulting the Presbyterie, and new discipline, even at that very instant the Brethren, (knowing themselves too weak either to overthrow our holds, and that which we hold, or to maintain their own) they abandoned quite the Bulwarks which they had raised, and geve out were impregnable, suffering us to beat them down without any or very small resistance; and yet not careless of their affairs, left not the Warrs for all that, but from an odde corner and after a new fashion which we little thought of, (such was their cunning set upon us a fresh again, by dispersing in Printed Books which for tenn years space before they had been in hammering among themselves to make them compleat) their Sabbath speculations and Presbyterian, (that is more then either kingly or Popely, Directions for the observation of the Lords day.

[b] Rogers preface to the Articles Parag. 20.

And in the next page he [c] proceedeth, It is a comfort unto my soule, and will be till my dying hour, that I have been the man and the means that the Sabatarian errors, and impieties are brought into light and knowledge of [c] Idem Parag. 23.

Anno Regni Eliz. 38. Anno Dom. 1595

of the ſtate, whereby whatſoever elſe, ſure I am this good hath enſued, namely, that the ſaid Books of the Sabbath, comprehending the above-mentioned, and many moe ſuch fearfull, and heretical aſſertions,) hath been both called in, and forbidden any more to be printed and made common. Your Graces predeceſſor Arch-Biſhop Whitgift, by his letters and officers at Synods and Viſitations Anno 1599. did the one, and Sr John Popham Lord chief Juſtice of England at Bury Sr Edmonds in Suffolk Anno 1600. did the other.

But though both Miniſter and Magiſtrate joyntly endeavoured to ſuppreſs Bounds Book, with the Doctrine therein contained, yet all their care did but for the preſent make the Sunday ſet in a cloud to ariſe ſoon after in more brightneſs. As for the Arch-Biſhop his known oppoſition to the proceedings of the Brethren, rendered his Actions more odious, as if out of envie he had cauſed ſuch a pearl to be concealed. As for Judge Popham, though ſome conceived it moſt proper for his place to puniſh fellonious Doctrines (which robbed the Queens ſubjects of their lawfull liberty) and to behold them branded with a mark of Infamie, yet others accounted him no competent Judge in this controverſie. And though he had a dead hand againſt offenders, yet theſe Sabbatarian Doctrines (though condemned by him) took the priviledge to pardon themſelves, and were publiſhed more generally then before. The price of the Doctors Book began to be doubled, as commonly Books are then moſt called on, when called in, and many who hear not of them when printed, enquire after them when prohibited; and though the Books wings were clipt from flying abroad in print, it ran the faſter from friend to friend in tranſcribed Copies; and the Lords day in moſt Places was moſt ſtrictly obſerved. The more liberty people were offered the leſs they uſed it, refuſing to take the freedom Authority tendered them. For the vulgar ſort have the Actions of their Superiors in conſtant jealouſie, ſuſpecting each gate of their opening to be a Trap, every Hole of their Digging to be a Mine, wherein ſome ſecret train is covertly conveyed, to the blowing up of the Subjects liberty, which made them almoſt afraid of the recreations of the Lords day allowed them; and ſeeing it is the greateſt pleaſure to the minde of man to do what he pleaſeth, it was ſport for them to refrain from ſports, whilſt the forbearance was in themſelves voluntary, arbitrary and elective, not impoſed upon them. Yea, ſix years after Bounds Book came forth, with enlargements publickly ſold, and ſcarce any comment, Catechiſm, or controverſie, was ſet forth by the ſtricter Divines, wherein this Doctrine (the Diamond in this Ring) was not largely preſſed and proved; ſo that as one ſaith, the Sabbath it ſelf had no reſt. For now all ſtrange and unknown writers, without further examination paſſed for friends and favourites of the Preſbyterian party, who could give the word, and had any thing in their Treatiſe tending to the ſtrict obſervation of the Lords day. But more hereof God willing in the 15th year of K. JAMES.

The Articles of Lambeth.

23. Now alſo began ſome opinions about Predeſtination, Freewill, Perſeverance &c. much to trouble both the Schools and Pulpit. Whereupon Arch-Biſhop Whitgift, out of his Chriſtian care to propagate the truth, and ſuppreſs the oppoſite errours, cauſed a ſolemn meeting of many grave and learned Divines at Lambeth; where (beſides the Arch-Biſhop) Richard Bancroft, Biſhop of London; Richard Vaughan, Biſhop elect of Bangor, Humphry Tyndall, Dean of Ely, Dr Whitaker Queens profeſſor in Cambridge, and others were aſſembled; theſe after a ſerious debate, and mature deliberation, reſolved at laſt on the now Following Articles.

Anno Dom. 1595. Anno Regin. Eliz. 38

1. Deus ab Æterno Prædestinavit quosdam ad vitam; quosdam reprobavit ad mortem.

1. God from eternity hath predestinated certain men unto life, certain men he hath reprobated.

2. Causa movens aut efficiens Prædestinationis ad vitam non est præscio Fidei, aut Perseverantiæ, aut bonorum Operum, aut ullius rei quæ insit in personis prædestinatis, sed sola voluntas beneplaciti Dei.

2. The moving or efficient cause of Predestination unto life, is not the foresight of faith, or of Perseverance, or of good works, or of any thing that is in the person predestinated, but only the good will and pleasure of God.

3. Prædestinatorum præfinitus, & certus est numerus, qui nec augeri nec minui potest.

3. There is predetermined a certain number of the predestinate, which can neither be augmented or diminished.

4. Qui non sunt prædestinati ad salutem, necessario propter peccata sua Damnabuntur.

4. Those who are not predestinated to Salvation, shall be necessarily damned for their sins.

5. Vera, viva & justificans fides, & spiritus Dei justificantis, non extinguitur, non excidit, non evanescit in Electis, aut finaliter, aut totaliter.

5. A true, living, and justifying faith, and the spirit of God justifying, is not extinguished, falleth not away, it vanisheth not away in the elect, either finally or totally.

6. Homo vere fidelis, id est, fidei justificantæ præditus, certum est plerophoria Fidei de remissione peccatorum suorum, & salute sempiterna sua per Christum.

6. A man truly faithful, that is, such an one who is endued with a justifying faith, is certain with the full assurance of faith, of the remission of his sins, and of his everlasting salvation by Christ.

7. Gratia salutaris, non tribuitur, non excommunicatur, non conceditur universis hominibus, qua servari possint si velint.

7. Saving grace is not given, is not granted, is not communicated to all men, by which they may be sav'd if they will.

8. Nemo potest venire ad Christum, nisi datum ei fuerit, & nisi pater eum traxerit, & omnes homines non trahuntur a Patre ut veniant ad filium.

8. No man can come unto Christ unless it shall be given unto him, and unless the Father shall draw him; and all men are not drawn by the Father, that they may come to the Son.

9. Non est positum in arbitrio, aut Potestate unius cujusq; hominis servari.

9. It is not in the will or power of every one to be saved.

Matthew Hutton, the right Reverend Arch-Bishop of York, did also fully and freely in his judgement Concurr with these Divines, as may appear by his Letter here inserted.

ACcepi jam pridem literas tuas (Reverendissime Præsul) veteris illius Benevolentiæ, & amoris erga me tui plenas, in quibus effigiem opinionum meam de Articulis quibusdam nuper Cantabrigiæ agitatis, non sine aliqua piorum offensione, qui graviter, molestique ferunt Matrem Academiam, jam multitudine liberorum & quidem doctissimorum florentem, ea dissentione filiorum nonnihil contristatam esse. Sed fieri non *non potest, quin veniant Offendicula, neque desinet inimicus homo inter triticum Zizania Seminare, donec eum Dominus sub pedibus contriverit. Legi Articulos & relegi, & dum paravem aliquid de singulis dicere, visum est mihi multo potius de ipsa Electione & Reprobatione, (unde ista dissentio orta esse videtur) meam sententiam & opinionem paucis verbis explicare, quam singulis sigillatim respondens fratrum forsitan quorundam animas, (quos in veritate diligo) exacerbare. Meminisse potes (ornatissime Antistes) cum Cantabrigiæ una essemus et sacras literas in Scholis publicis interpretaremur, eandem Regulam seculi eam semper fuisse inter nos Consensionem in omnibus Religionis Causis, & ne minimam quidem vel dissentionis, vel simultatis suspicio unquam appareret. Igitur hoc tempore si judicio Dominationis tuæ, id quod pingui Minerva scripsi probatum ire intellexero, multo mihi munus displacebo. Deus te diutissime servet incolumem, ut tum Reginæ serenissimæ & toti Regno fidelissimus Consiliarius, tum etiam Ecclesiæ huic nostræ Anglicanæ pastor Utilissimus multos adhuc annos esse possis. Vale, è Musæo meo apud Bishop-*Thorp. Calend: Octob. Anno Dom. 1995.

Anno Regni Eliz. 38. Anno Dom. 1595.

24. But when these Articles came abroad into the world, mens Brains and tongues, as since their pens were employed about the Authority of the same, and the obedience due unto them; much puzled to finde the new place, where rightly to rank them in reputation; how much above the results, and resolutions of private Divines, and how much beneath the Authority of a Provincial Synod. Some there, that almost equalled their Authenticalness with the Acts of a Synod, requiring the like Conformity of mens judgements unto them. They endeavoured to prove that those Divines, met not alone in their private capacities, but also representing others, alledging this passage in a publick [a] letter from Cambridge, subscribed with the hands of the Heads of that Uuiversity. We sent up to London by common Consent in November last, Dr Tyndall, and Dr Whitakers (men especially chosen for that purpose) for conference with my Lord of Canterbury, and other principal Divines there &c.

The high opinions some had of these Articles.

[a] See it cited at large in our History of Cambridge Anno 1595.

25. Others maintain the contrary. For grant each man in this conference at Lambeth, one of a thousand for Learning and Religion, yet was he but one in Power and Place: and had no Proxie or deputation (the two Cambridge Doctors excepted) to appear in the behalf of others: and therefore their determinations, though of great use to direct, could be but of little Authority to conclude and command the consent of others.

Others value them at a lower rate.

26. But a third sort offended with the matter of the Articles, thought that the two Arch-Bishops, and the rest at this meeting, deserved censure for holding an unlawfull Conventicle. For they had not expres command from the Queen, to meet, debate, and decide such controversies. Those of the opopsite party, were not solemnly summoned and heard, so that it might seem rather a design to crush them, then clear the truth. The meeting was warranted with no legall Authority, rather a private action of Doctor John Whitgift, Doctor Matthew Hutton &c. then the publick act of the Arch-Bishops of Canterbury and Yorke. [b] One goeth further to affirm, that those Articles of Lambeth, were afterwards forbidden by publick Authority; but when, where, and by whom he is not pleased to impart unto us. And strange it is, that a publick prohibition should be whispered so softly, that this Author alone should hear it, and none other to my knowledge take notice thereof.

Some flatly condemned both the Articles and Authors of them.

[b] Mr Mountague in his appeal, pag. 55. 56. 71. 72.

27. As for forrain Divines, just as they were biased in judgement, so on that side ran their Affections, in raising or decrying the esteem of these Articles;

How variously forraign Divines esteemed of them.

Articles; some [a] printed, set forth, and [b] cited them, as the sence of the Church of England, others, as fast slighted them, as the narrow positions of a few private and Partial persons. As for Corvinus, as we know not whence he had his intelligence, so we finde no just ground for what he reporteth, that Arch-Bishop Whitgift for his pains incurred the Queens displeasure, and [c] a Præmunire. We presume this forrainer better acquainted with the Imperial Law, and locall customes of Holland, then with our municipal Statutes, and the nature of a Præmunire. Indeed there goes a tradition that the Queen should in merriment say jestingly to the Arch-Bp. My Lord I now shall want no mony, for I am informed all your goods are forfeited unto me by your calling a Councel without my consent; but how much of truth herein God knows. And be it referred to our learned in the Law, whether without danger of such a censure, the two Arch-Bishops by vertue of their place had not any implicite leave from the Queen to assemble Divines, for the clearing, declaring and asserting of difficult Truths, provided they innovate or alter nothing in matters of Religion.

Anno Dom. 1595. Anno Regni Eliz. 38.

28. And now I perceive, I must tread tenderly, because I goe not (as before) on mens graves, but am ready to touch the quick of some yet alive. I know how dangerous it is to follow Truth too nere to the heels: yet better it is that the teeth of an Historian be struck out of his head for writing the the Truth, then that they remain still and rot in his Jaws, by feeding too much on the sweet-meats of flattery. All that I will say of the credit of these Articles is this. That as Medalls of Gold and Silver, though they will not pass in payment for currant coyne, because not stamped with the Kings Inscription, yet they will goe with Goldsmiths for as much as they are in weight: So though these Articles want Authentick Reputation to pass for Provinciall Acts, as lacking sufficient Authority, yet will they be readily received of Orthodox Christians, for as far as their own purity bears conformity to Gods word. And though those learned Divines be not acknowledged as competent Judges to pass definitive Sentence in those Points, yet they will be taken as witnesses beyond exception; whose testimony is an infallible evidence, what was the generall and received doctrine of England in that Age, about the forenamed controversies.

29. This year ended the life, First of Doctor William Wickam, bred in Kings Colledge in Cambridge, first Bishop of Lincoln, after of Winchester, whose namesake William Wickham in the Reign of King Edward the third, sat in the same See more years then this did weeks. Indeed we know little of his life, but so much of his death, as we must not mention it without some pitty to him, (whil'st in pain) and praise to God for our own health, such was his torture with the stone before his death, that for [d] 14 days together, he made not water. Secondly, Worthy Doctor William Whittakers, whose larger character we reserve God-willing for our History of Cambridge. And amongst the Romanists, Daniel Halsworth, who as [e] Pitzæus describes him (Papists give no scant measure in praising those of their own Party) was well skill'd in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, an Elegant Poet, Eloquent Orator, acute Philosopher, expert Mathematician, deep-studied Lawyer, and excellent Divine: flying from England, he lived successively in Savoy, Rome and Millain, having too many professions to gather wealth, and with all his Arts and Parts, both lived in Poverty, and died in Obscurity. More eminent, but more infamous, was the death of Robert Southwell a Jesuite, born in [f] Suffolk, bred beyond the Seas, where he wrote abundance of Books, who returning into England, was executed March the third for a Traitor at London, and honoured for a Martyr amongst men of his own Religion.

30. The

[a] Thysius twice printed them at Hardrovick, Anno 1613.
[b] Bogerman in his 107. & 108. notes on the second part of Grotius.
[c] In his answer to the notes of Bogerman 2 part. pag. 566. and so forward to pag. 570.

These Articles excellent witnesses of the generall doctrine of England.

Bp. Wickham, Dr Whitakers, Dan. Halsworth, and Rob: Southwell end their lives.

[d] Bp Goodwin in his Catalogue of the Bishops of Winchester.
[e] De Anglia scriptoribus Ætate 16. pag. 794.

[f] Idem ibidem.

Anno Regin Eliz. 38. Anno Dom. 1596.

30. The Secular Prieſts continued their complaints, as againſt Jeſuits in general, ſo particularly againſt Robert Parſons. This Parſons about 18 years ſince was in England, where by his ſtatizing, and dangerous activity, he had ſo incenſed the Queens Councell, that the Secular Prieſts, made him a main occaſion why ſuch ſharp laws were ſo ſuddenly made againſt [a] Catholicks in England. But no ſooner did danger begin to appear, but away went Parſons beyond the Seas, wherein ſome condemned his cowarlineſs, and others commended his policy, ſeeing ſuch a commander in chief, as he was in the Romiſh cauſe, ought to repoſe his perſon in ſafety, and might be never the leſs vertually preſent in the fight, by the iſſuing out of his orders to meaner officers. Nor did Parſons like a wheeling Cock turn aſide, with intent to return, but ran quite out of the Cockpit, and then crowed in triumph, when he was got on his own dunghil, ſafely reſident in the City of Rome. Here he compiled, and hence he diſpatched many letters and libels into England; and amongſt the reſt, that Book of the ſucceſſion to the Engliſh (entit'ling the Spaniard thereunto) ſetting it forth under the falſe name of [b] Dolman, an honeſt harmleſs Secular Prieſt. and his profeſſed Adverſary. And ſurely Parſons was a fit fellow to derive the pedigree of the Kings of England, who might firſt have ſtudied to deduce his own deſcent from a lawfull Father, being himſelf (otherwiſe called Cowback) [c] filius populi et filius peccati, as Catholicks have obſerved. Many letters alſo he ſent over full of threats, and aſſuring his party, that the land would be invaded by forrainers; writing therein not what he knew or thought was, but what he deſired and endeavoured ſhould be true. Some of theſe letters being intercepted, made the Queens officers (as they had juſt cauſe) more ſtrickt in ſearching, as her Judges more ſevere in puniſhing the Papiſts. Hereupon the Seculars complained, that ſuch proceedings againſt them (tearmed perſecution by them, and juſtice by our State) was cauſed by the Jeſuits, and that Parſons eſpecially, though he had kindled the fire, left others to bear the heat thereof. Yea, which was more, he was not himſelf contented to ſleep in a whole ſkinn at Rome, but laſhed others of his own Religion, and having got his neck out of the collar, accuſed others for not drawing weight enough, taxing the Seculars as dull and remiſs in the cauſe of Religion: and to ſpeak plainly, they differed as hot and cold poiſon, the Jeſuits more active and pragmatical, the Seculars more ſlow and heavie, but both maintaining treacherous principles, deſtructive to the common-Wealth.

The complaint of the Seculars againſt the Jeſuits, and principally againſt Parſons.

[a] Declaratio motuum ad Clementem octavum pag. 24.

[b] Camdens Elizt. in Anno 1594. p. 72.

[c] Watſons Quodlibets. p. 109 & 236.

31. If we look now on the Non-Conformiſts, we ſhall finde them all ſtill and quiet. After a ſtorm comes a calm wearied with a former bluſterme, they began now to repoſe themſelves in a ſad ſilence, eſpecially ſince the executions of Udal and Penry had ſo terrified them, that though they might have ſecret deſignes, we meet not their open and publick motions, ſo that this Century affordeth little more, then the mortalities of ſome eminent men.

A general calm.

32. We begin with Richard Fletcher Biſhop of London, bred in Bennet Colledge in Cambridg, one of a comly perſon, and goodly preſence, (qualities not to be caſt away in a Biſhop, though a Biſhop not to be choſen for them,) he lov'd to ride the great horſe, and had much ſkill in managing thereof, condemned for very proud, (ſuch his natural ſtately garb) by ſuch as knew him not, and commended for humility by thoſe acquainted with him, he loſt the Queens favour becauſe of his ſecond unhappy match, and died ſuddainly, more of grief then any other diſeaſe: with him let me couple another heartbroken Biſhop, John Coldwell of Salisbury D^r of Phyſick (S^t Luke we know was both an Evangeliſt and Phyſician) who never enjoyed himſelf, after he had conſented (though little better then ſurpriſed thereunto) to the alienation of Sherborn Manor from the Biſhoprick.

The death of Bp Fletcher, and Biſhop Coldwell.

33. Here I am at a loſs for the date of the death of Laurence Humphry, but confident I hit the but, though miſs the mark, as about this time. He was

The death of Laurence Humfry.

was a conſciencious and moderate Non-conformiſt, (condemned for lukewarm by ſuch as were ſcalding-hot,) Dean of Winchester and Maſter of Magdalen Colledge in Oxford, to which he bequeathed a conſiderable Summ of Gold, left in a cheſt, not to be opened, except ſome great neceſſity urged thereunto. But lately whilſt Dr John Wilkinſon was Preſident of the Colledge, this Gold was ſhar'd between him and the fellows. And though one muſt charitably believe the matter not ſo bad as it is reported, yet the moſt favourable relation thereof gave a general diſtaſt. Anno Dom. 1596. Anno Regin Eliz. 39.

A great Antiquaries good intention diſcouraged.

34. Sure I am, a great Antiquarie lately deceaſed, (rich as well in his ſtate, as learning) at the hearing hereof quitted all his intentions of benefaction to Oxford or any place elſe, on ſuſpition it would be diverted to other uſes. On the ſame token that he merrily ſaid, I think the beſt way for a man to perpetuate his memory, is to procure the Pope to Canonize him for a Saint, for then he ſhall be ſure to be remembred in their Calender: Whereas otherwiſe I ſee all Proteſtant charity ſubject to the covetouſneſs of poſterity to devour it, and bury the donor thereof in oblivion.

The charity of a Spaniſh Proteſtant.

35. Mr Baltezer Zanches a Spaniard, born in Sverez in Eſtremadura, founded an alms-houſe at Tetnam high-croſs in Middleſex for eight ſingle people, allowing them competent maintenance. Now ſeeing Proteſtant Founders are rare, Spaniſh Proteſtants rarer, Spaniſh Proteſtant Founders in England rareſt, I could not paſs this over with ſilence, nor muſt we forget, that he was the firſt confectioner or comfit-maker in England, bringing that myſtery to London, and (as I am informed) the exactneſs thereof continues ſtill in his family, in which reſpect they have ſucceſſively been the Queens and Kings confectioners.

The acts in the Parliament.

36. A Parliament held at Weſtminſter, wherein the deprivation of Popiſh Biſhops in the firſt of this Queens Reign, was declared legall. Some will wonder what need is of this Statute at ſo many years diſtance, but the Preface intimates the neceſſity thereof. The Legality alſo of our Biſhops and their Officers, were again by act of Parliament confirmed. And whereas there was a pretended concealment of ſome lands of the Biſhoprick of Norwich, the ſame by act of Parliament were ſetled on that See, and the Exchange of Lands ratified, made in the Reign of King Henry the Eight. The contemporary convocation did nothing of moment. 1597. 40.

The death of Tho. Stapleton.

37. Thomas Stapleton this year ended his life, and was buried at St Peters Church in Louain, it is written in his Epitaph, qui Ciceſtriæ in Angliâ nobili loco natus, where Ciceſtria is taken not for the City, but Dioceſs of Chicheſter, having otherwiſe good aſſurance that he was born at Henfield in Suſſex, the ſame year and moneth wherein * St Thomas More was beheaded, obſerved by the Catholicks as a grand providence, he was a moſt learned aſſertor of the Romiſh Religion, wanting nothing but a true cauſe to defend. On one account I am beholding unto him, viz. for diſſwading * Petræus from being a Souldier to be a Scholler, whoſe Hiſtory of our Engliſh writers hath ſo often been uſefull unto me. 1598. 41.

* See Pitzæus in his life.

* Idem ibidem.

The death of Dr Coſins.

38. Richard Coſins Dr of the Law and Dean of Arches this year ended his life; One of the greateſt Civilians which our Age or Nation hath produced, a moſt moderate man in his own nature, but moſt earneſt aſſertor of the Eccleſiaſtical diſcipline, as by his printed works doth appear.

The death of Rob. Turner.

39. Robert Turner his death was now much bemoaned by the Papiſts, he was born at Barſtable in Devon, bred for a while in Oxford, whence flying beyond the Seas, he became Canon of Breſlaw in Sileſia, and at the ſame time Privie Councellor to the Duke of Bavaria, falling afterward into his diſpleaſure, probably becauſe more pragmatical then became a forrainer; however Ferdinand of Gratz (afterwards Emperor) took him from the Duke to be his own Secretary for the Latine tongue, wherein he excelled, as by his printed Orations doth appear, he lieth buried at Gratz under a handſom Monument. 1599. 42.

40. Great

Anno Regin Eliz. 42. Anno Dom. 1599.

40. Great was the grief of Protestants for the decease of Richard Hooker, Turners Country-man, as born also in Devon-shire, and bred in Corpus-Christi Colledge in Oxford, living and dying a single man, of whom largely before. His innocency survived to triumph over those aspersions which the malice of others (advantaged by his own dove-like simplicity) had cast upon him I am informed Sr Edwin Sands hath erected a monument over him, in his Parish-Church in Kent, where he lieth interred. The death of Rich. Hooker.

41. I cannot omit what I finde in this year in Mr Camden his * manuscript-life of Queen Elizabeth. A report was cast out by our polititians in the midst of Harvest of the danger of a present forrain invasion, done out of designe, to prevent the Popularity of the Earl of Essex, and to try the peoples inclinations. Instantly all were put into a posture of defence, mowers, reapers, all harvest folke left their work, to be imployed in musters. This afterwards appeared but a Court-project, whereat the country took much distast, so ill it is to jest with edged tools, especially with Sythes and Sickles. My Author addeth, that people affirmed that such May-games had been fitter in the spring (when sports were used amongst the Romans to Flora) and not in the Autumn when people were seriously imployed to fetch in the fruits of the earth. But by his leave these Expressions flow from Criticks, and fly far above the capacities of Country-men. An over-politick act disliked. * Which shortly will be set forth in a new edition.

43. 1600. 42. This Century Concluded the lives of two eminent Roman Catholicks John Sanderson born in Lancashire, bred in Trinity Colledge in Cambridge, where he set forth an excellent Logick, called Sandersons Logick, fourty years ancienter then that, which his worthy name-sake of Oxford, (of a different judgement in religion) hath since printed on the same subject. From Cambridge he fled to Cambray in Artois, where he lived with good comfort, and died with great credit with those of his own perswasion. The other Thomas Case of St Johns in Oxford, Dr of Physick, it seems always a Romanist in his heart, but never expressing the same, till his mortal sickness seized upon him. The death of I. Sanderson, and T. Case.

The end of the sixteenth Century.

The

THE CHURCH-HISTORY OF BRITAIN.

THE TENTH BOOK.

Containing the Reigne of

KING JAMES.

TO THE HONOURABLE,

ROBERT,

Lord BRUCE,

Sole SON to the Right Honourable

THOMAS

EARLE of ELGIN.

HAving, by Gods aſsiſtance, drawn down my Hiſtory to the death of Queen Elizabeth, ſome diſſwade me from continuing it any further: Becauſe, that as Saint Peter out of warineſſe (alias cowardlineſſe) followed Chriſt (who was the Truth) * afarre off; ſo they lay this down for a Maxime, That the Story of Modern Times muſt not be written by any alive; A Poſition, (in my poor opinion) both diſgracefull to Hiſtorians, and prejudiciall to Poſterity.

* Mat. 26. 58.

Diſgracefull to Hiſtorians:) as if they would make themſelves like unto the beaſts of the Forreſt, as characte-
Pſal. 104. 20,22. red by David, Who move in the Darkneſſe, till the Sun ariſeth, and they get them away; loving to write of things done at diſtance, where Obſcurity may protect their Miſtakes from Diſcovery, but putting up their pens as ſoon as the day dawns of Modern Times, and they within the reach of reputation.

Prejudiciall to Poſterity:) ſeeing intentions in this na-
*Plutarch in his Morals. ture long delayed are at laſt defeated. The Young man moved by his Mother to Marry; returned, That (as yet) it was too ſoon: and ſome yeares after, pleaded, That now it was too late. So ſome ſay, Truth is not ripe enough to be written in the Age we live in, which proveth rotten too much for the next Generation faithfully to report, when the Impreſes of memorable matters are almoſt worn out: the Hiſtories then written having more of the Authors hand, than footſteps of truth therein.

Sure I am, the moſt informative Hiſtories to Poſterity, and ſuch as are moſt highly prized by the judicious, are ſuch as were written by the Eye-witneſſes thereof. As Thucidides the reporter of the Peloponeſian Warre.

However, one may obſerve ſuch as write the Story of their their owne Times, like the two Meſſengers which carried tydings to David: Of theſe, Ahimaaz, (ſent the rather by permiſsion than injunction) onely told David what he knew would pleaſe him, acquainting him with his Victory. But being demanded of his Sons death, he made a Tale of a * Tumult, (no better than an officious Lye for himſelf) the iſſue whereof was to him unknown. * 2 Sam. 18. 29.

Cuſhi, the other Meſſenger, having his carriage leſſe of cunning, and more of conſcience: informing the King of his Sons death, but folding it up in a faire expreſsion, * The Enemies of my Lord the King, and all that riſe againſt thee to doe thee hurt, be as that young man is. * 2 Sam. 18. 32.

Ahimaaz is imitated by ſuch Hiſtorians, who leave that unwritten which they ſuſpect will be unwelcome. Theſe following the rule, Summa Lex ſalus Authoris, when they meet with any neceſſary but dangerous Truth, paſſe it over with a Blank flouriſhed up with ſome ingenious evaſion.

Such Writers ſucceed to plain Cuſhi in their Relations, who give a true account of actions, and to avoid all exaſperating terms (which may make a bad matter worſe in relating it) uſe the moſt lenitive language in expreſsing diſtaſtfull matter, adventuring with their own danger to procure the information of others. Truly one is concerned in conſcience to tranſmit to the next Age ſome ſhort intimations of theſe Times, out of feare that Records are not ſo carefully kept in theſe ſo many and ſudden Changes, as they were in former Ages.

I know Machiavel was wont to ſay, That he who undertakes to Write a Hiſtory, muſt be of no Religion: if ſo, he himſelfe was the beſt qualified of any in his Age to be a good Hiſtorian.

But, I believe, his meaning was much better than his words, intending therein, That a Writer of Hiſtories muſt not diſcover his inclination in Religion to the prejudice of Truth: Levi-like, who ſaid to his Father and Mother, I have not ſeen them, owning no acquaintance of any Relations.

This I have endeavoured to my utmoſt in this Book; knowing, as that Oyle is adjudged the beſt that hath no taſt at all; ſo that Hiſtorian is preferred, who hath the leaſt Tangue of partial Reflections.

However, ſome Candour of courſe is due to ſuch Hiſtorians, (wherein the Courteſie not ſo great in giving as the Injury in detaining it) which run the Chiding of theſe preſent Times in hope that after-Ages may excuſe them. And I am confident that theſe my Labours ſhall finde the ſame favour favour (which may be in meer men, ſhould be in all Gentlemen, muſt be in true Chriſtians) the rather becauſe this Booke appeareth Patronized by a Dedication to Your Honour.

I have ſelected your Lordſhip for a Patron to this part of my Hiſtory, wherein the Reign of King IAMES is contained, under WHoſe peaceable Government your Grandfather was His Privie Counſellour, and Maſter of the Rolls, when your Family was not brought, but brought back into England, where it had flouriſhed Barons many yeares before. Plants are much meliorated by tranſplanting, eſpecially when after many years they are reſtored to their Native ſoile as Cordiall unto them. And thus the continuance and increaſe of all happineſſe to your Selfe and Noble Conſort, is the unfeigned Prayer of

Your Honours moſt obliged ſervant

THOMAS FULLER.

Ann. 17 Eliz. 6.

Ann. Dom. 1601

THE CHURCH-HISTORY OF BRITAINE.

CENT: XVII.

1. THE difference betwixt the Seculars and the Jesuites still continued and increased. Wherefore Bishop Bancroft, counting the Seculars the better but weaker side, afforded them countenance and maintenance in London house, accommodating them with necessaries to' write against their adversaries, hoping the Protestants might assault the Romish cause with the greater advantage, when they found a breach made to their hand by the others own dissentions. But such who bore no good will to the Bishop, beholding the frequent repairing and familiar conversing of such Priests in his house, made a contrary construction of his actions, and reported him Popishly affected. Thus those who publiquely doe things in themselves liable to offence, and privately reserve the reasons of their actions in their owne bosomes, may sufficiently satisfie their consciences towards God, but will hardly avoid the censures of men, to which too unwarily they expose themselves. With more generall applause was the bounty of Arch-Bishop Whitgift bestowed, who now finished his Hospitall founded and endowed by him at Croydon in Surrey, for a Warden, and eight and twenty Brethren: As also a Free-Schoole, with liberall maintenance, for the education of Youth. God (the best of Creditors) no doubt, long since hath plentifully re-pay'd what was lent to him, in his Members.

The Seculars fomented by the Bishop of Lond. against the Jesuits.

Oct. 27. Nov. 19.

2. The last Parl. in this Queenes raigne was now begun at Westm. and dissolved the moneth next following. Of such things which at distance may seeme to relate to Church affaires, in this Parl. it was Enacted, That Overseers of the Poor should be nominated yeerly in Easter week under the Hand and Seale of two [a] Justices of Peace, and that these with the Church wardens should take care for the relieve of the Poore, binding out of Apprentices, &c. As also, That the Lord Chancellor should award Commissions under the Great Seale, into any part of the Realme, (as cause should require) to the [b] Bishop of every Diocese, and his Chancellour; and any four or more persons of honest behaviour, to enquire by oathes of twelve men, into the mis-imployment of any Lands or Goods given to pious uses: and by their Orders, to appoint them to be duly and faithfully paid or employed to their true uses and intents. In pursuance of this Statute, much good was and is done to this day, in severall parts of the Kingdome, the Law being very tender, that the true intentions of the Donour should take effect, as by this eminent instance may appeare. By the rule of the Law, Copyhold Land cannot be aliened, but by Surrender; but yet if a man Devise such Land to a Charitable use, though it had not been surrendred, this is [c] adjudged good, and shall be construed an appointment to a Charitable use within this Statute.

Acts in the last Parliament of Q. Eliz.

a Statute 43. of Q. Eliz. c. 2.

b Ibid. cap. 4.

c 15 Jac. in Rivets Case in Chancery.

3. Now if we look into the Convocation, parallel to this Parliament, therein we shall find, that it began with a Latine Sermon of William Barlow Doctor of Divinity, and one of Her Majesties Chaplaines, (afterwards Bishop of Rochester, then of Lincolne) Preaching on this Text, Luke 19. 13. Negotiamini dum venio. In this Convocation, Mathew Sutcliffe, Doctor of the Law, and Deane of Exeter was choſen Prolocutor, but nothing ſave matters of courſe paſſed therein. Nor finde I any eminent Divine deceaſed this yeare. Ann. Dom. 1601 Ann. Reg. 43.

Acts of this yeares Convocation.

Franck Godw. made Biſhop of Landaff.

d In vita Greg. Nazianzen.

4. Francis Godwin Doctor of Divinity, Sub-Deane of Exeter, Sonne of Thomas Godwin, Biſhop of Wells, (like another d Gregorie NaZianZen a Biſhop, Son to a Biſhop) was promoted to the Church of Landaff, he was borne in the fourth year of Queen Elizabeth, who was not a little ſenſible of, and thankfull for Gods favour unto her, in ſuffering her ſo long to hold the Helme of the Engliſh Church, till one borne within her reigne was found fit to be a Biſhop. He was ſtored with all polite Learning, both judicious and induſtrious in the ſtudy of Antiquity, to whom, not onely the Church of Landaff (whereof he well deſerved) but all England is indebted, as for his other learned Writings, ſo eſpecially for his Catalogue of Biſhops. He was tranſlated Anno 1617. to Hereford, and died, many yeares after, a very old man in the reign of King CHARLES.

Watſon's Quodlibets againſt the Jeſuits.

5. Now came forth a notable Book againſt the Jeſuites, written in a Scholaſtick way, by one Watſon a Secular Prieſt, conſiſting of ten quodlibets, each whereof is ſub-divided into as many Articles. It diſcovereth the Jeſuites in their colours, ferreting them out of all their burrowes of Equivocation and mentall reſervation, holding Proteus ſo hard to it, that in deſpight of his changing into many ſhapes, he is forced to appeare in his own proper forme. No intire Anſwer, for ought I can learn, was ever returned to this Book. The Jeſuits (according to their old Trick) ſlighting what they cannot confute, and counting that unworthy to be done, which they found themſelves unable to doe. Indeed, for matters of fact therein, they are ſo punctually reported with the ſeverall circumſtances of time and place, that the guilty conſciences of ſuch as are concerned therein (though ſnapping and ſnarling at pieces and paſſages thereof) for the main may well give it over for unanſwerable. 1602 44

The black character of Ieſuites painted with the Penſil of a Secular Prieſt.

e Second Quodliber, third Article. pag. 62.

6. Yet the whole Book is written with an imbittered ſtyle, ſo that Proteſtant Charity hath a better conceit of Jeſuits, than to account them altogether ſo bad. Take one paſſage of many. e No, no, their courſe of life doth ſhew what their Hudy is, and that howſoever they boaſt of their perfections, holineſſe, Meditations and exerciſes, yet their platforme is heathenish, tyrannicall, ſathanicall, and able to ſet ARETINE, LUCIAN, MACHIAVEL, yea, and DON LUCIFER in a ſort to ſchoole, as impoſſible for him, by all the art he hath, to be-ſot men as they doe. This is the ſame Watſon, who, though boaſting of the obedience of the Secular Prieſts to their Soveraigns, and taxing the Ieſuits for want thereof, was notwithſtanding himſelf, afterwards executed for a Traitor in the reigne of King Iames. It ſeemes as well Secularſ, as Ieſuits, are ſo loaden with Loyalty, that both need the Gallowes to eaſe them of the burden thereof.

A Quiet in the Engliſh Ch: and the cauſe thereof.

7. Great at this time was the Calm in the Engliſh Church, the Brethren not endeavoring any thing in Oppoſition to the Hierarchie. This ſome impute not to their Quierneſſe, but Wearineſſe, becauſe ſo long they had in vaine ſeeked to caſt off that Yoke from them: Beſides, they did not ſo much practiſe for the Preſent, as project for the Future, to procure hereafter an Eſtabliſhment of their Eccleſiaſticall Government. For they beheld the Queenes old Age as a Taper of Virgin-Wax now in the Socket, ready to be extinguiſhed, which made them addreſſe and apply themſelves with all diligence, to IAMES King of Scotland, the Heire apparent to the Crowne, as to the riſing Sun, whom they hoped will be more favourable to their Proceedings. Hopes not altogether groundleſſe, whileſt they conſidered the Power of the Presbytery in the Church of Scotland, where Biſhops, though lately reſtored to their place, were ſo reſtrained in their Power, that ſmall was their Command in Church-affaires, which made the Brethren in England thence to promiſe Great matters to themſelves, but with what ſucceſſe ſhall be ſeen hereafter. As for Mr. Thomas Cartwright, the Chieftaine of that Party in England; we finde him at this time growing rich in the Towne of Warwick, (there Maſter of an Hoſpitall) by the Benevolence and Bounty of his Followers, where he preached f very temperately, according to his Promiſe made to the Arch-biſhop.

f Sir Geo: Paul in the life of Arch-biſhop Whigift. p. 14

8. Some

Ann. Regni Reg. 44. Ann. Dom. 1602

8. Some aſcribe this his Mildneſſe to his old Age and Experience, it being commonly obſerved, that in Controverſies of this kinde, Men, when they conſult with their owne Gray haires, begin to abate of their Violence. Others conceive that Arch-biſhop Whitgift had conquered him with his kindeneſſe, having formerly procured him both his Pardon & Diſmiſſion out of all his Troubles, ſo that his Coales of Courteſies heaped on Mr. Cartwright's Head, made the good Metall (the Ingenuity in him) to melt into Moderation. For in his Letters written with his owne hand, March 24. Anno 1601. he confeſſeth himſelf much obliged unto him, vouchſafing him the ſtyle of A RIGHT REVEREND FATHER IN GOD, AND HIS LORD THE ARCH-BISHOP'S GRACE OF CANTERBURY, which Title of GRACE, he alſo often yeildeth him throughout his Letters, acknowledging his [g] Bond of moſt humble Duty ſo much the ſtraiter, becauſe his Grace's Favour proceeded from a frank Diſpoſition, without any deſert of his owne. Others (and that not improbably) doe think that Mr. Cartwright grew ſenſible with Sorrow, how all Sects and Schiſmes, being oppoſite to Biſhops (Browniſts, Barrowiſts, &c.) did ſhroud and ſhelter themſelves under his Protection, whom he could neither reject with Credit, nor receive with Comfort, ſeeing his Conſcience could not cloſe with their enormous Opinions, and his Counſell could not regulate their extravagant Violences, which made him by degrees decline their Party. Yet, for all this, there want not thoſe who will maintaine, that all this while Mr. Cartwright was not more remiſſe, but more reſerv'd in his Judgement, being ſtill as ſound, but not as ſharpe in the cauſe out of Politick intents, like a skilfull Pilot in a great Tempeſt yeilding to the Violence of a ſtorme, therewith to be carried away, contrary to his intents for the preſent, but waiting when the Wind ſhould ſoone turne about to the North, and blow him and his a proſperous Gale, according to their Deſires.

Several Reaſons aſſigned of Mr. Cartwright's Moderation.

g Sir George Paul, ut prius.

9. What his opinions were, may appeare by the Premiſes, and his life may be preſumed moſt pious, it concerning him to be ſtrict in his Converſation, who ſo ſtickled for the Reformation of all abuſes in the Church. An excellent Scholar, pure Latiniſt (his Travels advantaging the ready uſe thereof) accurate Grecian, exact Hebraician, as his Comments on the Proverbs, and other Works, doe ſufficiently teſtifie. But the Maſter-piece of all his Writings, was, that his Confutation of the Rhemiſh Tranſlation of the New Teſtament into ENGLISH, at the Importunity of many Miniſters of London and Suffolk, and Sir Francis Walſingham, the Queenes Secretary, (Mr. Cartwright's eſpeciall Patron) gave him an [h] hundred pounds to buy him Books, and incourage him in that Work. However, the ſetting forth thereof, was ſtopped by Arch-biſhop Whitgift; probably we may conceive, becauſe ſome Paſſages therein did glance at and gird the Epiſcopall Diſcipline in England, and after it had layn thirty yeares neglected, it was firſt ſet forth Anno 1618. and then, without either Priviledge or Licence, except any will ſay that Truth is a Licence for it ſelfe. In a word, no Engliſh Champion in that Age, did with more Valour or Succeſſe, charge and rout the Romiſh Enemy in matters of Doctrine. But when that Adverſary ſometimes was not in the field, then his active ſpirit fell foul in point of Diſcipline, with thoſe which otherwiſe were of his own Religion.

The Character of Mr. Cartwr.

h See the Preface of M. Cartwright's Book

10. The ſame yeare proved fatall to many other eminent Clergie-men, and I hope, without offence, I may joyne them together, their Bodies at the ſame time meetnig at the Grave, though their mindes before had parted in different Opinions.

Biſhop Weſtphaling, Dean Nowel, Mr. Perkins, Gr. Sayer, and Will. Harvie, depart this World.

1. Herbert Weſtphaling Biſhop of Hereford (though perchance his Ambignous Death is more properly referred to the laſt yeare) brought up in Chriſt-church in Oxford, being the firſt Biſhop of that Foundation, a Man of great Piety of Life, and of ſuch [i] Gravity, that he was ſeldome, or never ſeene to laugh, leaving no great, but a well gotten Eſtate, out of which he bequeathed i Godwin de Præſulibus Angliæ. p. 546.

queathed twenty pounds per annum to Jesus Colledge in Oxford. Ann. Dom. 1602 Ann. Reg. Eliz. 44

2. Alexander Nowell Doctor of Divinity, and Deane of S. Paul's in London, borne in Lancashire, bred in Oxford, afterwards fled into Germanie, in the reigne of Queen Mary. He was the first of [k] English Exiles, that returned in the dayes of Q. Elizabeth. And I have read how in a Parliament he was chosen Burgess of a Town of Cornwall: But his Election pronounced void, because he was a Deacon. A Man of a most Angelicall Life, and Deep Learning. A great Defender of Justification by Faith alone, and yet a great Practiser of Good Works; witnesse [l] two hundred pounds a year rent, for the maintenance of thirteen Students bestowed on Brazen-nose Colledge, wherein he had his Education. A great honourer of the Marriage of the Clergie, and yet who lived and died single himselfe. An aged Man, of 90. yeares of age, yet fresh in his youthfull Learning: yea, like another Moses, his eyes were not dimme, nor did he ever make use of [m] Spectacles to read the smallest Print.

3. William Perkins, who was born in the first, and died in the last of Q. Eliz. so that his Life (as [n] we have elsewhere observed, to which we remit the Reader) running parallel with this Queens Reign, began, continued, and ended therewith.

4. Gregory (before his entrance into Religion Robert) Sayer, bred in Cambridge, then leaving the Universitie, fled beyond sea, where he became a Benedictine Monk, of the Congregation of S. Justin in Padua. He lived in severall parts of Europe, as at Rhemes, Rome, Montcasie, Venice, where he died, and was buried [o] the 30. of Octob. having written many Volumes in great esteem with men of his Profession.

5. William Harris, as Obscure among Protestants, as Eminent with the Popish Party. A Master of Art of Lincoln Colledge in Oxford: whence leaving the Land, he fled beyond-sea, living at Doway, and afterwards he came over into [p] England, where it seemes he had the Hap to escape the Queenes Officers, and to die in his Bed. His Book called THE THEATRE OF THE MOST TRUE AND ANTIENT CHURCH OF ENGLAND, is highly accounted of Roman Catholiques.

11. About this time the low Estate of the City of Geneva (the Nursery of the Reformed Religion) was lively represented to the Prelates, Clergy, and Well-disposed Persons of England, being for the Present in a very Dolefull condition. Long since it had been undone, but because it had so many Enemies to undoe it: So that by Gods providence, [q] Out of the Devourer came Meat; such Neighbouring Princes and States, which were both Willing and Able to swallow up this Zoar, did preserve it. For rather than Savoy should suppresse it, Venice, Florence, the Popish Cantons in Switzerland, and France it self, would support. But for all this politick Geometry, wherewith long it had hung safe betwixt severall Competitours, it was, lately, shrewdly shaken by the Puissance of the Duke of Savoy, who, addicted to the Spanish Faction, had banished all Protestants out of his Dominions: Arch-bishop Whitgift (whose hand was ever open to any Pious Design) led with his liberall Example, and the rest cheerefully followed, so that large summes of money were seasonably made over for the Relieve of Geneva.

12. Queen Elizabeth, the mirrour of her Sex and Age, having above 40 years, to the Admiration of Envy it selfe, managed this Kingdome, finding when she began, few Friends that durst help, and leaving no Foes that could hurt her, exchanged her Earthly, for a Heavenly Crowne, who, as she lived and died an unspotted Virgin, so her Maiden memory is likely, in this respect, to remaine sole and single; seeing History affords no Prince to be matched to her Fame in all considerable Particulars. Her Corps were solemnly interred under a fair Tomb in

[k] Donald Lupton in his Life.

[l] Cambden's Elizabeth in Anno 1602.

[m] Hugh Holland in his Icones Virorum Illustrium.

[n] In the Holy State, where see his Life at large.

[o] Pitseus de Scriptoribus Angliæ Ætate Decima septima. p. 801.

[p] Idem ibidem.

Relief sent to the City of Geneva.

[q] Judg. 14. 14.

The death of Q. Elizabeth.

Ann. Reg. 45. Ann. Dom. 1602

in Westminster; the lively Draught whereof, is pictured in most London, & many Countrey Churches, every Parish being proud of the shadow of her Tomb; and no wonder, when each Loyal Subject erected a mournfull Monument for her in his heart. But soon after all English Soules were employed equally to divide themselves betwixt Exclamations of Sorrow for her Death, and Acclamations of Joy for K. James his succeeding her.

King Ja. 1.

13. And now it is strange with what Assiduity and Diligence, the two Potent Parties, the Defenders of Episcopacy and Presbytery, with equall Hopes of Successe, made (besides Private and Particular Addresses) Publique and Visible Applications to King James, the first to continue, the later to restore, or rather set up their Government; So that whilest each Side was Jealous, his Rival should get the Start by early stirring, and rise first in the Kings favour. Such was their Vigilancy, that neither may seem to go to Bed: Incessantly diligent both before and since the Queenes Death, in dispatching Posts and Messages into Scotland to advance their severall Designes. We take notice of two principall, M. Lewis Pickering a Northampton-shire Gentleman, and zealous for the Presbyterian Party, was the third Person of quality, who riding incredibly swift (good Newes makes good Horsemen) brought King James the Tydings of Queen Elizabeths Death. But how farre, and with what Answer he moved the King in that Cause, is uncertaine. Doctour Thomas Nevill, Deane of Canterburie, came into Scotland some dayes after him, (except any will say, that he comes first, that comes really to effect what he was sent for) being solemnly employed by [a] Arch-bishop Whitgift to his Majesty in the name of the Bishops and Clergy of England, to tender their Bounden Duties, and to understand his Highnesse Pleasure for the ordering and guiding of Ecclesiasticall Causes. He brought back a welcome Answer to such as sent him of his Highnesse purpose, which was to uphold, and maintain the Goverment of the late Queen, as she left it setled.

K. James sends a Welcome message to the Episcopall Party.

[a] Sir G: Pauls in the Arch-bishops Life, Numb. 126.

14. Soone after followed the Treason of William Watson on this occasion. This Watson, Secular Priest, had written a bitter Book against the Jesuits, as being one knowing (though not so secret) of their faults, as their owne Confessours, taxing them with truth so plaine, they could not deny, so foule, they durst not confesse it. Now such is the charity of Jesuits, that They never owe any man any ill will, making present payment thereof. These Holy Fathers (as Watson intimated on the [d] Scaffold, at his Death, and forgave them for the same) cunningly and covertly drew him into this action, promoting him, who was ambitious, (though pretending to much Mortification) treasonably to practise his own preferment.

Watson's silly Treason.

[d] Stowes Chronicle. p. 831.

15. Watson, with William Clark another of his own profession) having fancied a notionall Treason, imparted it to George Brooks, one angry with Nature, not so much for making him lame, as a younger Brother. These break it to (Brook his Brother) the L. Cobham, to the Lord Gray of Whaddon, and Sir Walter Rawleigh, the one a known Protestant, the other a reputed Puritan, the third an able Statesman: Besides, some other Knights, displeased with their present Fortunes (how quickly is Discontent inflamed into Disloyalty!) because, since the turning of the Wheele, at the Queenes Death, on the wrong Side of Preferment. Watson devised an Oath of Secrecy for them all, which was no more than needfull, considering their different Interests, rather pieced than united, patched than pieced together.

His manly Complices.

16. Had one lost his Religion, he might have found it (though I confesse a Treason is but a bad place to seeke it in) in this Conspiracy, wherein men of all perswasions were engaged. Their Parts were as different as their Opinions, some of them being conceived too wise to begin, and others too weak to finish so dangerous a Designe. The ends they propounded to themselves, (as they were charged therewith) were to kill the King, raise Rebellion, alter Religion, at least gaine a Toleration, and procure a forraign Invasion, with many more things which, may be spoken easier in a Minute, than done in an Age, especially their Interest being not much at home, and nothing abroad. They ante-divided all Offices of State betwixt themselves, Lord Marshall to one, Treasurer to another, Master of the Horse to a third, Secretary to a fourth, &c. onely Sir Walter Rawleigh (able to discharge any) had no particular Office assigned unto him. Watson was to be Lord Chancelour, being very fit for the place, had he but as much skill to decide Causes, as write Quodlibets. There wanted nothing to estate them in all these Offices, but onely their getting of them.

Their wild mistakes whereby to attaine a mad end.

Ann. Dom. 1602 — Ann. Reg. Jac.

The two Priests executed.

17. Wonder not that this Treason was discovered so soon, but covered so long. The two Priests alone, with G: Brook, were executed, who, to use the words of King James in his Letter to Sir Benjamine Tichbourne, Sheriff of Hantshire, (for the Plague being in London, Terme was removed to Winchester, where they were tried) Waire the principall Plotteris and Intisaris of all the rest, to the embracing of the saidis treasonabil Machinations. The rest were pardoned their Lives, not their Lands. We must not forget that the Priests pleaded the fillest for themselves of all that were arraigned, alledging, that their Practise against the King could not be Treason, because done against him before he was crowned. Watson instancing in Saul, who was anoynted in [e] Ramah, and afterward made King in [f] Mizpeh. Clark insisted on Rehoboam, as being no King till the People had [g] made him so. Not remembring (what our Lawyers there minded them of) the difference betwixt successive Kings, deriving their claime from their Ancestors, and one newly elected, the English Crowne also being as incapable of an Inter-regnum, as Nature of a Vacuitie. Mean time, the Jesuits looked on, and laughed at Watson's Execution, to see how bunglingly Secular Priests went about a Treason, resolving in the next platforme thereof (which now they were contriving) to rectifie the errours Watson had committed: not to ingage in a squint-ey'd company (where two did not look the same way) but to select a competencie of cordial Catholiques for the purpose.

Nov. 19.

e 1 Sam. 10. 1.
f Ibid. ver. 24.
g 1 King. 12. 1

Mr Cartwright dedicates a Book to King James.

18. No sooner was King James setled on the English Throne, but Mr. Cartwright presented unto him his Latin Coment on Ecclesiastes, thankfully mentioning in his Dedication, how he had, some twenty yeares before, been chosen to be Professour in a Scotch University, though declining the acceptance thereof, because of his Pastorall Charge, being then Minister to the English Congregation at Antwerp. Thanks, perchance, not so proper to the person of King James (though in Loyalty and good Manners, justly tendred unto him) as due, rather to those who in his minority steered the affaires of Scotland: Nor let any wonder that an English man should be proffered preferment in Scotland, seeing it was but one for another, remembring that I have read in the life of Mr. Knox, that he was offered an English Bishoprick in the reigne (as I take it) of K. Edw: the 6. and likewise refused the same.

Mr. Cartwright his Death.

19. But Mr Cartwright survived not long after (otherwise, no doubt, we should have heard of him in Hampton-Court-Conference, as the Champion of his Party) who died at the age of sixty, on the 27. of December following. To what we have formerly largely writ of his Character, we now onely adde, that he was born in Hertford-shire, and married the Sister of M. Stubbs, whose hand was struck off for writing an [interpreted] Libel against Queen Elizabeths Marriage with Monsieur. This I dare boldly say, She was a most excellent Wife, if she proved like her Brother, whom Mr. Cambden (no great friend of Puritans) cordially commendeth for a right honest man, generally beloved whilest living, and lamented when dead. He was afflicted towards his old Age with many Infirmities, insomuch that he was forced continually to studie upon his * knees. My Eares shall be deaf to the uncharitable inference of those, who impute this extraordinary painfull posture as a just punishment upon him, in that he had so bitterly inveighed against the gesture of those as superstitious, who reverently received the Sacrament on their knees. M. Dod preached his Funerall Sermon.

Dec. 27.

Camden in his Eliz.

* See his Life lately set forth by M. Clark.

The Presbyterian Petition to K. & Parl.

20. And now, because there was a generall expectation of a Parliament, suddenly to succeed the Presbyterian Party, that they might not be surprised, before they

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1. Ann. Dom. 1603

they had their tackling about them, went about to get hands of the Ministers to a Petition, which they intended seasonably to present to the K. and Parl. M. Arthur Hildersham, and M. Stephen Egerton, with some others, were chosen, and chiefly intrusted to manage this important businesse. This was called The millenary Petition, as, One of a thousand, [w] though in indeed there were but seven hundred and fifty Preachers hands set thereunto: But those all collected onely out of five and twenty Counties. However, for the more rotundity of the number, and grace of the matter, it passeth for a full thousand; which, no doubt, the Collectours of the names (if so pleased) might easily have compleated. I dare not guesse what made them desist before their number was finished; whether they thought that these were enough to doe the deed, and moe, were rather for ostentation than use; or, because disheartned by the intervening of the Hampton-Court Conference, they thought, that these were even too many to petition for a Deniall. It is left as yet uncertaine, whether this Conference was by the Kings favour graciously tendered, or by the mediation of the Lords of his Counsell powerfully procured; or by the Bishops, as confident of their cause, voluntarily proffered; or by the Ministers importunity effectually obteyned. Each Opinion pretends to Probability, but the last most likely. And, by what meanes soever this Conference was compassed, Hampton-Court was the Place, the 14 of January the Time, and the following Names the Persons which were employed therein.

w See M. Hildersham's Life set forth By Mr. Clark.

160[4]

Jan. 14.

For Conformity.		Moderator	Against Conformity.
Arch-bish. of Canterbury.	Whitgift.	KING JAMES.	Dr. Reynolds. Sparks.
Bishops of: London.	Bancroft.	Spectators.	Mr. Knewstubs. Chaderton.
Durham.	Mathew.	All the Lords of the Privy Counsil, whereas some at times, interposed a few words.	[b] These remaining in a Room without, were not called in the first day.
Winchester.	Bilson.
Worcester.	Babington.
St. Davids.	Rudd.	Place.
Chicester.	Watson.	A withdrawing Room within the Privy chamber.
Carleil.	Robinson.
Peterbor.	Dove.
Deans of: [a] The Chappell.
Christ-Church.
Worcester.
Westminster.	Andrewes.
S. Pauls.	Overall.
Chester.	Barlow.
Sarisbury.	Bridges.
Winsor.
D. Field. King.

a Though all these Deanes were summoned by Letters, and present in the Presence-Chamber; yet onely five, (viz. of the Chappel, Westminster, Pauls, Chester and Sarisbury) on the first day were called in.

To omit all gratulatory Preambles, as necessary, when spoken, as needlesse, if now repeated, we will present onely the Substance of this Dayes Conference, his Majesty thus beginning it.

"It is no novel device, but according to the example of all Christian Princes, for Kings to take the first course for the establishing of the Church, "both in Doctrine and Policy. To this the very Heathen related in their Proverb, A Jove principium, particularly in this Land, King Henry the 8. towards the end of his Reign, altered much, King Edward the 6. more, Queen "Mary reversed all, and lastly, Queen Elizabeth (of [b] famous memory) setled "Religion as now it standeth.

"Herein I am happier than they, because they were faine to alter all things "they b Note his Majesty never remembred her, but with some honourable Addition.

"they found eſtabliſhed, whereas I ſee yet no ſuch cauſe to change, as confirm "what I finde well ſetled already. For bleſſed be Gods gracious Goodneſſe, "who hath brought me into the Promiſed Land, where Religion is purely "profeſſed, where I ſit amongſt Grave, Learned, and Reverend Men, not as "before, elſewhere, a King without State, without Honour, without Order, "where Beardleſſe Boyes would brave us to the Face.

"And I aſſure you, we have not called this Aſſembly for any Innovation, "for we acknowledge the Government Eccleſiaſticall, as now it is, to have "been approved by manifold bleſſings from God himſelf, both for the in- "creaſe of the Goſpel, and with a moſt happy and glorious Peace. Yet be- "cauſe nothing can be ſo abſolutely ordered, but that ſomething may be ad- "ded thereunto, and corruption in any State (as in the Body of Man) will in- "ſenſibly grow either thorough Time or Perſons; and becauſe we have re- "ceived many complaints ſince our firſt entrance into this Kingdome of ma- "ny diſorders, and much diſobedience to the Lawes, with a great falling away "to Popery; Our purpoſe therefore is, like a good Phyſitian, to examine and "try the Complaints, and fully to remove the occaſions thereof, if ſcandalous, "cure them, if dangerous; and take knowledge of them, if but frivolous, there- "by to caſt a Sop into Cerberus his Mouth, that he bark no more. For this "cauſe we have called you Biſhops and Deans in, ſeverally by your ſelves, not to "be confronted by the contrary Opponents, that if any thing ſhould be found "meet to be redreſſed, it might be done without any viſible Altera- "tion.

"Particularly there be ſome ſpeciall Points wherein I deſire to be ſatisfied, "and which may be renduced to three Heads, 1. Concerning the Book of "Common Prayer, and Divine Service uſed in the Church. 2. Excommunicati- "on in Eccleſiaſticall Courts. 3. The providing of fit and able Miniſters for Ire- "land. In the Common Prayer-book I require ſatisfaction about three "things:

"Firſt about Confirmation. For the very name thereof, if arguing a Confir- "ming of Baptiſme, as if this Sacrament without it were of no validity, is plain- "ly blaſphemous. For though at the firſt uſe thereof in the Church, it was "thought neceſſary, that baptiſed Infants, who formerly had anſwered by "their Patrini, ſhould, when come to yeares of diſcretion, after their Profeſ- "ſion made by themſelves, be confirmed with the bleſſing of the Biſhop, I "abhorre the Abuſe wherein it is made a Sacrament, or Corroboration to Ba- "ptiſme.

"As for Abſolution, I know not how it is uſed in our Church, but have heard "it likened to the Popes Pardons. There be indeed two kindes thereof from "God: One generall, all Prayers and Preaching importing an Abſolution. "The other particular to ſpeciall Parties, having committed a Scandall, and "repenting: Otherwiſe, where Excommunication precedes not, in my judge- "ment there needs no Abſolution.

"Private Baptiſme is the third thing wherein I would be ſatisfied in the "Common Prayer: If called Private from the Place, I think it agreeable with "the uſe of the Primitive Church; but if termed private, that any, beſides a "lawfull Miniſter, may baptiſe, I utterly diſlike it. [And here his Ma- "jeſty grew ſomewhat earneſt in his Expreſſions, againſt the baptiſing by Women "and Laicks.]

"In the ſecond Head of Excommunication, I offer two things to be conſide- "red of: Firſt the Matter, Secondly the Perſons. For the firſt, I would be "ſatisfied, whether it be executed (as it is complained of to me) in light Cau- "ſes, and that too commonly, which cauſeth the undervaluing thereof. For "the Perſons, I would be reſolved, why Chancellours, and Commiſſaries, be- "ing Lay-men, ſhould do it, and not rather the Biſhops themſelves, or ſome "Miniſter of Gravity and account, depured by them for the more dignity

to

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1 Ann. Dom. 1603.

"to ſo high and weighty a Cenſure. As for providing Miniſters for Ireland, "I ſhall refer it in the laſt daies Conference to a Conſultation.

[c] Ar-Bp. of Cāt. Confirmation hath been uſed in the Catholick Church ever ſince the Apoſtles; and it is a very untrue ſuggeſtion (if any have informed your Highneſſe) that the Church of England holds Baptiſme imperfect without it, as adding to the vertue and ſtrength thereof.

c He addreſſed himſelfe to the King on his knee.

Bp. of Lon. The Authority of Confirmation depends not onely on [d] Antiquity, and the Practiſe of the Primitive Church, but is an Apoſtolical Inſtitution, named in expreſſe words, Heb. 6. 2. and ſo did Mr. Calvin expound the very place, earneſtly wiſhing the reſtitution thereof in the reformed Churches. [The Biſhop of Carlile is ſaid gravely and learnedly to have urged the ſame, and the Biſhop of Durham noted ſomething out of S. Mathew for the Impoſition of hands on Children.]

d Citing Cypr. Ep. 73. and Tert. Adverſus Luciferiam.

The Concluſion was this, For the fuller Explanation that we make Confirmation, neither a Sacrament nor a Corroboration thereof, their Lordſhips ſhould conſider whether it might not without Alteration (whereof his Majeſty was ſtill very wary) be intitled an Examination with a Confirmation.

Ar-B. of Cāt. As for the point of Abſolution (wherein your Majeſty deſires ſatisfaction) it is clear from all abuſe or ſuperſtition, as it is uſed in our Church of England, as will appear on the reading both of the Confeſſion and Abſolution following it, in the beginning of the Communion Book.

Here the King peruſed both, and returned.

His Majeſty. I like, and approve them, finding it to be very true what you ſay.

Bp. of Lond. It becometh us to deal plainly with your Majeſty. There is alſo in the Book a more particular and perſonall Abſolution in the Viſitation of the Sick.

Here the Dean of the Chappel turned unto it and read it.

These be ſeverally cited.

Bp. of Lond. Not onely the Confeſſions of Auguſta, Boheme, and Saxon, retaine and allow it, but Mr. Calvin alſo doth approve, both ſuch a generall, and ſuch a private (for ſo he termes it) Confeſſion and Abſolution.

His Majeſty. I exceedingly well approve it, being an Apoſtolicall and Godly Ordinance, given in the name of Chriſt, to one that deſireth it, upon the clearing of his Conſcience.

The Concluſion was this, That the Biſhops ſhould conſult, whether unto the Rubrick of the general Abſolution, theſe words, Remiſſion of Sins, might not be added for explanation ſake.

Arch-Bp. of Can. To the point of private Baptiſme, the adminiſtration thereof by Women and Lay-perſons is not allowed in the practiſe of the Church, but enquired of, and cenſured by Biſhops in their Viſitations.

His Majeſty. The Words of the Book cannot but intend a permiſſion of Women and private Perſons to baptiſe.

Bp. of Worc. The doubtfull words may be preſſed to that meaning; yet the Compilers of the Book did not ſo intend them, as appeareth by their contrary practiſe. But they propounded them ambiguouſly, becauſe otherwiſe (perhaps) the Book would not (then) have paſſed the Parliament.

[d] To this he cited the Teſtimony of the Arch-biſhop of Yorke.

Bp. of Lond. Thoſe reverend Men intended not by ambiguous terms to deceive any, but thereby intended [e] a Permiſſion of private Perſons to baptiſe, in caſe of neceſſity. This is agreeable to the practiſe of the ancient Church, Act. 2. when three thouſand being baptiſed in a day, (which for the Apoſtles alone to doe, was [at the leaſt] improbable) ſome being neither Prieſts nor Biſhops, muſt be preſumed imployed therein, and ſome Fathers are of the ſame opinion. Here he ſpake much, and earneſtly about the neceſſity of Baptiſme.

e Here he produced the Letters of ſome of thoſe firſt compilers.

His Ma. That in the Acts was an Act extraordinary, and done before a Church was setled and grounded, wherefore no sound reasoning thence to a Church stablished and flourishing. I maintaine the necessity of Baptisme, and always thought the place John 3.5. Except one be born againe of Water, &c. was meant thereof. It may seem strange to you, my Lords, that I think you in England give too much to Baptisme, seeing fourteen moneths agoe in Scotland, I argued with my Divines there, for attributing too little unto it; Insomuch that a pert Minister asked me, if I thought Baptism so necessary, that, if omitted, the Child should be damned? I answered, No: But if you, called to baptise a Child, though privately, refuse to come, I think you shall be damned. Ann. Dom 1604. Ann. Reg. Jac.

But, this necessity of Baptisme I so understand, that it is necessary to be had, if lawfully to be had, that is, ministred by lawfull Ministers, by whom alone, and no private person in any case, it may be administred: though I utterly dislike all Re-baptization on those whom Women or Laicks have baptised.

Bp. of Winch. To deny private Persons to baptize in case of necessity, were to crosse all Antiquity, and the common Practice of the Church, it being a rule agreed on amongst Divines, that the Minister is not of the Essence of the Sacrament.

His Ma. Though he be not of the Essence of the Sacrament, yet is he of the Essence of the right, and lawfull Ministry thereof, according to Christs Commission to his Disciples, Go preach and baptise, &c. g Mat. 28, 20.

The Result was this, To consult, whether in the Rubrick of Private Baptisme, which leaves it indifferently to all, these words, Curate, or lawfull Minister, may not be inserted.

For the point of Excommunication, His Majesty propounded, whether in causes of lesser moment the name might not be altered, and the same censure retained. Secondly, whether in place thereof another coertion, equivalent thereunto, might not be invented? Which all sides easily yeilded unto, as long and often desired; and so was

The end of the first dayes Conference.

On Monday January the 16. they all met in the same place, with all the Deans and Doctours above mentioned, (Patrick Galloway, Minister of Perth in Scotland, admitted also to be there) And hopefull Prince Henry sate on a stoole by his Father. Jan. 16.

The King made a pithie Speech to the same purpose which he made the first day, differing onely in the conclusion thereof, being an addresse to the four Opposers of Conformity, there present, whom he understood the most grave, learned, and modest of the aggrieved sort, professing Himself ready to hear at large what they could object, and willed them to begin.

Dr. Reyn. All things disliked or questioned, may be reduced to these four Heads.

1. That the Doctrine of the Church might be preserved in purity, according to Gods Word.
2. That good Pastors might be planted in all Churches to preach the same.
3. That the Church government might be sincerely ministred according to Gods Word.
4. That the Book of Common-Prayer might be fitted to more increase of Piety.

For the first, may Your Majesty be pleased, that the Book of Articles of Religion concluded an 1562. may be explained where obscure, enlarged where defective, viz. Whereas it is said, Article the 16. After we have received received the Holy Ghost, we may depart from Grace. Those words may be explained with this or the like addition, Yet neither totally, nor finally. To which end it would do very well, if the nine orthodoxall Assertions, concluded on at Lambeth, might be inserted into the Book of Articles.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1 | Ann. Dom. 1604.

Secondly, whereas it is said in the 23 Article, that it is not lawfull for any in the Congregation to preach, before he be lawfully called: these words ought to be altered, because implying one out of the Congregation may preach, though not lawfully called.

Thirdly, in the 25 Article there seemeth a contradiction, one passage therein confessing Confirmation, to be a depraved imitation of the Apostles, and another grounding it on their example.

Bp. of Lond. May your Majesty be pleased, that the ancient Canon may be remembred. Schismatici contra Episcopos non sunt audiendi. And, there is another Decree of a very ancient Council, That no man should be admitted to speak against that whereunto he hath formerly subscribed.

And as for you Doctor Reynolds, and your Sociates, how much are ye bound to his Majestie's Clemency, permitting you, contrary to the Statute primo Elizabethæ, so freely to speak against the Liturgie, and Discipline established. Faine would I know the end you aime at, and whether you be not of Mr. Cartwright's minde, who affirmed, That we ought in Ceremonies rather to conforme to the Turks than to the Papists. I doubt you approve his Position, because here appearing before his Majesty in Turky-Gownes, not in your Scholastick habits, according to the order of the Universities.

His Majesty. My Lord Bishop, something in your passion I may excuse, and something I must mislike. I may excuse you thus farre, That I thinke you have just cause to be moved, in respect that they traduce the well-setled Government, and also proceed in so indirect a course, contrary to their owne pretence, and the intent of this Meeting. I mislike your sudden interruption of Doctour Reynolds, whom you should have suffered to have taken his liberty; For, there is no Order, nor can be any effectuall Issue of Disputation, if each party be not suffered, without chopping, to speak at large. Wherefore, either let the Doctor proceed, or frame your Answer to his Motions already made, although some of them are very needlesse.

Bp. of Lond. Upon the first motion concerning falling from Grace, may Your Majesty be pleased to consider how many in these dayes neglect holinesse of Life, presuming on persisting in Grace upon Predestination, If I shall be saved, I shall be saved. A desperate Doctrine, contrary to good Divinity, wherein we should reason rather ascendendo than descendendo, from our Obedience to God, and Love to our Neighbour, to our Election and Predestination. As for the Doctrine of the Church of England, touching Predestination, it is in the very next Paragraph, viz. We must receive Gods Promises in such wise as they be generally set forth to us in Holy Scripture, and in our doings the will of God is to be followed, which we have expresly declared unto us in the Word of God.

His Majesty. I approve it very well, as consonant with the place of Paul, Work out your salvation with feare and trembling. Yet let it be considered of, whether any thing were meet to be added for clearing of the Doctors doubt, by putting in the word often, or the like. Mean time, I wish that the Doctrine of Predestination may be tenderly handled, lest on the one side Gods Omnipotency be questioned by impeaching the Doctrine of his eternall Predestination, or on the other side a desperate presumption arreared, by inferring the necessary certainty of persisting in Grace.

B. of Lond. The second Objection of the Doctors is vain, it being the Doctrine and Practice of the Church of England, that none but a Licensed Minister may preach, nor administer the Lords Supper.

Ann. Dom 1616 | Ann. Reg. Jac. 14

His Majesty. As for Private Baptisme, I have already with the Bishops taken order for the same.

Then came they to the 2d. point of Confirmation, and upon the perusal of the words of the Article, His Majesty concluded the pretended Contradiction a Cavill.

Bp. of Lond. Confirmation is not so much founded on the place in the Acts of the Apostles, but upon Heb. 6. 2. which was the opinion, besides the judgement of the Fathers, of Mr. Calvin [b] and Doctour Fulk [i], neither needeth there any farther proof, seeing (as I suppose) he that objected this holds not Confirmation unlawfull, but he and his Party are vexed that the use thereof is not in their owne hands, for every Pastor to confirme his owne Parish; for then it would be accounted an Apostolicall Institution, if Dr. Reynolds were pleased but to speak his thoughts therein.

b On Heb. 6. 2.
i On Act. 8. 37.

Dr. Reyn. Indeed seeing some Diocesse of a Bishop hath therein six [k] hundred Parishes, it is a thing very inconvenient to permit Confirmation to the Bishop alone, and I suppose it impossible that he can take due examination of them all which come to be confirmed.

k Here the Bishop of London thought himself touched, because about 609 in his Diocess.

Bp. of Lond. To the matter of fact, I answer, that Bishops in their Visitations appoint either their Chaplains, or some other Ministers, to examine them which are to be confirmed, and lightly confirme none but by the testimony of the Parsons and Curates, where the Children are bred and brought up.

To the Opinion I answer, that none of all the Fathers ever admitted any to confirme but Bishops alone. Yea, even S. Jerome himselfe (otherwise no friend to Bishops) confesseth the execution thereof was restrained to Bishops onely.

Ecclesiæ Salus in summi sacerdotis dignitate pendet, cui si non exors quædam & ab omnibus eminens data potestas, tot in Ecclesiâ efficientur Schismata quot Sacerdotes.

Bp. of Winch. Dr. Reynolds, I would fain have you, with all your Learning, shew where ever Confirmation was used in antient times by any other but Bishops; These used it partly to examine Children, and after Examination by Imposition of Hands (the Jewish Ceremony of Blessing) to blesse and pray over them; and partly to try whether they had been baptised in the right forme or no. For in former ages some baptised (as they ought) in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy-Ghost. Some (as the Arrians) in the name of the Father as the greater, and the Sonne as the lesse. Some in the name of the Father by the Sonne, in the Holy Ghost. Some not in the name of the Trinity, but onely in the Death of Christ. Whereupon Catholick Bishops were constrained to examine them who were baptised in remotis, concerning their Baptisme, if right to confirme them, if amisse to instruct them.

His Majesty. I dissent from the judgement of S. Jerome in his assertion, that Bishops are not of Divine Ordination.

Bp. of Lond. Unlesse I could prove my Ordination lawfull out of the Scriptures, I would not be a Bishop four hours longer.

His Majesty. I approve the calling and use of Bishops in the Church, and it is my Aphorisme, No Bishop, no King; nor intend I to take Confirmation from the Bishops, which they have so long enjoyed. Seeing as great reason that none should confirme, as that none should preach without the Bishops License. But let it be referred, whether the word Examination ought not to be added to the Rubrick in the title of Confirmation in the Communion-book. And now Dr. Reynolds you may proceed.

Dr. Reyn. I protest I meant not to gall any man, though I perceive some took personall exceptions at my words, and desire the imputation of [m] Schisme may not be charged upon me. To proceed on the 37. Article, wherein are these words, The Bishop of Rome hath no authority in this Land. These are not sufficient, unless it were added, nor ought to have any.

m It seemes the Bishop of London, jealous that he was reflected on, (as is aforesaid) called the Doctor Schismatick.

His Majesty. Habemus jure, quod habemus, and therefore in as much as it is said he hath not, it is plaine enough that he ought not to have.

Here

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1 Ann. Dom. 1603

Here passed some pleasant discourse betwixt the King and Lords about Puritans, till returning to seriousnesse: There began the

Bp. of Lond. May it please your Majesty to remember the Speech of the French Embassadour, Mounsieur Rognee, upon the view of our solemne service and Ceremonie, viz. That if the Reformed Churches in France had kept the same order, there would have been thousands of Protestants more than there are.

Dr. Reyn. It were well if this proposition might be added to the Book of Articles, The Intention of the Minister is not of the Essence of the Sacrament, the rather, because some in England have preached it to be essentiall, and here againe I could desire that the nine Orthodoxall Assertions concluded at Lambeth, may be generally received.

His Majesty. I utterly dislike the first part of your motion, thinking it unfit to thrust into the Book of Articles every position negative, which would swell the book into a volume as big as the Bible, and confound the Reader. Thus one M. Craig in Scotland with his, I renounce and abhorre his multiplyed detestations and abrenuntiations, so amazed simple people, that not able to conceive all their things, they fell back to Popery, or remained in their former ignorance. If bound to this forme, the Confession of my faith must be in my Table-booke, not in my head.

Because you speake of intention, I will apply it thus. If you come hither with a good intention to be informed, the whole work will sort to the better effect: But if your intention be to go as you came (whatsoever shall be said) it will prove the intention is very materiall and essentiall to the end of this present action.

As for the nine Assertions you speak of, I cannot sodainly answer, not knowing what those Propositions of Lambeth be.

Bp. of Lond. May it please your Majesty, this was the occasion of them, by reason of some Controversies arising in Cambridge about certain points of Divinity, my Lords Grace assembled some Divines of speciall note to set down their opinions, which they drew into nine Assertions, and so sent them to the University for the appeasing of those quarrels.

His Majesty. When such questions arise amongst Scholars, the quietest proceedings were to determine them in the University, and not to stuff the Book of Articles, with all Conclusions Theologicall.

Secondly, the better course would be to punish the Broachers of false Doctrine, than to multiply Articles, which, if never so many, cannot prevent the contrary opinions of men till they be heard.

Dean of Pauls. May it please your Majesty, I am neerely concerned in this matter, by reason of a Controversie betwixt me and some other in Cambridge, upon a Proposition, which I there delivered, namely, that whosoever (though before justified) did commit any grievous sinne, as Adultery, Murder, &c. doe become ipso facto, subject to Gods wrath, and guilty of Damnation, quoad præsentem statum, untill they repent. Yet, so that those who are justified according to the purpose of Gods Election (though they might fall into grievous sin, and thereby into the present Estate of Damnation) yet never totally nor finally from Justification; but were in time renewed by Gods spirit unto a lively Faith and Repentance. Against this Doctrine some did oppose, teaching that persons once truly justified, though falling into grievous sinnes, remained still in the state of Justification, before they actually repented of these sinnes, yea, and though they never repented of them through forgetfulnesse or sudden death, they nevertheless were justified and saved.

His Majesty. I dislike this Doctrine, there being a necessity of conjoyning repentance and holinesse of Life with true Faith, and that is Hypocrisie, and not justifying Faith, which is severed from them. For although Predestina- destination and Election depend not on any qualities, actions, or works of Man which are mutable, but on Gods eternall Decree. Yet such is the necessity of repentance after known sinnes committed, that without it no Reconciliation with God, or Remission of Sins.

Dr. Reyn. The Catechisme in the Common-Prayer-book is too brief, and that by Mr. Nowel (late Deane of Pauls*) too long for* Novices to learne by heart. I request therefore that one Uniform Catechisme may be made, and none other generally received.

His Majesty. I think the Doctour's request very reasonable, yet so, that the Catechisme may be made in the fewest and plainest affirmative termes that may be, not like the many ignorant Catechismes in Scotland, set out by every one who was the Sonne of a good man; insomuch that what was Catechisme-Doctrine in one Congregation, was scarcely received as Orthodox in another; and herein I would have two rules observed: First, That curious and deep questions be avoided in the Fundamentall instruction of a People, Secondly, That there should not be so general a departure from the Papists, that every thing should be accounted an Errour wherein we agree with them.

Dr. Reyn. Great is the Prophanation of the Sabbath day, and contempt of your Majestie's Proclamation, which I earnestly desire may be reformed.

This motion found an unanimous consent.

Dr. Reyn. May your Majesty be pleased that the Bible be new translated, such as are extant not answering the Originall, and he instanced in three particulars.

Gal. 4. 25.	In the	ουσοιχεῖ	Ill translated	Bordereth.
Psal. 105. 28.	Originall	They were not disobedient.		They were not obedient.
Psal. 106. 30.		Phinehas execut. judgement.		Phinehas prayed.

B. of Lond. If every mans humour might be followed, there would be no end of translating.

His Majesty. I professe I could never yet see a Bible well translated in English; but I think, that of all, that of Geneva is the worst. I wish some speciall pains were taken for an uniform translation, which should be done by the best learned in both Universities, then reviewed by the Bishops, presented to the Privy Councell, lastly ratified by Royall Authority, to be read in the whole Church, and no other.

Bp. of Lond. But it is fit that no marginall notes should be added thereunto.

His Majesty. That Caveat is well put in, for in the Geneva Translation, some notes are partiall, untrue, seditious, and savouring of traiterous conceits: As, when from Exodus 1. 19. Disobedience to Kings is allowed in a Marginall note. And 2 Chron. 15. 16. King Asa taxed in the Note for onely deposing his Mother for Idolatry, and not killing her. To conclude this point, let Errours, in matters of Faith, be amended, and indifferent things be interpreted, and a glosse added unto them. For as Bartolus de Regno saith, that a King with some weaknesse, is better than still a change; so rather a Church with some Faults, than an Innovation. And surely, if these were the greatest matters that grieved you, I need not have been troubled with such importunate Complaints.

Dr. Reyn. May it please your Majesty, that unlawfull and seditious Books be suppressed, such as Ficlerus, a Papist, De Jure Magistratus in Subditos, applyed against the late Queen for the Pope.

Bp. of Lond. There is no such licentious divulging of these Books, and none have Liberty, by Authority, to buy them, except such as Dr. Reynolds, who was supposed would confute them. And, if such Books come into the Realme by secret conveyances, perfect notice cannot be had of their importation.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1 Ann. Dom. 1603.

tation. Besides, Ficlerus was a great Disciplinarian, whereby it appeares what advantage that sort gave unto the Papists, who, mutatis personis, apply their owne arguments against Princes of their Religion, though for my part I detest both the Author and Applyer alike.

The Ld. Cecil. Indeed the unlimited liberty of dispersing Popish and Seditious Pamphlets in Paul's Church yard, and both the Universities, hath done much mischief; but especially one called Speculum Tragicum.

His Majesty. That is a dangerous Book indeed.

L. H. Howard. Both for Matter and Invention.

Ld. Chancel. Of such Books, some are Latin, some are English, but the last dispersed do most harm.

Secret. Cecil. But my Lord of London (and no man else) hath done what he could to suppresse them.

His Majesty. Dr. Reynolds, you are a better Colledge-man than a States-man, if meaning to tax the Bishop of London for suffering those Books, betweene the Secular Priests and Jesuits, to be published, which he did by warrant from the Council, to nourish a Schisme betwixt them.

Ld. Cecil. Such Books were tolerated, because by them the Title of Spaine was confuted.

Ld. Treasurer. And because therein it appeares, by the Testimony of the Priests themselves, that no Papists are put to death for Conscience onely, but for Treason.

Dr. Reyn. Indeed I meant not such Books as were printed in England, but onely such as came from beyond the Seas. And now to proceed to the second generall point, concerning the planting of learned Ministers, I desire they be in every Parish.

His Majesty. I have consulted with my Bishops about it, whom I have found willing and ready herein: But, as subita evocatio is periculosa, so subita mutatio: It cannot presently be performed, the Universities not affording them. And yet they afford moe learned men, than the Realme doth Maintenance, which must be first provided. In the mean time, ignorant Ministers, if young, are to be removed, if there be no hope of amendment; if old, their death must be expected, because Jerusalem cannot be built up in a day.

Bp. of Winch. Lay-Patrons much cause the insufficiency of the Clergy, presenting mean Clerks to their Cures (the Law admitting of such sufficiency) and, if the Bishop refuseth them, presently a Quare impedit is sent out against him.

Bp. of Lond. *Because this I see is a time of moving Petitions, * may I humbly present two or three to your* Majesty: First, That there may be amongst us a praying Ministery, it being now come to passe, that men think it is the onely Duty of Ministers to spend their time in the Pulpit. I confesse, in a Church newly to be planted, Preaching is most necessary, not so in one long established, that Prayer should be neglected.

* This he spake kneeling.

His Majesty. I like your Motion exceeding well, and dislike the Hypocrisie of our Time, who place all their Religion in the Eare, whilest Prayer (so requisite and acceptable, if duly performed) is accounted and used as the least part of Religion.

Bp. of Lond. My second motion is, that untill Learned men may be planted in every Congregation, godly Homilies may be read therein.

His Majesty. I approve your Motion, especially where the Living is not sufficient for the maintenance of a learned Preacher. Also, where there be multitudes of Sermons, there I would have Homilies read divers times.

Here the King asked the assent of the Plantiffs, and they confessed it.

A preaching Ministry is best, but where it may not be had, godly Prayers and Exhortations do much good.

Lord

Egerton, L. Ellesmere:

L^d. Chancel. Livings rather want Learned men, than Learned men Livings; many in the Universities pining for want of Places. I wish therefore some may have single Coats [one Living] before others have Doublets [Pluralities.] And this method I have observed in bestowing the King's Benefices.

Bp. of Lond. I commend your honourable care that way, but a Doublet is necessary in cold Weather.

L^d. Chancel. I dislike not the Liberty of our Church, in granting to one man two Benefices, but speak out of mine own purpose and practise, grounded on the aforesaid reason.

Bp. of Lond. My last motion is, that Pulpits may not be made Pasquils, wherein every discontented Fellow may traduce his Superiours.

His Majesty. I accept what you offer, for the Pulpit is no place of personall Reproof, let them complaine to me, if injured.

Bp. of Lond. If your Majesty shall leave your self open to admit of all Complaints, your Highnesse shall never be quiet, nor your under-Officers regarded, whom every Delinquent, when censured, will threaten to complain of.

His Majesty. I mean they shall complaine to Me by degrees; first to the Ordinarie, from him to the Arch-bishop, from him to the Lords of the Council; and, if in all these no remedy be found, then to my Self.

* This concerned the fourth generall head, (viz. the Communion Book) as he first propounded it; however, here he took occasion to urge it.

Dr. Reyn. I come now to Subscription, * as a great impeachment to a learned Ministerie, and therefore intreat it may not be exacted as heretofore; for which many good men are kept out, though otherwise willing to subscribe to the Statutes of the Realme, Articles of Religion, and the Kings Supremacy. The reason of their backwardness to subscribe, is, because the Common-prayer enjoyneth the Apocripha books to be read in the Church, although some Chapters therein contain manifest Errours repugnant to Scripture. For instance, Eccluſ. 48. 10. Elias in person is said to come before Christ, contrary to what is in the New * Testament of Elias in resemblance, that is, John the Baptist.

* Mat. 11. 14. Luke 1. 17.

Bp. of Lond. Most of the Objections against those Books, are the old Cavills of the Jewes, renewed by S. Jerome (who first called them Apocripha) which opinion, upon Ruffinus his challenge, he, after a sort, disclaimed.

Bp. of Winch. Indeed S. Jerome saith, Canonici sunt ad informandos mores, non ad confirmandam fidem.

His Majesty. To take an even order* betwixt both, I would not have all Canonicall Books read in the Church, nor any Chapter out of the Apocripha, wherein any errour is contained; wherefore let Dr. Reynolds note those Chapters in the Apocripha books, wherein those offences are, and bring them to the Arch-bishop of Cant. against Wednesday next; and now Dr. proceed.

* Viz. in the Dominical Gospels.

Dr. Reyn. *The next Scruple against Subscription, is, because it is twice * set down in the Common-prayer-book,* Jesus said to his Disciples, when by the Text in the Originall, it is plain, that he spake to the Pharisees.

His Majesty. Let the word Disciples, be omitted, and the words, Jesus said be printed in a different Letter.

Mr. Knewst. I take exceptions at the Cresse in Baptism, whereat the weak Brethren are offended, contrary to the counsel of the Apostle, Romans 14. 2 Corinth. 8.

* Here we omit Mr. Knewstub his exception against the interrogatories in Baptisme, because he spake so perplexedly, that his meaning is not to be collected therein.

His Majesty. Distingue tempora, & concordabunt Scripturæ, Great the difference betwixt those times and ours. Then, a Church not fully settled; Now, ours long established. How long will such Brethren be weak? Are not FORTY FIVE years sufficient for them to grow strong in? Besides, who pretends this weaknesse? We require not Subscriptions of Layicks and Ideots, but of Preachers and Ministers, who are not still (I trow) to be fed with Milk, being inabled to feed others. Some of them are are strong enough, if not head-strong; conceiving themselves able enough to teach him who last spake for them, and all the Bishops in the Land.

Ann. Dom. 1604. Ann. Reg. Jac. 1

Ann. Reg. Jac. | Anno Domi 1604.

Mr. Knewst. It is questionable whether the Church hath power to institute an outward significant signe.

Bp. of Lond. The Crosse in Baptisme is not used otherwise than a Ceremony.

Bp. of Winch. Kneeling, lifting up of the Hands, knocking of the Breast, are significant Ceremonies, and these may lawfully be used.

D. of the Chap. The Rabbines write, that the Jewes added both Signes and Words at the institution of the Passeover, viz. when they ate sowre herbs, they said, Take and eat these in remembrance, &c. When they drank Wine, they said, Drink this in remembrance, &c. Upon which addition, and tradition, our Saviour instituted the Sacrament of his last Supper, thereby approving, a Church may institute and retaine a Signe significant.

His Majesty. I am exceeding well satisfied in this point, but would be acquainted about the antiquity of the use of the Crosse.

Dr. Reyn. It hath been used ever since the Apostles time; But the question is, how ancient the use thereof hath been in Baptism.

D. of Westm. It appeares out of Tertullian, Cyprian, and Origen, that it was used in immortali lavacro.

Bp. of Winch. In Constantine's time it was used in Baptisme.

His Majesty. If so, I see no reason but that we may continue it.

Mr. Knewst. Put the case the Church hath power to adde significant signes, it may not adde them where Christ hath already ordained them, which is as derogatory to Christs Institution, as if one should adde to the great Seale of England.

His Majesty. The case is not alike, seeing the Sacrament is fully finished, before any mention of the Crosse is made therein.

Mr. Knewst. If the Church hath such a power, the greatest scruple is, how far the Ordinance of the Church bindeth, without impeaching Christian Liberty.

His Majesty. I will not argue that point with you, but answer as Kings in Parliament Le Roy s'avicera. This is like M. John Black, a beardlesse Boy, who told me the last * Conference in Scotland, that he would hold conformity with his Majesty in matters of Doctrine; but every man for Ceremonies was to be left to his owne Liberty. But I will have none of that, I will have one Doctrine, one Discipline, one Religion, in Substance, and in Ceremony. Never speak more to that point, how farre you are bound to obey.

* December 1602.

Dr. Reyn. Would that the Cross (being superstitiously abused in Popery) were abandoned, as the Brazen Serpent was stamped to powder by Hezekias, because abused to Idolatry.

His Majesty. In as much as the Crosse was abused to Superstition in time of Popery, it doth plainly imply that it was well used before. I detest their courses, who peremptorily disallow of all things, which have been abused in Popery, and know not how to answer the objections of the Papists, when they charge us with Noveltie, but by telling them, we retaine the primitive use of things, and onely forsake their Novell Corruptions. Secondly, no resemblance betwixt the Brazen Serpent (a materiall visible thing) and the signe of the Cross, made in the Aire. Thirdly, Papists (as I am informed) did never ascribe any spirituall Grace to the Cross in Baptisme. Lastly, materiall Crosses, to which people fell downe in time of Popery (as the Idolatrous Jewes to the Brazen Serpent) are already demolished, as you desire.

Mr. Knewst. I take exception at the wearing of the Surplice, a kind of Garment used by the Priests of Isis.

His Majesty. I did not think, till of late, it had been borrowed from the Heathen, because commonly called a rag of Popery. Seeing now we border not not upon Heathens, neither are any of them conversant with, or commorant amongst us, thereby to be confirmed in Paganisme; I see no reason but for comlinesse sake, it may be continued.

Dr. Reyn. I take exception at these words in the Marriage, With my body I thee worship.

His Majesty. I was made believe, the phrase imported no lesse than Divine Adoration, but finde it an usuall English terme, as when we say, A Gentleman of worship, & it agreeth with the Scriptures, giving Honour to the Wife. As for you, Dr. Reynolds, many men speak of Robin Hood, who never shot in his Bow. If you had a good Wife your selfe, you would think all worship and honour you could doe her, were well bestowed on her.

This the King spake smiling.

D. of Sarum. Some take exception at the Ring in Marriage.

Dr. Reyn. I approve it well enough.

His Majesty. I was married with a Ring, and think others scarce well married without it.

Dr. Reyn. Some take exceptions at the Churching of Women, by the name of purification.

His Majesty. I allow it very well, Women being loath of themselves to come to Church, I like this, or any other occasion to draw them thither.

Dr. Reyn. My last exception is against committing Ecclesiasticall Censures to Lay-Chancellors, the rather, because it was ordered, Anno 1571. that Lay-Chancellors, in matters of Correction, and Anno 1589. in matters of Instance, should not excommunicate any, but be done, onely by them who had power of the Keyes, though the contrary is commonly practised.

His Majesty. I have conferred with my Bishops about this point, and such order shall be taken therein as is convenient. Mean time go on to some other matter.

Dr. Reyn. I desire, that according to certaine Provinciall Constitutions, the Clergie may have meetings every three weeks.

1. First in Rural Deaneries, therein to have prophesying, as Arch-bishop Grindall, and other Bishops, desired of her late Majesty.
2. That such things as could not be resolved on there, might be referred to the Arch-Deacons Visitations.
3. And so to the Episcopall Synod, to determine such points before not decided.

His Majesty. If you aime at a Scottish Presbytery, it agreeth as well with Monarchy, as God and the Devill. Then Jack, and Tom, and Will, and Dick, shall meet and censure me and my Councill. Therefore I reiterate my former speech, Le Roy s'avisera; Stay, I pray, for one seven yeares, before you demand, and then if you find me grow purse and fat, I may, perchance hearken unto you, for that Government will keep me in breath, and give me work enough. I shall speak of one matter more, somewhat out of order, but it skilleth not, D. Reynolds, you have often spoken for my Supremacy, and it is well: But know you any here, or elsewhere, who like of the present Government Ecclesiasticall, and dislike my Supremacy?

Dr. Reyn. I know none.

His Majesty. Why then I will tell you a tale: After that the Religion restored by King Edward the sixt, was soon overthrowne by Queen Mary here in England, we in Scotland felt the effect of it. For thereupon Mr. Knox, writes to the Queen regent (a vertuous and moderate Lady) telling her that she was the supreme head of the Church, and charged her, as she would answer it at Gods Tribunall, to take care of Christ his Evangil, in suppressing the Popish Prelates, who withstood the same; But how long trow did you this continue? Even till by her authority, the Popish Bishops were repressed, and Knox, with his adherents, being brought in, made strong enough. Then began they to make small account of her supremacy, premacy, when, according to that more light, wherewith they were illuminated, they made a farther reformation of themselves. How they used the poore Lady my Mother, is not unknowne, and how they dealt with me in my minority. I thus apply it. My Lords, the Bishops, I may * thank you that these men plead thus for my Supremacy. They think they cannot make their Party good against you, but by appealing unto it; but if once you were out, and they in, I know what would become of my Supremacy, for NO BISHOP, NO KING. I have learned of what cut they have been, who, preaching before me, since my coming into England, passed over, with silence, my being Supreme Governour in causes Ecclesiasticall. Well Doctour, have you any thing else to say?

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1 | Ann. Dom. 1603

* This he said putting his hand to his hat.

Dr. Reyn. No more, if it please your Majesty.

His Majesty. If this be all your Party hath to say, I will make them conforme themselves, or else I will harrie them out of the Land, or else doe worse.

Jan. 18 Thus ended the second dayes Conference, and the third began on the Wednesday following, many Knights Civilians, and Doctours of the Law, being admitted thereunto, because the High Commission was the principall matter in debate.

His Majesty. I understand, that the parties named in the High Commission, are too many, and too mean, and the matters they deale with, base, such as Ordinaries at home in their Courts might censure.

Arch-b. of Cant. It is requisite their number should be many, otherwise I should be forced often-times to sit alone, if in the absence of the Lords of the Council, Bishops, and Judges at Law, some Deanes and Doctours, were not put into that Commission, whose Attendance I might command with the more Authority: I have often complained of the meannesse of matters handled therein, but cannot remedy it. For though the Offence be small, that the Ordinary may, the Offender oft-times is so great, and contumacious, that the Ordinary dare not punish him, and so is forced to crave help at the High Commission.

A nameless L^d^. The Proceedings in that Court, are like the Spanish Inquisition, wherein men are urged to subscribe more than Law requireth, and by the Oath ex officio, forced to accuse themselves, being examined upon twenty, or twenty four Articles on a sudden, without deliberation, and for the most part against themselves.

I dare not guess him, for fear of failing.

In proof hereof, he produced a Letter of an antient honourable Counsellour, An. 1584. verifying this usage to two Ministers in Cambridge-shire.

Arch-b. of Cant. Your Lordship is deceived in the manner of proceeding; For, if the Article touch the Party, for Life, Liberty, or Scandall, he may refuse to answer; I can say nothing to the particulars of the Letter, because twenty yeares since, yet doubted not, but at leisure to give your Lordship satisfaction.

L^d^. Chancel. There is necessity, and use of the Oath Ex officio, in divers Courts, and Causes.

Here we omit a discourse about Subscription, because not methodiz'd into the Speech of severall persons.

His Majesty. Indeed civil Proceedings onely punish Facts; but it is requisite that Fame and Scandals be looked unto in Courts Ecclesiasticall, and yet great moderation is to be used therein.

1. In gravioribus criminibus.

2. In such whereof there is a publique Fame, caused by the inordinate demeanour of the Offender.

And here he soundly described the Oath ex officio, for the ground thereof, the Wisdome of the Law therein, the manner of proceeding thereby, and profitable effect from the same.

Arch-b. of Cant. Undoubtedly your Majesty speaks by the speciall assistance of Gods Spirit.

Ann. Dom 1603. Ann. Reg. Jacs

Bp. of Lond. I protest my heart melteth with joy, that Almighty God, of his singular mercy, hath given us such a King, as, since Christs time, the like hath not beene.

Then passed there much discourse between the King, the Bishops, and the Lords, about the quality of the Persons, and Causes in the High Commission, rectifying Excommunications in matters of lesse moment, punishing Recusants, providing Divines for Ireland, Wales, and the Northern Borders. Afterwards the four Preachers were called in, and such alterations in the Lyturgie were read unto them, which the Bishops, by the Kings advice, had made, and to which, by their silence, they seemed to consent.

His Majesty. I see the exceptions against the Communion-book, are matters of weakness, therefore if the persons reluctant be discreet, they will be won betimes, and by good perswasions: If indiscreet, better they were removed, for by their factions many are driven to be Papists. From you Dr. Reynolds and your Associates, I expect obedience and humility (the marks of honest and good men) and that you would perswade others abroad by your example.

Dr. Reyn. We here do promise to performe all duties to Bishops, as Reverend Fathers, and to joyne with them against the common Adversary for the quiet of the Church.

* This he spake kneeling.

Mr. Chader. I request * the wearing of the Surplice, and the Crosse in Baptism may not be urged on some godly Ministers in Lancashire, fearing, if forced unto them, many won by their preaching of the Gospel will revolt to Popery, and I particularly instance in the Vicar of Ratsdale.

* Who being there present, averred the same.

Ar-b. of Cant. You could not have light upon a worse, for not many yeares agoe (as my Lord * Chancellor knowes) it was proved before me, that by his unreverent usage of the Eucharist (dealing the Bread out of a Basket, every man putting in his hand, and taking out a piece) he made many loath the Communion, and refuse to come to Church.

His Majestie. It is not my purpose, and I dare say it is not the Bishops intent, presently, and out of hand, to enforce these things, without Fatherly Admonitions, Conferences, and Perswasions, premised, but I wish it were examined, whether such Lancashire Ministers, by their paines and preaching, have converted any from Popery, and withall be men of honest Life, and quiet Conversation. If so, let Letters be written to the Bishop of * Chester, (who is a grave and good man) to that purpose, that some favour may be afforded unto them, and let the Lord Arch-bishop write the Letters.

* This was Rich: Vaughan, afterwards Bishop of Lond.

Bp. of Lond. If this be granted, the copie of these Letters will flie all over England, and then all non conformists will make the like request, and so no fruit follow of this Conference, but things will be worse than they were before. I desire therefore a time may be limited, within the compasse whereof they shall conforme.

His Majesty. I assent thereunto, and let the Bishop of the Dioceese set downe the time.

* Here he fell down on his knees.

Mr. Knewst. I request * the like favour of forbearance to some honest Ministers in Suffolk. For it will make much against their credits in the Country, to be now forced to the Surplice, and Crosse in Baptisme.

Arch-b. of Cant. Nay Sir. ——

His Majesty. Let me alone to answer him. Sir, you shew your self an uncharitable man. We have here taken paines, and, in the end, have concluded on Unity and Uniformity, and you, forsooth, must prefer the credits of a few Private Men before the Peace of the Church. This is just the Scotch Argument, when any thing was concluded, which disliked some humours. Let them either conform themselves shortly, or they shall hear of it.

Lord

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1 Ann. Dom. 1603

L^d. Cecil. The indecencie of ambuling Communions, is very offensive, and hath driven many from the Church.

B^p. of Lond. And Mr. Chaderton, I could tell you of fitting Communions in Emanuel Colledge.

Mr. Chad. It is so, because of the seats so placed as they be, and yet we have some kneeling also in our Chappell.

His Majesty. No more hereof for the present, seeing they have joyntly promised hereafter to be quiet and obedient.

Whereat He rose up to depart into an inner Chamber.

B^p. of Lond. Gods goodnesse be blessed for your Majesty, and give health and prosperity to Your Highnesse, your Gracious Queene, the young Prince, and all the Royall Issue.

Thus ended the three dayes Conference, wherein how discreetly the King carried himself, Posterity (out of the reach of Flatterie) is the most competent Judg, such matters being most truly discerned at distance. It is generally said, that herein he went above himselfe; that the Bishop of London appeared even with himselfe; and Dr. Reinolds fell much beneath himselfe. Others observed that Archbishop Whitgift spake most gravely; Bancroft (when out of passion) most politickly; Bilson, most learnedly. And of the Divines, Mr. Reynolds most largely; Knewstubs most affectionately; Chaderton most sparingly. In this Scene, onely Dr. Sparks was Lazarus redivivus, making use of his hearing, not speech, converted (it seemes) to the truth of what was spoken, and soon after setting forth a Treatise of Unity and Uniformity. The generall censure of the Conferencers.

But the Nonconformists complained, that the King sent for their Divines, not to have their Scruples satisfied, but his Pleasure propounded; not that he might know, what they could say, but they, what he would do in the matter. Besides, no wonder if Dr. Reynolds a little lost himself, whose eyes were partly dazled with the light of the Kings Majesty, partly daunted with the heat of his displeasure. Others complaine, that this Conference is partially set forth onely by Dr. Barlow, Dean of Chester, their professed Adversary, to the great disadvantage of their Divines. And when the Israelites go down to the Philistines, to whet all their Iron Tooles, no wonder if they set a sharp edge on their owne, and a blunt one on their Enemies weapons. The Non-conformists Complaint.

This Conference produced some alterations in the Lyturgie, Womens baptising of Infants, formerly frequent, hereafter forbidden; in the Rubrick of Absolution, Remission of Sinnes inserted, Confirmation termed also an Examination of Children; and some words altered in the Dominicall Gospels, with a resolution for a new Translation of the Bible. But whereas it was hitherto disputable, whether the North, where he long lived, or the South, whither he lately came, should prevaile most, on the Kings judgement, in Church-government; this doubt was now clearly decided. Hence forward many cripples in conformitie, were cured of their former halting therein, and such, who knew not their owne, till they knew the Kings minde in this matter, for the future, quietly digested the Ceremonies of the Church. The Product of this Conference.

We have formerly made mention of the Millenarius Petition for Reformation, which about this time was solemnly presented to His Majesty, and which here we have truly exemplified; The Copy of the Milenary Petition.

The humble Petition of the Ministers of the Church of England, desiring Reformation of certaine Ceremonies, and abuses of the Church.

To the most Christian, and excellent Prince, our Gracious and dread Soveraigne, James by the grace of God, &c. We the Ministers of the Church of England, that desire Reformation, wish a long, prosperous, and happy Raigne over us in this Life, and in the next everlasting Salvation.

Ann. Dom. 1603 Ann. Reg. Jac. 1

MOst gracious and dread Soveraigne, Seeing it hath pleased the Divine Majesty, to the great comfort of all good Christians, to advance Your Highnesse, according to Your just Title, to the peaceable Government of this Church and Common-wealth of ENGLAND: We the Ministers of the Gospel in this Land, neither as factious men, affecting a popular Parity in the Church, nor as Schismatikes aiming at the dissolution of the State Ecclesiasticall; but as the faithfull servants of Christ, and Loyall Subjects to Your Majesty, desiring, and longing for the redresse of divers abuses of the Church; could doe no lesse, in our obedience to God, service to Your Majesty, love to his Church, than acquaint Your Princely Majesty, with our particular griefs: For, as Your Princely Pen writeth, The King, as a good Physitian, must first know what peccant humours his Patient naturally is most subject unto, before he can begin his cure. And, although divers of us that sue for Reformation, have formerly, in respect of the times, subscribed to the Book, some upon Protestation, some upon Exposition given them, some with Condition, rather than the Church should have been deprived of their labour, and ministerie; Yet now, we, to the number of moe than a thousand, of Your Majesties Subjects and Ministers, all groaning, as under a common burden of Humane Rites and Ceremonies, doe, with one joynt consent, humble our selves at Your Majesties Feet, to be eased and relieved in this behalf. Our humble suit then unto Your Majesty is, that these offences following, some may be removed, some amended, some qualified.

I. In the Church-Service. That the Crosse in Baptisme, Interrogatories ministred to Infants, Confirmation, as superfluous, may be taken away. Baptisme not to be ministred by Women, and so explained. The Cap, and Surplice not urged. That Examination may goe before the Communion. That it be ministred with a Sermon. That divers termes of Priests, and Absolution, and some other used, with the Ring in Marriage, and other such like in the Book, may be corrected. The long-someness of Service abridged. Church-songs, and Musick moderated to better edification. That the Lords day be not profaned. The Rest upon Holy-dayes not so strictly urged. That there may be an Uniformity of Doctrine prescribed. No Popish Opinion to be any more taught, or defended. No Ministers charged to teach their people to bow at the name of JESUS. That the Canonicall Scriptures onely be read in the Church.

II. Concerning Church-Ministers. That none hereafter be admitted into the Ministerie, but able and sufficient men, and those to Preach diligently, and especially upon the Lords-day. That such as be already entred, and cannot Preach, may either be removed, and some charitable course taken with them for their relefe; or else to be forced, according to the value of their Livings, to maintain Preachers. That Non-Residencie be not permitted. That King Edward's Statute, for the lawfulnesse of Ministers Marriage be revived. That Ministers be not urged to subscribe, but, according to the Law, to the Articles of Religion, and the Kings Supremacie onely.

III. For Church-Livings, and Maintenance. That Bishops leave their Commendams; some holding Prebends, some Parsonages, some Vicarages with their Bishopricks. That double beneficed men be not suffered to hold, some two, some three Benefices with Cure: and some, two, three, or foure Dignities besides. That Impropriations annexed to Bishopricks and Colledges, be demised onely to the Preachers Incumbents, for the old rent. That the Impropriations of Lay-mens Fees may be charged with a fixt, or seventh part of the worth, to the maintenance of the Preaching Minister.

IV. For Church-Discipline. That the Discipline, and Excommunication may be administred according to Christs owne Institution: Or at the least, that enormities may be redressed. As namely, That Excommunication come not not forth under the name of Lay-persons, Chancellors, Officials, &c. That men be not excommunicated for trifles, and twelve-peny matters. That none be excommunicated without consent of his Pastour. That the Officers be not suffered to extort unreasonable Fees. That none, having Jurisdiction, or Registers places, put out the same to Farme. That divers Popish Canons (as for restraint of Marriage at certaine times) be reversed. That the longsomnesse of Suits in Ecclesiasticall Courts (which hang sometime two, three, foure, five, six, or seven yeers) may be restrained. That the Oath Ex Officio, whereby men are forced to accuse themselves, be more sparingly used. That Licenses for Marriage, without Banes asked, be more cautiously granted.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 2 Ann. Dom. 1603

These, with such other abuses, yet remaining, and practised in the Church of England, we are able to shew, not to be agreeable to the Scriptures, if it shall please your Highnesse farther to heare us, or more at large by Writing to be informed, or by Conference among the Learned to be resolved. And yet we doubt not, but that, without any farther proceese, your Majesty (of whose Christian judgement, we have received so good a taste already) is able of Your selfe, to judge of the equity of this cause. God, we trust, hath appointed your Highnesse our Physician to heale these diseases. And we say with Mordecai to Hester, who knoweth, whether you are come to the Kingdome for such a time? Thus Your Majesty shall doe that, which we are perswaded, shall be acceptable to God, honourable to your Majesty in all succeeding ages, profitable to his Church, which shall be thereby encreased, comfortable to your Ministers, which shall be no more suspended, silenced, disgraced, imprisoned for meere traditions: and prejudiciall to none, but to those that seek their owne quiet, credit, and profit in the world. Thus, with all dutifull submission, referring our selves to your Majesties pleasure, for your gracious answer, as God shall direct you: we most humbly recommend Your Highnesse to the Divine Majesty, whom we beseech for Christ his sake to dispose Your Royall heart to doe herein, what shall be to his glory, the good of his Church, and your endlesse comfort.

Your Majesties most humble Subjects,

the Ministers of the Gospel, that desire not a disorderly innovation, but a due and godly Reformation.

25. This calme, and stil, but deep Petition, being (as is aforesaid) presented to the King, it was given out that his Majesty lent it a favourable eare; that some great ones about him gave it a consenting entertainment; that some potent strangers (I understand of the Scottish nation) had undertaken the conduct, and managing thereof. Whether indeed it was so, God knows, or, whether these things were made to make the people, the Van pretending a victory, that the Rere might follow the more comfortably. Sure it is, this Petition ran the Gantlop throughout all the Prelaticall party, every one giving it a lash, some with their Pens, most with their Tongues: and the dumb Ministers (as they terme them) found their speech most vocall against it. The Universities (and justly) found themselves much agrieved, that the Petitioners should proportion a seaventh part onely out of an impropriation in a Lay-mans fee, whilst those belonging to Colleges and Cathedralls, should be demised to the Vicars at the old rent, without fine, without improvement. Whereas Scholars being children of the Prophets, counted themselves most proper for Church-revenues, and this motion, if effected, would cut off more than the nipples of the breasts of both Universities, in point of maintenance.

The issue of this Petition.

26. Cambridge therefore began, and passed a Grace in their Congregation, that whosoever in their Universty, should by Word or Writing, oppose the received received Doctrine, and Discipline of England, or any part thereof, should, ipso facto, be suspended from their former, & excluded from all future degrees. Oxford followed, recompencing the slowenesse of her pace, with the firmenesse of her footing, making a strong and sharp confutation of the Petition. But indeed King James made the most reall refutation thereof, not resenting it (whatsoever is pretended) according to the desires and hopes (not to say the reports) of such who presented it. And after his Majesty had discountenanced it, some hot-spurs of the opposite party began to maintaine (many copies thereof being scattered into vulgar hands) that now the property thereof was altered from a Petition into a Libel. And such papers defamatory of the present Government, punishable by the Statute, Primo Elizabetha.

Universities justly nettled thereat.

Ann. Dom. 1605. Ann. Reg. Jac.

Other Millenary Petitions.

Under favour, I conceive this Petition, by us lately exemplified, the proper Millenary Petition. Otherwise I observe, that Millenary Petition is, vox aquivoca, and attributed to all Petitions, with numerous and indefinite subscriptions, which were started this year concerning Church-Reformation. Many there were of this kinde, moving for more, or lesse alteration, as the promoters of them stood affected. For all mens desires will then be of the same size, when their bodies shall be of the same stature. Of these, one, most remarkable, required a subscription in manner as followeth,

We whose names are under written, doe agree to make our humble Petition to the King's Majesty, that the present state of the Church, may be further reformed in all things needfull, according to the rule of Gods holy Word, and agreeable to the example of other reformed Churches, which have restored both the Doctrine and Discipline, as it was delivered by our Saviour Christ, and his holy Apostles.

Two things are remarkable therein. First, that this was no present Petition, but a preparative thereunto, which in due time might have proved one, if meeting with proportionable encouragement. Secondly, that it went farther than the former, as not being for the καθαρσιν, but for the δεον. Not for the paring, pruning, and purging, but for the extirpating and abolishing of Bishops, and conforming Church-government to forraigne Presbytery. Whether the Subscribers to this Petition, were, for the maine, a recruit of new persons, or a resumption of those who under-writ the former, I dare not define. Probably many, sensible that before they were Petition-bound, inlarged themselves now in their additionall desires. For, such who aske no more than what they would have, commonly receive lesse than what they aske; seeing Petitions of this nature are seldome granted in full latitude, without some abatement. They allowed therefore some over-measure in their requests, that the surplusage being defalked, the remainder might, in some manner, give them satisfaction.

Unfaire dealing in procuring of hands.

Sure I am, the Prelaticall party complained, that, to swell a number, the nonconformists did not chuse, but scrape Subscribers; not to speak of the ubiquitarinesse of some hands, the same being alwayes present at all Petitions. Indeed to the first, onely Ministers were admitted, but to the latter brood of Petitions, no hand, which had five fingers, was refused. Insomuch, that Master George (since Lord) Gering, who then knew little, and cared lesse for Church-government (as unable to governe himselfe) being then (fifty years since) rather a Youth than a Man; a Boy, than a Youth; set his hand thereunto (in the right, I believe of his Mother, a good Lady, much addicted to that party) and King James would in merriment make sport with him, to know, what reasons moved him at that age, to this Subscription. But enough of these Petitioners. Perchance we shall heare more of them the next Parliament.

SECTION

Ann. Reg. Ann. Dom.

SECTION II.

To Matthevv Gillye Esq.

SOlomon saith, And there is a * Friend that is nearer than a Brother. Now, though I have read many VVriters on the Text, your practice is the best Comment; which hath most truly Expounded it unto me. Accept this therefore as the Return of the Thanks of your respectfull Friend.

* Prov. 18. 24.

Jac. 1 1603

CAuselesse jealousies attend old age, as appears by Arch-bishop Whitgift, who ended his Life, according to his owne desire, that he might not live to see the Parliament; being more scar'd than hurt, as fearing some strange opposition therein, & an assault of Un-conformists on Church-Discipline, fiercer than his age-feebled body should be able to resist. Born he was of ancient Parentage at great Grimsby in Lincoln shire, bred in Cambridge, admitted in Queens Colledge, removed Scholar to Pembroke Hall (where Mr. Bradford was his Tutor) translated Fellow to Peter-house, returned Master to Pembroke, thence advanced Master of Trinity Colledge, successively Parson of Teversham, Prebend of Ely, Dean of Lincolne, Bishop of Worcester, where the Queen forgave him his first fruits, a rare gift for her, who was so good an Huswife of Her Revenues. Yea, she constantly called him, Her little black Husband: which favour nothing elated his gravity, carrying himself as one unconcerned in all worldly honour. He survived the Queen not a full yeare, getting his bane by going in a cold morning by Barge to Fulham, there to consult with the Bishops about managing their matters in the ensuing Parliament. And no wonder if those few sparks of naturall heat, were quickly quenched with a small cold in him, who was then above seventy two yeares of age. He died of the Palsey, one of the worthiest men that ever the English Hierarchy did enjoy.

The death of Arch-bishop Whitgift. * See the Preface to Hampton Court conference.

2. But a modern writer in his voluminous book against the practices of English Prelates, bitterly inveigheth against him whom he termeth, A Pontificall (meaneth he Paganish, or Popish?) Bishop, and chargeth him with many misdemeanours. Give me leave a little without bitternesse, both to pass my censure on his book, and make this Archbishop his just defence, against his calumniation. First in generall, behold the complexion of his whole booke, and it is black and swarthie in the uncharitable Subject and Title thereof. An Historicall collection of the severall execrable Treasons, Conspiracies, Rebellions, Seditions, State-schismes, Contumacies, Anti-monarchicall Practices, and oppressions of English Prelates &c. Thus he weeds mens lives, and makes use onely to their disgrace, of their infirmities, meane time suppressing many eminent actions, which his owne conscience knows were performed by them. What a monster might be made out of the best beauties in the World, if a Limmer should leave what is lovely, and onely collect into one Picture, what he findeth amisse in them? I know there be white Teeth in the blackest Black-moore, and a black Bill in the whitest Swanne. Worst men have something to be commended, best men something in them to be condemned.

Mr. Pryn censuring Whitgift, censured.

Only to infiſt on mens faults, to render them odious, is no ingenious employment. God, we know, ſo uſeth his fanne, that he keepth the Corn, but driveth away the Chaffe. But who is he that winnoweth ſo, as to throw away the good graine, and retaine the Chaffe onely?

Ann. Dom 1605. Ann. Reg. Jac. 3

His untruth of Anſelme.

3. Beſides it conteineth untruths, or at the beſt uncertainties, which he venteth with aſſurance to poſterity. For inſtance * ſpeaking of Walter Tyrrill, the French Knight, caſually killing King William Rufus in new Forreſt, with an arrow glancing from a tree, he ſaith, that in all likelihood, Anſelme Archbiſhop of Canterbury (our Whitgifts predeceſſor) with fore-plotted treaſon, hired Tyrill to murder the King in this manner. Now to condemne the memory of ſo pious and learned a man as Anſelme was (though I will not excuſe him in all things) five hundred yeares after the fact pretended on his owne ſingle bare ſurmiſe, contrary to the conſtant current of all authours (no one whiſpering the leaſt ſuſpition thereof) hath (I believe) but little of Law, and nothing of Goſpell therein. Let the glancing of Tyrrels arrow minde men how they * bend their bowes to ſhoot arrowes, even bitter words at the memory of the deceaſed, leſt it rebound back (not as his did to hit a ſtander by, but) juſtly to wound him, who unjuſtly delivered it.

* Pag. 10.

* Pſal. 64. 3.

His ſlander of Whitgift.

4. But to come to our reverend Whitgift. Firſt, he chargeth him for troubling the Judges, with his Conteſtations about Prohibitions, endeavouring to enlarge his Eccleſiaſticall Juriſdiction. This being the Accuſation but of a Common Lawyer, and that in favour of his owne Courts, I leave to ſome Doctour of the Civill or Canon Law, as moſt proper to make anſwer thereunto. Onely, whereas he ſaith, that Whitgift did it to the prejudice of the Queenes * Prerogative, ſurely She knew her owne Priviledges ſo well (beſides thoſe of her Councell to teach her) that ſhe would never have ſo favourably reflected on him, if ſenſible (wiſe Princes having a tender touch in that point) that he any way went about to abridge her Royall Authority.

* Pag. 149.

And ſilly taxing of his train.

5. Secondly, he taxeth him for his extraordinary traine, of above ſixty men-ſervants, (though not ſo extravagant a number, if his perſon and place be conſidered) who were all trained up to martiall affaires, and muſtred almoſt every week, his Stable being well furniſhed with ſtore of great Horſes. But was it a fault in thoſe martiall dayes, when the invaſion of a Forraign Foe was daily ſuſpected, to fit his Family for their own, and the Kingdomes defence? Did not * Abraham, that heavenly Prophet, and holy Patriarch, arme his Trained Servants in his owne houſe, in his victorious expedition againſt the King of Sodome? Yea, if Churchmen of an Anti-prelaticall ſpirit, had not ſince tampered more dangerouſly with training of Servants, (though none of their owne) both Learning and Religion had (perchance) looked, at this day, with a more cheerefull countenance.

* Gen. 14. 14.

Whitgifts care of, and love to Scholars.

6. Whereas it intimates, that this Arch-biſhop had been better imployed in training up Scholars for the Pulpit, than Souldiers for the Field, know, that as the Latter was performed, the former was not quitted by him. Witneſſe many worthy preachers bred under him in Trinity Colledge, and more elſewhere relieved by him. Yea, his Bounty was too large to be confined within the narrow Seas; Beza, Druſius, and other forraigne Proteſtant Divines, taſting freely thereof. Nor was his Liberality onely a Ciſterne for the preſent age, but a running River from a freſh Fountaine, to water Poſterity in that Schoole of Croydon, which he hath beautifully built, and bountifully endowed. More might be ſaid in the vindication of this worthy Prelate, from his reproachfull penne: But I purpoſely forbeare; the rather, becauſe it is poſſible, that the learned Gentleman ſince, upon a ſerious review of his own Work, and experimentall Obſervation of the paſſages of this Age, may be more offended with his owne writing herein, than others take juſt exception thereat.

His buriall, and Succeſſour.

7. Arch-biſhop Whitgift was buried at Croydon, March 27. The Earle of Worceſter, and Lord Zouch, his Pupills attending his Herſe, and Biſhop Babington (his Pupill alſo) made his Funerall Sermon, chuſing for his Text 2 Chron. 24. 15, 16. 1604. Mar. 27.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 1. Ann. Dom. 1604.

16. and paralleling the Arch-bishops life with gracious Jehoida. Richard Bancroft, Bishop of London, brought up in Jesus Colledge, succeeded him in the Arch-bishoprick; whose actions, in our ensuing History, will sufficiently deliver his character without our description thereof.

8. Come we now to the Parliament assembled, & amongst the many Acts, which passed therein, none more beneficiall for the Church than that, which made the King himselfe, and his Successors incapable of any Church-land to be conveyed unto them, otherwise than for three lives, or twenty one years. Indeed a Statute had formerly been made the thirteenth of Queen Eliz. which to prevent finall Alienation of Church-land, did disable all subjects from accepting them: But in that Statute a Liberty was left unto the* Crown to receive the same. It was thought fit to allow to the Crown this favourable exception, as to the Patron generall of the whole English Church; and it was but reason for the Soveraign, who originally gave all the Loafe to the Church, on occasion to resume a good Shiver thereof.

A beneficiall Statute for the Church.

* Because it was not forbidden in the Statute in expresse words.

9. But he who shuts ninety nine gates of Thebes, and leaveth one open, shuts none in effect. Covetousnesse (shall I say, an apt Scholar to learne, or an able Master to teach, or both) quickly found out a way to invade the Lands of the Church, and evade the Penalty of the Law, which thus was contrived. Some Potent Courtier first covertly contracts with a Bishop (some whereof, though spirituall in Title, were too temporall in Truth, as more minding their Private Profit, than the Publique good of the Church) to passe over such a proportion of Land to the Crowne. This done, the said Courtier begs the Land of the Queen (even before her Highnesse had tasted thereof, or the lipps of her Exchequer ever touched the same) and so an Estate thereof is setled on him and his Heires for ever. And thus Covetousnesse came to her desired end, though forced to go a longer journey, and fain to fetch a farther compasse about.

A contrivance by the Crowne to wrong the Church.

10. For instance, Doctor Coldwell, Doctor of Physique, and Bishop of Sarisbury, gave his Sea a very strong Purge, when he consented to the Alienation of Sherborn Manour from his Bishoprick. Indeed, the good old man was shot betweten Wind and Water, and his consent was assaulted in a dangerous joincture of time to give any deniall. For, after he was elected Bishop of Sarisbury, and after all his Church-preferments were disposed of to other persons, yet before his election was confirmed, past a possibility of a legall reversing thereof, Sir W. Rawleigh is importunate with him, to passe Sherborne to the Crowne, and effected it, though indeed a good round rent was reserved to the Bishoprick. Presently Sir Walter beggeth the same of the Queen, and obtained it. Much after the same manner Sir --- Killegrew got the Mannour of Crediton (a bough almost as big as all the rest of the Body) for the Church of Exeter, by the consent of Doctor Babington the Bishop thereof.

Two eminent instances of former Alienation of Bishoprick-Lands.

11. To prevent future wrong to the Church in that kinde, it was now enacted, That the Crowne it selfe, henceforward, should be incapable of any such Church-land to be conveyed unto it. Yet some were so bold as to conceive this Law void in the very making of it, and that all the obligation thereof, consisted (not in the strength of the Law) but onely in the Kings and his Successors voluntary obedience thereunto. Accounting it injurious for any Prince in Parliament to tye his Successors, who neither can, nor will be concluded thereby, farther than it stands with their owne convenience. However, it was to stand in force, till the same power should be pleased to rescind it. But others beheld this Law, not with a Politick, but Religious Eye, conceiving the King of Heaven, and the King of England, the Parties concerned therein, and accounting it Sacriledge for any to alienate what is given to God in his Church.

Severall censures on this new Statute.

12. Thus was the King graciously pleased to binde himself for the liberty of the Church. He knew full well all Courtiers (and especially his owne Country-mens) importunity in asking, and perhaps was privy to his owne impotency in denying, and therefore, by this Statute, he eased himselfe of many troublesome Suitors. For hereafter no wise man would beg of the King, what was not in his power to grant, and what (if granted) could not legally be conveyed to any Petitioner. Thus his Majesty manifested his good will and affection to Religion, and, although this Law could not finally preserve Church-lands, to make them immortall, yet it prolonged their lives for many yeares together.

K. JAMES a great Church-lover.

Ann. Dom. 1604 Ann. Reg. Jac.

The Acts of this Convocation, why as yet not recovered.

12. Passe we now into the Convocation, to see what was done there: But here the History thereof, as I may say, is shot betwixt the joynts of the Armor; in the intervall, after Whitgift's death, and before Bancroft's removall to Canterbury, so that I can finde the Originall thereof neither in the Office of the Vicar-generall, nor in the Registry of London; nor can I recover it, as yet, from the Office of the Dean and Chapter of Canterbury, where most probably it is to be had, the Jurisdiction belonging to them in the Vacancy.

Many Canons made therein, Bishop Bancroft sitting President.

13. Take this as the result thereof. A Book of Canons was compiled, not onely being the summe of the Queens Articles, Orders of her Commissioners, Advertisements, Canons of 1571. and 1597. which were in use before, but also many more were added, the whole number amounting unto 141. Some wise and moderate men supposed so many Lawes were too heavy a burden to be long borne, and that it had been enough for the Episcopall party to have triumphed, not insulted over their adversaries in so numerous impositions. However, an Explanation was made in one of the Canons, of the use of the Crosse in Baptisme, to prevent Scandall; and learned Thuanus in his History taketh an especiall notice thereof.

Bishop Rudd, why opposing the oath against Simony.

14. Motion being made in this Convocation, about framing an Oath against Simony, to be taken by all, presented to Church-preferment. Bishop Rudde of St. Davids (as conscientious as any of his order, and free from that fault) opposed it; chiefly, because he thought it unequall, that the Patron should not be forced, as well as the Clerk, to take that Oath: Whereupon it was demanded of him, whether he would have the King to take that Oath when he presented a Bishop or Dean, and hereat the Bishop sate downe in silence.

The Petition of the Town of Rippon to Queen Anne.

15. About this time the Corporation of Rippon in York-shire, presented their Petition to Queen Anne on this occasion. They had a faire Collegiate Church, stately for the structure thereof, (formerly erected by the Nobility and Gentry of the Vicenage) the meanes whereof, at the dissolution of Abbies, were seized on by the King, so that small maintenance was left to the Minister of that populous Parish. Now, although Edwin Sands, Arch-bishop of York, with the Earle of Huntinton, Lord Burgley and Sheaffield, (successively Presidents of the North) had recommended their Petition to Qu. Elizabeth, they obtained nothing but faire unperformed Promises: whereupon, now the Rippeneers humbly addressed themselves to Queen Anne, and hear her answer unto them.

ANNA R.

ANNE, by the grace of God, Qu. of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, &c. To all, to whom these presents shall come, greeting. Whereas there hath been lately exhibited and recommended unto us, a frame and plat-forme of a Colledge Generall, to be planted and established at Rippon in the County of Yorke, for the manifold benefit of both the Borders of England and Scotland. Upon the due perusing of the plot aforesaid, hereunto annexed, and upon signification given of the good liking and approbation of the chief points contained therein, by sundry grave, learned, and religious parties, and some other of honourable Place and Estate. We have thought good, for the ample and perpetuall advancement of Learning and Religion, in both the borders of our aforesaid Realmes,

Ann. Reg. Jac. 2 Ann. Dom. 1604

Realmes, to condescend to yeild our favour and best furtherance thereunto: And for the better encouraging of other honourable and worthy Personages, to joyn with us in yeilding their bounty and benevolence thereunto: We have and do signifie and assure, and by the word of a sacred Princesse and Queen, do expresly promise, to procure, with all convenient speed, to and for the yearely better maintenance of the said Colledge All, and every of the Requests, specified and craved to that end, in a small Schedule hereunto annexed. In confirmation whereof, we have signed these Presents by our hand and name above mentioned, and have caused our privy Signet to be set unto the same: Dated at our Honour at Greenwich, July 4. An. Dom. 1604. and of our Reigne, &c.

July 4.

After the sealing thus subscribed,
Gulielmus Toulerius, Secretarius de mandato serenissima Annæ Reginæ Angliæ, Scotiæ, Franciæ, Hiberniæ.

16. Such need never fear successe, who have so potent a person to solicite their suite, King James being forward of himselfe to advance Learning and Religion, and knowing Christs precept, Let your Light shine before Men; knew also that Rippon was an advantagious place for the fixing thereof; As which by its commodious position in the North, there would reflect lustre almost equally into England and Scotland. Whereupon he founded a Dean and Chapter of seven Prebends, allowing them two hundred forty seven pounds a yeare, out of his own Crowne-land, for their maintenance.

King James his bountifull grant.

17. I am informed, that, lately, the Lands of this Church, are, by mistake, twice sold to severall Purchasers, viz. Once under the notion of Dean and Chapters Lands; and againe, under the property of Kings Lands. I hope the Chap-men (when all is right stated betwixt them) will agree amongst themselves on their bargaine. Mean time, Rippon Church may the better comport with poverty, because onely remitted to its former condition.

These Lands since twice sold.

18. The Family of Love (or Lust rather) at this time, presented a tedious Petition to King James, so that it is questionable, whether His Majesty ever graced it with his perusall, wherein they endeavoured to cleare themselves from some misrepresentations, and by fawning expression, to insinuate themselves into his Majesty's good opinion: Which here we present.

The Petition of the Family of Love to King James.

To the King's most excellent MAJESTY, JAMES the first, by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c.

MOst gracious and Soveraigne Lord, whereas there is published in a Book written by your Highnesse, as an instruction to your most noble Sonne (whom Almighty God blesse with much Honour, Happinesse, and Long life) of a People that are of a vile Sect among the Anabaptists, called the* Family of Love, who doe hold and maintaine many proud, uncharitable, unchristian, and most absurd Opinions, unto whom your Highnesse doth also give the name of Puritans, assuming in the said Book, that divers of them (as Brown, Penry, and others) doe accord with them in their foule Errours, heady and phantasticall Opinions, which are there set

* In his Basilicon Doron.

Ann. Dom 1604. Ann. Reg. Jac. 1

ſet downe at large by Your Majeſty, adviſing Your Royall Son (as it moſt meet) to puniſh them, if they refuſe to obey the Law, and will not ceaſe to ſtir up Rebellion.

Now moſt gracious Soveraigne, becauſe it is meet that your Highneſſe ſhould underſtand by their ſupplication, and declaration of the truth herein by themſelves (of whom Your Majeſty hath been thus informed) proſtrate at Your Princely Feet, as true, faithfull, loyall, and obedient Subjects, to all your Lawes and Ordinances, Civill, Politique, Spirituall, Temporall, They with humble hearts doe beſeech Your Princely Majeſty, to underſtand, and that the people of the Family of Love, or of God, doe utterly diſclaime, and deteſt all the ſaid abſurd, and ſelfe-conceited opinions, and diſobedient, and erroneous ſorts of the Anabaptiſts, Brown, Penry, Puritans, and all other proud-minded Sects and Hereſies whatſoever, proteſting upon paine of our lives, that we are not conſenting nor agreeing with any ſuch brain-ſick Preachers, nor their rebellious and diſobedient ſects whatſoever, but have been, and ever will be, truly obedient to your Highneſſe and your Lawes, to the effuſion of our Blood, and expences of our Goods and Lands in Your Majeſties ſervice. Highly landing Almighty God, who hath ſo graciouſly, and peaceably appointed unto us ſuch a Vertuous, Wiſe, Religious, and Noble King, and ſo carefull, and impartiall a Juſticiar to governe over us, beſeeching him daily to bleſſe Your Highneſſe with his godly wiſdome, and holy underſtanding, to the furtherance of his truth and godlineſſe, and with all honour, happineſſe, peace, and long life, and to judge rightly betweene Falſhood and Truth.

And becauſe Your Majeſty ſhall have a perfect view, or an aſſured perſwaſion of the truth of the ſame our Proteſtation, if therefore there be any indifferent man of the Kingdome, that can juſtly touch us with any ſuch diſobedient and wicked handling of our ſelves, as ſeemeth by Your Majeſties Book it hath been informed unto Your Highneſſe, unleſſe they be ſuch mortall enemies, the diſobedient Puritans, and thoſe of their beaſtly humours, before named, who are much more Zealous, religious, and preciſe, in the tything of Mint, Anniſe, and Cummin, and in the preferring of ſuch like Phariſaicall, and ſelfe-choſen outward traditions and grounds, or hypocriticall righteouſneſſe, than in the performing of Judgment, Mercy and Faith, and ſuch like true and inward righteouſneſs, which God doth moſt chiefly require, and regard, (Mat. 15. 15. &c.) and whoſe malice hath for twenty five yeeres paſt and upwards, and ever ſince with very many untrue ſuggeſtions, and moſt foule Errors, and odious Crimes, the which we could then, if need were, prove, ſought our utter overthrow & deſtruction. But that we have behaved our ſelves in all orderlineſſe and peaceableneſſe of life where we dwell, and with whom we had to deale, or if we doe vary or ſwerve from the eſtabliſhed Religion in this land, either in Service, Ceremonies, Sermons or Sacraments, or have publiquely ſpoken or inveighed, either by word or writing againſt our late Soveraign Princeſs government in cauſes ſpirituall or temporall, then let us be rejected for Sectaries, and never receive the benefit of Subjects.

* Henry Nicholas.

Only * Right Gracious Soveraigne, we have read certaine Books brought forth by a German Author under the Characters of H. N. who affirmeth therein, that he is prepared choſen and ſent of God to miniſter, and ſet forth the moſt holy ſervice of the love of God, and Chriſt, or of the Holy Ghoſt unto the children of men upon the Univerſall earth, out of which ſervice or writings we be taught all Dutifull Obedience towards God, and Magiſtrates, and to live a Godly and honeſt life, and to love God above all things, and our neighbours as our ſelves agreeing therein with all the Holy ſcriptures as we underſtand them. Againſt which Author, and his bookes we never yet heard or knew any Law eſtabliſhed in this Realme by our late Gracious Soveraigne, but that we might read them without offence, whoſe writings we ſuppoſe under your Highneſs correction, your Majeſty hath yet never ſeene or peruſed, heard of by any indifferent nor true information: For the ſaid H. N. in all his doctrine and writings (being as we are credibly informed, as much matter in volume, if they were all Compiled together as the whole Bible conteineth) doth neither take part with, nor write againſt any particular party or company whatſoever, as naming them by their names, nor yet praiſe, or diſpraiſe any of them by name. But doth only ſhew in particular in his ſaid writings, as ſaith he, the unpartiall ſervice of love, requireth what is good or evill for every one, wherein wherein the man hath right or wrong in any point, whether it be in the State of his Soul towards God, or in the State of his body towards the Magistrates of the world and towards one another, to the end that all people (when they heare or read his writing, and doe thereby perceive their sinne, and estranging from God and Christ) might endeavour them to bring forth the due fruits of Repentance, which is reformation and newnesse of life, according as all the Holy Scriptures doth likewise require the same of every one. And that they might in that sort become saved through Jesus Christ, the only Saviour of all the world.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 2 Ann. Dom. 1604.

Notwithstanding deare Soveraigne, yet hath the said Author, and his Doctrine a long time, and still is most shamefully and falsely slandered by our foresaid adversaries both in this land, and in divers others, as to be replenished with all manner of damnable Errors, and filthy liberty of the flesh.

And we his well willers, and favourers in the upright drift of his doctrine, as aforesaid have also been of them complained of, & accused unto our late Gracious Soveraign, and the Magistrates of this land, both long time past, and now lately againe as to be a people so infected and stained with all manner of detestable wickednesse and errors, that are not worthy to live upon the earth, but yet would never present any of his Bookes unto his Majesty to peruse; nor yet set them forth in any indifferent or true manner to the view of the world, lest their malicious, and slanderous reports, and accusations against the same, and us, should thereby be revealed and disproved to their great shame. Through which their most odious and false complaints against us, the Magistrates did then, and also have now lately cast divers of us into Prison, to our great hinderance & discredit. But yet have never proved against us, by sufficient and true testimony any one of their foule accusations, as the Records in such cases, and the Magistrates that have dealt therein can testifie, but are so utterly void of due and lawfull Proof thereof, that they have framed divers subtile Articles for us, being plain, and unlearned men to answer upon our Oath, whereby to urge and gather some things from our selves, so to prove their false and unchristian accusations to be true, or else will force us to renounce, recant, and condemne that which we doe not wilfully maintaine nor justifie, (much like as it was practized in the Primitive Church against the Christians) yea they are not ashamed to lay their owne and all other men disobedient and wicked acts (of what profession soever it be) upon our backs, to the end cunningly to purchase favour and credit to themselves, and to make us seeme monstrous and detestable before the Magistrates, and the common people every where, for that we, and the doctrine of H. N. might without any indifferent tryall, and lawfull or orderly proceedings, as heretofore hath been used in the Christian Church in such cases for confuting and condemning of Heresie, be utterly rooted out of the Land: with divers other most cruell practices, proceeding out of their bitter and envious hearts towards us, tending to the same unchristian and mercilesse purpose, the which we will here omit to speak of, because we have already been over-tedious to your Highnesse, and most humbly crave your most gracious pardon and patience therein, in respect we speak to cleare our selves of such matters as may touch our lives and liberties (which are two of the chiefest jewels that God hath given to Mankinde in this world) and also for that we have few friends, or any other meanes than this, to acquaint your Highnesse with the truth and state of our cause, whereof we think your Majesty is altogether ignorant, but have very many Enemies, whom we do greatly suspect will not be slack to prosecute their false and malitious purpose against us unto your Highnesse, even like as they have accustomed in times past to doe unto our late Soveraign Queen, through which prevailing in their slanderous defacing of us and our cause, divers of us for want of friends to make it rightly known unto her Majestie have sundry times been constrained to endure their injurious dealing towards us to our great vexation and hindrance.

Wherefore most gratious Soveraign, this is now our humble suit unto your Highness, that when your Kingly affairs of importance, which your Majestie hath now in hand, shall be well overpast (for the prosperous performance whereof we will (as duty bindeth us dail; pray unto Almighty God) that then your Highnesse will be pleased (because we have alwaies taken the same Authors work aforesaid to proceed out of the great great grace and love of God and Christ extended towards all Kings, Princes, Rulers, and People upon the universal earth (as he in many of his works doth witness no lesse) to their salvation, unity, peace, and concord in the same Godly love) to grant us that favour, at your Majesties fit and convenient time to peruse the Books your self with an impartiall eye, conferring them with the holy Scriptures, wherein it seemeth by the Books that are set forth under your Highnesse name, that you have had great travell, and are therefore better able to judge between Truth and Falshood. And we will whensoever it shall please your Highnesse to appoint the time, and to command, and licence us thereto, doe our best endevours to procure so many of the Books, as we can out of Germany (where they be Printed) to be delivered unto your Majestie, or such Godly, Learned, and indifferent men, as it shall please your Majestie to appoint.

And we will also (under your Highnesse lawfull Licence, and commandement in that behalf) doe our like endevour to procure some of the Learned men in that Countrey (if there be any yet remaining alive that were well acquainted with the Authour and his Works in his life time, and which likewise have exercised his works ever since) to come over and attend upon your Majestie at your appointed time convenient, who can much more sufficiently instruct and resolve your Highnesse in any unusuall words, phrase, or matter, that may happily seem dark and doubtfull to your Majestie that any of us in this your Land are able to doe.

And so upon your Highnesse advised consultation and censure thereupon (finding the same Works hareticall or seditious, and not agreeable to Gods holy Word and testimonies of all the Scriptures) to leave them, to take them as your Majesties Laws shall therein appoint us, having no intent or meaning to contend or resist there-against, however it be, but dutifully to obey thereunto according to the Counsel of Scriptures, and also of the said Authors work.

And our further humble suit unto your Highnesse is, that of your gracious favour, and clemency you will grant and give order unto your Majesties Officers in that behalf, That all of us your faithfull loving Subjects, which are now in Prison in any part of this your Realme for the same cause, may be released upon such Bail, or Bond as we are able to give; and that neither we, nor any of that company (behaving our selves orderly and obediently under your Highnesse lawes) may be any further persecuted or troubled therein, untill such time as your Majestie and such Godly learned and indifferent men of your Clergie, as your Highnesse shall appoint thereto, shall have advisedly consulted and determined of the matter, whereby we may not be utterly wasted by the great Charge of Imprisonment, and Persecution, and by the hard dealing of our Adversaries, for we are but a People few in number, and yet most of us very poor in worldly wealth.

O sacred Prince! we humbly pray that the Almighty will move your Princely heart with true judgment to discerne between the right and the wrong of our cause, according to that most certain and Christian Rule set down by our Saviour Christ unto his Disciples, Matth: 7. 12. Ye shall know the tree by the fruit, and in our obedience, peaceable, and honest lives, and conversation to protect us; and in our disobedience and misdemeanour to punish us, as resisters of Gods Ordinance, of the Kingly Authority, and most high Office of Justice committed to your Majestie to that purpose towards your Subjects, Rom. 13.

And gracious Soveraigne, we humbly beseech your Highnesse with Princely Regard in equity and favour to ponder, and grant the humble suit contained in this most lowly supplication of your loyall, true-hearted, faithfull subjects, And to remember that your Majestie in your Book of Princely, grave, and fatherly advice, to the happy Prince, your Royall Son, doth conclude, Principis est parcere subjectis & debellare superbos, and then no doubt, God will blesse your Highnesse with all your Noble Offspring, with peace, long life, and all honours, and happinesse, long to continue over us; for which we will ever pray with incessant prayers to the Almighty.

I finde not what effect this their Petition produced; whether it was slighted, and the Petitioners looked upon as inconsiderable, or beheld as a few frantick folk folk out of their wits, which consideration alone often melted their Adversarie Anger into Pity unto them.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 5 Ann. Dom. 1604.

19. The main design driven on in the Petition is to separate themselves from the Puritans (as persons odious to King JAMES) that they might not fare the worse for their Vicinity unto them; though these Familists could not be so desirous to leave them as the others were glad to be left by them. For if their opinions were so senslesse, and the lives of these Familists so sensuall, as is reported, no purity at all belonged unto them.

The Familists will in no wise be accompted Puritans.

20. [b]Some take exceptions at their Prayer for King JAMES; wishing him, and his, Peace, long life, all honour, and happinesse, without mentioning of Life Eternall and the Blessings thereof, whilst others are so much of the Family of Charity to this Family of Love, as to excuse the omission as casual, or else extend happinesse as comprehensive of the World to come. Others are more justly offended to see Gold and Dung joyned together, Gods Word and the words of H. Nicholas equally yoaked by them as infallible alike. They confesse in this book some unusuall words which are Dark and Doubtfull, which at this day is affected by many Sectarists (whilst Truth is plain and easie) amusing People with mysticall expressions, which their Auditors understand not, and perchance not they themselves. So that as one saith very well of their high soring pretended spirituall language, That it is a great deal too high for this world, and a great deal too low for the world to come.

Phrases in their Petition censured.

b Sam. Rutherford in his Survey, pag. 353.

21. I find one in his Confutation of this Petition inveighing against our Bishops: That they were friends unto Familisme, and favoured the Promoters thereof, adding moreover, That few of the Prelaticall way refuted them. Now though the best friends of Bishops, yea, and the Bishops themselves will confesse they had too many faults; Yet I am confident this is a false and uncharitable aspersion upon them: No better is that when he saith, That divers of the Court of Queen Elizabeth, and some Nobles, were Familists; wherein I am sure Plenty of Instances hath put him to such a Penury that he cannot insist upon any one. But I am inclined the rather to Pardon his Errour herein, because the Authour reporting this, is a Forreigner then living in Scotland; And should I treat of the Character of the Court of King JAMES at Edinburgh at the same time, possibly my Pen at so great a distance might commit farre worse mistakes.

Mr. Rutherford causlesly asperseth the Bishops and Courtiers of Queen Elizabeth.

c In his Notes on his Petition of Survey, pag. 349.

22. Some will say, where are these Familists now adaies? are they utterly extinct, or are they lost in the heap of other Sects, or are they concealed under a new name? The last is most probable. This Family (which shut their Dores before) keeps open house now: Yea, Family is too narrow a name for them they are grown so numerous. Formerly by their own Confession in this Petition they had three Qualities, Few, Poor, and Unlearned; for the last Bilia vera, their Lack of Learning they still retain, being otherwise many, and some rich, but all under the name of RANTERS, and thus I fairly leave them, on condition they will fairly leave me, that I may hear no more of them for delivering Truth and my own Conscience in what I have written concerning their Opinions.

Familists turned into modern Ranters.

23. I find no Protestant tears dropt on the grave of any eminent Divine this year, but we light on two Romanists dying beyond Sea, much lamented: one, Richard Hall, bred in Christs College in Cambridge, whence he ran over to Rome, whence he returned into the Low Countreys, and died Canon, and Official of the Cathedral of S. Omer: The other, Humphrey Eli, an Herefordshire man by birth, Fellow of St. John's in Oxford, whence going beyond sea, at Rome he commenced Doctour of Law, and afterwards died Professour thereof in the University of Ponta Mousan*. He is charactred to be, Furis peritus doctus, pauper, & pacificus; A Lawyer learned, poor, and peaceable. And thus much my charity can easily believe of him: but the [b] Distich (the Epitaph I take it on his Tomb) is damnable hyperbolicall;

The death of Hall, and Eli.

* in the Duchy of Lorraine.

b Pitseus de illustribus Angliæ scriptoribus, pag. 804.

Albion hæreseos velatur nocte, viator
Desine mirari, sol suus hic latitat.

Ann. Dom 1605. Ann. Reg. Jac. 4

Wonder not, England's dark with errours night,
For loe here buried lies her Sun so bright.

Or else the Poet lies who made the Verses. But his ashes shall not be disturbed by me.

The plotters in the Powder Treason.

24. The Romish Catholicks, now utterly despairing, either by flattery to wooe, or force to wrest, any free and publick exercise of their Religion, some of them entered into a damnable, and deviliſh conspiracie, to blow up the Parliament-House with gun-powder. In this plot were engaged,

1. Robert Catesbie.
2. Thomas Percie.
3. Sir Everard Digbie.
4. Francis Tresham.
5. Robert Winter.
6. Thomas Winter.
7. John Wright.
8. Christopher Wright.
9. Ambrose Rookwood.
10. Robert Keys.
11. John Grant.
12. Thomas Bates, Catesbie's man.
13. Guido Fawx.

Twelve, besides their Foreman, but, being honest and true, let their ensuing action declare. Surely all of resolute spirits, most of antient families, some of plentifull fortunes, and Percie, though weak in purse himself, pretended to command the wealthiest coffers of number.

Garnet his deciding a case of conscience.

25. But, a treason without a Jesuit, or one of Jesuited principles therein, is like a drie wall, without either lime, or morter: Gerard must be the cement, with the Sacrament of Secrecie, to joyn them together: Garnet and Tesmond (whelps of the same litter) commended, and encouraged the designe. But here an important scruple was injected, How to part their friends, from their foes in the Parliament, they having many in the House, of alliance, yea, of the same (in conscience a nearer kinred) Religion with themselves. To slay the righteous with the wicked, be it farre from God, and all good men. And yet, as such an unpartiall destruction, was uncharitable: so an exact Separation seemed as impossible. Here Garnet, instead of untying, cut this knot asunder, with this his sharp decision; That in such a case as this, it was lawfull to kill friend, and foe together. Indeed, the good husbandman in the [b] Gospel, permitted the tares to grow for the corne's sake; whereas here, by the contrary counsell of the Jesuit, the corn (so they reputed it) was to be roored up for the tares sake.

a Gen. 18. 25.

b Mat. 13. 29.

Two other difficulties removed.

26. This scruple in conscience, thus satisfied by Garnet, two other difficulties in point of performance, presented themselves. For, CHARLES, Duke of York, probably (by reason of His minority) would not be present, and the Lady ELIZABETH would certainly be absent from the Parliament-House. How then should these two (the next Heires to the Crown) be compassed within their power? But for the first, Percie profered his service, promising to possesse himself, by a fraudulent force, of the person of the Duke. Catesbie undertook the other difficulty, under a pretended Hunting-match (advantaged thereunto by the vicinitie of Ashbie, to the Lord Harrington's, where the Princesse had Her education) to train Her into their command. All rubs thus removed, their way was made as smooth as glasse, and as slippery too, as by the sequele may appeare.

The odium must be cast on the Puritan.

27. But first be it remembred, that, though these plotters intended at last with honour to own the action, when successe had made all things secure; yet they purposed, when the blow was first given, and whilest the act was certain, but the successe thereof doubtfull, to father the fact on the Puritans. They thought, their backs were broad enough, to bear both the sin, and shame; and, that this faddle, for the present, would finely fit their backs, whose discontent (as these plotters would pretend) unable otherwise to atchieve their desired alteration in Church-Government, had, by this damnable treason, effected the same. By transferring the fact on the then most innocent Puritans; they hoped, not onely to decline the odium of so hellish a designe, but also (by the strangenesse of the act, and unsuspectednesse of the actors) to amuze all men, and beget an universall distrust, that every man would grow jealous of himself. And, whilest such amazement amazement tied, in a manner, all mens hands behinde them, these plotters promised themselves the working out their own ends, part by their home-strength, and the rest by calling in the assistance of forraign Princes.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 5 Ann. Dom. 1604.

28. They fall a working in the Vault. Dark the place, in the depth of the earth; dark the time, in the dead of the night; dark the designe, all the actors therein concealed by oath from others, and thereby combined amongst themselves. Oh! how easie is any work, when high merit is conceived the wages thereof? In piercing thorough the wall [c] nine foot thick, they erroniously conceived, that they thereby hewed forth their own way to heaven. But they digged more with their silver in an hour, than with their iron in many daies; namely, when discovering a Cellar hard by, they hired the same, and these Pioneers saved much of their pains by the advantage thereof. And now all things were carried so secretly, no possibility of any detection, seeing the actors themselves had solemnly sworn that they would not, and all others might as safely swear, they could not make any discovery thereof.

Will-worship a painfull labour.

c Speed's Chron. in King James.

29. But, so it fell out, that the sitting of the Parliament was put off from time to time; namely, from the seventh of February (whereon it was first appointed to meet) it was adjourned till the fifth of October, and afterward from the fifth of October, put off till the fifth of November. and accordingly their working in the vault (which attended the motion of the Parliament) had severall distinct intermissions, and resumptions thereof. As if Divine Providence had given warning to these Traytors (by the slow proceeding, and oft adjourning of the Parliament) mean time seriously to consider, what they went about; and seasonably to desist from so damnable a designe, as suspitious, at last it would be ruined, which so long had been retarded. But, no taking off their [d] wheels will stay those chariots from drowning, which God hath decreed shall be swallowed in the Red sea.

God gives them warning to desist, but they will take none.

d Exod. 14. 25.

30. Behold! here is fire, and wood, but where is the Lamb for the burnt offering? Alas! a whole flock of lambs were not farre off, all appointed to the slaughter. The King, Prince Henry, Peers, Bishops, Judges, Knights, and Burgesses, all designed to destruction. Let me smite him (said Abishai of Saul) [e] even at once, and I will not smite him the second time. So here, a blow, so sound, secret, and sudden, was intended it would not need iteration: once, and ever, the first act would finish all in an instant. But, thanks be to God, nothing was blown up but the Treason, or brought to execution but the Traytors.

The latitude of their designe.

e 1 Sam. 26. 8.

31. Indeed, some few daies before the fatall stroke should bee given, Master Keyes, being at Tichmersh in Northampton-shire, at the house of Master Gilbert Pickering, his Brother in-law (but of a different Religion, as a true Protestant) suddenly whipped out his sword, and in merriment made many offers therewith, at the heads, necks, and sides of many Gentlemen and Gentlewomen then in his company. This then was taken as a meer frolick, and for the present passed accordingly; but afterwards (when the Treason was discovered) such as remembred his gestures, thought thereby he did act, what he intended to doe (if the plot had took effect) hack, and hew; kill, and slay all eminent persons, of a different Religion from themselves.

The spitish behaviour of Keies.

32. Curse [f] not the King, no not in thy thought —— for a bird of the aire shall carry the voice. As here such a discovery was made: with a Pen (fetched from the feather of a foul) a Letter was written to the Lord Mounteagle, in manner following:

The mysticall Letter.

f Eccles. 10. 20.

My Lord,

OUt of the love I bear to some of your friends, I have a care of your preservation: Therefore, I would advise you, as you tender your life, to devise some excuse to shift off your attendance at this Parliament: For, God and man have concurred to punish the wickedness of this Time. And think not slightly of this advertisement, but retire your self into your Country, where you may expect the event in safety: For, though there be no appearance of any stirre, yet I say, they shall receive a terrible Blow this Parliament, and yet they shall not see who hurts them. This counsell is not to be contemned, because it may doe you good, and can doe you no harm; for the danger is past so soon as you have burnt the Letter: And I hope God will give you the grace to make good use of it: To whose holy protection I commend you.

Ann. Dom. 1605. Ann. Reg. Jac. 4.

A strange Letter, from a strange hand, by a strange Messenger: without date to it, name at it, and (I had almost said) sense in it. A Letter, which, even when it was opened, was still sealed, such the affected obscurity therein.

The first search proves ineffectuall.

33. The Lord Mounteagle, as loyalty advised him, communicates the Letter to the Earl of Salisbury, he to the KING. His Majesty, on the second perusall, expounded the mysticall Blow meant therein must be by Gun-powder, and gives order for searching the Rooms under the Parliament House, under pretence to look for lost Hangings, which were conveyed away. The first search about evening, discovered nothing but Percy's Cellar, full of Wood, and Johnson his man (under that name was Faux disguised) attending therein. However the name of Percy, and sight of Faux so quickned the jealousie of the Lord Mounteagle, that this first slight Search led to a second scrutinie, more strictly, and secretly performed.

The second search discovers all.

34. This was made at midnight by Sir Thomas Knevet, Gentleman of His Majesties Privie Chamber, and others, into the Vault under the Parliament House. There the mysterie of iniquity was quickly discovered; a Pile of Fewell, faced over with Billets, lined under with thirty six Barrels of Powder, besides Iron barres, to make the force of the fire more effectuall. Guido Faux was apprehended in the outward Room, with a Dark Lantern in his hand (the lively embleme of their designe, whose dark side was turned to man, whiles the light part was exposed to God) and three Matches, ready to give fire to the Train. This Caitiffe professed himself onely grieved, that he was not in the inner room, to blow himself, and them, all up together: affirming moreover, that, not God, but the Devil made the discovery of the Plot.

The Traytors flie, and are taken.

35. Mean time, Catesbie, Percy, Rookwood, both the Wrights, and Thomas Winter, were hovering about London, to attend the issue of the matter. Having sate so long abrood, and hatching nothing, they began to suspect, all their eggs had proved addle. Yet betwixt hope, and fear, they and their Servants post down into the Countrey, thorough Warwick, and Worcester, into Stafford shire. Of Traytors they turn Felons, breaking up Stables, and stealing Horses as they went. But many of their own men (by a farre more lawfull felonie) stole away from their Masters, leaving them to shift for themselves. The neighbouring Counties, and their own consciences, rise up against these riotous Roisters, as yet unknown for Traytors. At last Sir Richard Walsh, High Sheriffe of Worcestershire, overtook them at Holbeck in Stafford shire at the house of Mr. Stephen Littleton; where, upon their resistance, the two Wrights were killed; Rookwood, and Thomas Winter shrewdly wounded.

Catesbie, and Percie, fight desperately for their lives.

36. As for Percy, and Catesbie, they fought desperately for their lives (as knowing, no quarter, but quartering, would be given unto them) and, as if they scorned to turn their backs to any but themselves, setting back to back, they fought against all that assaulted them. Many swords were drawn upon them, but gun-powder must doe the deed, which discharged that bullet, which dispatched them both. Never were two bad mens deaths more generally lamented of all good men; onely on this account, that they lived no longer, to be forced to a farther discovery of their secret Associates.

The Lord is just.

37. It must not be forgotten, how some hours before their apprehension, as these Plotters were drying dank gun-powder in an Inne, a Miller casually coming in (haply not heeding the black meal on the hearth) by careless casting on of a billet, fired the gun-powder: Up flies the Chimney, with part of the house: all therein are frighted, most hurt, but especially Catesbie and Rookwood had their faces soundly scorched; so bearing in their bodies, not stigmata, the marks of our Lord Jesus Christ, but the print of their own impieties. Well might they guesse, how good that their cup of cruelty was, whose dregs they meant others should drink, g Gal. 6. 17.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 4 Ann. Dom. 1605.

drink, by this little sip, which they themselves had unwillingly tasted thereof.

38. The rest were all at London solemnly arraigned, convicted, condemned. So foule the fact, so fair the proof, they could say nothing for themselves. Master Tresham dying in the prison, prevented a more ignominious end. The rest are legally executed.

Jan. 30. 1. Sir Everard Digbie, Robert Winter, Grant, and Bates, were hanged, drawn, and quartered, at the West end of S. Paul's. Three of them, but especially Sir Everard Digbie, died very penitently, and devoutly; onely Grant expressed most obstinacy at his end.

Jan. 31. 2. Thomas Winter, Ambrose Rookwood, Keies, and Faux were executed, as the former, in the Parliament-yard in Westminster, Keies followed Grant in his obstinacie; and [b] Faux shewed more penitencie than all the rest. [b] Stow's Chron. pag. 881.

3. Garnet, Provinciall of the English Jesuits, was arraigned some weeks after, by [i] four severall names, and executed on the Saturday, which, he said, was called Institutio crucis; of whom largely in the next year. [i] Stow, p. 883.

They all craved testimony, that they died Roman Catholicks; my pen shall grant them this their last, and so equall petition, and bears witnesse to all whom it may concern, That they lived, and died in the Romish Religion. And although the hainousnesse of their offence, might, with some colour of justice, have angred severity into cruelty against them; yet so favourably were they proceeded with, that most of their Sons, or Heirs (except since disinherited by their own prodigality) at this day enjoy their Paternall possessions.

39. Heaven having thus defeated Hell of its desired successe, Earth since hath endevoured to defraud Heaven of its deserved praise. A posthume report is brought forth into the world (nursed, as it is fit, by the mothers thereof) that King JAMES was privie to this Plot all along; and, that His observing ran parallel with the Traytors, acting therein, so that He could discover it, when He pleased, but was not pleased to discover it, untill the Eve of the fifth of November, A fancie inconsistent with that ordinary piety, which all charitable men must allow King JAMES as a Christian; and with that extraordinary policie, which His adversaries admire in Him as a Statesman. Was it probable, that He would tempt God so profanely, as solemnly to thank him, for revealing that to Him, which he knew before? Would King JAMES his wisdome, not to say, His warinesse, not to say, His fearfulnesse, dally so long with destruction, as to put it off to the last hour, when, Uno actu, tactu, ictu, nictu, all might have been confounded? Was it not hard for Him to equivocate before such a Master of equivocation, as Garnet the Jesuit was? who, certainly, if he had smelt any jugling of King JAMES therein; would, no doubt, have proclamed it to all the world at his execution. I deny not, but, that the King, both by intelligence from forain parts, and secret information from those secular Priests, that Bishop Bancroft secretly kept in his house, was advertised in generall of some great Plot which the Jesuited Papists were hatching against the ensuing Parliament: but, for the particulars, that ridd'ling Letter brought Him the first notice thereof, whatsoever is fancied to the contrary. But, if wilde conjectures in such cases from obscure Authors, shall be permitted to justle for credit against received Records, all former unquestionable history, will be quickly reduced to an universall uncertainty. But there is a generation of people, who, to inhanse the reputation of their knowledge, seem not only, like mothes, to have lurked under the carpets of the Counsel Table; but, even like fleas, to have leaped into the pillows of Princes bed-chambers, thence deriving their private knowledge of all things, which were, or were not ever done, or thought of. In defiance of whom I adde, Give unto Cesar the things that are Cesars, and unto God the things that are Gods. Let King JAMES by reading the Letter, have the credit of discovering this Plot to the world, and GOD the glory for discovering it unto King JAMES. The presumption of a posthume report justly censured. The memory of this treason perpetuated by Act of Parl:

The memory of this treason pe-rusted by Act of Parl: k Cambden Brit. in Middlesex.

40. A learned k Author, making mention of this Treason, breaketh forth into the following rapture:

Excidat illa dies ævo, ne postera credant
Secula; nos certè taceamus, & obruta multâ
Nocte tegi propria patiamur crimina gentis.

Oh let that day be quite dash'd out of time,
And not believ'd by the next generation;
In night of silence we'll conceal the crime,
Thereby to save the credit of our nation.

A wish, which, in my opinion, hath more of Poetrie, than of pietie therein, and from which, I must be forced to dissent. For, I conceive not the credit of our Countrey-men concerned in this Plot; not beholding this as a nationall act, whose actors were but a partie of a partie, a desperate handfull of discontented persons of the Papisticall faction. May the day indeed be ever forgotten, as to the point of imitation, but be ever remembred to the detestation thereof. May it be solemnly transmitted to all posterity, that they may know, how bad man can be to destroy, and how good God hath been to deliver. That especially we English-men may take notice, how wofull we might have been, how happy we are, and how thankfull we ought to be. In order whereunto the Parliament (first moved therein by Sir Edward Mountague, afterward Baron of Boughton) enacted an annuall, and constant memoriall of that day to be observed.

Just complaint that the day is no better observed.

41. Certainly, if this Plot had took effect, the Papists would have celebrated this day with all solemnity, and it should have taken the upper hand of all other Festivalls. The more therefore the shame, and pity, that amongst Protestants, the keeping of this day (not as yet full fifty years old) begins already to wax weak, and decay. So that the red letters, wherein it is written, seem daily to grow dimmer, and paler in our English Kalender. God forbid, that our thankfulnesse for this great deliverance, formerly so solemnly observed, should hereafter be like the squibs, which the Apprentices in London make on this day; and which give a great flash, and crack at the first, but soon after go out in a stink.

The death of Archbishop Hutton.

42. Matthew Hutton Archbishop of Yorke ended his religious life, descended from an antient Family of Hutton Hall (as I take it, in Lancashire) Fellow of Trinity Colledge in Cambridge (to the enlarging whereof he gave an hundred marks) afterwards Master of Pembroke Hall, and Margaret Professour, then Bishop of Durham, and Archbishop of Yorke. One of the last times that ever he preached in his Cathedrall was on this occasion: The Catholicks in Yorkeshire were commanded by the Queens Authority to be present at three Sermons, and at the two first behaved themselves so obstreperously, that some of them were forced to be gagged, before they would be quiet. The Archbishop preached the last Sermon most gravely and solidly, taking for his Text, Joh. 8. 47. He that is of God heareth Gods words, ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

A foul mistake rectified.

43. Here I must clear the memory of this worthy Prelate, from a mistake committed, surely not wilfully, but through false intelligence, by a pen, otherwise more ingenuous, and professing respect to him, and some familiarity with him.

Sir John Harrington in his Additional to Bishop Godwin, page 192.

"This Archbishop his eldest Sonne is a Knight, lately Sheriffe of Yorkeshire, "and of good reputation. One other Son he had, Luke Hutton by name, so vali-"ant, that he feared not men, nor laws; and for a robbery done on Saint Luke's "day; for names sake, he died as sad a death (though I hope with a better minde) "as the Thief of whom Saint Luke writes. The Archbishop herein shewed that "constancy and severity worthy of his place, for he would not endevour to save "him, as the world thought he easily might.

The

Ann. Reg. Jac. 4 Ann. Dom. 1606.

The Truth.

This worthy Prelate had but three Sonnes,

1. Marke, who died young,
2. Sir Timothy Hutton, Knighted Anno 1605. and Sheriffe of Yorkeshire.
3. Sir Thomas Hutton, Knight, who lived and died also respected in his own Countrey.

As for this Luke Hutton, he was not his, but Son to Doctor Hutton, Prebendarie of Durham.

This Archbishop was a learned man, excepted even by a Jesuit, (who wrote in disgrace of the English, as neglecting the reading of Fathers) and another Matthew more, qui unus in paucis versare Patres dicitur. He founded an Hospitall in the North, and endowed it with the yearly revenue of thirty five pounds.

44. Two other Bishops this year also ended their lives: In March, John[l] Young Doctour in Divinity, once Master of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge, Bishop of Rochester, in which See he sate above twenty seven years. And Anthony Watson, Fellow of Christs Colledge in Cambridge, first Dean of Bristol, and afterwards Bishop of Chichester, whom Queen Elizabeth made Her Almoner, namely after Bishop Fletcher, at whose indiscreet second marriage the Queen took distaste. Bishop Watson died in September, and alwaies led a single life.

The death of the Bishops of Rochester and Chichester.

l See Bishop Godwin in his Catalogue.

45. Father Henry Garnet was now most solemnly, and ceremoniously brought to the scaffold: who, because he is cried up by the Papists for so pretious a piece of piety, we will be the larger in the delivery of his true character. For, although we will not cast dirt on the fouleſt face, it is fit we should wash off the paint of counterfeit holinesse from the hypocriticall pretenders thereunto. Bred he was in Winchester School, where, with some other Scholars, he conspired to cut off his School-Masters, Bilson's[m] right hand (early his enmitie against Authority retrenching his riot) but that his designe was discovered. Being Prepositour of the School (whose frown, or favour was considerable to those under his inspection) he sodomitically abused five[n], or six, of the handsomest youths therein. Hereupon his School-Master advised him, yea, he advised himself, rather silently to slink away, than to stand Candidate for a repulse in his preferment to New Colledge. Over he fled to Rome, where, after some years, he so improved himself, that, from a Prepositour over boyes, he was made Provincial over men, even the whole Order of English Jesuits.

Garnet's education & early viciousnesse.

m Attested by Bishop Bilson of Winchester alive at Garnet's death, and many years after.

n Rob Abbot in his Antilogia, Epistle to the Reader.

46. Hence he returned into England, and was not onely privie to, but a principall plotter of the Gunpowder-Treason. Being attached, and imprisoned in the Tower, the Earl of Salisbury, and Doctour Overall, Dean of S. Paul's, with other Divines, repaired unto him, charging it on his conscience, for not revealing so dangerous a conspiracie; Garnet pleaded for himself, that it was concredited unto him under the solemn seal of Confession; the violation whereof he accounted the highest impiety. This they disproved, because he had discourſed thereof frequently, and publickly, with Catesbie, Gerard, and Greenwood, circumstances inconsistent with the essentiall secrecie of Confession. Garnet sought to salve himself with a fine distinction (so fine that it brake to pieces in the spinning) that it was told him in viâ ad confessionem, in order to confession; which, though wanting some formalities thereof, did equally oblige his conscience to conceal it.

Canvased in the Tower by the Protestant Divines.

47. Dean Overall rejoyned, that Confession was of antefacts, not postfacts; and, that it is not confession, but menacing to impart to a Priest intended villanies. He farther urged, that their most conscientious Casuists allowed, yea, injoyned Priests discovery in such case, when a greater good accrued by revealing, than concealing such secrecies. I was minded (quoth Garnet) to discover the plot, but not the persons therein.

Confession only of antefacts.

48. Here the Earl of Salisbury interposed; and, who (said he) hindred you from discovering the Plot? Even you your self (answered Garnet) for I knew full well, should I have revealed the Plot, and not the Plotters, you would have racked this poor body of mine to pieces, to make me confesse. And now we have mentioned the rack, Earl of Salisbury's question answered.

Know,

Know, that never any rack was used on Garnet, except a wit-rack, wherewith he was worsted, and this cunning archer outshot in his own bow. For being in prison with Father Oldcorne, alias Hall, his Confessour, they were put into an [o] equivocating room, (as I may terme it) which pretended nothing but privacie, yet had a reservation of some invisible persons within it, ear-witnesses to all the passages betwixt them, whereby many secrecies of Garnet's were discovered. Ann. Dom. 1606. Ann. Reg. Jac. 5

49. In Guild-hall he was arraigned before the Lord Major, and the Lords of the Privie Councell, Sir Baptist Hicks (afterwards Viscount Camden) being foreman of the Jury, consisting of Knights, Esquires, and the most substantiall Citizens, whose integrities and abilities were above exception. I see therefore no cause why the defender of Garnet, after his death accuseth those men as incompetent, or improper for their place, as if he would have had him tried per pares by a Jury of Jesuits (and, would he have them all Provincials too?) which I believe, though summoned, would unwillingly have appeared in that place. Garnet, pleading little against pregnant proofs, was condemned, and some daies after publickly executed in S. Paul's Church-yard. May 3

50. The Secretary of the Spanish Ambassadour (for we charitably believe his Master honester, and wiser) writing into Spain, and Italy, what here he took upon hear-say, filled forain Countreys with many falshoods concerning Garnet's death, as namely,

1. That he manifested much alacrity of minde, in the cheerfulnesse of his looks at his death.	Whereas	1. He betrayed much servile fear, and consternation of spirit, much beneath the erected resolution of a Martyr.
2. His zealous, and fervent prayers much moved the people.		2. His prayers were faint, cold, and perplexed, oft interrupted with his listening to, and answering of others.
3. The people hindered the hangman from cutting the rope, and quartering him while alive.		3. That favour by speciall order from His Majestie, was mercifully indulged unto him.
4. The people so clawed the Executioner, that he hardly escaped with life.		4. No violence was done unto him, able many years after to give a cast of his office, if need required.
5. When he held up Garnet's head to the people, there was a Panick silence, none saying, God save the King.		5. Acclamations in that kinde were as loud, and generall, as heretofore on the same occasion.

Thus suffered Father Garnet, after whose death some subtile persons have impudently broached, and other silly people senslesly believed a certain miracle of his working, which we here relate as we finde it reported:

51. John Wilkinson, a thorough-paced Catholick, living at S. Omers, posted over into England, as having a great desire to get, and keep some of Garnet's reliques. Great was his diligence in coming early before others to the place of his execution (which advantaged him neer to Garnet's person) and greater his patience in staying till all was ended, and the rest of the people departed. When, behold a straw besprinkled with some drops of his blood (and having an ear of corn at the end thereof) leaped [p] up on this Wilkinson, not taking the rise of its leap from the ground, he was sure, but whether from the scaffold, or from the basket wherein Garnet's head was, he was uncertain: Was not this Wilkinson made of Feat, that he drew this straw so wonderfully unto him? Well, however it came to passe, joyfully he departs with this treasure, and deposits the same with the Wife

[o] Abbot in Antilogia, cap. 1. fol. 5.

Garnet his arraignment, & condemnation.

Popish false relations disproved.

The solemn tale of Garnet's Straw-miracle.

[p] Abbot, lib. ut prius, cap. 14. fol. 198. out of whom for the main, all this story is taken, with the confutation thereof.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 5 Ann. Dom. 1607.

Wife of Hugh Griffith, a Tailor (a Zealot of his own Religion) who provided a Chrystall Case for the more chaitie keeping thereof.

52. Some weeks after, upon serious inspection of this straw, the face of a man (and we must believe it was Garnet's) was perceived therein, appearing on the outside of a leaf (which covered a grain within it) and where the convexitie thereof represented the prominencie of the face, with good advantage. Wilkinson, Hugh Griffith, and his wife, Thomas Laithwaith, and others beheld the same, though there be some difference in their depositions, whose eyes had the first happinesse to discover this portraicture. Soon after, all England was belittered with the news of this straw, and Catholicks cried it up for no lesse than a miracle.

Garnet's picture appears in a straw.

53. There are two infallible touch-stones of a true miracle, which alwaies is done totum, presently, and totum, perfectly. Neither of these on examination appeared here. For, when this straw saliens leaped first up into Wilkinson's lap, it is to be presumed, that he (having it so long in his possession) critically surveyed the same, the volume whereof might quickly be perused: and yet then no such effigiation was therein discovered, which some nineteen weeks after became visible, about the nineteenth of September following. Surely had this pregnant straw gone out its full time of fourty weeks, it would have been delivered of a perfect picture indeed, whereas now miscarrying before that time, wonder not if all things were not so complete therein.

Not presently done.

54. For the face therein was not so exact, as which might justly intitle heaven to the workmanship thereof. Say not it was done in too small a scantling to be accurate, for Deus est maximus in minimis, Gods exquisitenesse appears the most in [9] models. Whereas when Witnesses were examined about this mock-miracle before the Archbishop of Canterbury, Francis Bowes deposed, that he believed that a good Artisan might have drawn one more curiously, and Hugh Griffith himself attested, that it was no more like Garnet, than to any other man who had a beard; and that it was so small, none could affirm it to resemble him; adding moreover, that there was no glory, or streaming raies about it, which some did impudently report.

Not perfectly done.

[9] Exod. 2. 18.

55. However, this inspirited straw was afterward copied out, and at Rome printed in pomp, with many superstitious coparaments about it (as a coronet, a crosse, and nails) more than ever were in the originall. Yea, this miracle (how silly, and simple soever) gave the ground-work to Garnet's beatification by the Pope some moneths after. Indeed Garnet complained before his death, That he could not expect that the Church should own him for a Martyr, and signified the same in his Letter to his dear Mistresse Anne (but for her surname call her Garnet, or Vaux, as you please) because nothing of religion, and onely practices against the State were laid to his charge. It seemed good therefore to his Holinesse, not to canonize Garnet for a solemn Saint, much lesse for a Martyr, but onely to beatificate him, which (if I mistake not in their heavenly heraldrie) is by Papists accounted the least, and lowest degree of celestiall dignity, and yet a step above the Commonalitie, or ordinary sort of such good men as are saved. This he did to qualifie the infamie of Garnet's death, and that the perfume of this new title might outsent the stench of his treason. But we leave this Garnet (loth longer to disturb his blessednesse) in his own place, and proceed to such Church-matters as were transacted in this present Parliament.

Garnet's beatification occasioned by this mock-miracle.

56. Evil manners prove often (though against their will) the parents of good laws, as here it came to passe. The Parliament begun, and holden at Westminster the fifth of November, and there continued till the 27 of May following, enacted many things for the discovering, and repressing of Popish Recusants, extant at large in the printed Statutes. Whereof none was more effectuall, than that Oath of Obedience, which every Catholick was commanded to take, the form whereof is here inserted. Therather, because this Oath may be termed like two of Isaac's wells, Esek, and Sitnah; Contention, and Hatred, the subject of a rough contro-

Acts against Papists in Parliament, but principally the Oath of Obedience.

[7] Gen. 26. 20, 21.

versie betwixt us and Rome, about the legall urging, and taking thereof; Protestants no lesse learnedly asserting, than Papists did zealously oppose the same.

Ann. Dom. 1607. Ann. Reg. Jac. 5

The form of which Oath is as followeth:

I A. B. doe truly and sincerely acknowledge, professe, testifie, and declare in my conscience before God, and the world, That our Soveraigne Lord King James is lawfull, and rightfull King of this Realm, and of all other His Majesties Dominions, and Countreys; and that the Pope, neither of himself, nor by any authority of the Church, or See of Rome, or by any other meanes with any other, hath any power, or authority to depose the King, or to dispose any of His Majesties Kingdomes, or Dominions, or to authorize any forraign Prince to invade, or annoy Him, or His Countreys, or to discharge any of His subjects of their allegiance, and obedience to His Majestie, or to give licence, or leave to any of them to bear armes, raise tumults, or to offer any violence, or hurt to His Majesties Royall Person, State, or Government, or to any of His Majesties subjects, within His Majesties Dominions.

Also I doe sweare from my heart, that notwithstanding any declaration, or sentence of Excommunication, or deprivation, made, or granted, or to be made, or granted by the Pope, or his Successours, or by any authority derived, or pretended to be derived from him, or his See, against the said King, His Heires, or Successours, or any absolution of the said subjects from their obedience: I will beare faith, and true allegiance to His Majestie, His Heires, and Successours, and Him, and Them will defend to the uttermost of my power, against all conspiracies and attempts whatsoever, which shall be made against His or Their Persons, Their Crown, and Dignity, by reason or colour of any such sentence, or declaration, or otherwise, and will doe my best endevour to disclose, and make known unto His Majestie, His Heires and Successours, all treasons, and traiterous conspiracies, which I shall know, or heare of, to be against Him, or any of Them.

And I doe further sweare, That I doe from my heart abhorre, detest, and abjure, as impious, and hereticall, this damnable doctrine, and position, That Princes, which be excommunicated, or deprived by the Pope, may be deposed, or murthered by Their subjects, or any other whatsoever.

And I doe beleeve, and in conscience am resolved, that neither the Pope, nor any person whatsoever, hath power to absolve me of this Oath, or any part thereof, which I acknowledge by good and full authority to be lawfully ministred unto me, and doe renounce all Pardons, and Dispensations to the contrary. And all these things I doe plainly, and sincerely acknowledge, and sweare, according to these expresse words, by me spoken, and according to the plain, and common sense, and understanding of the same words, without any equivocation, or mentall evasion, or secret reservation whatsoever. And I doe make this recognition, and acknowledgement heartily, willingly, and truly, upon the true faith of a Christian. So help me God.

This Oath was devised to discriminate the pernicious from the peaceable Papists. Sure binde, sure finde. And the makers of this were necessitated to be larger therein, because it is hard to strangle equivocation, which, if unable by might to break, will endevour by slight to slip the halter.

The Pope his two Breve's against this Oath. See K. James his Works, pag. 250.

57. No sooner did the newes thereof arrive at the east of his Holiness, but presently he dispatcheth his Breve into England, prohibiting all Catholicks to take this Oath, so destructive to their own soules, and the See of Rome, exhorting them patiently to suffer persecution, and manfully to endure martyrdome. And because report was raised, that the Pope wrote this Breve, not of his own motive, and proper will, but rather for the respect, and at the instigation of others, next by the same[1] second to give faith, and confirmation to the former. Notwithstanding all which, this Oath, being tendred to, was generally taken by Catholicks, without any scruple or regrete. And particularly George Blackwell, Archpriest of the English, being apprehended, and cast into prison, by taking this Oath, wrought his

[1] Euan, ibid. pag. 258.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 5 Ann. Dom. 1607.

his own enlargement. Which made Cardinal Bellarmine (ſome fourty years agoe acquainted with him) in his Letters[u] kindly to reprove him for the ſame.

58. And now the allarme being given, whether this Oath was lawfull, or no; both parties of Proteſtants and Papiſts drew forth their forces into the field. King JAMES undertook the POPE himſelf; the wearer of Three, againſt the wearer of a Triple Crown (an even match) effectually confuting his Breve's. Biſhop Andrews takes Bellarmine to task; Biſhop Barlow poures out upon Parſons; Doctor Morton, Doctor Robert Abbot, Doctor Buckeridge, Doctor Collins, Doctor Burrel, Maſter Tomſon, Doctor Peter Moulin, maintain the legality of the Oath, againſt Suarez, Eudæmon, Becanus, Coſtetcus, Peleterius, and others, to whoſe worthy Works the Reader is referred for his farther ſatisfaction. I may call it, not go into theſe controverſies, leſt, by ſtaying ſo long, I be benighted in my way, the rather, becauſe the nearer we approach our home, the longer the miles grow, I mean, matter multiplieth toward the concluſion of our work. And now it is not worth the while, to go into the contemporary Convocation, where we meet with nothing but formality and continuations.

[u] Extant, ibid. pag. 206. Pens tilting at pens about the lawfulneſſe of this Oath.

Ann. Dom 1607. Ann. Reg. Jac. 5

SECTION III.

THOMÆ DACRES DE CHESTHUNT, Armig:

AVdisti sæpius de Rotundâ tabulâ, quam VVintonia jactitat: Hanc Regem Arthurum instituisse ferunt; ne inter Milites ejus discumbentes aliquid discordiæ ob πρωτοκαθεδρίαν orireretur.

Nôsti quales olim Libri fuerunt cum in gyrum rotarentur. Hinc adhuc inter Latinos volumen à volvendo obtinet. Nihil igitur interest quo ordine Patroni mei collocentur, cum in circulari formâ inter primum & imum nihil sit discriminis.

Sed quorsum hæc! Cum Genus tuum, licèt splendidum, (tanta est Comitas, quæ te illustrem reddidit) non fastuosè consulas: Tibi omnia prospera. Vale.

The names, places, and severall employments of the Translators of the Bible.

WEE May remember, that one of the best things produced by Hampton-Court-Conference, was a resolution in His Majesty for a new Translation of the Bible. Which religious designe was now effectually prosecuted, and the Translators, being seven and fourty in number, digested into six companies, and severall Books assigned them, in order as followeth, according unto the severall places wherein they were to meet, conferre, and consult together; so that nothing should passe without a generall consent.

Westmin-

Ann. Reg. Jac. 5 — Ann. Dom. 1607.

Weſtminſter 10.

The Pentateuch; the Story from Joſhua, to the firſt Book of the Chronicles, excluſively.

- Doctor Andrews, Fellow, and Maſter of Pembroke-Hall in Cambr: then Dean of Weſtminſter, after Biſhop of Winchester.
- Dr. Overall, Fellow of Trin: Coll: Maſter of Kath: Hall in Cambr: then Dean of S. Pauls, after Biſhop of Norwich.
- Dr. Saravia.
- Dr. Clarke, Fellow of Chriſt-Coll: in Cambr: Preacher in Canterbury.
- Dr. Laifield, Fellow of Trin in Cambr: Parſon of St. Clement-Danes. Being ſkill'd in Architecture, his judgment was much rely'd on for the fabrick of the Tabernacle and Temple.
- Dr. Leigh, Archdeacon of Middleſex, Parſon of Allhallows-Barking.
- Maſter Burgley.
- Mr. King.
- Mr. Thompſon.
- Mr. Bedwell of Cambridge, and (I think) of Saint Johns, Vicar of Tottenham nigh London.

Cambridge 8.

From the firſt of the Chronicles with the reſt of the Story, & the Hagiographa, viz: Job, Pſalmes, Proverbs, Canticles, Eccleſiaſtes.

- Maſter Lively.
- Mr. Richardſon, Fell: of Emman: after D.D. Maſter firſt of Peter-Houſe, then of Trin: Coll:
- Mr. Chaderton, after D.D. Fell: firſt of Chriſt-Coll: the Maſter of Emmanuel.
- Mr. Dillingham, Fell. of Chriſt Coll: beneficed at in Bedford ſhire, where he died a ſingle, and a wealthie-man.
- Mr. Andrews, after D. D. brother to the Biſhop of Winchester, and Maſter of Jeſus-Coll:
- Mr. Harriſon, the Reverend Vice Maſter of Trinity-Coll:
- Mr. Spalding, * Fell: of St. Johns in Cambr: and Hebrew-Profeſſor therein.
- Mr. Bing, Fell: of Peter-Houſe in Cambr: and Hebrew-Profeſſour therein.

* See our Catalogue of the Hebrew Profeſſors in Cambridge to marſhall their ſucceſſion.

Oxford 7.

The four greater Prophets, with the Lamentations, and the twelve leſſer Prophets.

- Doctor Harding, Preſident of Magdalene-Colledge.
- Dr. Reynolds, Preſident of Corpus-Chriſti-Colledge.
- Dr. Holland, Rectour of Exceter-Colledge, and Kings-Profeſſour.
- Dr. Kilby, Rectour of Lincoln-Colledge, and Regius Profeſſour.
- Maſter Smith, after D.D. and Biſhop of Gloceſter. He made the learned and religious Preface to the Tranſlation.
- Mr. Brett, of a worſhipfull family, beneficed at Quainton in Buckingham ſhire.
- Mr. Faireclowe.

Ann. Dom. 1607 | Ann. Reg. Jac. 5

Cambridge 7.

The Prayer of Manasseh, and the rest of the Apocrypha.

- Doctor Duport, Prebend of Elie, and Master of Iesus Colledge.
- Dr. Brainthwait, first Fellow of Emmanuel, then Master of Gonvel and Caius-Coll:
- Dr. Radclyffe, one of the seniour Fellows of Trin: Coll:
- Master Ward, Emman: after D.D. Master of Sidney-Coll: and Margaret-Professour.
- Mr. Downes, Fellow of St. Iohns-Coll: and Greek-Professour.
- Mr. Boyse, Fellow of St. Iohns-Coll: Prebend of Elie, Parson of Boxworth in Cambridge-shire.
- Mr. Ward, Regal, after D. D. Prebend of Chichester, Rector of Bishop-Waltham in Hampshire.

Oxford 8.

The four Gospels, Acts of the Apostles, Apocalyps.

- Doctor Ravis, Dean of Christ-Church, afterwards Bishop of London.
- Dr. Abbot, Master of University-Coll: afterward Archbishop of Canterbury.
- Dr. Eedes.
- Mr. Thompson.
- Mr. Savill.
- Dr. Peryn.
- Dr. Ravens.
- Mr. Harmer.

Westminster 7.

The Epistles of S. Paul, The Canonicall Epistles.

- Doctor Barlowe, of Trinity-Hall in Cambridge, Dean of Chester, after Bishop of Lincolne.
- Dr. Hutchenson.
- Dr. Spencer.
- Mr. Fenton.
- Mr. Rabbet.
- Mr. Sanderson.
- Mr. Dakins.

Now, for the better ordering of their proceedings, His Majestie recommended the following Rules by them to be most carefully observed:

The Kings instructions to the Translators.

1. The ordinary Bible read in the Church, commonly called the Bishops Bible, to be followed, and as little altered as the Originall will permit.
2. The names of the Prophets, and the Holy Writers, with the other names in the text, to be retained as neer as may be, accordingly as they are vulgarly used.
3. The old Ecclesiasticall words to be kept, viz: as the word [Church] not to be translated Congregation, &c.
4. When any word hath divers significations, that to be kept which hath been most commonly used, by the most eminent Fathers, being agreeable to the propriety of the place, and the analogie of faith.
5. The division of the Chapters to be altered either not at all, or as little as may be, if necessity so require.
6. No marginall notes at all to be affixed, but onely for the explanation of the Hebrew, or Greek words, which cannot without some circumlocution, so briefly and fitly be expressed in the text.
7. Such quotations of places to be marginally set down, as shall serve for the fit reference of one Scripture to another.

8. Every

Ann. Reg. Jac. I. Ann. Dom. 1607.

8. Every particular man of each company to take the same Chapter, or Chapters; and, having translated, or amended them severally by himself where he thinks good, all to meet together, conferre what they have done, and agree for their part what shall stand.

9. As any one company hath dispatched any one Book in this manner, they shall send it to the rest, to be considered of seriously, and judiciously; for, His Majestie is very carefull in this point.

10. If any company, upon the review of the Book so sent, shall doubt, or differ upon any places, to send them word thereof, note the places, and therewithall send their reasons: to which if they consent not, the difference to be compounded at the General Meeting, which is to be of the chief persons of each company, at the end of the work.

11. When any place of speciall obscurity is doubted of, Letters to be directed by Authority, to send to any learned in the Land for his judgment in such a place.

12. Letters to be sent from every Bishop, to the rest of his Clergie, admonishing them of this Translation in hand; and to move, and charge as many as, being skilfull in the Tongues, have taken pains in that kinde, to send his particular observations to the Company, either at Westminster, Cambridge, or Oxford.

13. The directours in each Company, to be the Deans of Westminster, and Chester, for that place; and the Kings Professours in the Hebrew, and Greek, in each Universitie.

14. These Translations to be used, when they agree better with the Text, than the Bishops Bible, viz: Tindals, Matthews, Coverdals, Whitchurch, Geneva.

Besides the said directions before mentioned, three or four of the most ancient, and grave Divines in either of the Universities, not employed in translating, to be assigned by the Vice-Chancellour, upon conference with the rest of the Heads, to be Overseers of the Translations, as well Hebrew, as Greek, for the better observation of the fourth Rule above specified.

1. The untimely death of Mr. Edward Lively, much weight of the work lying on his skill in the Oriental Tongues, happening about this time (happy that servant whom his Master, when he cometh, findeth so doing) not a little retarded their proceedings. However the rest vigorously, though slowly, proceeded in this hard, heavie, and holy task, nothing offended with the censures of impatient people, condemning their delaies, though indeed but due deliberation, for haste. Our pen for the present takes its leave of them, not doubting but within two years to give a good account of them, or rather that they will give a good account of themselves.

Mr. Lively his death.

In the translating of the Bible, one of the eminent persons employed therein was translated into a better life, viz.:

The death of Dr. Reynolds.

May 21. Doctor John Reynolds, Kings Professour in Oxford, born in Devonshire, with Bishop Jewell, and Mr. Hooker; and all three bred in Corpus Christi Colledge in Oxford. No one County in England have three such men (* contemporaries at large) in what Colledge soever they were bred, no Colledge in England bred such three men, in what County soever they were born.

* He was Batchelor of Arts before Bishop Jewels death.

This John Reynolds at the first was a zealous Papist, whilst William his Brother was as earnest a Protestant, and afterwards Providence so ordered it that by their mutuall disputation John Reynolds turned an eminent Protestant, and William an inveterate Papist, in which perswasion he died.

A strange encounter.

This

Ann. Dom. 1607 Ann. Reg. Jac. 5

This gave the occasion to an excellent Copie of Verses, concluding with this Distich,

Quod genus hoc pugnæ est? ubi victus gaudet uterq́,
Et simul alteruter se superasse dolet.

What war is this? when conquered both are glad,
And either to have conquered when sad.

Chap. 11. ver. 4. Daniel saith, Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased. But here indeed was a strange transcursion, and remarkable the effects thereof.

His admirable parts and piety. 5. His memory was little lesse than miraculous (he himself being the truest Table to the multitude of voluminous Books he had read over, whereby he could readily turn to all materiall passages in every leaf, page, volume, paragraph, not to descend lower, to lines and letters. As his Memory was a faithfull Index, so his Reason was a solid Index of what he read; his Humility set a lustre on all (admirable that the whole should be so low, whose severall parts were so high) communicative of which he knew to any that desired information herein, like a tree loaden with fruit, bowing down its branches to all that desired to ease it of the burden thereof, deserving this Epitaph:

Incertum est utrum Doctior an Melior.

Most conformable in his practice to the Church of England. 6. His disaffection to the discipline established in England was not so great, as some Bishops did suspect, or as more Non-conformists did believe. No doubt he desired the abolishing of some Ceremonies for the ease of the conscience of others, to which in his own practice he did willingly submit, constantly wearing Hood and Surplice, and kneeling at the Sacrament. On his death-bed he earnestly desired absolution, according to the form of the Church of England, and received it from Doctor Holland, whose hand he affectionately kissed, in expression of the joy he received thereby: Doctor Featly made his funerall Oration in the Colledge, Sir Isaac Wake in the University.

Dr. Cranmer in his Defence of the English against Spalato. Mr. Molle his birth and breeding. 7. About this time Mr. John Molle, Governour to the Lord Ross in his travails, began his unhappy journey beyond the Seas. This Mr. Molle was born in, or neer South-Molton in Devon. His youth was most spent in France, where both by sea and land he gained much dangerous experience. Once the ship he sailed in sprung a-leak, wherein he and all his company had perished, if an Hollander (bound for Guernsey) passing very neer, had not speedily taken them in; which done, their ship sunk immediately. Being Treasurer for Sir Thomas Shirley of the English Army in Britanie, he was in the defeat of Cambray wounded, taken prisoner, and ransomed; Providence designing him neither to be swallowed by the surges, nor slain by the sword, but in due time to remain a Land-mark of Christian patience to all posterity. At last he was appointed by Thomas, Earl of Exeter, (who formerly had made him Examiner in the Councell of the North) to be Governour in Travail to his Grand-childe, the Lord Ross, undertaking the charge with much reluctancie (as a presage of ill successe) and with a profession, and a resolution not to passe the Alpes.

His sad Dilemma. 8. But a Vagari took the Lord Ross to go to Rome, though some conceive this motion had its root in more mischievous brains. In vain doth Mr. Molle dissuade him, grown now so wilfull, he would in some sort govern his Governour. What should this good man doe? To leave him were to desert his trust, to goe along with him was to endanger his own life. At last his affections to his charge so prevailed against his judgment, that unwillingly willing he went with him. Now, at what rate soever they rode to Rome, the fame of their coming came thither before them; so that no sooner had they entred their Inne, but Officers asked for Mr. Molle, took and carried him to the Inquisition-House, where he remained a prisoner, whilest the Lord Ross was daily feasted, favoured, entertained: so that some some will not stick to say, That here he changed no Religion for a bad one.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 5 | Ann. Dom. 1607.

His constancy in the Inquisition.

9. However, such Mr. Molle's glorious constancy, that whilest he look'd forward on his cause, and upwards to his crown, neither frights nor flattery could make any impression on him. It is questionable, whether his friends did more pity his misery, or admire his patience. The pretence, and allegation of his so long and strict imprisonment, was, because he had translated Du Plessis his Book of The Visibility of the Church, out of French into English; but besides, there were other contrivances therein, not so fit for a publick relation. In vain did his friends in England, though great and many, endeavour his enlargement by exchange, for one or moe Jesuits, or Priests, who were prisoners here. Papists beholding this Molle as a man of a thousand, who, if discharged the Inquisition, might give an account of Romish cruelty to their great disadvantage.

His death in durance. * So am I informed by a Letter from Mr. Hen. Molle his Son.

10. In all the time of his durance, he never heard from any * friend, nor any from him, by word or letter: no English man being ever permitted to see him, save onely one, viz. Mr. Walter Strickland of Bointon-house in York shire. With very much desire, and industry, he procured leave to visit him, an Irish Frier being appointed to stand by, and be a witnesse of their discourse. Here he remained thirty years in restraint, and in the eighty first year of his age died a Prisoner, and constant Confessour of Christ his cause. God be magnified in, and for the sufferings of his Saints.

The death of Bishop Vaughan.

11. In this year Richard Vaughan, Doctor of Divinity, bred in S. John's Colledge in Cambridge, successively Bishop of Bangor, Chester, and London, ended his life. A corpulent man, but spiritually minded, such his integrity, not to be bowed (though force was not wanting) to any base connivance, to wrong the Church he was placed in. His many virtues made his losse to be much bemoaned.

Mr. Brightmans birth, and breeding.

12. Greater was the grief, which the death of Master Thomas Brightman caused to the disaffectors of the Church-discipline of England. He was born in the Town of Nottingham, bred in Queens-Colledge in Cambridge, where a constant opposition, in point of judgment about Ceremonies, was maintained between him, and Doctor Meryton, afterwards Dean of Yorke. Here he filled himselfe with abilities for the Ministerie, waiting a call to vent himselfe in the Countrey.

A Patron paramount.

13. It happened this very time, that Sir John, Son to Mr. Peter Osborne (both lovers of learned, and godly men) not onely bought, and restored the Rectorie of Haunes in Bedford shire, (formerly alienated) to the Church, but also built thereon from the ground a fair House, which he furnished with fitting utensils for the future Incumbent thereof. This done, at his desire of an able Minister, Doctor Whitakers recommended Master Brightman unto him, on whom Sir John, not onely freely conferred the Living, but also the profits of two former years, which the Knight inned at his own cost, and kept in his possession.

Exceptions against Master Brightman's Book.

14. Here Mr. Brightman employed himself both by preaching, and writing, to advance Gods glory, and the good of the Church, witnesse his learned Comments in most pure Latine on the Canticles, and Revelation; though for the latter greatly grudged at on severall accounts:

1. For the Title thereof, conceived too insolent for any creature to affix, A Revelation of The Revelation; except immediate Inspiration, which made the lock, had given the key unto it.
2. For being over-positive in his interpretations: The rather, because the Reverend Mr. Calvin himself, being demanded his opinion of some passages in the Revelation (as a learned * man reporteth) answered ingenuously, That he knew not at all what so obscure a writer meant.

* Bodin in his Method of History, cap. 7.

3. For over-particularizing in personal expositions, applying severall An-

Chap. 14. v. 18 He maketh Arch-bp. Cranmer the Angel to have power over the fire: and Ch. 16. v. 5. He makes Will. Cecil L. d. Treas. of England the Angel of the waters (if Lord Admirall, it had been more proper) justifying the pouring out of the third viall.

gels mentioned therein, to the Lord Cromwell, Archbishop Cranmer, Cecill Lord Burley, &c. Such restrictiveness being unsuitable with the large concernment of Scripture; as if England, half an Island in the Western corner, were more considerable than all the world besides, and the theater whereon so much should be performed. Ann. Dom 1607. Ann. Reg. Jac. 5

4. In resembling the Church of England to luke-warm Laodicea, praising, and preferring the purity of forrain Protestant-Churches.

Indeed his daily discourse was against Episcopal Government, which he declared would shortly be pulled down. He spake also of great troubles, which would come upon the Land; of the destruction of Rome, and the Universall calling of the Jewes, affirming, That some then alive should see all these things effected.

His angelical life.

15. However, his life was most angelicall by the confession of such, who in judgment dissented from him. His manner was alwaies to carry about him a Greek Testament, which he read over every fortnight, reading the Gospels, and the Acts, the first; the Epistles, and the Apocalyps, the second week. He was little of stature, and (though such commonly cholerick) yet never known to be moved with anger; and therefore when his pen falls foul on Romish superstition, his friends account it zeal, and no passion.

His sudden death.

16. His desire was to die a sudden death, if God so pleased (surely not out of opposition to the English Liturgie praying against the same, but) for some reasons best known to himself. God granted him his desire, a death, sudden in respect of the shortnesse of the time, though premeditated on, and prepared for by him, who waited for his change; and, being a watchfull souldier, might be assaulted, not surprized. For, riding in a Coach with Sir John Osborne, and reading of a Book (for he would lose no time) he fainted, and, though instantly taken out in a servants armes, and set on his lap, on an hillock, all means affordable at that instant being used for his recovery, died on the place, on the twenty fourth of August, and is buried in the Chancell of Hannes (Reverend Doctor Bulkley preaching his funerall Sermon) after he had faithfully fed his flock therein for fifteen years. Aug. 24.

Whence we derive our intelligence.

17. He was a constant Student, much troubled before his death with obstructions, both of the liver, and gall; and is supposed by Physicians to have died of the later, about the fiftieth one year of his age. And now no doubt he is in the number of those * Virgins, who were not defiled with women, and follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. Who alwaies led a single life, as preferring a bed unfilled, before a bed undefiled. This my intelligence I have received by Letter, from my worthy friend lately gone to God, Master William Buckly, Bachelour of Divinity, and once Fellow of Queens Colledge in Cambridge, who living hard by Hannes, at Clyston, at my request diligently inquired, and returned this his character, from aged, credible persons, familiar with Master Brightman.

* Revel. 14. 4.

18. This year silently slipt away in peace, plenty, and prosperity, being ended before effectually begun, as to any memorable Church-matter therein. Indeed all the Reigne of King JAMES was better for one to live under, than to write of, consisting of a Champian of constant tranquility, without any tumours of trouble to entertain posterity with. 1608.

An Act for Chelsey-Colledge.

19. In the Parliament now sitting at Westminster (in whose parallel Convocation nothing of consequence) the most remarkable thing Enacted was, the Act made to enable the Provost, and Fellowes of Chelsey-Colledge, to dig a trench out of the river Lee, to erect Engines, water-works, &c. to convey, and carry water in close-pipes under ground, unto the City of London, and the Suburbs thereof, for the perpetuall maintenance, and sustentation of the Provost, and Fellows of that Colledge, and their successours, by the rent to be made of the said waters so conveyed. Where, first lighting on the mention of this Colledge, we will consider it in a fourfold capacity: 1. As intended, and designed. 2. As growing, and advanced. 3. As hindred, 1609.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 7 Ann. Dom. 1609.

hindred, and obstructed. 4. As decaying, and almost, at the present, ruined. I shall crave the Reader pardon, if herein I make excursions into many years (but without discomposing of our Chronologie on the margin) because it is my desire (though the Colledge be left imperfect) to finish, and complete my description thereof, so farre as my best intelligence will extend; being herein beholding to Doctor Samuel Wilkinson, the fourth, and present Provost of that Colledge, courteously communicating unto me the considerable Records thereof.

20. It was intended for a Spirituall Garrison, with a Magazine of all Books for that purpose; where learned Divines should study, and write, in maintenance of all Controversies against the Papists. Indeed, the Romanists herein may rise up, and condemn those of the Protestant Confession. For, as [a] Solomon used not his military men for any servile work, in building the Temple (whereof the Texr assigneth this reason, (For they were men of warre:) so the Romish Church doth not burden their Professours with preaching, or any parochiall incumbrances, but reserves them onely for Polemical studies. Whereas in England, the same man reads, preacheth, catechizeth, disputes, delivers Sacraments, &c. So that, were it not for Gods marvellous blessing on our studies, and the infinite odds of truth on our side, it were impossible, in humane probability, that we should hold up the bucklers against them. Besides the study of Divinity, at the least two able Historians were to be maintained in this Colledge, faithfully, and learnedly to record, and publish to posterity all memorable passages in Church, and Commonwealth.

The glory of the designe.

[a] 2 Chron. 8. 9.

21. In pursuance of this designe, His Majesty incorporated the said foundation, by the name of King JAMES his Colledge in Chelsey; and bestowed on the same by his Letters Patents, the reversion of good land in Chelsey (then in possession of Charles Earl of Nottingham, the Lease thereof not expiring till about thirty years hence) and also gave it a capacity to receive of His loving Subjects any lands, not exceeding in the whole the yearly value of three thousand pounds.

K. James His Mortmain, and personal benefaction;

22. Next King JAMES, let me place Doctor Matthew Sutcliffe, Dean of Exeter; who, though no Prince by birth, seems little lesse by his bounty to this Colledge. As Araunah, but a private Subject, gave things [b] as a King to Gods service, such the royall liberality of this Doctor, bestowing on this Colledge, Dr. Sutcliffe his bounty.

[b] 2 Sam. 24. 23.

The Farms of	1. Kingstone	1. Staverton	All in the County of Devon, and put together, richly worth three hundred pounds per annum.
	2. Hazzard	2. Harberton
	3. Appleton	3. Cherchton
	4. Kramerland	4. Stoke-rivers

in the Parish of

Besides these, by his Will, dated November 1. 1628. he bequeathed unto Doctor John Prideaux, and Doctor Clifford (as Feoffees in trust, to settle the same on the Colledge) the benefit of the Extent on a Statute of four thousand pounds, acknowledged by Sir Lewis Stenklie, &c. A bountifull benefaction, and the greater, because the said Doctour had a Daughter, and the Children of her own. And, although this endowment would scarce make the Pot of pottage [c] seethe for the sons of the Prophets, yet, what feasts would it have made in his private family, if continued therein? Seeing therefore so publick a minde in so private a man, the more the pity, that this good Doctour was deserted, Uriah-like, [d] ingaged in the forefront to fight alone against an army of difficulties; which he encountred in this designe, whilest such men basely retired from him, which should have seasonably succoured, and seconded him in this action.

[c] 2 Kings 4. 38, 39.

[d] 2 Sam. 11. 17.

23. The fabrick of this Colledge was begun on a piece of ground called Thameshot, containing about six acres, and then in possession of Charles Earl of Nottingham, who granted a Lease of his terme therein to the said Provost, at the yearly rent of seven pounds ten shillings. King JAMES laid the first

The Structure.

Ann. Dom 1609. Ann. Reg. Jac. 7

stone thereof, and gave all the timber requisite thereunto, which was to be fetch'd out of Windsor-Forrest. And yet that long range of building, which alone is extant, scarce finished at this day (thus made, though not of free-stone, of free-timbet) as I am informed, cost (oh the dearnesse of Church and Colledge-work!) full three thousand pound. But alas! what is this piece (not an eighth part) to a double quadrant, besides wings on each side, which was intended? If the aged fathers, which remembred the magnificence of Solomon's, wept at the meanesse of the [a] second Temple; such must needs be sad, which consider the disproportion betwixt what was performed, and what was projected in this Colledge: Save that I confesse, that the destruction of beautifull buildings once really extant, leave greater impressions in mens mindes, than the miscarriages of onely intentional structures, and the faint Ideas of such future things, as are probably propounded, but never effected.

[a] Hag. 2. 3.

The first Provost and Fellows.

24. And here we will insert the number, and names of the Provost, and first Fellows (and some of them probable to be last Fellows, as still surviving) as they were appointed by the King Himself, Anno 1610. May 8.

Matthew Sutcliffe, Dean of Exeter, Provost.

1. John Overal, Dean of S. Pauls.
2. Thomas Morton, Dean of Winchester.
3. Richard Field, Dean of Gloucester.
4. Robert Abbot,
5. John Spenser,
6. Miles Smith,
7. William Covitt,
8. John Howson,
9. John Layfield,
10. Ben: Charrier,
11. Martin Fotherbie,
12. John Boys,
13. Richard Brett,
14. Peter Lilie,
15. Francis Burley,

} Doctors of Divinity.

16. William Hellier, Arch-Deacon of Barstable.
17. John White, Fellow of Manchester-Colledge.

William Cambden, Clarenceaux, } Historians.
John Haywood, Doctor of Law, }

See here, none, who were actuall Bishops, were capable of places in this Colledge. And, when some of these were afterwards advanced to Bishopricks, others translated to heaven, King JAMES by His now Letters Patents, 1622. Novemb: 14. substituted others in their room. Amongst whom the Archbishop of Spalato (but no more than Dean of Windsor in England) was most remarkable.

The King his Letters to the Archbishop: and his to the Bishops.

25. To advance this work, His Majestie Anno 1616. sent His Letters to the Archbishop of Canterbury, to stirre up all the Clergie in his Province to contribute to so pious a work, according to the tenour thereof here inserted:

WHereas the enemies of the Gospel have ever been forward to write, and publish Books for confirming of erroneous doctrine, and impugning the truth; and now of late seem more carefull than before, to send daily into Our Realms such their writings, whereby Our loving Subjects, though otherwise well-disposed, might be seduced, unless some remedy thereof should be provided. We, by the advice of Our Councel, have lately granted a Corporation, and given Our allowance for erecting a Colledge at Chelsey, for learned Divines to be imployed to write, as occasion shall require, for maintaining the Religion professed in Our Kingdomes, and confuting the impugners thereof.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 7 Ann. Dom. 1609.

thereof. Whereupon, Doctour Sutcliffe, designed Provost of the said Colledge, hath now humbly signified unto Us, that upon divers promises of help, and assistance, towards the erecting, and endowing the said Colledge, he hath at his own charge begun, and well proceeded in building, as doth sufficiently appear by a good part thereof already set up in the place appointed for the same. We therefore, being willing to favour and further so religious a work, will and require you to write your Letters to the Bishops of your Province, signifying unto them in Our name, that Our pleasure is, they deal with the Clergie, and others of their Diocesse, to give their charitable benevolence for the perfecting of this good work so well begun: And, for the better performance of Our desire, We have given order to the said Provost, and his Associates to attend you, and others whom it may appertain, and to certifie Us from time to time of their proceeding.

A copie of this His Majesties Letter was sent to all the Bishops of England, with the Archbishops additionall Letter, in order as followeth:

NOw because it is so pious, and religious a work, conducing both to Gods glory, and the saving of many a soul within this Kingdome, I cannot but wish, that all devout, and well affected persons should by your self, and the Preachers in your Diocesse, as well publickly as otherwise, be excited to contribute in some measure to so holy an intendment now well begun. And, although these, and the like motions have been frequent in these later times, yet let not those, whom God hath blessed with any wealth, be weary of well-doing, that it may not be said, That the idolatrous and superstitious Papists be more forward to advance their falshoods, than we are to maintain Gods truth.

Whatsoever is collected, I pray your Lordship may be carefully brought unto me; partly that it passe not through any defrauding hand, and partly, that His Majestie may be acquainted what is done in this behalf.

Yet, for all these hopefull endevours, and collections in all the Parishes of England, slow, and small were the summes of money brought in to this work. Many of them were scattered out, in the gathering them up, the charges of the Collectours consuming the profit thereof. If (as it is vehemently suspected) any of these collections be but detained by private persons, I conceive it no trespasse against Christian charity to wish, that the pockets, which keep such money, may rot all their suites that wear them, till they make true restitution thereof.

26. Various are mens conjectures (as directed by their own interest) what obstructed so hopefull proceedings, and it is safer for me to recite all, than resolve on any of them.

Divers opinions touching the non-proceeding of the Colledge.

1. The common fatality which usually attends noble undertakings. As partus octimestres, children born in the eighth moneth, are alwaies not long liv'd: so good projects quickly expire.

2. The untimely death of Prince HENRY, Our principal hope, and the chief author of this designe. If so, Erubuit Domino firmius esse suo.

The modest Colledge blushed to be stronger,
Than was its Lord, He dead, it liv'd no longer.

Same ascribe it to

But, upon my serious perusall of the Records of this Colledge, I finde not so much as mention of the name of Prince HENRY, as in any degree visibly contributive thereunto.

3. The large, loose, and lax nature thereof, no one prime person (Sutcliffe

†Continuation of Stow's Survey of London, pag. 533.

Ann. Dom. 1609 Ann. Reg. Jac. 7

cliffe excepted, whose shoulders sunk under the weight thereof, zealously engaging therein; King JAMES His maintenance amounting to little more than countenance of the work.) Those children will have thin chaps, and lean cheeks, who have every body (and yet no body) nurses unto them.

4. The originall means of the Colledge, principally founded on the fluid, and unconstant element, unstable as water (the Rent of a New River, when made) which at the best (thus imployed) was beheld but as a religious Monopoly. And, seeing that designe then took no effect (though afterwards in another notion, and nature, it was perfected) no wonder if the Colledge sunk with the means thereof.

5. Some of the * greatest Prelates (how much self is there in all men?) though seemingly forward, really remisse in the matter: Suspecting these Controversiall Divines would be lookt on, as the principall Champions of Religion, more serviceable in the Church than themselves, and haply might acquire priviledges prejudicial to their Episcopall Jurisdiction.

* This fift and fixt obstruction signifie nothing to discreet men, however they must passe for company-sake, and are alledged by some as very materiall.

6. The jealousie of the Universities, beholding this designe with suspitious eyes, as which in processe of time might prove detrimentall unto them. Two breasts, Cambridge and Oxford, being counted sufficient for England, to suckle all her children with.

7. The suspition of some Patriots, and Commoners in Parliament, such as carried the keyes of Countrey-mens coffers under their girdles (may, I safely report what I have heard from no mean mouthes) that this Colledge would be too much Courtier; and, that the Divinity (but especially the History thereof) would Laudilize, propend too much in favour of King JAMES, and report all things to the disadvantage of the Subject. Wherefore, though the said Patriots in Parliament countenanced the act, (as counting it no policy, publickly to crosse the project of King JAMES, especially as it was made popular with so pious a plausibility) yet, when returned home, by their suspitious Items, and private instructions, they beat off, and retarded peoples charities thereunto. The same conceived this foundation superfluous, to keep men to confute Popish opinions by writings, whilest the maintainers of them were every where connived at, and countenanced, and the penall Laws not put in any effectuall execution against them.

8. Its being begun in a bad time, when the world swarmed with proleing Projectours, and necessitous Courtiers, contriving all waies to get moneys. We know, that even honest persons, if strangers, and casually coming along with the company of those, who are bad, contract a suspition of guilt, in the opinions of those, to whom they are unknown. And it was the unhappinesse of this innocent, yea, usefull good designe, that it appeared in a time, when so many Monopolies were on foot.

9. Some great Church men, who were the more backward, because Doctor Sutcliffe was so forward therein. Such as had not freeness enough to go before him, had frowardness too much to come after him, in so good a designe: The rather because they disrasted his person, and opinions, Doctor Sutcliffe being a known rigid Anti-Remonstrant; and, when old, very morose, and teastie in his writings against them. An infirmity, which all ingenuous people will pardon in him, that hope, and desire to attain to old age themselves.

Thus

Ann. Reg. Jac. 7 Ann. Dom. 1609.

Thus have I opened my wares, with ſundry ſorts of commodities therein, aſſigning thoſe Reaſons, which I have either read, or heard from prime men of ſeverall intereſts; and am confident, that in the variety, yea, contrariety of judgments now adaies, even thoſe very Reaſons, which are caſt away by ſome, as weak, and frivolous, will be taken up, yea, preferred by others, as moſt ſatisfactory, and ſubſtantiall.

27. At this preſent it hath but little of the caſe, and nothing of the jewell, for which it was intended. [1]Almoſt rotten before ripe, and ruinous before it was finiſhed. It ſtands bleak like a Lodge in a garden of cucumbers, having plenty of pleaſant water [the Thames] neer it, and ſtore of wholeſome aire about it, but very little of the neceſſary element of earth belonging unto it. Yea, ſince I am informed, that ſeeing the Colledge taketh not effect, according to the deſire, and intent of the firſt Founders, it hath been decreed in Chancerie, by the joynt conſent of Doctor Daniel Featly, the third Provoſt of this Colledge, and Doctor John Prideaux, the ſurviving Feoffee intruſted in Dr. Sutcliffe's Will, that the foreſaid Farms of Kingſtone, Hazzard, and Appleton, ſhould return again to the poſſeſſion of Mr. Halſe, as the Heir-generall to the ſaid Dr. Sutcliffe. On what conſideration, let others enquire; it is enough to perſwade me, it was done in equity, becauſe done by the Lord Coventrie, in the high Court of Chancerie. So that now, onely the Farm of Kramerland, in Devonſhire, of Sutcliffe's donation, remains to this Colledge. All I will adde is this, As this Colledge was intended for Controverſies: ſo now there is a controverſie about the Colledge, coſtly ſuits being lately commenced betwixt William Lord Mounſton (who married the Widow of the aforeſaid Earl of Nottingham) and the preſent Provoſt thereof, about the title of the very ground whereon it is ſituated.

The preſent ſad condition of it.

28. Three Biſhops, all Oxford-men, ended their lives this year: Firſt, William Overton (about the beginning of April) bred in Magdalene Colledge, one ſufficiently ſevere to ſuppreſſe ſuch, whom he ſuſpected of Non-conformity. The ſecond Martin Heton, firſt Dean of Wincheſter, and then Biſhop of Elie. I ſay of Elie, which See had ſtood empty almoſt twenty years in the Reigne of Queen ELIZABETH, after the death of Biſhop Cox. So long the lantern of that Church (ſo [g] artificial for the workmanſhip thereof) wanted a light to ſhine therein. Some ſuſpected, this place, ſo long empty, would never be filled again; ſeeing no Biſhoprick ſo large in revenues, was ſo little in juriſdiction, not having the ſmall County of Cambridge [b] wholly belonging unto it. Some cunning Courtiers, obſerving this breach in Elie-Minſter, as fiercely aſſaulted it, with hope to get gain to themſelves. During the vacancie, it was offered to many Churchmen, (or chapmen, ſhall I ſay?) but either their conſciences, or coffers, would not come up to the conditions thereof. Amongſt others, Mr. Parker, brought up in Peter-Houſe in Cambridge, and Arch-Deacon of Elie (ſaith my [i] Authour) iniquis conditionibus Epiſcopatum oblatum reſpuit, tantam opum uſuram, niſi ſalvâ Eccleſiâ, negligens. At laſt (but with the revenues much altered, and empaired) it was conferred on Doctor Heton, who, after ten years poſſeſſion thereof, died July 14. and ſeems the more obſcure, becauſe of the luſtre, and learning of Doctor Lancelot Andrewes, who immediately ſucceeded him. The third Biſhop deceaſing this year December 14, was Thomas Ravis, ſometime Dean of Chriſt-Church, and ſucceſſively Biſhop of Gloceſter, and London, born at Malden in Surrey, of worthy parentage, Claris parentibus, ſaith the Epitaph on his tomb in St. Pauls, who left the memory of a grave, and good man behinde him. Nor muſt it be forgotten, that, as he firſt had his learning in Weſtminſter-School: ſo he alwaies continued, both by his counſell, and countenance, a moſt eſpeciall incourager of the ſtudies of all deſerving Scholars belonging to that Foundation.

The death of Biſhop Overton, Heton, & Ravis.

[g] Camden Brit: Cambridge-ſhire

[b] Part is of the Dioceſſe of Norwich.

[i] A Manuſcript of the Biſhops of Elie, lent me by Mr. Wright.

29. As Archbp. Bancroft was driving on conformity very fiercely throughout all his Province, He met with an unexpected rub, which notwithſtanding, he quickly removed; for, about this time, Nich: Fuller, a Bencher of Greyes-Inne, eminent Nich. Fuller ingages for his Clients.

Ann. Dom. 1610. Ann. Reg. Jac. 8

minent in his profession, pleaded so boldly for the enlargement of his Clients, that he procured his own confinement: the Case thus, Tho: Lad, a Merchant of Yarmouth in Norfolke, was imprisoned a long time by the High Commission, and could not be bayled, because (having formerly answered upon his oath twice before the Chancellour of Norwich, to certain Articles touching a Conventicle) he refused to answer upon a new oath without sight of his former answers. Richard Mansell, a Preacher, charged to be a partaker in a Petition exhibited to the House of Commons in Parliament, and refusing the Oath Ex Officio, to answer to certain Articles to him propounded, was long imprisoned by the Commissioners at Lambeth, and could not be bayled.

30. Both Prisoners were brought to the Barre upon the Writ of Habeas corpus, where Nich: Fuller pleaded, they ought to be discharged, endeavouring by a large Argument (lately printed) to prove, that the Ecclesiasticall Commissioners have no power by virtue of their Commission to imprison, to put to the oath Ex Officio, or to fine any of His Majesties subjects.

To the losse of his own liberty and life.

Archbishop Bancroft got some legall advantage against Mr. Fuller in the managing thereof, and then let him alone to improve the same: Fuller's friends complained, that onely by the Colour of Right, and the Rigour of Might, he was cast into Prison. Here this learned Counsellour could give himself no better, nor other advice, but onely pure patience. Many were his Petitions to the King for his enlargement, whom the Archbishop had pre-acquainted with the Case, representing him to the King as the Champion of Non-conformists, so that there he lied and died in prison. However, he left behinde him the reputation of an honest man, and a plentifull estate to his Family (besides his bountifull benefaction to Emmanuell-Colledge, and other pious uses) at this day enjoyed by his Grandchilde, a Gentleman [k] deservedly beloved in his Country.

[k] Master Denis Fuller of Berk. Esq.

31. On the 26 of October began the fifth Session of this long-lasting Parliament, A Session, which may be found in the Records, though it be lost in our Statute-book, because nothing therein was enacted, as soon after dissolved by Proclamation.

The last Session of a long Parliament.

32. Gervas Babington, Bishop of Worcester, ended his pious life. He was born in Nottingham-shire, of worshipfull extraction. Now, although lately the chief of the Family abused by Papists, (otherwise in himself an accomplished [l] Gentleman) had tainted his blood with Treason against the Queen: the learning, loyalty, and Religion of this worthy Prelate may serve to rectifie the Sirname, and justly restore that Family to its former repute with all posterity. He was bred Fellow of Trinity-Colledge in Cambridge; first Chaplain to Henry, Earl of Pembroke, whose Countesse made an exact Translation of the Psalmes, and they first procured him to be preferred Treasurer of Landaffe. May 17.

The death of Gervas Babington

[l] Anthony Babington of Dethick in Derbyshire.

33. He was soon after made Bishop of Landaffe, which in merriment he used to call Affe; the land thereof long since being alienated: thence was he translated to Exeter, thence to Worcester, thence to Heaven. He was an excellent Pulpit-man, happy in raising the affections of his Auditory; which, having got up, he would keep up till the close of his Sermon. An industrious Writer, witnesse his large Comment on the five books of Moses, the Lords Prayer, Creed, and Commandements, with other portions of Scripture. Nought else have I to observe of this Bishop, save that as a Babington's Armes were Argent, ten Torteauxes, four, three, two and one, Gules, the self-same being the Armes of the Bishoprick of Worcester. His paternall Coat being just the same with that of his Episcopall See, with which it is impaled.

His parts and praise.

34. The same year expired Bishop Bancroft, Archbishop of Canterbury. He was brought up in Jesus-Colledge in Cambridge, preferred by degrees to the Bishoprick of London: Sir Christopher Hatton was his Patron, who made him his Examiner. His Adversaries character him a greater States-man than Divine, a better Divine than Preacher, though his printed Sermon sufficiently attesteth his abilities therein. Being a Cambridge-man, he was made Chancellour of Oxford, to hold Nov. 2.

The death of Archbishop Bancroft.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 9 Ann. Dom. 1611.

hold the scales even with Cardinal Poole, an Oxford-man, made Chancellour of Cambridge.

Vindicated from cruelty.

44. I finde two faults charged on his memory, Cruelty and Covetousneß, Un-Episcopall qualities, seeing a Bishop ought to be godly and hospitable. To the first, it is confessed he was most stiffe and stern to presse Conformity. And, what more usuall than for Offenders to nick-name necessary severity to be cruelty? Now though he was a most stout Champion to assert Church-Discipline, let me passe this story to posterity from the mouth of a person therein concerned, An honest and able Minister privately protested unto him, That it went against his conscience to conform, being then ready to be deprived: Which way, saith the Archbishop, will you live if put out of your Benefice? The other answered, He had no way but to goe a begging, and to put himselfe on Divine Providence. Not that (saith the Archbishop) you shall not need to doe; but, come to me, and I will take order for your maintenance. What impression this made on the Ministers judgment, I am not able to report.

And the aspersion of Covetousnes\

45. As for his Covetousneß, a witty Writer[m] (but more Satyrist than Historian) of King JAMES his Life, reports this Pasquin of him:

Here lies his Grace, in cold clay clad;
Who dy'd for want of what he had.

[m] Mr. Arthur Wilson.

True it is, he maintained not the state of Officers like Predecessour or Successour in house-keeping, having a Citizen-Tradesman (more acquainted with thrift, than bounty) for his Domesticall Steward; yet was he never observed in his own person to aim at the enriching of his Kindred, but had intentions to make pious uses his publick Heire, bequeathing his Library, the confluence of his own collections with his Predecessours, Whitgift, Grindall, Parkers, to Chelsey-Colledge; and if that took not effect, to the publick Library in Cambridge, where at this day they remain; his clear estate at his death exceeded not six thousand pound, no summe to speak a single man covetous who had sate six years in the See of Canterbury, and somewhat longer in London.

Falsly traduced for Popish inclinations.

46. It is needlesse to clean his memory from the aspersion of Popery, two eminent acts of his own being his sufficient Compurgatours: One in setting the secular Priests against the Jesuits (as S. Paul did the Pharisees against the Sadducees) thereby so deriding their languages, as scarce they can understand one another, at this day. The other his forwardnesse in founding Chelsey-Colledge, which, as a two edged sword, was to cut on both sides to suppresse Papists and Sectaries.

A good Patron of Church-Revenues.

47. One passage more of this Prelate, and I have done; A company of young Courtiers appeared extraordinarily gallant, at a Tilting, farre above their fortunes and estates; These gave for a private Motto amongst themselves, Solvat Ecclesia, Let the Church pay for all: Bancroft, then Bishop of London, arriving at the notice thereof, findes on inquirie, that the Queen was passing a considerable parcell of Church-land unto them, the Prelate stops the business with his own and his friends interest leaving these Gallants to pay the shot of their pride and prodigality out of their own purses. Adde to this, that I am credibly informed from a good hand, how in the daies of King JAMES, a Scotch-man, and a prevalent Courtier had swallowed up the whole Bishoprick of Durham, had not this Archbishop seasonably interposed his power with the KING, and dashed the designe. George Abbot succeeded Bancroft in Canterbury, of whom largely hereafter.

The new Translation of the Bible finished by the Command of King James, and care of some chosen Divines.

48. And now after long expectation, and great desire came forth the new Translation of the Bible (most beautifully printed) by a select and competent number of Divines, appointed for that purpose, not being too many, lest one should trouble another; and yet many, lest in any things might haply escape them. Who neither coveting praise for expedition, nor fearing reproach for slackness (seeing in a business of moment, none deserve blame for convenient slowness) had expended almost three years in the work, not onely examining the channels by the fountain, Translations with the Originall, which was absolutely necessary, but also comparing channels with channels, which was abundantly usefull, in the Spanish, Italian, French and Dutch Languages. So that their industrie, skilfulnesse, pietie and discretion, hath therein bound the Church unto them in a debt of speciall remembrance and thankfulness. These, with [a] Jacob, rolled away the Stone from the mouth of the Well of Life: So that now even Rahel's, weak women may freely come, both to drink themselves, and water the flocks of their families at the same.

Ann. Dom. 1612. Ann. Regis Jac. 9

[a] Gen. 29. 10.

49. But day shall sooner lack a night to attend it, and the Sun-shine be unseconded with the sullen shade, than a glorious action shall want Detractors to defame it. The Popish Romanists much excepted hereat. Was their Translation (say they) good before? Why doe they now mend it? Was it not good? Why then was it obtruded on the People? These observe not, that whilst thus in their passion they seek to lash the Protestants, their whips flie in the faces of the most learned and pious Fathers, especially Saint Jerome, who, not content with the former Translations of the Septuagints, Aquila, Symachus, and others, did himself translate the Old Testament out of the Hebrew. Yea, their cavil recoils on themselves, and their own Vulgar Translation, whereof they have so many and different Editions [b]. Isidorus Clarius a famous Papist, (first a Frier, afterward a Bishop) observed and amended, as he said, eight thousand faults in the vulgar Latine. And since his time, how doth the Paris Editions differ from the Lovaine, and Hentenius his, from them both? How infinite are the differences (many of them weighty and materiall) of that which Pope Clement the eighth published from another, which Sixtus Quintus, his immediate Predecessour set forth. Thus we see to better and refine Translations, hath been ever counted a commendable practice even in our Adversaries.

The causelesse Cavil the Papists thereat.

[b] Lucas ab Oleo millis emendata atque emendata à nobis sunt. Isid. Clarius in in Praef. Bibl. Sanctiall. Edit. Venetiis 1542. but which in the following Edition is left out.

50. Besides this, the Romanists take exception, because in this our new Translation the various senses of words are set in the Margin. This they conceive a shaking of the certainty of the Scriptures, such variations, being as succours to be pruned off, because they rob the stock of the Text of its due credite, and reputation. Somewhat conformable whereto Pope [c] Sixtus Quintus expresly forbade that any variety of Readings of the vulgar Edition should be put in the Margin. But on serious thoughts it will appear, that these Translators, affixing the diversity of the meaning of words in the side Colume, deserve commendations for their modesty, and humility therein. For though, as [d] Saint Chrysostome observeth, τὰ ἀναγκαῖα πάντα, all things that are necessary to salvation are plainly set down in the Scriptures; yet seeing there is much difficulty and doubtfulnesse (not in Doctrinall, but) in matters of lesse importance, fearfulness did better beseem the Translators than confidence, entring in such cases a caution, where words are of different exceptions.

They take exceptions at the severall senses of words noted in the Margine.

[c] Sixtus Quintus Praef. Bibl.

[d] On the Second Thes. 2. cap.

51. Some of the Brethren were not well pleased with this Translation, suspecting it would abate the repute of that of Geneva, with their Annotations made by English Exiles in that City, in the daies of Qu. Mary, dedicated to Qu. Elizabeth, and Printed with the generall liking of the People above thirty times over. Yea, some complained, That they could not see into the sense of the Scripture for lack of the spectacles of those Geneva Annotations. For, although a good Translation is an excellent Comment on the Bible, wherein much darknesse is caused by false rendring of it, and wherein many seeming Riddles are read, if the words be but read, Expounded if but truly Rendred; Yet some short Exposition on the Text was much desired of the People. But to say nothing of the defects and defaults of the Geneva Annotations (though the best in those times, which are extant in English); those Notes were so tuned to that Translation alone, that they would jarre with any other, and could no way be fitted to this new Edition of the Bible. Leave we then these worthy men, now all of them gathered to their Fathers, and gone to God, (however they were requited on earth) well rewarded in Heaven for Some Brethren complain for lack of the Geneva Annotations.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 9 Ann. Dom. 1612.

for their worthy work. Of whom as alſo of that Gracious KING that employed them, we may ſay, Whereſoever the Bible ſhall be preached or read in the whole world, there ſhall alſo this that they have done be told in memoriall of them.

52. And as about this time ſome perchance overvalued the Geneva Notes, out of that eſpecial Love they bare to the Authors and Place whence it proceeded, ſo on the other ſide, ſome without cauſe did ſlight, or rather without charity did ſlander the ſame. For in this, or the next yeare, a Doctor in ſolemn aſſembly in the Univerſity of Oxford publickly in his Sermon at St. Maries, accuſed them as guilty of miſinterpretation touching the Divinity of Chriſt, and his Meſſiahſhip, as if Symbolizing with Arrians and Jewes againſt them both: For which he was afterwards ſuſpended by Doctor Robert Abbot, Propter conciones publicas minùs orthodoxas, & offenſionis plenas. But more properly hereof, God willing, hereafter in our particular Hiſtory of Oxford. We will proceed to Report a memorable Paſſage in the Low-Countreys, not fearing to loſe my way, or to be cenſured for a wanderer from the Engliſhe Church-ſtory, whilſt I have ſo good a Guide, as the Pen of King JAMES to lead me out, and bring me back again. Beſides I am affraid that this Alien Accident is already brought home to England, and though onely Belgick in the Occaſion, is too much Britiſh in the Influence thereof.

Doctor H. in Oxford cauſelſly inveigheth againſt the Geneva Notes.

SECTION

Ann. Dom. 1611. Ann. Reg. Jac. 9

SECTION IV.

To EDWARD LLOYD, Esq.

* Eccles. 1. 7.

Rivers are not bountiful in Giving, but just in Restoring their Waters unto the Sea. * However, they may seem gratefull also, because openly returning thither, what they Secretly received thence. This my Dedication unto you cannot amount to a Present, but a Restitution, wherein onely I tender a Publick acknowledgment of your Private courtesies conferred upon me.

Dangerous Opinions broached by Conradus Vorstius.

KING JAMES took into His Princely care the seasonable suppression of the dangerous Doctrines of Conradus Vorstius. This Doctor, had lived about 15 years a Minister at Steinford, within the Territories of the Counts of TECKLENBOURG, BENTHEM, &c. the Counts whereof, (to observe by the way) were the first in Germany, not in dignity or Dominion, but in casting off the Yoke of Papacie, and ever since continuing Protestants. This Vorstius had both written and received severall Letters from certain Samosetenian Hereticks, in Poland, or thereabouts; and it hapned that he had handled Pitch so long, that at last it stuck to his Fingers, and became infected therewith. Hereupon, he set forth two Books, the one entitled, TRACTATUS THEOLOGICUS DE DEO, dedicated to the Land-Grave of Hessen; the other, EXEGESIS APOLOGETICA, printed in this year, and dedicated to the States; both of them farced with many dangerous Positions concerning the Deity. For whereas it hath been the labour of the Pious and Learned in all Ages to mount Man to God, (as much as might be) by a Sacred adoration, (which the more humble, the more high) of the Divine Incomprehensiblenesse, this Wretch did Seek to Stoop GOD to Man, by debasing his Purity, assigning him a materiall Body, confining his Immensity, as not being every where, shaking his Immutability, as if his will were subject to change, darkning his Omniscience, as uncertain in future Contingents, with many more monstrous Opinions, fitter to be remanded to Hell, than committed to writing. Notwithstanding all this, the said Vorstius was chosen, by the Curators of the University of Leyden, to be their Publick Divinity-Professour, in the Place of Arminius lately deceased: and, to that end, his Excellency, and the States-Generall, by their Letters sent, and sued

to

Ann. Reg. Jac. 9 Ann. Dom. 1611.

to the Count of TECKLENBOURG, and obtained of him, that Vorstius should come from Steinford, and become Publick-Professour in Leyden.

2. It hapned that His Majesty of Great Britain, being this Autumne in His hunting Progresse, did light upon and perused the aforesaid Books of Vorstius. And whereas too many doe but Sport in their most serious Employment, He was so serious amidst His Sports and Recreations, that with Sorrow, and Horrour, He observed the Dangerous Positions therein, determining speedily to oppose them, moved thereunto with these Principall Considerations: First, the Glory of God; seeing this ANTI-St. JOHN, (as His Majesty terms him) mounting up to the Heavens, belched forth such Blasphemies against the Divine ineffable Essence; and was not a King on Earth concerned, when the King of Heaven was dethroned from his Infiniteness, so farre as it lay in the Power of the treacherous Positions of an Heretick? Secondly, charity to His next Neighbors, and Allies. And lastly, a just fear of the like Infection within His own Dominions, considering their Vicinity of Situation and Frequency of intercourse; many of the English Youth, travelling over to have their Education in Leyden. And indeed, as it hath been observed, that the Sin of Drunkenness, was first brought over[f] into England out of the Low Countries, about the midst of the Reign of Queen ELIZABETH, (before which time, neither generall Practice, nor legall punishment of that vice in this Kingdome) so we must Sadly confesse, that since that time, in a Spiritual Sense, many English Souls have taken a cup too much of Belgick wine: Whereby their Heads have not onely grown dizie, in matters of lesse moment, but their whole Bodies stagger in the Fundamentals of their Religion.

Reasons moving K. James to Oppose him

[e] In His Declaration against Vorstius, p. 365.

[f] See Camden's Elizabeth, anno 1581.

3. Hereupon King JAMES presently dispatched a Letter to Sir Ralph Winwood, his Ambassadour, resident with the States, willing and requiring him to let them understand how Infinitely he should be displeased, if such a Monster as Vorstius should receive any advancement in their Church. This was seconded with a large Letter of His Majesties to the States, dated October the 6, to the same effect: But neither found that Successe which the KING did earnestly desire, and might justly expect, considering the many Obligations of the Crown of England on the States: the Foundation of whose Common-wealth, (as the Ambassadour told them) was first cemented with English blood. Several Reasons are assigned of their non-concurrence with the KING's motion. The Curators of Leyden-University conceived it a disparagement to their Judgments, if so neer at hand, they could not so well examine the Soundnesse of Vorstius his Doctrine, as a forraign Prince at such a distance; It would cast an aspersion of Levity and Inconstancy on the States, solemnly to invite a Stranger unto them, and then so soon recede from their Resolution; An Indignity would redound to the Count of Tecklenbourg, to slight that which so lately they had sued from him. The Opposition of Vorstius was endevoured by a male-contented Party amongst themselves, disaffected to the Actions of Authority; who distrusting their own strength, had secretly solicited His Majesty of Great Britain to appear on their Side, That as King JAMES his motion herein, proceeded rather from the Instance of others, than His own Inclination, so they gave out, that He began to grow remisse in the matter, careless of the Successe thereof. That it would be injurious, yea, destructive to Vorstius and his Family, to be fetcht from his own home, where he lived with a sufficient Salarie, (promised better Provisions from the Landgrave of Hessen to be Divinity Professour in his Dominions) now to thrust him out with his Wife and Children, lately setled at Leyden; That if Vorstius had formerly been faulty in unwarie, and offensive Expressions, he had since cleared himself in a new Declaration.

The States entertain not the motion of K. James against Vorstius, according to just expectation.

4. For, lately he set forth a Book, entituled, A Christian and modest Answer, which notwithstanding by many was condemned, as no Revocation, but a Repetition of his former Opinions, not lesse pernitious, but more plausible, with sophistical Qualifications. So that he was accused to aime, neither at the Satisfaction of the Learned, whom he had formerly offended; nor the Safety of the Ignorant, whom he might hereafter deceive, but meerly his own Security, for the present. His grand Evasion was this, That what he had wrote before, was but probably propounded, not dogmatically delivered. But, alas! how many silly Souls might easily be infected, mistaking his slenting Problemes for downright Positions. In a word, he took not out any Venome, but put in more Honey into his Opinions, which the corruption of Mans Nature would swallow with more greedinesse. And how dangerous it is for wit-wanton Men, to dance with their nice Distinctions, on such Mysticall Precipices, where Slips in jest may cause deadly Downfalls in earnest, the Roman Orator doth in part pronounce, Mala est & impia consuetudo, contra Deum disputandi, sive serio id fit, sive simulate.

Vorstius gives no satisfaction in his new Declaration.

K. James setteth forth a Declaration against Vorstius, first written in French, Since by His leave Translated into English, and amongst his other Works.

5. Now King JAMES being as little Satisfied in Judgment with the Writings of Vorstius in his own Defence, as ill pleased, in Point of Honour, with the doings of the States, in return to His Request, gave Instructions to His Ambassadour to make Publick Protestation against their Proceedings; which Sir Ralph Winwood, in Pursuance of his Masters Command, most solemnly performed. Nor did His Majesties Zeal stop here, with Joash King of Israel, (smiting onely but thrice, and then desisting) but after His Request, Letter, and Protestation had missed their Desired effect, He wrote in French, a Declaration against Vorstius. A Work well beseeming the DEFENDOR OF THE FAITH, by which Title (to use His Ambassadours Expression) He did more value Himself, than by the Style of KING OF GREAT BRITAIN. Once I intended to present the Reader with a Brief of His Majesties Declaration, till deterred with this Consideration, that although great Masses of Lead, Tinne, and meaner Metals, may by the extraction of Chymists be epitomized and abridged into a Smaller quantity of Silver, yet what is altogether Gold already, cannot without extraordinary damage, be reduced into a Smaller Proportion. And seeing each word in His Majesties Declaration is so pure and pretious, that it cannot be lessened without losse, we remit the Reader to the same in His Majesties Works; And so take our Leave of Vorstius for the present, whose Books, by the KING's Command, were publickly burnt at St. Paul's Crosse in London, and in both Universities.

The character of Bartholomew Legate.

6. But leaving this Outlandish, let us come to our English Vorstius (though of farre lesse Learning, of more Obstinacy, and dangerous Opinions) I mean that Arrian, who this year suffered in Smithfield: His name Bartholomew Legate, native County Essex, person comely, complexion black, age about fourty years: Of a bold spirit, confident carriage, fluent tongue, excellently skilled in the Scriptures; and well had it been for him, if he had known them lesse, or understood them better; whose ignorance abused the Word of God, therewith to oppose God the Word. His conversation (for ought I can learn to the contrary) very unblameable; And the poyson of Hereticall Doctrine is never more dangerous, than when served up in clean cups, and washed dishes.

Discourse betwixt K. James, and Legate.

7. King JAMES caused this Legate often to be brought to Him, and seriously dealt with him to endevour His conversion. One time the KING had a designe to surprize him into a Confession of Christs Deity (as His Majesty afterwards declared to a right reverend Prelate) by asking him, Whether or no he did not daily pray to Jesus Christ? Which, had he acknowledged, the KING would infallibly have inferred, that Legate tacitly consented to Christs Divinity, as a searcher of the hearts. But herein His Majesty failed of His expectation, Legate returning, That indeed he had prayed to Christ in the daies of his ignorance, but not for these last seven years. Hereupon the KING in choler spum'd at him with His foot; Away base Fellow (saith He) it shall never be said, that one stayeth in My presence, that hath never prayed to our Saviour for seven years together.

James Archbishop of Armagh, from whose mouth I had the Relation.

Bishop King gravelleth him with a place of Scripture.

8. Often was he convented before the Bishops in the Consistory of St. Pauls, where he persisted obstinate in his Opinions, flatly denying the Authority of that Court. And no wonder that he slighted the power of earthly Bishops, denying the

Ann. Reg. Jac. 9 | Ann. Dom. 1611.

the Divinity of Him, Who is [b] The Shepheard and Bishop of our souls. The disputation against him, was principally managed by John King, Bishop of London, who gravelled and utterly confuted him with that place of Scripture, John 17.5. And now O Father, glorifie thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. This Text, I say, was so seasonably alledged, so plainly expounded, so pathetically enforced by the eloquence, and gravity of that Bishop (qualities wherein, he excelled) that it gave marvellous satisfaction to a multitude of people there present, that it is conceived, it happily unproselyted some inclinable to his Opinions; though Legate himself remained pertinacious, both against the impressions of Arguments, and Scripture, daily multiplying his enormous Opinions. It is the happinesse nature indulgeth to monsters, that they are all barren; whereas on the contrary, monstrous positions are most procreative of the like, or worse than themselves.

[b] 1 P. 2. 25.

9. Before we set down his pestilent Opinions; may Writer, and Reader fence themselves with prayer to God, against the infection thereof; lest otherwise, touching such pitch (though but with the bare mention) defile us, casually tempting a temptation in us, and awaking some corruption, which otherwise would sleep silently in our souls. And, if notwithstanding this our caution, any shall reap an accidental evil to themselves, by reading his damnable Opinions, my pen is no more accessary to their harm, than that Apothecarie is guilty of murder, if others, out of a licourish curiosity, kill themselves with that poyson, which he kept in his shop for soveraigne use to make Antidotes thereof. His damnable Tenets were as followeth:

Wholsome caution premised before the naming of Legate's blasphemies.

1. That the Creed called the Nicene Creed, and Athanasius Creed, contain not a Profession of the true Christian Faith.
2. That Christ is not God of God begotten, not made; but begotten, and made.
3. That there are no Persons in the Godhead.
4. That Christ was not God from everlasting, but began to be God, when he took flesh of the Virgin Mary.
5. That the world was not made by Christ.
6. That the Apostles teach, Christ to be Man onely.
7. That there is no generation in God, but of creatures.
8. That this assertion, God to be made Man, is contrary to the rule of Faith, and monstrous blasphemy.
9. That Christ was not before the fulnesse of time, except by promise.
10. That Christ was not God, otherwise than an anointed God.
11. That Christ was not in the form of God equal with God, that is, in substance of God, but in righteousnesse, and giving salvation.
12. That Christ by his Godhead wrought no miracle.
13. That Christ is not to be prayed unto.

For maintaining these Opinions, Legate had long been in prison in Newgate, yet with liberty allowed him to go abroad; not contented wherewith, he openly boasted, and often threatned to sue the Court, which committed him, for reparations for false imprisonment; so that his own indiscretion in this kinde, hastened his execution.

10. For hereupon Bishop King finally convented him in the Consistory of S. Paul's. And that worthy Prelate, foreseeing that his proceedings herein would meet with many listening eares, prying eyes, and prating tongues, chose many reverend Bishops, able Divines, and learned Lawyers to assist him. So that the Consistory, so repleniſhed for the time being, seemed not so much a large Court, as a little Convocation. By the counsell and consent of these, by his definitive sentence, he pronounced, decreed, and declared the foresaid Bartholomew Legate an obdurate, contumacious, and incorrigible Heretick. And by an Instrument called Condemned for an obstinate Heretick.

Mar. 3.

called a SIGNIFICAVIT, certified the same into the Chancery, delivering him up unto the Secular power, the Church-Keyes, in such cases craving the help of the Civil Sword. Whereupon, King JAMES, with His Letters, dated March 11, under the Privy-Seal, gave order to the Broad-Seal to direct the Writ de Haretico comburendo, to the Sheriffs of London, for the burning of the foresaid Legat... Ann. Dom 1611. Mar. 11. Ann. Regis Jac. 9

Quæres left to Lawyers to decide.

11. Now as the Bishop herein surrendred Legate to the Secular Power, my Ecclesiasticall History in like manner resignes him to the Civil Historian, together with all the doubts, difficulties, and legall scruples attending on, or resulting from his Condemnation. Let the Learned in the Law consider on what Statute the Writ for his Burning was grounded, whether on those old Statutes enacted in the Reignes of RICHARD the II, and HENRY the IV; or on the branch of some other new Statute to that effect. Let them satisfie us, how farre those Lawes were repealed in 1^mo ELIZABETHÆ, and how farre they still stand in force; as, though not to [pretended] Lollardisme, yet to Blasphemy. Let them examine the Judgment of the Learned [i] Fitz-Herbert, whether sound in his assertion, That Hereticks, before the Writ of their burning be issued out against them, must first be convicted of Heresie before a Provinciall Convocation; whilst others affirm, That they being convicted before their Ordinary, sufficeth: provided it be for such Opinions, which Convocations have formerly condemned for Hereticall.

[i] De natura brevium, fol. 269. a.

Legate burnt in Smithfield.

12. To Smithfield he was brought to be burned. See here, it is neither the pain, nor the place, but only the cause makes a Martyr. In this very Smithfield how many Saints in the Marian daies, suffered for the testimony of Jesus Christ? Whereas now one therein dyeth in his own blood for denying him. Vast was the Conflux of people about him. Never did a scare-fire at midnight summon more hands to quench it, than this at noon-day did eyes to behold it. At last, refusing all mercy, he was burned to ashes. And so we leave him, the first that for a long time suffered death in that manner: And, oh that he might be the last to deserve it! Mar. 18.

Wightman worse than Legate.

13. In the next moneth Edward Wightman of Burton upon Trent, convicted before Richard Neile Bishop of Coventry and Litchfield, was burned at Litchfield for farre worse Opinions (if worse might be) than Legate maintained. Mary Magdalene indeed was once possessed with seven Devils, but ten severall Heresies were laid to Wightman's charge; namely, those of [k] Ebion, Cerinthus, Valentinian, Arrius, Macedonius, Simon Magus, Manes, Manichæus, Photinus, and of the Anabaptists. Lord! What are we when God leaves us? Did ever man maintain one Heresie, and but one Heresie? [l] Chains of darkness, we see, have their links, and errors are complicated together. April 11.

[k] So reckned up in the Warrant for his burning.

[l] Jude 6.

The successe of this severity.

14. God may seem well-pleased with this seasonable Severity. For the fire thus kindled, quickly went out for want of fewell. I mean, there was none ever after that openly avowed these Hereticall Doctrines. Onely a Spanish Arrian, who, condemned to die, was notwithstanding suffered to linger out his life in Newgate, where he ended the same. Indeed, such burning of Hereticks much startled common people, pitying all in pain, and prone to asperse justice it self with cruelty, because of the novelty and hideousnesse of the punishment. And the purblinde eyes of vulgar judgments looked onely on what was next to them, (the suffering it self) which they beheld with compassion, not minding the demerit of the guilt, which deserved the same. Besides, such being unable to distinguish betwixt constancy and obstinacy were ready to entertain good thoughts even of the Opinions of those Hereticks, who sealed them so manfully with their blood. Wherefore King JAMES politickly preferred, that Hereticks hereafter, though condemned, should silently, and privately waste themselves away in the Prison, rather than to grace them and amuze others with the solemnity of a publick Execution, which in popular judgments usurped the honour of a persecution.

The death of Master Sutton Founder of that famous Hospitall.

15. I finde no eminent Divine or Scholar deceased in this year: Onely one, whose bounty made many of both kindes, ended his life; namely, Richard Sutton, the

Ann. Reg. Jac. 9 Ann. Dom. 1611.

the Phœnix of our Age, and sole Founder of Charter-house-Hospitall, Esquire; born of Gentile Parentage at Knaith in Lincolnshire: In his youth bred a Souldier, gaining both wealth and credit by his valour; but afterwards embracing a more peaceable Profession of a Merchant. This his Foundation he called, The Hospitall of King JAMES: all discreet Subjects having learned this lesson from politick Joab (calling [m] Rabbah after the name of King David) to entitle their Soveraigne to the honour of their Atchievements, which are of extraordinary proportion. Children not yet come to, and Old men already past helping of themselves, have in this Hospitall their souls and bodies provided for. The latter must be decayed Gentlemen, the most proper Objects of Charity, as whose ingenious spirits are most sensible of want, and most unable to provide for themselves.

[m] 2 Sam. 12. 28.

16. It is utterly improbable that it will ever come within the compasse of my power to found any place for pious uses. All, wherein my weak ability can expresse its forwardnesse, is to honour the Charity of others, and for the present Alphabetically to methodize the Manours which Master Sutton in several Counties setled for the maintenance of this his Hospitall:

The severall Manours belonging thereunto.

1. Balsham-Manour, in Cambridge-shire.
2. Bastingthorpe-Manour, in Lincoln-shire.
3. Blacke-grove-Manour, in Wilt-shire.
4. Broad-Hinton Land, in Wilt shire.
5. Castle-Camps-Manour, in Cambridge-shire.
6. Chilton-Manour, in Wilt-shire.
7. Danby-Manour, in Lincoln-shire.
8. Elcombe-Manour and Parke, in Wilt-shire.
9. Hackney Land, Middlesex.
10. Hallingbury-Bouchers-Manour, in Essex.
11. Missenden-Manour, in Wiltshire.
12. Much-Stanbridge-Manour, in Essex.
13. Norton-Manour, in Essex.
14. Salthrope-Manour, in Wilt-shire.
15. South-Minster-Manour, in Essex.
16. Totenham Land, in Middlesex.
17. Ufford-Manour, in Wilt shire.
18. Watelescote-Manour, in Wilt-shire.
19. Wetter-Manour, in Wilt-shire.
20. Wroughton-Manour, in Wilt-shire.

See here the most liberall Endowment made by one man. May it most truly be said of our London-Merchants, as of those of Tyre, [n] whose Merchants are Princes?

[n] Isa. 23. 8.

17. But no work so vertuous, which some malicious spirits will not endevour to disgrace. One who writeth himselfe J. H. but generally conceived to be Mr. Knott the Jesuit, in his Answer to Doctor Potter's Book of [o] Charity mistaken, lets flie as followeth:

The Iesuits carping at his good work.

[o] 2 part. 1. ch. 2. parag.

Doe your Hospitals deserve so much as to be named? Have you any thing of that kinde in effect of particular Note, saving the few mean Nurseries of idle Beggars, and debauched People? Except (perhaps) Sutton's Hospitall, which [as I have been informed] was to take no profit till he was dead. He, who [as I have also understood] died so without any Children, or Brothers, or Sisters, or known Kindred, as that [peradventure] it might have escheated to the King. He, who lived a wretched and penurious life, and drew that Masse of Wealth together by Usury, in which case, according to good conscience, his Estate, without asking him leave, was by the Law of God, obnoxious to Restitution, and ought to have been applied to Pious Uses. Whereas antiently in this Country, and at all times, and specially in this last Age, men see abundance of Heroicall Actions of this kinde performed in forreigne parts. And if it were not for fear of noting many of her great Cities, as if there were any want of most magnificent Hospitals in them, wherein they abound; I could tell you of one called the Annunciata, in the City of Naples, which spends three hundred thousand Crowns per Annum, which counts to above fourscore thousand pounds sterling by the year: Which ever feeds and cures a thousand sick persons, and pays for the nursing and entertaining of three thousand sucking Children of poor people, and hath fourteen other distinct Hospitals under it, where the persons of those Poor creatures are kept, and where they are defrayed of all their necessary charges every week. I could also tell you of an Hospitall in Rome called S. Spirito, of huge Revenues, but it is not my meaning to enter into particulars, which would prove endlesse.

His politick modesty in his accusation.

18. Before we come to the particular Examination of this his Accusation, it is observable how many Qualificatives, Correctives, and Restrictives (Perhaps, as I have been informed, As I have also understood, peradventure) he inserteth in this his Relation. Indeed such Qualifications are better than Equivocations, yet, what some may impute to Modesty, is his Policy, if well considered. For if any Protestant confute what he hath written, this Accuser will take Sanctuary under the protection of those Restrictions, defending himself that he delivered nothing positively, whilst ignorant Papists of his own profession (not heeding his doubting limitations) swallow all down for dogmaticall truth.

Answers to Jesuits Cavils.

19. More particularly the reformed Religion in England hath been the Mother of many brave Foundations: Many famous Hospitals (as that at Warwick built by the Earl of Leicester: Croydon by Archbishop Whitgift: Guildford by Archbishop Abbot: (not to speak of Christ-Church, and St. Thomas Hospitall, built by King EDWARD the VI.) though none of them have thrived and battled so fast and so fairly as this of Sutton's foundation. Whereas he chargeth him to have had no Children, it is confessed, seeing he died a Batchelour: Whose life (had he been of their Opinion) had been cried up for a precious piece of Virginity. That he had no known Kindred, is false. Some of them afterwards, but in vain, endevouring to overthrow his Will: though he made the Poor to be his Mother, and Sister, and Brother. As for his getting wealth by unlawfull waies, I am not to justifie the particular circumstances of any mans actions. Should a secret Scrutiny be made, how all Founders of Monasteries first came by their wealth, many would be found justly obnoxious to censure.

M. Suttons constant prayer.

20. Indeed our Sutton began with a good Stock, had no Charge to burden him, lived to be very aged, 79 years; and by Gods blessing on his Providence, Industry and Thrift, advanced the maine of his Estate. This I can confidently report from the mouth of a credible Witnesse, who heard it himself, and told it to me, that Master Sutton used often to repair into a private Garden, where he poured forth his prayers to God, and amongst other passages, was frequently over-heard to use this Expression, Lord, thou hast given me a large and liberal Estate, give me also a heart to make use thereof; which at last was granted to him accordingly.

Sutton's Hospitall how exceeding the Annunziata.

21. As for the over-grown Hospitall of the Annunziata at Naples, we envy not the wealth thereof; (though reports at such distance lose nothing in the relation.) Nor doe we wonder that it cureth yearly a thousand sick persons, considering what disease first came from Naples, and was thence denominated. As for the three thousand Children nursed therein, it is to be feared many wanted Fathers to own them; and this not so much the fruit of charity as of wantonnesse. However, that Hospitall hath at severall times been advanced by a Colledge of Benefactors, Whereas Sutton's may stand peerlesse in this respect, that it was founded, finished, and endowed by himself alone; Disbursing 13000 li. (payed down before the ensealing of the Conveyance) for the ground whereon it stood, with some other appurtenances, besides 6000 li. expended in the building thereof; and that vast yearly Endowment, whereof heretofore. We mention not the large Summes bequeathed by him to Poor, to Prisons, to Colledges, to mending High-waies,

p Stow's Survey of London, p. 43.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 10 Ann. Dom. 1612.

waies, to the Chamber of London, besides Twenty thousand pounds left to the discretion of his Executors. What remaineth but that we pray, that according to his pious intentions the same may be continued to the Glory of God, Credit of the Protestant Religion, Comfort to the Poor, good Example to the Rich, and perpetual Memory of King JAMES the Honorary, and Mr. Sutton the effectual Founder thereof: That this Sun, amongst the lesser Lights of Protestant-Charities, may shine on Earth, as long as the Sun (that faithful Witness) endureth in Heaven. Being more confident that my desire herein will take effect, considering the Honourable Governous of this Hospital are Persons so Good, they will not abuse it themselves, and so Great, they will not suffer it to be abused by others.

Nov. 6. 22. England at this time enjoying abundance of Peace, Plenty, and Prosperity, in full speed of her Happiness, was checkt on a soddain with the sad News of the death of Prince HENRY, in the rage of a malitious extraordinary burning-Feaver. He was generally lamented of the whole Land, both Universities publishing their Verses in print: and give me leave to remember four made by Giles Fletcher of Trinity-Colledge in Cambridge on this PRINCES plain Grave, because wanting an Inscription: and it will be Honour enough to me if I can make thereof a Translation:

The death and prayer of Pr. HENRY.

Si sapis, attonitus sacro decede Sepulchro,
Nec cineri quæ sunt nomina, quære novo,
Prudens celavit Sculptor, nam quisq; rescivit,
Protinus in lachrymas solvitur, & moritur.

If wise, amaz'd depart this holy Grave;
Nor these New-ashes ask, what Names they have?
The Graver, in concealing them, was wise;
For, who so knows, strait melts in tears, and dies.

Give me leave to adde one more, untranslatable for its Elegancy, and Expressiveneesse:

g Made by Mr. George Herbert.

Ulteriora timens cum morte paciscitur Orbis.

And thus we take our leave of the Memory of so Worthy a PRINCE, never heard by any alive to swear an Oath; for which, Archbishop Abbot commended Him in his Funerall Sermon, the PRINCE being wont to say, That He knew no Game or Value to be won or lost, that could be worth an Oath.

Feb. 14. 23. One generation goeth and another generation cometh, but the earth remaineth for ever: the Stage stands, the Actors alter. Prince HENRY's Funerals are followed with the Prince PALATINE's Nuptials, solemnized with great State, in hopes of happiness to both Persons, though sad in the event thereof, and occasioning great revolutions in Christendome.

The Marriage of the Palatine.

11. 1613. 24. Expect not of me an account of the Divorce of the Lady Fra: Howard from the Earl of Essex; and of her re-marriage to Robert Carre Earl of Somerset; which Divorce divided the Bishops of the Land in their judgments:

Essex his Divorce discussed.

Against it,	For it,
George Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury.	Thomas Bilson, Bishop of Winchester.
John King, Bishop of London.	Lancelot Andrews, Bishop of Elie.
Alledging the common fame of Incontinency betwixt Her and the Earl of Somerset.	Rich: Neale, Bp. of Coventry and Litchfield.
	These proceeded, secundum allegata, & probata, of the Earls inability, quoad hanc: and the Ladies untainted Virginity.

25. Onely I will insert one passage, Bishop Overall discoursing with Bishop King about the Divorce, the later expressed himself to this effect, I should never have A memorable Speech of Bishop King.

Ann. Dom. 1613. Ann. Reg. Jacu have been so earnest against the Divorce, save that because perswaded in my conscience of falshood in some of the depositions of the Witnesses on the Ladies behalf. This sure I am from her second Marriage is extracted as chaste and virtuous * a Lady as any of the English Nation.

* Anne Countess of Bedford.

29. Nicholas Wadham, Esquire, of Merryfield in the County of Somerset, did by his last Will bequeath Four hundred pounds per annum, and Six thousand pounds in money to the building of a Colledge in Oxford, leaving the care and trust of the whole to Dorothy his Wife. One of no lesse learned and liberall than Noble extraction. A Sister to John Lord Peters, and Daughter to Sir William Peters, Secretary to four Kings, and a worthy Benefactour to All-Souls Colledge. In her life-time she added almost double to what her Husband bequeathed, whereby at this day it is become one of the most Uniform buildings in England, as no additionall result at severall times of sundry fancies and Founders, but the entire product all at once of the same Architect.

Wadham-Colledge founded.

Where formerly a Monastery of Augustine's.

30. This year the same was finished, built in a place where formerly stood a Monastery of the Augustine Friers, who were so eminent for their abilities in disputing, that the University did by a particular Statute impose it as an Exercise upon all those that were to proceed Masters of Art, that they should first be disputed upon by the Augustine Fryers, which old Statute is still in force, produced at this day for an Equivalent exercise, yet styled, Answering Augustines. The Colledge hath from its beginning still retained something of its old Genius, having been continually eminent for some that were acute Philosophers and good Disputants.

Wardens,	Bishops,	Benefactors,	Learned Writers,
Doctor Wright admitted 1613.	Robert Wright, Bishop of Bristoll, then Coventrie and Lichfield.	Philip Bisse, Doctor of Divinity, Canon of Wells, and Arch-deacon of Taunton, gave 1849 Books for their Librarie, valued at 1100 pounds.	Humphrey Sydenham, a very eloquent Preacher.
Dr. Flemming admitted 1613.
Dr. Smith, 1616.
Dr. Escott, 1635.
Dr. Pitt, 1644.
Dr. Joh. Wilkins, 1648.

So that very lately * there were in this Colledge, one Warden, fifteen Fellows, fifteen Scholars, two Chaplains, two Clerks, besides Officers and Servants of the Foundation, with many other Students, the whole number 120. As for Dr. John Wilkins, the present Warden thereof, my worthily respected friend, he hath courteously furnished me with my best intelligence from that University.

* viz. An. 1634.

31. A Parliament was called, wherein many things were transacted, nothing concluded. In this Parlament, Dr. Harsenet, Bishop of Chichester, gave offence in a Sermon preacht at Court, pressing the word Reddite Cæsari quæ sunt Cæsaris, as if all that was leavied by Subsidies, or paid by Custome to the Crown, was but a redditum of what was the Kings before. Likewise Doctor Neale, Bishop of Rochester, uttered words in the House of the Lords, interpreted to the disparagement of some reputed Zealous Patriot in the House of Commons: both these Bishops were questioned upon it, and to save them from the storm, this was the occasion chiefly (as was supposed) of the abrupt breaking up of the Parliament.

A Parliament suddenly called, soon dissolved.

32. Anthony Rudde, Bishop of S. David's, ended his life. He was born in Yorkshire, bred in Trinity-Colledge in Cambridge, where he became Fellow. A most excellent Preacher, whose Sermons were very acceptable to Qu. ELIZABETH. Hereon dependeth a memorable Story, which, because but defectively delivered by Sir John Harrington, I request the Readers Patience, and require his Belief, to this large and true Relation thereof.

The death of Bishop Rudde.

33. Bishop

Ann. Reg. Jacob. Ann. Dom. 1614. Mar. 11.

33. Bishop Rudde preaching in his course before Queen ELIZABETH at White-hall, Her Majesty was highly affected with his Sermon; insomuch that She commanded Archbishop Whitgift to signifie unto him, That he should be his Successour in case the Archbishoprick ever fell in the Queens disposall.

A remarkable passage.

34. Not long after the Archbishop meeting Bishop Rudde, Brother, said he, I bring good tydings to you, though bad to my self, for they cannot take full effect till after my death: Her Grace is so pleased with your last Sermon, She enjoyned me to signifie to you Her pleasure, That you shall be my Successour in Canterbury if surviving me. The Bishop modestly declined his words, desiring the long life of his Grace, and in case of his advancement to Heaven, confessed many other in England farre fitter for the Place than his own unworthinesse, adding after some other exchange of words, Good my Lord, might I be my own Judge, I conceive I have preached better Sermons at Court, surely such as cost me more time and pains in composing them. I tell you, (replied the Archbishop) the truth is this, the Queen now is grown weary of the vanities of wit and eloquence, wherewith Her youth was formerly affected, and plain Sermons, which come home to Her heart, please Her the best. Surely his Grace was too mortified a man (though none naturally love their Successours whilst themselves are alive) intentionally to lay a train to blow up this Archbishop designed, though by the others unadvised practise of his words it proved so in the event.

The Bishop by plain preaching, gains the Queens favour.

35. For, next time when it came to the Bishop's Course to preach at Court, then lying at Richmond, Anno 1596. he took for his Text, Psalm 90. 12. O teach us to number our daies, that we may incline our hearts unto wisdome: and in the close of his Sermon, touched on the Infirmities of Age, Ecclesiastes 12. When the grinders shall be few in number, and they wax dark that look out at the windows: personally applying it to the QUEEN, how Age had furrowed Her face, and besprinkled her hair with its meal. Whereat Her MAJESTY (to whom ingratissimum acroama to hear of death) was highly displeased. Thus, he not onely lost his Reversion of the Archbishoprick of Canterbury (which indeed never fell in the QUEENS daies) but also the present possession of Her MAJESTIES favour.

And by too personal preaching, loseth it again.

36. Yet he justly retained the repute of a Reverend and godly Prelate, and carried the same to the grave: He wrought much on the Welsh by his wisdome, and won their affections; and by moderate thrift, and long staying in the same See, left to his Son, Sir Rise Rudde Baroner, a fair estate at Aberglasney in Carmarthenshire.

Yet died generally beloved and lamented.

37. Some three years since, (on the death of King HENRY the fourth) Isaac Causabon, that learned Critick was fetcht out of France by King JAMES, and preferred Prebendary of Canterbury. Thus desert will never be a drug, but be vented at a good rate in one Countrey or another, as long as the world affordeth any truly to value it. King HENRY is not dead to Causabon, as long as King JAMES is alive: He who formerly flourished under the Bayes, now thriveth altogether as well under the Olive. Nor is Causabon sensible that England is the colder Climate, whilst he findes the beams of His Majesty so bright and warm unto him, to whom also the lesser lights of Prelates and Peers contributed their assistance.

Causabon invited into England.

38. Presently he falls a writing, as naturall (and almost as necessary) as breathing unto him: First, to Fronto-Duraus his learned Friend. Then to Cardinal Peron, in the just Vindication of our English Church. After these, he began his Exercitations on Baronius his Ecclesiastical Annals, which more truly may be termed, the Annals of the Church of Rome. But alas! Death here stopped him in his full speed, and he lieth entombed in the South-Ile of Westminster-Abbey. Not on the East, or Poetical Side thereof, (where Chaucer, Spencer, Draiton, are interred) but on the West or Historical Side of the Ile, next the Monument of M^r Camden. Both whose plain Tombs, made of white Marble, shew the simplicity of their intentions, the candidnesse of their natures, and perpetuity of their memories.

Where he dyeth, and is buried.

Mr. Casaubon's was erected at the cost of Thomas Morton Bishop of Durham, that great lover of Learned men, dead or alive.

Ann. Dom. 1614 Mar. 7. Ann. Reg. Jac. 12

The supposed occasion of Mr. Selden's writing against the Divine Right of Tithes.

39. The KING comes to Cambridge in a sharp Winter, when all the world was nothing but Aire and Snow. Yet the Scholers Wits did not Freez with the Weather, witness the pleasant Play of IGNORAMUS, which they presented to His Majesty. Yet whilst many laughed aloud at the mirth thereof, some of the graver sort were sad to see the Common Lawyers made ridiculous therein. If Gowns begin once to abase Gowns, Cloaks will carry away all. Besides, of all wood, the Pleaders Bar is the worst to make a Stage of. For, once in an Age, all Professions must be beholding to their patronage. Some [a] conceive that in revenge Master John Selden soon after set forth his Books of Tithes, wherein he historically proveth, That they were payable jure humano, and not otherwise.

a Aubour of Dr. Preston's Life.

Many write in Answer to his Book.

40. I cannot suspect so high a Soul, guilty of so low reflections, that his Book related at all to this occasion, but only that the latitude of his minde, tracing all pathes of learning, did casually light on the rode of this Subject. His Book is divided into two parts, whereof the first is a meer Jew, of the practise of Tithing amongst the Hebrews; the second a Christian, (and chiefly an English-man) of their customes in the same. And although many Divines undertook the Answer of this Book, as Mr. Stephen Nettles Fellow of Queens-Coll: in Cambridge, (applying himself to the Judaical part) Dr. Tillesly, and Mr. Montague, (all writing sharply, if strongly enough) yet sure it is, never a fiercer storm fell on all Parsonage Barns since the Reformation, than what this Treatise raised up. 1615. 13.

Melvin freed from the Tower.

41. By this time Mr. Andrew Melvin, a Scotchman, got to be enlarged out of the Tower, whither he had been committed for writing some satyrical Verses against the Ornaments on the Altar (or Communion-Table) in the Kings Chappell. When first brought into the Tower, he found Sir William Seymour (now the Right Honorable, most truly Noble, and religious Marquis of Hertford) there imprisoned for marrying the Lady ARABELLA, so nearly allyed to the Crown without the KING's consent. To whom, Melvin being an excellent Poet (but inferiour to Buchanan his Master) sent this Distick:

Causa mihi tecum communis Carceris, ARA
Regia, BELLA tibi, Regia SACRA mihi.

As for his invective Verses against the Chappel-Ornaments, I conceive the following Copie most authentick, though there be various Lections of them, but all in the main agreeing together:

Quod duo stent Libri clausi Anglis Regiâ in ARA, Lumina cæca duo, Pollubra sicca duo.
An clausum cæcúmq; Dei tenet Anglia cultum
Lumine cæca suo, sorde sepulta suâ?
Romano & ritu dum Regalem instruit ARAM, Purpuream pingit * Luxuriosa Lupam.

* alias Religiosa.

42. Mr. George Herbert of Trinity-Coll: in Cambridge, made a most ingenious retortion of this Hexastick, which as yet all my industry cannot recover. Yet it much contenteth me, that I am certainly informed, that the posthume Remains (shavings of Gold are carefully to be kept) of that not lesse pious, than witty writer, are shortly to be put forth into Print, when this his Anti—pelvi—Melvi—

But

Ann. Reg. Jac. 13 — Ann. Dom. 1615.

But now at last Melvin his liberty was procured by the intercession of the chief of the Reformed in France, and being released, he afterwards became Professour at Sedan in the Duke of Bovillion his Country. Here he ceased not to traduce the Church of England, against which he wrote a scroule of Sophicks, entituled TAMI-CHAMI-CATEGERIA.

43. This year Thomas Bilson, Bishop of Winchester, (who carried Prelature in his very aspect) ended his life: first School-Master, then Warden of Winchester, afterwards Bishop of Worcester, and lastly, of Winchester. A deep and profound Scholar, excellently well read in the Fathers, principally shewed in his Defence of Christ his descent into Hell. — The death of Bishop Bilson.

44. By the way, it is a falshood what Campian writes confidently, that Cheney, Bishop of Gloucester, had affirmed unto him, Namely, that concerning this Article, it was moved in a Convocation at London. Quemadmodum sine tumultu penitus eximatur de Symbolo, How it might without any noise be wholly taken out of the Creed. For no such debate appeareth upon Record in our Convocations, and as for Campian, his single affirmation is of no validity. — Campian his falshood.

1616. Da. 6. — 45. Marcus Antonius de Dominis, Archbishop of Spalato, came over into England, was here courteously welcomed, and plentifully preferred, of whose hypocrisie and ingratitude largely [b] hereafter. — Archbishop of Spalato.

[b] viz anno 1622.

Mar. 14. — 46. King JAMES went into Scotland to visit His native Country, with a Princely train. In his passage thither He was much affected with a Sermon which one of his Chaplains preached upon this Text, [c] Gen. 13. 2, 3. And Abraham was very rich in cattell, in silver, and in gold. And he went on his journeys from the South even to Bethell, to the place where his Tent had been at the beginning. As for His entertainment in Scotland, we leave it to their Historians to relate. For may my pen be plundered by the Borderers, or Mosse-Troopers, if offering to excise Tweed into another Country. — The King goes into Scotland.

[c] Gen. 13. 2, 3.

47. This year died Doctor William James, born in Cheshire, Master first of the University-Colledge, then Dean of Christ-Church in Oxford, Chaplain to Robert Dudley Earle of Leicester, and Confessour to him at his death, and at last made Bishop of Durham. He expended much on the repairing of the Chappel of Durham-house in the Strand, and in his younger daies was much commended for his hospitality. — The death of Bishop James.

48. Two other prime Prelates accompanied him to the other world, Dr. Henry Robinson, Provost of Queens-Colledge in Oxford, Bishop of Carlisle, of great temperance, milde in speech, but weak in constitution. The other, Robert Bennet, Fellow of Trinity-Colledge in Cambridge, Chaplain to the Lord Burleigh, termed by a great Divine, Eruditus Benedictus, Bishop of Hereford, well-deserving of his See, whose Houses he repaired. — Bishop Robinson and Bishop Bennet.

49. Doctor Mocket, Warden of All-Souls in Oxford, Chaplain to George Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury, set forth a Book in pure Latine, containing — Doctor Mocket his Translation of our English Liturgie.

The Apologie of the Church of England.
The greater and lesser Catechisme.
The nine and thirty Articles.
The Common Prayer.
The Ordination of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons.
The Politie, or Government of the Church of England.

As for the Homilies, too tedious to be translated at large, he epitomized them into certain Propositions, by him faithfully extracted.

50. No sooner appeared this Book in print, but many faults were found therein. Indeed it fared the worse for the Author, the Author for his Patron the Archbishop, against whom many Bishops began then to combine. Some accused him of presumption for undertaking such a task without [d] Commission from the KING, it being almost as fatall for Private persons to tamper with such Publick — Cavilled at by many.

[d] Yet cum Privilegio, is prefixt on the first page.

Ann. Dom. 1617 Ann. Reg. Jacob.

blick matters, as for a Subject to match into the blood-Royal without leave of his Soveraigne. Others complained, that he enlarged the liberty of a Translatour into the licence of a Commenter, and the Propositions out of the Homilies by him collected were made to lean to the judgment of the Collectour. James Montague, Bishop of Winchester, a potent Courtier, took exceptions that his Bishoprick in the marshalling of them was wronged in the method, as put [e] after any, whose Bishop is a Privie Counsellour.

[e] In his Politica Ecclesiæ Angl. cap 5. p. 314. The pinching accusation.

50. But the main matter objected against it, was, That this Doctor was a better Chaplain than a Subject, contracting the Power of his PRINCE to enlarge the Priviledge of his Patron, allowing the Archbishop of Canterbury's power to confirm the Election of Bishops in his Provinces, citing [f] for the same the 6. Canon of the first Nicene Councell established by Imperiall authority. If any be made a Bishop without the consent of his Metropolitan, he ought not to be a Bishop.

[f] Ibid. pag. 309. Imperiall Decrees command not in England.

51. This was counted an high offence to attribute an obliging authority either to Canon or Civil Law, both which if crossing the Common Law of the Land, are drowned in their passage as they saile over from Callis to Dover, and K. JAMES justly jealous of his own Prerogative approved not such a confirming power in the Archbishop, wich might imply a Negative Voice in case he disliked such Elects as the KING should recommend unto him.

On the burning of his Book Dr. Mocket dyeth.

52. Hereupon, Doctor Mocket his Book was censured to be burned, which was done accordingly. Now although the imperfections and indiscretions of this Translatour might be consumed as dross in the fire, yet the undoubted truth of the Articles of the English Church therein contained as Flame-free and perfectly refined will endure to all eternity. The Doctor took this censure so tenderly, especially so much defeated in his expectation to finde punishment where he looked for preferment, as if his life were bound up by sympathy in his Book he ended his daies soon after.

The death of Robert Abbot Bishop of Salisbury.

53. Though his death much affected his friends in Oxford, yet farre greater the grief of that University for the decease of Robert Abbot Bishop of Salisbury, who died this year. One of the honours, not onely of that See, but of the Church of England, born at Guilford in Surrey, of religious Parents, as persevering in the Truth though [g] persecuted for the same in the Reign of Queen MARY: Whose two younger Brothers George and Maurice, the one came to be Archbishop of Canterbury, the other was Lord Mayor of London, and the first Knight of King CHARLES his dubbing. This good Bishop his deserts, without any other Friend or Spokesman preferred him to all his Promotions. For [g] Abel Redivivum, pag. 540.

Mar. 2.

Upon his Oration made on Queen ELIZABETH her Inauguration, he was chosen Scholar (and afterwards Fellow and Master) of Baliol-Colledge.

Upon a Sermon preached
- At Worcester he was made Lecturer of that City.
- At Paul's Crosse Master John Stanhoppe preferr'd him to the rich Benefice of Bingham in Nottingham-shire.
- Before King JAMES he was nominated Successour to Doctor Holland in the Kings Professour his place in Oxford.

Upon the fame of his incomparable Lectures de potestate Regiâ, and other labours he was made Bishop of Salisbury.

In conferring which Place, the KING conquered all opposition, which some envious persons raised against him, witnesse His MAJESTIES pleasant speech: Abbot, I have had much to doe to make thee a Bishop, but I know no reason for it, unless it were because thou hast written a Booke against a Popish Prelate, meaning William Bishop, entituled by the Pope, the Nominall Bishop of the Aereall Diocesse of Calcedon, which enraged the Court Papists against him to obstruct his

Ann. Reg. Jacob. 15 Ann. Dom. 1617.

his preferment. The hour-glaſs of his life (ſaith my [h] Authour) ran out the ſooner for having the ſand or gravel thereof ſtopt; ſo great his grief of the ſtone, though even whilſt his body was on the rack, his ſoule found eaſe in the aſſurance of ſalvation.

[h] Dr. Fenly in the Life of Bp. Abbot, p. 549.

54. About this time, a Boy dwelling at Bilſon in Stafford-ſhire, William Perry by name, not full fifteen years in age, (but above forty in cunning) was practiſed on by ſome Jeſuits (repairing to the houſe of Mr. Gifford in that County) to diſſemble himſelf Poſſeſſed. This was done on deſigne that the Prieſts might have the credit to caſt out that Devil (which never was in) ſo to grace their Religion with the reputation of a Miracle.

The Impoſture of the Boy of Bilſon.

55. But now the beſt of the jeſt (or rather the worſt of the earneſt, was) the Boy having gotten a habit of counterfeiting, leading a lazie life thereby, to his own eaſe and Parents profit (to whom he was more worth than the beſt Plough-land in the ſhire) would not be undeviled by all their Exorciſms, ſo that the Prieſts raiſed up a ſpirit which they could not allay. At laſt, by the induſtry of Dr. Moreton Biſhop of Coventry and Litchfield, the jugling was laid open to the world by the Boyes own confeſſion and repentance: who being bound an Apprentice at the Biſhops coſt, verified the Proverb, That an untoward Boy may make a good Man.

Found out by Biſhop Moreton.

56. Indeed all this KING's Reign was ſcattered over with Cheaters in this kinde. Some Papiſts, ſome Sectaries, ſome neither, as who diſſembled ſuch poſſeſſion, either out of malice to be revenged on thoſe whom they accuſed of Witchcraft, or covetouſneſſe to enrich themſelves, ſeeing ſuch, who out of charity, or curioſity repaired unto them, were bountifull in their relief. But take a few of many.

Cheaters of ſeveral kindes.

Papiſts.	No Papiſts.
[i] Sarah Williams lying paſt all ſenſe in a Trance, had a Devil, ſay the Romaniſts, ſlipt up into her leg.	Rich: Haydok Fellow of New-Colledge in Oxford, preached in his dreams Latine Sermons againſt the Hierarchie. He afterwards recanted, lived in good eſteem to a great age in Salisbury, practiſing Phyſick, being alſo an excellent Poet, Limner, and Ingraver.
[k] Grace Sowthuts of Salmisbury in the County of Lancaſter was perſwaded by Southworth a Prieſt, to diſſemble poſſeſſion to gain himſelf credit by Exorciſing her.
[l] Mary and Amie two Maids of Weſtminſter, pretended themſelves in raptures from the Virgin Mary and Michael the Arch-Angel.	Anne Gunter a Maid of Windſor, gave it out ſhe was poſſeſſed of a Devil, & was tranſported with ſtrange Extaticall Phrenſies.
[m] Edward Hance a Popiſh Prieſt (born at Lutterworth in Leiceſter-ſhire) gave it out that he was poſſeſſed of the Bleſſed Trinity.	A Maid at Standon in Hartford-ſhire, which perſonated a Demoniack ſo lively, that many judicious perſons were deceived by her.

i See Bp. Harſnet his Book on this ſubject, pag. 81.

k John Ga's Foot out of the ſnare, pag. 53.

l Idem pag. 54.

m Idem p. 55.

See we this Catalogue conſiſts moſt of the weaker ſex, either becauſe Satan would plant his Battery where eaſieſt to make a Breach, or becauſe he found ſuch moſt advantaged for diſſembling, and his Cloven-foot beſt concealed under Long coats. Indeed, ſome Feminine weakneſſes made them more ſtrong to delude the ruines of the Diſeaſe of the Mother being the beſt Foundation to build ſuch Impoſtourie thereon.

Ann. Dom 1618. Ann. Regis Jac. 16

57. K. James remembring what Solomon [n] saith, It is the honour of a King to search out a matter, was no lesse dexterous than desirous to make discovery of these Deceits. Various were His waies in detecting them, awing some into confession with His presence, perswading others by promise of pardon and fair usage. He ordered it so, that a Proper Courtier made love to one of these bewitched Maids, and quickly Cupid his Arrows drave out the pretended Darts of the Devil. Another there was, the Tides of whose Possession did so Ebbe and Flow, that punctually they observed one hour till the KING came to visit her. The Maid loath to be so unmannerly as to make His MAJESTY attend her time, antedated her Fits many houres, and instantly ran through the whole Zodiack of tricks which she used to play. A third, strangely-affected when the first verse of S. John's Gospel was read unto her in our Translation, was tame and quiet whilst the same was pronounced in Greek, her English Devil belike understanding no other language. The frequency of such forged Possessions wrought such an alteration upon the judgement of King JAMES, that he receding from what he had written in his Demonologie grew first diffident of, and then flatly to deny the workings of Witches and Devils, as but Falshoods and Delusions.

n Prov. 25. 2. King James his dexterity in detecting them.

58. K. James having last year in His progress passed through Lancashire, took notice, That by the precisenes of some Magistrates, and Ministers, in severall places of this Kingdome, in hindring people from their recreations on the Sunday, the Papists in this Realm being thereby perswaded, that no honest mirth or recreation was tolerable in our Religion. Whereupon, the Court being then at Greenwich, He set forth a Declaration to this effect, That for His good peoples lawfull recreations, His pleasure was, that after the end of Divine Service, they should not be disturbed, letted, or discouraged from any lawfull recreations; Such as dancing either of men, or women; archerie for men, leaping, vaulting, or any such harmless recreations: Ner from having of May-games, Whitsun-ales, or Morice-dances, and setting up of May-poles, or other sports therewith used, so as the same be had in due and convenient time, without impediment, or let of Divine Service: and that women should have leave to carry rushes to the Church for the decering of it, according to their old custome; withall prohibiting all unlawfull games to be used on the Sundaies onely, as bear-baiting, bull-baiting, interludes, and (at all times in the meaner sort of people by Law prohibited) bowling.

The Kings Declaration for liberty on the Lords day.

May 24.

59. But when this Declaration was brought abroad, it is not so hard to believe, as sad to recount what grief and distraction thereby was occasioned in many honest mens hearts, who looked on it, not as locall for Lancashire, but what in processe of time would enlarge it self all over [a] England. Some conceived the recreations specified, impeditive to the observation of the Lords day; yea, unsuitable and unbeseeming the essentiall duties thereof. But others maintained, that if private mens speeches must not be pressed to an odious construction, much more men were bound, candidly to interpret the Acts of Authority; and in charity must presume, and be perswaded, that religious Princes will command nothing, what they conceive either to be unjust, or not expedient, all things considered. They considered moreover (which was mainly material) that this Declaration was not dogmatical, or doctrinall, to say, or averre these things to be Theologically lawfull, but it was Edictum Civile, what the King thought fit upon just reasons to permit, without restraint, or punishment. The hardnesse of mens hearts on one side, which will break loose though restrained, and the hope of gaining others on the other side, by a favourable allowance, might be just motives in Authority, to give way to things civiliter, that they may be done impunè, and yet not prejudice any point of Religion, and not be done licitè, as in Divorces extra casum adulterii, Usurie, &c.

The various effects thereof.

[a] So it was in the Reign of King Charles, Anno 1633.

60. But the difficulty was encreased, when Ministers daily feared to be urged upon their Canonicall obedience, to promulgate, and publish the said Declaration in their Parish Churches, which some resolved flatly to refuse, especially such, who formerly had strictly preached, and pressed the observation of the Lords Reasons of the refusers to publish this Declaration.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 16 Ann. Dom. 1618.

Lords-day, alledging for, and applying to themſelves that place of Saint Paul [b], For, if I build again the things which I have deſtroyed, I make my ſelf a tranſgreſſour. Beſides this, they enforced the Reaſons following for their Recuſancie: Yea, though the KING Himſelf ſhould enjoyn them on their Alleageance.

b Gal. 2. 18.

1. That the publiſhing of this Declaration would be interpretativè an approbation thereof, whereas on the contrary they are [c] commanded, to have no fellowſhip with the unfruitfull works of darkneſs, but rather to reprove them.

c Ephes. 5. 11.

2. That hereby they ſhould draw a juſt woe upon them pronounced by the Prophet [d], Woe unto them that decree unrighteous decrees, and that write grievouſneſs which they have preſcribed. Where (as the [e] Learned interpret) even publick Notaries, which are but inſtrumental, are threatned with a curſe.

d Iſa. 10. 1.

e Junius & Piſcator on the place.

3. That the promulgation of a Law is de eſſentia Legis, ſo that people would neither take notice of this Declaration, nor liberty by it, till it were publiſhed, and ſo the Publiſher ſhould per ſe be a Promoter of a ſin.

4. That Obedience to Authority obligeth onely in licitis & honeſtis; and the [f] Apoſtle confeſſeth, That he himſelf had power to edification, and not to deſtruction; whereunto the publiſhing thereof did manifeſtly tend.

f 2 Cor. 13. 10.

61. On the other ſide, ſome learned and pious Miniſters, who in their judgments were convinced, that ſome of the aforeſaid recreations were incompatible with the ſanctification of the Sabbath; notwithſtanding, in caſe His MAJESTY ſhould enjoyn it, on ſerious deliberation reſolved in obedience to the KING, publickly to read, or cauſe the reading of the Declaration, not looking at the contents therein, but at the Authority commanding the publication thereof; the rather, becauſe no Subſcription was required, or Vocall aſſent to approve, what therein was contained, to be juſt, or affirm it to be true; but a bare miniſterial declaring of the KING's will and pleaſure therein, which they conceived themſelves bound in conſcience to perform, for the Reaſons enſuing:

The Arguments for the lawful publiſhing of the Declaration.

1. The refuſal, well obſerved, doth reſolve into a principle, which would take away the neceſſity of Obedience univerſally, when the Partie commanded can pretend, the Magiſtrate ought not to command him any ſuch thing; and, if the PRINCE muſt ſuſpend His Edicts upon each Subjects doubt, He ſhould never ſet forth any, conſidering the variety of judgments, and the diſtractions which are in His Subjects.

2. A Sheriffe may, yea muſt, diſperſe the KING his Proclamations, which he liketh not; and a Clerk, at the command of his Maſter, a Juſtice of Peace, may lawfully write the Mittimus of that perſon to Priſon, whom in his parricular judgment he conceiveth to be innocent: and (what is moſt proper to our purpoſe, becauſe a religious inſtance) a Miniſter, without any ſin, may ſafely pronounce an Excommunication, legally delivered unto him, though in his own private conſcience he be convinced, that the Partie is unjuſtly excommunicated.

3. There are many precedents hereof in antiquity. A Father [g] gives this cenſure, that when the Jewes, commanded by Antiochus, gave up the Divine Books to His Officers, to be deſtroyed, it was, Peccatum imperantis, & minantis; non populi, cum dolore & tremore tradentis, A ſinne of Him that commanded, and threatned it; not of the people, who ſurrendred up thoſe Volumes with fear, and ſorrow. And Saint g Optatus Milevitanus, lib. 7.

h Contra Faustum, lib. 22. cap. 75.

h Augustine resolveth it in the case of a Christian Souldier, fighting under a sacrilegious Emperour; that, though he be not satisfied in the lawfulnesse of the commands, he may notwithstanding lawfully obey. Ita ut fortasse reum faciat Regem iniquitas imperandi, innocentem militem ostendat ordo serviendi. And, what is most apposite to the matter in hand (because the Edict of a godly Emperour, seriously distasted by a godly Bishop) Mauritius set forth a command, That no Souldier should be admitted into a Monasterie, and though Gregory the great was perswaded, the prohibition was in it self injurious and unlawfull, yet he did, In[i] diversas terrarum partes transmittere legem, quia erat subjectus Ejus justionibus.

i Lib. 2. Ep. 61.

Convinced with these Reasons, some Ministers (not with any delight in the Message, but in Duty to the Authority which sent) intended (if put to the trial) sadly and unwillingly to publish the Declaration.

A third sort resolve on a strange expedient.

A third sort took up a resolution to read the Declaration, or suffer it to be read, and presently after to preach against the contents of what they had published; hoping so, warily to avoid the danger of disobedience, in refusing to promulgate it, and of profanenesse in seeming to approve it. But, whether by this middle way, setting God and the King as openly opposite, they would have declined, or contracted more odium, it is hard to determine.

Lancashire Ministers more scared than hurt.

62. But now, after so long, and many diversities of Opinions and Arguments on severall sides, their own fear proved at last their onely foe: The KING's goodnesse taking away the subject of their jealousie; so that no Minister in the County was enjoyned to read the Book in his Parish, wherewith they had so affrighted themselves. However, their Arguments may be kept cold, and laid up provisionally against the time they had use thereof, especially for such, who survived till the seventh of King CHARLES, when the Declaration for Liberty on the Lords-day was injoyned (though not by the KING) the Ministers to publish clean through the Land.

A third sort read it with approbation of the contents therein.

63. However, there wanted not many, both in Lancashire, and elsewhere, who conceived the Declaration came forth seasonably, to suppresse the dangerous endeavour of such, who now began in their Pulpits, to broach the dregs of Judaisme, and force Christians to drink them. So that those legal Ceremonies, long since dead, buried, and rotten in the grave of our Saviour, had now their ghosts, as it were, walking; frighting such people with their terrible apparitions, who were perswaded by some Preachers to so rigorous observation of the Sabbath, that therein it was unlawful to dresse meat, sweep their houses, kindle the fire, or the like. Yea, and the Papists, in Lancashire especially (a frontier Country, as I may term it, of Papists and Protestants, where the Reformed Religion had rather a truce, than a peace, standing on its guard, and posture of defence) I say, in Lancashire the Romanists made advantage of this strictnesse, to pervert many to Popery, perswading them, That the Protestant Religion was the School of Tyrannus, where no lawful liberty was allowed. And no wonder, if many common people were hereby fetcht off unto them, starting aside as a broken bow, chiefly because overbent for lack of lawfull recreation. But enough hereof, and too much (if not pressed thereunto in pursuance of our History) and yet ere long we must have more on the same sad subject.

The Heretical Opinions of John Thrake.

64. Now of the Broakers of Judaisme, John Thrake was a principall. Whether ever he sucked on the breasts of either University, or onely was brought up by hand in some petty-School, I know not. This I know, that seeking to be made Deacon, or Minister, by James Bishop of Bath and Wells, Doctor Samuel Ward then Poser, and the Bishops Chaplain, refused him as altogether insufficient. However, afterwards he got Orders, and then began to vent his Opinions; That the Lords-day was to be observed with the same strictnesse by Christians, as it was

Ann. 14 Jac. Ann. Dom. 1618.

was by Jewes; and, That all Meats and Drinks forbidden in the Leviticall Law bound Christians to the same observance, thereby opening a dore to let in the rabble of all Ceremonies. Thus he brought in a constant Lent of his own making. And, whereas Divines can forbid no meat as unlawfull (though Politicians may as unthrifty for the State, and Physicians as unhealthfull for the body) because CHRIST hath given us that Licence, To the clean all things are clean, yet he seduced many souls with his Tenets, and his own Wife amongst many others. For these he was censured in the Star-Chamber, but afterwards recanted his Opinions, and lived (as unfetled in judgment, as place) in several parts of the Kingdome. I have heard him preach a Sermon, nothing relating to the aforesaid Doctrine, and when his Auditors have forgotten the matter, they will remember the loudness of his stentorious voice, which indeed had more strength, than any thing else he delivered. He afterwards relapsed, not into the same, but other Opinions, rather humerous, than hurtfull, and died obscurely at Lambeth in the Reign of King CHARLES. Nor must we forget, that his Wife could never be unperverted again, but perished in her Judaism; because, as our Saviour [k] observeth, Proselytes in generall are twofold worse than their Leader: and her Sex (as pliable to receive, as tenacious to retain) had weaknesse enough to embrace an error, and obstinacy too much to forsake it.

[k] Mat. 23. 15.

63. At this time began the troubles in the Low-Countreys, about matters of Religion, heightned between two opposite parties, Remonstrants, and Contra-Remonstrants; their Controversies being chiefly reducible to five points; Of Predestination, and Reprobation; Of the Latitude of Christ's death; Of the power of mans Free will, both before, and after his conversion; and, Of the Elects perseverance in grace. To decide these difficulties, the States of the United Provinces, resolved to call a National Synod at Dort; And, to give the more lustre, and weight to the determinations thereof, desired some forreign Princes to send them the assistance of Their Divines for so pious a work: Especially, they requested our KING of Great Britain, to contribute His aid thereunto (being Himself as forward to doe, as they desire any thing conducible to GOD's glory, and the Churches good) Who, out of His own Princely wisdome, and free favour, made choice of George Carleton, Doctor of Divinity, then Bishop of Landaff, and afterward Bishop of Chichester.

Joseph Hall, Doctor of Divinity, then Dean of Worcester, and afterward Bishop of Exeter, and Norwich.

John Davenant, Doctor of Divinity, then Margaret-Professour, and Master of Queens-Colledge in Cambridge, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury.

Samuel Ward, Doctor of Divinity, then Master of Sidney-Colledge in Cambridge, and Arch-Deacon of Taunton.

These, according to their summons, repairing to His MAJESTY at Newmarket, received from Him there these following Instructions, concerning their behaviour in the Synod:

These Instructions I saw transcribed out of Dr. Davenant his own Manuscript.

1. OUr will, and pleasure is, That from this time forward, upon all occasions, you inure your selves to the practice of the Latine Tongue; that, when there is cause, you may deliver your mindes with more readinesse, and facility.
2. You shall in all points to be debated, and disputed, resolve amongst your selves before-hand, what is the true State of the Question, and jointly, and uniformly agree thereupon.
3. If in debating of the cause by the Learned men there, any thing be emergent, whereof you thought not before; you shall meet, and consult consult thereupon again, and so resolve among your selves joyntly, what is fit to be maintained. And this to be done agreeable to the Scriptures, and the doctrine of the Church of England. Ann. Dom. 1618. Ann. Regis Ja. 16

4. Your advise shall be to those Churches, that their Ministers doe not deliver in the Pulpit to the people, those things for ordinary Doctrins, which are the highest points of Schools, and not fit for vulgar capacity, but disputable on both sides.
5. That they use no Innovation in Doctrine, but teach the same things which were taught twenty or thirty years past, in their own Churches: and especially, that which contradicteth not their own Confessions, so long since published, and known unto the world.
6. That they conforme themselves to the publick Confessions of the neighbour-reformed Churches, with whom to hold good correspondency, shall be no dishonour to them.
7. That, if there be main opposition between any, who are overmuch addicted to their own opinions, your endevour shall be, that certain Positions be moderately laid down, which may tend to the mitigation of heat on both sides.
8. That, as you principally look to God's glory, and the peace of those distracted Churches: so you have an eye to Our honour, Who send and employ you thither; and consequently, at all times consult with Our Ambassadour there residing, who is best acquainted with the form of those Countreys, understandeth well the Questions, and differences among them, and shall from time to time receive Our Princely directions, as occasion shall require.
9. Finally, in all other things which We cannot foresee, you shall carry your selves with that advise, moderation, and discretion, as to persons of your quality, and gravity shall appertain.

Doctor Davenant, and Doctor Ward, presented themselves again to His MAJESTY at Royston, October the 8. Where His MAJESTY vouchsafed His familiar discourse unto them, for two hours together, commanding them to sit down by Him, and at last dismissed them with His solemn prayer, That God would blesse their endevours; which made them cheerfully to depart His presence. Oct. 8.

66. Addressing themselves now with all possible speed to the Sea-side, they casually missed that Man of Warre, which the States had sent to conduct them over (though they saw him on Sea at some distance) and safely went over in a small Vessel, landing October 20 at Middleburgh. On the 27 of the same Moneth they came to Hague, where they kissed the hand of His Excellency GRAVE MAURICE, to Whom the Bishop made a short Speech, and by Whom they were all courteously entertained. Hence they removed to Dort, where November the 3, the Synod began, and where we leave them with the rest of their fellow-Divines, when first every one of them had taken this Admission-Oath, at their entrance into the Synod: 20. 27. Nov. 3.

I Acta Synodi Dordracena pag. 64.

I Promise before God[1], whom I believe, and adore, the present searcher of the heart, and reins, that in all this Synodal action, wherein shall be appointed the examination, judgment, and decision, as well of the known five Articles, and difficulties thence arising, as of all other Doctrinals; that I will not make use of any Humane Writing, but onely of God's Word, for the certain, and undoubted Rule of Faith: And, that I shall propound nothing to my self in this whole cause, besides the glory of God, the peace of the Church, and especially the preservation of the purity of Doctrine therein. So may my Saviour Jesus Christ be mercifull unto me, whom I earnestly pray, that in this my purpose, He would alwaies be present with me with the grace of his Spirit.

I

Ann. Reg. Jacob. Ann. Dom. 1618.

I say, we leave them here with their fellow-Divines. For, should my pen presume to sail over the Sea, it would certainly meet with a storm in the passage, the censure of such, who wil justly condemn it for medling with transmarine matters, especially Doctrinall points, utterly aliene from my present subject. Onely a touch of an Historical passage therein, confining our selves to our own Countreymen.

67. These four Divines had allowed them by the STATES Ten pounds sterling a day, Threescore and ten pounds by the week; an entertainment farr larger than what was appointed to any other forreign Theologues; and politickly proportioned, in gratefull consideration of the Greatnesse of His MAJESTY who employed them. And, these English Divines, knowing themselves sent over, not to gain wealth to themselves, but glory to God, and reputation to their Sovereign, freely gave what they had freely received, keeping a Table general, where any fashionable Forreigner was courteously and plentifully entertained. The States liberall allowance to the English Divines.

68. They were commanded by the KING to give Him a weekly account (each one in his several Week, according to their seniority) of all memorable passages transacted in the Synod. Yet it happened, that, for a moneth, or more, the KING received from them no particulars of their proceedings, whereat His Majesty was most highly offended. But afterwards, understanding, that this defect was caused by the countermands of an higher King, even of him who [m] gathereth the winde in his fists, stopping all passages by contrary weather; no wonder if He, who was so great a peace-maker, was himself so quickly pacified: yea, afterwards highly pleased, when four weekly dispatches (not neglected to be orderly sent, but delayed, to be accordingly brought) came all together to His Majesties hands. Weekly intelligence to the King from his Divines.

m Prov. 30. 4.

Dec. 10. 69. On the 10 of December, Gualter Balcanquall, Bachelour of Divinity, and Fellow of Pembroke-Hall, came into the Synod, where his Credential Letters from King JAMES were publickly read; Whose pleasure it was, that he should be added to the four English Collegues, in the name of the Church of Scotland. The President of the Synod welcomed him with a short Oration, which by Mr. Balcanquall was returned with another, and so was he conducted to his place; A place built for him particularly, as one coming after all the rest, so that his seat discomposed the uniformity of the building, exactly regular before. But it matters not how the seats were ordered, so that the judgments of such as sate therein, were conformed to the truth of the Scriptures. Mr. Balcanquall admitted into the Synod.

17. 1619. 70. Doctor Joseph Hall being at the Synod of Dort, and finding much indisposition in himself, the aire not agreeing with his health, on his humble request obtained His Majesties leave to return. Whereupon, composing his countenance with a becoming gravity, he publickly took his solemn farewell of the Synod, with this Speech following: Dr. Hall his return thence.

NOn facilè verò mecum in gratiam redierit cadaverosa hæc moles, quam ægrè usque circumgesto, quæ mihi hujus Conventus celebritatem tòties inviderit, jamque prorsus invitissimum à vobis importunè avocat, & divellit. Neque enim ullus est profectò sub cælo locus æquè cæli æmulus, & in quo tentorium mihi figi maluerim, cujusque adeo gestiet mihi animus meminisse. Beatos verò vos, quibus hoc frui datum! non dignus eram ego (ut fidelissimi Romani querimoniam imitari liceat) qui & Christi, & Ecclesiæ suæ nomine, sanctam hanc provinciam diutius sustinerem. Illud vero Θεῦ δὲ χάρις. Nempe audito, quod res erat, non aliâ me quàm adversissimâ hic usum valetudine, Serenissimus Rex meus misertus miselli famuli sui, revocat me domum, quippe quòd cineres meos, aut sandapilam vobis nihil quicquam prodesse posse nôrit, succenturiavitque mihi virum è suis selectissimum, quantum Theologum! De me profectò (mero jam silicernio) quicquid fiat, viderit ille Deus meus, cujus ego totus sum. Vobis quidem ita feliciter prospectum est, ut sit cur infirmitati meæ haud parùm gratulemini, quum hujusmodi modi instructissimo succedaneo cœtum hunc vestrum beaverit. Neque tamen committam (si Deus mihi vitam, & vires indulserit) ut & corpore simul, & animo abesse videar. Interea sanè huic Synodo, ubicunque terrarum sum, & vobis, consiliis conatibusq; meis quibuscunq;, res vestras me, pro virili, sedulò, ac seriò prometurum, sanctè voveo. Interim vobis omnibus, ac singulis, Honoratissimi Domini Delegati, Reverendissime Præses, Gravissimi Assessores, Scribæ doctissimi, Symmystæ colendissimi, Tibique Venerandissima Synodus universa, agro animo ac corpore æternùm valedico. Rogo vos omnes obnixiùs, ut precibus vestris imbecillem reducem facere, comitari, prosequi velitis.

Ann. Dom. 1619 | Ann. Reg. Jac. 17

Thus returned Dr. Hall into his own Country; Since so recovered (not to say revived) therein, that he hath gone over the graves of all his English Collegues there, and (what cannot God, and good aire doe?) surviving in health at this day, three and thirty years after, may well with [n] Jesse, go amongst men for an old man in these daies. And living privately, having passed thorough the Bishopricks of Exeter, and Norwich, hath now the opportunity in these troublesome times, effectually to practice those his precepts of patience, and contentment, which his pen hath so eloquently recommended to others.

n 1 Sam. 17. 12.

Doctor Goad in the room of Dr. Hall.

71. On the seventh of January, Thomas Goad Doctor of Divinity, Chaplain to George Archbishop of Canterbury, came into the Synod, sent thither by His MAJESTY of Great Britain. The President entertained him with a solemn Oration, highly commending King JAMES's care, not recalling one Divine, till he had substituted another. The Doctor requited him with a pithie Oration, promising the utmost of his assistance to the general good. A promise by him well performed, giving afterwards ample testimony of his general learning and solid judgement in Divinity; nothing being wanting in him, but that he came hither so late to this imployment. Jan. 7.

SECTION

Ann. Reg. Jac. 17 Ann. Dom. 1619.

SECTION V.

TO Master PETER MOROLOYS,
AND Master THOMAS ROWSE,
OF LONDON, Merchants.

THE NETHERLANDS are the Scene whereon the beginning of this Section was transacted. They were also the Native Countreys of your Ancestors, flying hither from persecution. Since as your Fathers then found Safety amongst the ENGLISH; some of the ENGLISH, to my knowledge, have felt Bounty from their Children. God increase your Store, and make you like the good Merchant in the Gospel, who, to purchase the* GREAT PEARL, sold all that he had, that is, undervalued all Worldly wealth, coming in competition with God, or Grace, or Glory.

* Mat. 13. 46.

BEfore the end of the hundred fourty fifth Session, April the 20th, in the forenoon, the Belgick Confession was brought into the Synod, containing matter both of Doctrine, and Discipline, and the publick consent thereunto was required. Here the Bishop of Landaffe, in the name of all the rest, approved all the points of Doctrine. But as for matter of Discipline, that his Mother Church, and his own Order might not suffer therein, and he seem by silence to betray the cause thereof, a Protest was entred by him, as Mouth for the rest, to preserve the same, as by the perusing the following passage will appear.

The Belgick Confession presented in the Synod.

Interea tamen de Disciplina paucis monet. Nunquam in Ecclesia obtinuisse Ministrorum paritatem non tempore Christi ipsius, tunc enim duodecim Apostolos fuisse Discipulis superiores, non Apostolorum ætate, non subsecutis seculis. Nec valere rationem in hac Confessione usurpatam, Nempè quia omnes sunt æquè Ministri Christi. Nam & septuaginta Discipuli erant Ministri Christi, æquè ac Apostoli, non tamen inde Apostolis æquales: & omnes omnino homines sunt æquè homines, non inde tamen homo homini non debet subesse. Hæc, non ad harum Ecclesiarum offensionem, sed ad nostræ Anglicanæ defensionem sese monuisse professus est.—— Britannorum interpellationi responsum ne grn quidem.

Notwithstanding, in the mean time, he briefly gave his advice concerning Discipline. That the parity of Ministers never prevailed in the Church, no, not in the time of Christ himself; for, then the twelve Apostles were superiour to the Disciples; not in the time of the Apostles, nor in the ages after them. Nor is that reason of any force alledged in their Confession, namely, Because all are equally the Ministers of Christ. For, even the seventy Disciples were equally Ministers of Christ with the Apostles, and yet it follows not thence, they were equal with the Apostles: and all men altogether are equally men, yet thence it cannot be inferred, that one man ought not to be subject to another. These things he professed himself to have hinted, not to offend these Churches therewith, but to defend their own Church of England—— To this interpellation of the British Divines nothing at all was answered.

Ann. Dom. 1619. Ann. Reg. Jac. 17

Hereby the equal Reader may judge how candidly Master Montague in his Appeal, dealeth with our English Divines, charging [o] them, That the Discipline of the Church of England is in this Synod held unlawfull. And again, [p] The Synod of Dort in some points condemneth upon the by, even the Discipline of the Church of England. But, let such as desire farther satisfaction herein, peruse the joynt Attestation, which those English Divines set forth, Anno 1626. to justifie their proceedings herein.

o Appeal, p. 70.
p Appeal, p. 108.

The States bounty to the British Divines.

2. On the 29 of April the Synod ended. The States to expresse their gratitude, bestowed on the English Divines at their departure, Two hundred pounds, to bear their charges in their return: besides, a golden Medall of good value was given to every one of them, wherein the sitting of the Synod was artificially represented. And now, these Divines, who for many moneths had, in a manner, been fast'ned to their chairs, and desks, thought it a right due to themselves, that when their work was ended, they might begin their recreation. Wherefore they viewed the most eminent Cities in the Low-Countreys, and at all places were bountifully received, Leiden onely excepted. Wonder not, that they, who had most learning, should shew least civility, especially having Professours of Humanity amongst them, seeing generally the great ones of that University at this time, being Remonstrants, were disaffected to the decisions of this Synod. This gave occasion to that passage in the speech of Sir Dudlie Carleton, the English Ambassadour, when in the name of his Master he tendred the States publick thanks, for their great respects to the English Divines, using words to this effect, That they had been entertained at Amsterdam, welcomed at the Hague, cheerfully received at Roterdam, kindly embraced at Utreich, &c. and that they had seen Leiden.

April 29.

Their Letter to K. James.

3. But, how high an esteem, the STATES-GENERAL had of these our English-mens service, will best appear by Their Letter, which They sent to King JAMES, as followeth:

Serenissime

Ann. Reg. Jac. 17 Ann. Dom. 1619.

Sereniſsime Rex,

QUemadmodum hoc unicè propoſitum Nobis fuit, ut, quæ in Civitatibus, Provinciiſq; noſtris, ante annos aliquot, exortæ erant, infelices de Religione contentiones, eruditorum, ac piorum hominum judicio, legitimè tolli, ac componi poſſent; ut, & conſcientiis eorum, quibus Nos præeſſe Deus Immortalis voluit, ipſiq; pariter Reipublicæ, ſuâ in Religione, ac pietate ſimul, ratio conſtaret, & tranquillitas; ita nos benignè is reſpexit, cui hactenus curæ fuimus, Qui Conventui noſtro Nationali, quem ex omnibus idem ſentientibus Eccleſiis convocavimus, ita benedixit, ut, re tantâ ad felicem, atq; optatum exitum perductâ, domum, & ad ſuos ſe conferant. Quibus, benedictionem Domini, ſtudium noſtrum in promovendo pietatis negotio, conſenſum planè cum aliis Eccleſiis unanimem, indicabunt. Inter quos, cum præcipui & conſilio, & loco, fuerint Magnæ Britanniæ Theologi, quos, pro ſingulari, & divino, in Nos, & Eccleſias noſtras affectu, ad Nos mittere dignata eſt Majeſtas Tua; curæ Nobis fuit, ut, quantopere hujus beneficii magnitudinem æſtimemus, ex nobis intelligeret Majeſtas Tua. Eſt verò illud, Rex Sereniſsime, etiamſi cum reliquis, quæ infinita ſunt, conferatur, tantò majus, quantò uberiores ſunt fructus, quos ex Dei cauſa expectamus, quantóq; id Majeſtatis Tuæ nomini eſt convenientius; Qui, cùm nullâ re externâ, atq; humanâ, quæ potiſsimùm aliis Principibus conciliant dignitatem, quoquam Rege ſit inferior, Fidei Defenſionem, tanquam Dei, Eccleſiæq; Patronus in his terris, ſibi meritò aſſumit. Neque dubitare poſſumus, quin, & Majeſtatis Tuæ Regna tot, & tanta; reliquæque, quæ in hoc negotio Nobis operam navârunt, Eccleſiæ, magnam utilitatem ex hoc inſtituto noſtro percepturæ ſint, quæ exemplo noſtro diſcent, quanto periculo conjunctum ſit, quæ bene in Religione conſtituta ſunt temerè movere, quùm ſint felices, atque fortunatæ, quamdiu ſimili remedio opus non habebunt: cui hactenus abundè, Majeſtatis Tuæ curâ, atque vigilantiâ, proſpectum fuit. In Theologis porrò utriuſq; Regni Veſtri omnibus, & ſingulis, quorum agmen ducit verè Reverendiſsimus

Ann. Dom. 1619 Ann. Reg. Jac. 17

Dominus Georgius, Landavensis Episcopus, imago, atque expressa virtutis effigies; eam eruditionem, pietatem, pacis studium, eumque zelum deprehendimus, ut, cum ipsius beneficii causâ Majestati Tuæ multum debeamus, magna pars ipsius beneficii Nobis videatur, quod ipsi ad Nos missi sint.

Deus immortalis Majestati Tuæ, Rex Serenissime, ita benedicat, ut illius benedictionis partem, Orbis Christianus, ex diuturnitate Regni Tui, & Ecclesiæ defensione, diu percipiat.

The British Divines return into England.

4. With these Testimonial Letters, over they came into England, and first presented themselves to King JAMES. Who, seeing them out of a window, when first entring the Court; Here comes, said He, my good Mourners, alluding to their black habit, and late death of Queen ANNE. Then, after courteous entertaining of them, He favourably dismissed them, and afterward on three of them [q] bestowed preferment. So returned they all to their severall professions; Bishop Carleton to the carefull governing of his Diocesse; Doctor Davenant, besides his Collegiate Cure, to his constant Lectures in the Schools; Dr. Ward to his discreet ordering of his own Colledge; Dr. Goad to his diligent discharging of Domestical duties in the family of his Lord, and Patron; and Mr. Balcanquall to his Fellowship in Pembroke-Hall.

[q] Removing Carleton to Chichester, preferring Davenant to Salisbury, and bestowing the Mastership of the Savoy on Balcanquall - - - - - - - - - -

This Synod diversly censured.

5. Since it hath been the successe of this Synod, to have the decisions thereof to be approved, applauded, magnified by some: vilified, contemned, condemned by others. If men were divided in their censures [r] about Christ, some saying, He is a good man: others, nay, but he deceiveth the people; no wonder, if ever since, all Conventions of Christians be subject to variety of mens verdicts upon them. Of such as dislike the Synod, none falls heavier upon it than a London Divine, charging the Synodians to have taken a previous Oath, to condemn the opposite party on what termes soever. But take him in his own words, Farre be it from me to subscribe the report, or information of those, who charge the respective Members of this Synod, with suffering themselves to be bound with an Oath, at, or before their admission thereunto, to vote down the Remonstrants, and their Doctrines (howsoever;) Yet, when I read, and consider, 1. How learnedly, solidly, and substantially they quit themselves, and argue, whilst they goe along with the Remonstrants, and declare wherein they agree with them, in the points controverted betwixt them. 2. How feebly, and unlike themselves they reason, when they come to the quick of the difference. 3. and lastly, How neer, at very many turns, even in those things wherein they pretend to differ, they come unto them, as if they had a very good minde, to be no more two, but one with them, when (I say) I consider all these things, methinks I see the interest and obligation of an oath, working much after the same manner, as sometimes it did in Herod, when for his oath sake, contrary to his minde, and desire otherwise, he caused, John the Baptist's head to be given to Herodias in a [t] platter. See here, how this Suggester, though at the first he takes water, and washeth his hands, with a Farre be it from me to subscribe the report &c. yet afterwards he crucifies the credit of a whole Synod, and makes them all guilty of no lesse than damnable perjury.

[r] 1 John 7. 12.

[s] Mr. John Goodwin in his Redemption Redeem'd, cap. 15. parag. 24. pag. 395.

[t] Mat. 14. 9.

The Suggesters surmise most improbable.

6. I could have wished, that he had mentioned in the margin, the Authors of this suggestion; whereas now the omission thereof will give occasion to some, to suspect him for the first raiser of the report; an heavy accusation, charging a whole whole Synod of injustice. When Festus, the heathen Magistrate, was so much Christian, as not to condemn an accused man [u] before he hath licence to answer for himself: could any Assembly of Christian Ministers be so heathen, as to binde themselves by an oath, right or wrong, with blinde obedience, to beat down the opposite party? Wherein they were all actually forsworn, having publickly taken so solemn an oath, to proceed impartially, according to Gods Word, and their own conscience. What said Laban to [w] Jacob? If thou shalt take other wives besides my daughters, no man is with us, see, God is witnesse between thee, and me: So, if these Divines, having betroathed their faith to God, and the world, in so open and publick a manner; besides this Oath, did binde themselves with any other, taken before, or after, in a clandestine way, contrary to their publick promise: would not God the sole judge herein, sensible of this affront offered to him, and his truth, heavily punish so hainous an offence? And, can any charitable-minded man believe, that learned men would, that godly men could be guilty of so deep, and damnable dissimulation?

Ann. Reg. Jac. 17 Ann. Dom. 1619.

u Acts 25. 26.

w Gen. 31. 50.

7. Musing with my self on this matter, and occasionally exchanging Letters with the Sons of Bishop Hall, it came into my minde to ask them Joseph's [x] question to his brethren, Is your father well, the old man of whom ye spake, is he yet alive? And, being informed of his life and health, I addressed my self in a Letter unto him, for satisfaction in this particular, who was pleased to honour me with this return herein inserted:

Bishop Hall his Letter to the Author.

x Gen. 43. 27.

WHereas you desire from me a just relation of the carriage of the businesse at the Synod of Dort, and the conditions required of our Divines there, at, or before their admission to that grave, and learned Assembly: I, whom God was pleased to imploy, as an unworthy agent in that great work, and, to reserve still upon earth, after all my reverend, and worthy Associates, doe, as in the presence of that God, to whom I am now daily expecting to yeild up my account, testifie to you, and (if you will) to the world, that I cannot, without just indignation, read that slanderous imputation, which Mr. Goodwin, in his Redemption Redeem'd, reports to have been raised, and cast upon those Divines, eminent both for learning, and piety, That they suffered themselves to be bound with an Oath, at, or before their admission into that Synod, to vote down the Remonstrants howsoever; so as they came deeply preingaged to the decision of those unhappy differences.

Truly, Sir, as I hope to be saved, all the Oath that was required of us was this; After that the Moderater, Assistents, and Scribes were chosen, and the Synod formed, and the several Members allowed, there was a solemn Oath required to be taken by every one of that Assembly, which was publickly done in a grave manner, by every person in their order, standing up, and laying his hand upon his heart, calling the great God of heaven to witnesse, that he would unpartially proceed in the judgment of these controversies, which should be laid before him, onely out of, and according to the written Word of God, and no otherwise, so determining of them, as he should finde in his conscience most agreeable to the Holy Scriptures, which Oath was punctually agreed to be thus taken by the Articles of the States, concerning the indiction, and ordering of the Synod, as appears plainly in their tenth Article; and, this was all the Oath that was either taken, or required. And farre was it from those holy soules, which are now glorious in heaven, or mine (who still for some short time survive, to give this just witnesse of our sincere integrity) to entertain the least thought of any so foul corruption, as by any over-ruling power to be swayed to a prejudgment in the points controverted.

It grieves my soul therefore to see, that any learned Divine should raise imaginary conjectures to himself, of an interest and obligation of a fancied Oath (working upon them, and drawing them contrary to the dictation of their own conscience, as it did Herod's in the case of John Baptist's beheading) meerly out of his own comparative construction of the different forms of expressing themselves in managing those Controversies. Wherein if at any time they seemed to speak neerer to the Tenet of the Remonstrants, it must be imputed to their holy ingenuity, and gracious disposition to peace, and to no other sinister respect.

Ann. Dom. 1619. Ann. Regis Jac. 17

Sir, since I have lived to see so foul an aspersion cast upon the memory of those worthy and eminent Divines, I blesse God that I yet live to vindicate them, by this my knowing, clear, and assured attestation; which I am ready to second with the solemnest Oath, if I shall be thereto required.

Higham, August 30. 1651.

Your much devoted friend, precessor, and fellow-labourer,
Jos: Hall, B. N.

Let the Reader consider with himself, how the Suggester speaks by hear-say, of things done at distance, whereat himself not present, whose disaffection to the decisions of that Synod, inclines him to credit ill reports against it. And yet, as afraid, though willing to speak out, in his me-thinks I see, vents but his own conjecturall surmises. Let him also weigh in the ballance of his judgment, how this purgation of this Synod is positive, and punctual, from one an ear- and eye-witnesse thereof, being such an one as Doctor Hall, and now aged; so that his testimonium herein, may seem testamentum; his witnesse, his will, and the truth therein delivered, a Legacie by him bequeathed to posterity. I say, the premises seriously considered, let the Reader proceed to sentence, as God and his conscience shall direct him; and, either condemn a private person of slander, and falsity; or a whole Synod of injustice, and perjury.

The death of Bp. Montague.

8. My desire to make this History of the Synod intire, hath made me omit the death of James Montague, the worthy Bishop of Winchester, who left this life the last year: Son to Sir Ed: Montague of Boughton in Northampton-shire, bred in Christs, afterwards Master of Sidney-Colledge in Cambridge, highly favoured by King JAMES, (whose Works he set forth) preferring him to the Bishoprick first of Bath and Wells, then to Winchester: in Bath he lies buried under a fair Tomb, though the whole Church be his Monument, which his bounty repaired, or rather raised out of the ruins thereof. One passage at his buriall I must not forget, having received it from the mouth of his younger Brother Sir Sidney Montague, present at his Funeral-solemnities.

A strange accident at his buriall.

9. A certain Officer of Bath Church, being a very corpulent man, was upon the day of the Bishop's burial appointed to keep the dores: He entred on this his imployment in the Morning whereon the Funeral was kept, but was buried himself before night, and before the Bishops body was put into the ground, because being bruised to death by the pressing in of people, his Corps required speedy interment; so needfull it is for those to watch for their own change, who wait on the graves of others.

The death of Bp. Overall.

10. I cannot attain the exact date of the death of John Overall, carrying Superintendency in his Surname, the Bishop of Norwich; first, Fellow of Trinity-Coll: then Master of Katherine-Hall, and King's Professour of Divinity in Cambridge. One of a strong brain to improve his great reading, and accounted one of the most Learned Controversial Divines of those daies.

A great abuse of the King's favour.

11. A grand Grievance was now much complained of, but little redressed: some great Courtiers there were, to whom the KING had passed His Grants to compound with Papists for their Recusancie. Some of these Grantees abused the KING's favour, and Compounded with such persons for light summes, even before their legall Conviction, whereby the Offenders in that kinde became the more backward to Conform themselves to the King's Lawes, His Majesty not aiming at their punishment, but reformation. And although this indirect course was flatly forbidden by His Royal Declaration, set forth 1610: yet was this corruption connived at, and is conceived a main cause of the great and speedy increase of Popery. 1620. 18.

12. About

Ann. Reg. Jac. 14. Ann. Dom. 1621.

12. About this time, a ſad miſchange befell George Abbot Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in this manner, He was invited by the Lord Zouch to Bramſhill in Hampſhire to hunt and kill a Buck; The Keeper ran amongſt the Herd of Deer to bring them up to the fairer mark, whileſt the Archbiſhop ſitting on his Horſe back, let looſe a barbed-Arrow from a Crosbow, and unhappily hit the Keeper: He was ſhot through the Enmontery of the left Arm, and the Arrow dividing thoſe grand auxiliary veſſels, he died of the flux of blood immediatly. Nature having provided, that all the large Veſſels are defended externally by bones: He never ſpake after, as the perſon ſtill alive at Croydon, who brought off his body, informed me, and died not of the ill-dreſſing of the Wound, as ſome have printed it. This preſently put an end to the ſport of that day, and almoſt to the Archbiſhops mirth to the laſt of his life.

Archbiſhop caſually killed a Keeper.

13. The fame of this mans death, flew faſter than the Arrow that killed him: The Archbiſhops miſchance, in many men met not with ſo much pity, as ſo ſad a caſualty did deſerve: He was not much beloved by the inferiour Clergie, as over-rigid and auſtere: Indeed, he was mounted to command in the Church, before he ever learned to obey therein; Made a Shepherd of Shepherds, before he was a Shepherd of Sheep; Conſecrated Biſhop, before ever called to a Paſtoral Charge; which made, ſay ſome, him not to ſympathize with the neceſſities and infirmities of poor Miniſters. As for the ſuperiour Clergie, ſome for his irregularity and removal expected preferment, as the ſecond Boule is made firſt, and the third, ſecond, when that neereſt the mark, is violently removed.

The miſchance rigidly cenſured.

14. It is ſtrange to ſee, how ſuddainly many men ſtarted up Canoniſts and Caſuiſts in their diſcourſe, who formerly had ſmall skill in that profeſſion. In their ordinary talk they cited Councels and Synods: ſome had up S. Jerome's ſpeech, Venatorem nunquam legimus ſanctum: others were buſie with the Decree of the Councel of Orleance, (Gratian 49 B. diſtinct. 34.) Epiſcopo, Preſbytero, aut Diacono canes ad venandum, aut accipitres habere non licet*. Others diſtinguiſhed of a three-fold hunting: 1. Oppreſſiva. 2. Arenaria. 3. Saltuoſa. Theſe maintained, that the two former were utterly unlawfull, but the laſt might lawfully be uſed. Others diſtinguiſhed of Homicide: 1. Ex neceſſitate. 2. Ex voluntate. 3. Ex caſu. the caſe in hand. In a word, this accident divided all great companies into pro and con, for or againſt the Archbiſhops irregularity on this occaſion, yet all the force of their skill could not mount the guilt of this fact higher than the fountain thereof. When all was done it was but Caſual Homicide, who ſought not for the man, but God was pleaſed to bring the Man to his hand.

Many Canoniſts quickly made.

* Note that theſe Canons were never admitted Lawes in England.

15. Sir Henry Savill, the Archbiſhops old acquaintance as his contemporary in Oxon, repaired on his behalf to the Oracle of the Law, Sir Edward Coke, whom he found a bowling for his recreation. My Lord, ſaid he, I come to be ſatisfied of you in a point of Law. If it be a point of Common Law, (ſaid Sir Edward Coke) I am unworthy to be a Judge, if I cannot preſently ſatisfie you; but if it be a point of Statute Law, I am unworthy to be Judge, if I ſhould undertake to ſatisfie you before I have conſulted my Books. It is this, (ſaid Sir Henry) Whether may a Biſhop Hunt in a Park by the Laws of the Realm? I can preſently reſolve you, ſaid the Judge, He may hunt by the Lawes of the Realm by this very token, That there is an old Law, (let the young Students in that profeſſion finde it out) that a Biſhop, when dying, is to leave his pack of Dogs (called Muta canum*) to the Kings free uſe and diſpoſal.

Archbiſhops may hunt by the Laws of the Land.

* From the French meute de chiens.

16. The party, whom the Archbiſhop ſuſpected his greateſt Foe, proved his moſt firm and effectuall Friend, even Lancelot Andrewes Biſhop of Winchester: For when ſeveral Biſhops inveighed againſt the irregularity of the Archbiſhop, laying as much (if not more) guilt, on the act, than it would bear, He mildly checked them: Brethren (ſaid he) be not too buſie to condemn any for Uncanonicalls according to the ſtrictneſſe thereof, leſt we render our ſelves in the ſame condition. Beſides we all know, Canones, qui dicunt lapſos poſt actam pœnitentiam, ad clericatum non eſſe reſtituendos, de rigore loquuntur diſciplinæ, non injiciunt deſperationem indulgentiæ.

Bp. Andrewes the Archbiſhops great friend.

17. King

His restitution and mortification,

17. King James being Himself delighted in Hunting, was sorry any ill accident should betide the users thereof. But when He was assured, how deeply the Archbishop layed this casualty to his heart, He much pitied him, and said to a Lord, discoursing thereof, It might have been My chance or thine. So that not long after the Archbishop (who had lately retired himself to Guildford Almes-house of his own founding) returned to Lambeth, and to the performance of his Office, though some squeamish, and nice-conscienced Elects scrupled to be consecrated by him. He gave during his own life Twenty pounds a year to the Man's Widow, which was not long a Widow, as quickly re-maried. He kept a Monethly-Fast on a Tuesday, as the day whereon this casualty befell; in a word, this Keeper's death was the Archbishop's mortification. Ann. Dom. 1621. Ann. Regni Jacob.

A project against the Clergy to get money.

18. At this time the KING's Exchequer grew very low, though Lionel Cranfield Lord Treasurer, and Earl of Middlesex, neglected no means for the improving thereof. In order whereunto, (Reader, let this Story passe into thy belief, on my credit, knowing my selfe sufficiently assured thereof) a Projector, (such necessary evils then much countenanced) informed His MAJESTY of a way whereby speedily to advance much Treasure. And how forsooth was it? Even that a new Valuation should be made of all Spiritual preferments, (which now in the King's Books passed at Under-rates) to bring them up to, or near the full value thereof. This would promote both the casual fines (as I may term them) of First-fruits, and the Annual rent of Tenths, to the great advantage of the Crown. The KING sent to the Lord Treasurer demanding his judgment thereof.

Declined by the Lord Treasurer.

19. The Treasurer returned His MAJESTY an Answer to this effect, so near as I can remember from the mouth of a Noble person then present.: Sir, You have ever been beheld, as a great Lover and Advancer of Learned men, and You know Clergy-mens education is chargeable to them, or their friends: Long it is before they get any preferment, which at last, generally, is but small in proportion to their pains and expences. Let it not be said, that You gained by grinding them; other waies lesse obnoxious to just censure, will be found out, to furnish your occasions. The KING commended Cranfield, (as doing it only for triall) adding morever, I should have accounted thee a very knave, if encouraging Me herein: and so the project was blasted, for the present, as it was, when it budded again, propounded by some unworthy instrument in the Reign of King CHARLES.

Who is truly excused.

20. I know, some will suspect the Treasurer, more likely to start than crush so gainful a design, as who by all waies & means sought to encrease the royal Revenue. I know also, that some accuse him, as if making his Master's wings to molt, thereby the better to feather his own nest. Indeed, he raised a fair estate, and surely he will never be a good Steward for his Master, who is a bad one for himself. Yet on due and true enquiry it will appear, that though an High power did afterwards prosecute him, yet his innocence in the main preserved him to transmit a good estate to his posterity. So that much of truth must be allowed in his * Motto, PERDIDIT FIDES, he was lost at Court for his fidelity to K. JAMES, in sparing His Treasure, and not answering the expensiveness of a great Favourite.

* Frequent in his House at Copthall.

The L. Bacon outed for Bribery.

21. A Parliament was call'd, wherein Francis Bacon L^d^ Chancellor, was outed his Office for Bribery, the frequent receiving thereof by him, or his, was plainly proved. Yet for all his taking, just and unjust, he was exceedingly poor and much indebted. Wherefore, when motion was made in the House of Commons, of Fining him some thousand of pounds, a noble Member standing up, desired that for two Reasons his Fine might be mitigated into fourty shillings: First, because that would be payed, whereas a greater summe, would onely make a noise, and never be payed. Secondly, the shame would be the greater, when such his prodigality that he, who had been so large a taker in his Office, was reduced to such penury, that forty shillings should be conceived a sufficient Fine for his Estate. But it was fine enough for him to lose his Office, remitted to a mean and private condition. Jan. 20.

Sir Fr. B.

22. None

Ann. Reg. 19.

Ann. Dom. 1621.

22. None can character him to the life, ſave himſelf. He was in parts, more than a Man, who in any Liberal profeſſion, might be, whatſoever he would himſelf. A great Honourer of antient Authors, yet a great Deviſer and Practiſer of new waies in Learning. Privy Counſellor, as to King JAMES, ſo to Nature it ſelf, diving into many of her abſtruſe Myſteries. New concluſions he would dig out with mattocks of gold & ſilver, not caring what his experience coſt him, expending on the Trials of Nature, all and more than he got by the Trials at the Barre, Poſterity being the better for his, though he the worſe for his own, dear experiments. He and his Servants had all in common, the Men never wanting what their Maſter had, and thus what came flowing in unto him, was ſent flying away from him, who, in giving of rewards knew no bounds, but the bottome of his own purſe. Wherefore when King JAMES heard that he had given Ten pounds to an under-keeper, by whom He had ſent him a Buck, the KING ſaid merrily, I and He ſhall both die Beggars, which was condemnable Prodigality in a Subject. He lived many years after, and in his Books will ever ſurvive, in the reading whereof, modeſt Men commend him, in what they doe, condemn themſelves, in what they doe not underſtand, as believing the fault in their own eyes, and not in the object.

An Eſſay at his character.

23. All ſtood expecting who ſhould be Bacon's Succeſſour in the Chancery. Sure he muſt be ſome man of great and high abilities, (otherwiſe it would ſeem a valley next a mountain) to maintain a convenient and comely level in that eminent Place of Judicature. Now whilſt in common diſcourſe, ſome made this Judge, others that Sergeant Lord Chancellor, King JAMES made Dr. Williams, lately (and ſtill) Dean of Weſtminſter, ſoon after Biſhop of Lincolne.

July 10. Though the KING was the principal, the Duke of Buckingham was more than the inſtrumental advancer of him to the title of Lord Keeper, in effect the ſame in Place and Power with the Lord Chancellor.

Biſhop Williams made Lord Keeper.

24. The KING's choice produced not ſo much diſlike as general wonder. Yet ſome cavilled at Doctor Williams his Age, as if it were prepoſterous for one, to be able for that Office before antient, and as if one old enough for a Biſhop, were too young for a Chancellor. Others queſtioned his abilities, for the Place. Could any expect to reap Law, where it was never ſown? who can apply the remedy whilſt he is ignorant in the malady? Being never bred to know the true grounds and reaſons of the Common Law, how could he mitigate the rigour thereof in difficult caſes? He would be prone to miſtake the ſeverity of the Common Law for cruelty, and then unequal equity, and unconſcionable conſcience muſt be expected from him. Beſides the Place was proper not for the plain but guarded Gown, and the Common Lawyers preſcribed for ſix * Deſcents (a ſtrong Title indeed) wherein onely Men of their Robe were advanced thereunto.

Some cauſleſly offended.

* Yet Sir Ch. Hatton was never bred a Lawyer.

25. Yet ſome of theſe altered their judgments, when conſidering his education, who for many years had been Houſe-Chaplain (yea, and more than Chaplain, intimate Friend-ſervant) to the old Lord Edgerton, who underſtood the Chancellor-Craft as well as any who ever ſat in that Place; and who, whilſt living, imparted many Myſteries of that Court; when dying, bequeathed many choice Books and directions unto him. His parts were eminent, who could make any thing he read or heard his own, and could improve any thing which was his own to the utmoſt. Beſides, for a Clergy-man to be Lord Chancellor was no uſurpation, but a recovery, ſeeing Eccleſiaſticks antiently were preferred to that Place, and Sir Nicholas Bacon, (Father to the laſt Chancellor) received the Broad Seale from a Church-man, viz: Nicholas Heath, Archbiſhop of York.

His eminent abilities.

26. Conſidering all diſadvantages, he managed the Office to admiration. I know it is reported by his adverſaries to his diſcredit, That never L. Keeper made ſo many Orders, wch afterwards were reverſed, wch whether true or no, I know not. Sure it is that unpartial men of the beſt & cleareſt judgments highly commended him, and J. Telverton himſelf hearing him in a caſe of concernment, ingenuouſly profeſt, This is a moſt admirable Man. Here he ſat in the Office, ſo long, till diſdaining to be a De-

Well manage the place.

pendent (as a Pent-house) on the Duke's favour, and desiring to stand an absolute structure on his own foundation, at Court; he fell, as God willing shall in due time be related.

A still-born Convocation.

27. Should we now look into the Convocation, we should finde them on Wednesdaies and Fridaies devoutly at the Lesany, otherwise having little imployment, as impowered by no Commission to alter any thing. So that sitting amongst the Tombs in Westminster Church, they were (as once one of their Prolocutors said) Viva cadavera inter mortuos, as having no motion or activity allowed unto them.

Young Meric Casaubon vindicates his Father from railers.

28. About this time Meric Casaubon set forth a Book in defence of his deceased Father, against whom many had spit their venome. First, Heribert Rosweid, a Jesuite; and after him Andrew Schoppius, a renowned railer; one that is alwaies incensed against Learning, and Honesty, wheresoever he findes them severally, but implacable against such a man in whom both meet together. It seems it is his policie thus to seek to perpetuate his memory, by railing against eminent persons; hoping, that he shall jointly survive with their worth, whereas their light shall burn bright, when his snuffe shall be trodden under foot. Then Julius Cesar Bullinger, and Andrew Eudemono Joannes, a vizard-name, composed to fright fools, and make wise men laugh at it. Yea, though he had formerly met with a quaternion of learned Confuters, Bishop Abbot, Doctor Prideaux, Doctor Collins, Master Burrhill, young Casaubon, then Student in Christ-Church, thought it his duty farther to assert his Fathers memory, and to give a brief account of his life, and conversation.

The good effect of his endeavours.

29. This is the benefit of Learned mens marriage, God oftentimes so blessing it, that they need not go out of themselves, for a champion to defend them, but have one springing from their own bowels. And his Son, though by reason of his age low in himself, is tall when standing on the advantage-ground of his Fathers grave, whose memory he is to maintain. Yea, God seems so well pleased with his piety, that his endevours took such effect, that no railing Libels to that purpose came forth afterwards, which formerly had been so frequent. Whether because these curres, weary of their own barking, did even sneak away in silence; or because they had no more minde to challenge, seeing a Defendant provided to undertake them.

William Laud Bp. of S. Davids.

30. Upon the removal of Richard Milborne to Carlile, William Laud, President of S. John's Colledge in Oxford, was made Bishop of S. Davids. Of whom, because every one speaks so much, I will * say the lesse. The rather, because at this time, and during the extent of our History, this Bishop lived in a private way, bare no great stream, as being before that the tide of greatnesse flowed in upon him. Yea, as yet he took more notice of the world, than the world did of him. Indeed, as the matter, whereof China-dishes are made, must lie some Ages in the earth before it is ripened to perfection: so great persons are not fit for an Historian's use to write freely of them, till some years after their decease, when their memories can neither be marred with envy, nor mended with flattery. However his good deeds to S. John's Colledge in Oxford must not be forgotten; yea, that whole University (if afraid in English to speak in praise of his bounty) will adventure with safety to commend him in the Arabick tongue, whereof he founded them a Professour.

* When I wrote this, I intended to close my History at K. James his death, since by importunity urged to continue it farther.

John King Bp. of London dies.

31. This year was fatal to many eminent Clergy-men, beside others of inferiour note. We begin with John King, Bishop of London, formerly Dean of Christ-Church, who died on Good-Friday of the stone. Of antient extraction, in cujus Genere vel Indole nihil reperio mediocre, nihil quod non praeclarum, descended (saith the * Survay of London) from the Saxon Kings in Devonshire by his Father Philip Ring, sometimes Page to King HENRY the VIII, Nephew and Heire to Robert King last Abbot of Osney, and first Bishop of Oxford, who left him a great personal Estate, which it seems was quickly consumed, so that this Prelate used to say, He believed there was a Fate in Abbey-Money no lesse than Abbey-Land,

* pag. 771.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 19 Ann. Dom. 1621.

Land, which ſeldome proved Fortunate or of Continuance to the Owners.

32. He was Chaplain to Queen ELIZABETH, and as he was appointed by Her Councel to preach the firſt Sermon at Court when Her Body lay Inhearſed in the Chappel of White-Hall, ſo was he deſigned for the firſt Sermon to Her Succeſſour King JAMES at Charter-Houſe when He entred London, then ſworn his firſt Chaplain; Who commonly called him [the King of Preachers.] And Sir Edward Coke would ſay of him, He was the beſt Speaker in Starre-Chamber in his time. Soon after he was made Dean of Chriſt-Church, Oxon; and choſen one of the four Preachers in the Conference at Hampton-Court. Then advanced to the Biſhoprick of London: Where he let the world ſee his high Place of Government, did not cauſe him to forget his Office in the Pulpit; ſhewing by his example, That a Biſhop might Govern and Preach too. In which ſervice he was ſo frequent, that unleſſe hindred by want of health, he omitted no Sunday whereon he did not viſit ſome Pulpit in London, or neer it. His eminencies.

33. The Papiſts raiſed an aſperſion, as falſe, as foule, upon him; That, at his death he was reconciled to the Church of Rome, ſufficiently confuted by thoſe eye- and ear-witneſſes, preſent at his pious departure. Theſe ſlanders are no news to ſuch as have read, how Luther is traduced by Popiſh pennes, to have died blaſpheming. Caraloſtadius to have been carried quick by a Devil. And Beza to have apoſtated before his death. In all which, truth hath triumphed over their malicious forgeries. Something, Bp. King endevoured in the repairing of S. Paul's; but alas! a private mans eſtate may be inviſibly buried under the rubbiſh of the leaſt Chappel therein. By order in his Will he provided, that nothing ſhould be written on his plain Grave-ſtone, ſave only RESURGAM: and ſtill he is alive, both in his memory, and happy poſterity. George Mountaine, Biſhop of Lincoln, ſucceeded him in his See; who, when his great Houſe-keeping, and magnificent entertaining of King JAMES, ſhall be forgotten, will longer ſurvive for his bountiful benefaction to Queens-Coll: in Cambridge, whereof he was Fellow and Proctor. A loud Lie.

34. Secondly, William Cotton, Biſhop of Exeter, born in Cheſhire, formerly Archdeacon of Lewes: one of a ſtout ſpirit, and a great maintainer of Conformity againſt the oppoſers thereof in his Dioceſſe: Valentine Carew, Dean of S. Paul's, and Maſter of Chriſt-Colledge in Cambridge, of a courtlike carriage, and ſtout ſpirit, ſucceeded him in Exeter, which place can give the beſt account of his behaviour therein. Born at Thame in Oxford-ſhire.

35. Thirdly, Robert Townſon, born in Cambridge, Fellow of Queens-Colledge, Dean of Weſtminſter, of a comely carriage, courteous nature, an excelllent Preacher: He left his Wife and many Children, neither plentifully provided for, nor deſtitute of maintenance, which rather haſtened than cauſed the advancement of John Davenant, his Brother-in-law, to ſucceed him in the Biſhoprick of Sariſbury. Wil. Cotton Bp. of Exeter dies, whom Valentine Carew ſucceeds.

36. Therein alſo expired Andrew Willet, Doctor of Divinity, (God-ſon to Andrew Pearne, Dean of Elie, where he was born) brought up in Chriſt-Colledge in Cambridge, who ended his pious life, being much bruiſed with a fall from his horſe. A man of no little judgment, and greater induſtry, not unhappy in Controverſies, but more happy in Comments, and one that had a large ſoul in a narrow eſtate. For, his charge being great (may his Children remember and practice their Father's precepts) and means ſmall, as more proportioned to his deſires, than deſerts; he was bountifull above his ability, and doubled what he gave by cheerful giving it. He was buried in his Pariſh at Barlie in Hertford ſhire. Happy Village! which loſt ſuch a Light, and yet was not left in darkneſſe, onely exchanging bleſſings, Reverend Doctor Brounrigge ſucceeding him. Robert Townſon Biſhop of Saliſbury dies, whom John Davenant ſucceeds. The death of Dr. Andr. Willet.

37. Nor muſt we forget Richard Parry, Doctor of Divinity, Biſhop of Aſaph, who this year exchanged this life for a better. He was firſt bred in Chriſt-Church in Oxford, where he made plentiful proceeding in Learning, and Religion, and thence was advanced to the Deanrie of Bangor, on whom Biſhop Godwin beſtows this (call it complement, or) character: * Cui eruditione, cæteriſq; Epiſcopalibus virtutibus And of Dr. Richard Parry.

* Godwin in Epiſcopis Aſaphenſibus.

virtutibus utinam egemet tam illi essem æqualis, quàm ille mihi ætate, studiorúmq; Academicorum tempore, locóque.

Ann. Dom. 1612. Ann. Reg. Jac. 9.

The death of Mr. Fr. Mason.

38. We conclude this year with the death of Master Francis Mason, to whose worthy Book, De Ministerio Anglicano, we have been so much beholding. Nor will it be amisse to insert his Epitaph:

Prima Deo cui cura fuit sacrare labores,
Cui studium Sacris invigilare Libris;
Ecce sub hôc tandem requievit marmore MASON,
Expectans Dominum spéq; fidéq; suum.

He was born in the Bishoprick of Duresme, brought up in the University of Oxford, Bachelour of Divinity, Fellow of Merton-Colledge, Chaplain to King JAMES, Rectour of Orforde in Suffolke, where he lies buried, and where he built the Parsonage-House. He had three Children by his loving Wife Elizabeth, who erected a fair Monument to his Memory.

SECTION

Ann. Reg. Ann. Dom.

SECTION VI.

TO SAMUEL MICO OF LONDON, Alderman.

YOu have not ſpent, but laid out much time in ITALY, to the great improvement of your judgment and eſtate: How cunning Chapmen thoſe Countrey-men are in buying and ſelling, is not to you unknown; but this Section preſents you with an Italian Cardinal, a moſt crafty broker in matters of Religion, till at laſt he deceived himſelf. Peruſe it I pray, and if the reading thereof can add nothing to your knowledge, the writing of it may ſerve as my acknowledgment of your favours received.

Jam. 20. 1622. LAtely * we made mention of the coming over of Marcus Antonius de Dominis the Archbiſhop of Spalato into England, and now ſhall proſecute that ſubject at large. For, this year began happily, becauſe with the end of that arrant Apoſtata in this Land, and his fair riddance out of the limits thereof. He had 14 years been Archbiſhop of Spalato in Dalmatia, under the State of Venice, and ſome five years ſince, to wit, 1616, came over into England. Conſcience in ſhew, and Covetouſneſs in deed, cauſed his coming hither. He pretended to have diſcovered innumerable [a] Novelties, and pernicious Errors in the Court of Rome, injuriouſly engroſſing the right and honour of the Univerſal Church. He complained, many Points were obtruded on mens Conſciences, as Articles of Faith, which CHRIST in the Scripture never inſtituted. He accounted the Romiſh Church, myſtical [b] Babylon, and Sodome; and the Pope, Nimrod, a Tyrant, Schiſmatick, Heretick, yea, even [c] Antichriſt himſelf. But that which ſharpned his pen

The cauſes of Spalato's coming over.

* Vide ſupra, pag. 71. ſect. 45.

a In his Book called Conſilium Profectionis, pag. 15, 16, 17.

b Ibid. pag. 34.

c Ibid. pag. 76.

against the Pope, was a particular grudge against Pope Paul, who had ordered him to pay a yearly Penſion of Five hundred crownes, out of his Biſhoprick, to one Andrentius, a Suffragan Biſhop; which this Archbp. refuſed to doe, complaining, it was unjuſt, and impoſed without his knowledge and conſent. The matter is brought to the Rota, or Court of Rome, where the wheel went on the wrong ſide for our Spalato, who, angry that he was caſt in his Cauſe, poſts out of Italy, through Germany, into the Low-Countreys. Here he ſtayed a while, and tampered for preferment, till finding the roof of their Church too low for his lofty thoughts, and their Presbyterian Government uncomplying with his Archiepiſcopal ſpirit, he left the Netherlands, and came over into England. Ann. Dom. 1621. Ann. Reg. Jac. 19

His bountiful entertainment.

2. It is almoſt incredible, what flocking of people there was to behold this old Archbiſhop, now a new Convert; Prelates and Peers preſented him with Gifts of high valuation. Indeed, it is an humour of our Engliſh, ſtrangely to admire ſtrangers, believing inviſible Perfections in them, above thoſe of our Land. A quality commendable in our Countrey-men, whileſt inclining them to Hoſpitality, but ſometimes betraying their Credulity, to be thereby dangerouſly deluded. He was feaſted whereſoever he came, and the Univerſities (when he viſited them) addreſſed themſelves to him in their ſolemn reception, as if he himſelf alone had been an Univerſity.

He is richly preferred by K. James.

3. But above all, King JAMES (whoſe hands were ſeldome ſhut to any, and alwaies open to men of merit) was moſt munificent unto him, highly rejoicing, that Rome had loſt, and England got ſuch a Jewell. How many of Engliſh Youth were tolled out of our Univerſities into Italy, and there taught treaſon and hereſie together? This aged Prelate, of eminent parts, coming thence of his own accord, would make us plentiful reparation for the departure of many Novices. The KING conſigned him to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, for his preſent entertainment, till he might be accommodated to ſubſiſt of himſelf: and, as an earneſt of His bounty, ſent him to Lambeth, a fair baſon, and bolle of ſilver. Which Spalato received with this complement, Miſit mihi REX Magnæ Britanniæ polubrum argenteum ad abſtergendas ſordes Romanæ Eccleſiæ, & poculum argenteum ad imbibendam Evangelii puritatem, The KING of Great Britain hath ſent me a ſilver baſon, to waſh from me the filth of the Roman Church; and a ſilver cup to minde me to drink the purity of the Goſpel. Preferment is quickly found out, and conferred upon him: as, the Deanrie of Windſor (though founded, not in a Cathedral, but Collegiate Church) one of the gentileſt and entireſt Dignities of the Land; the Maſterſhip of the Hoſpital of the Savoy, with a good Parſonage at Weſt-Iſleſly in Berk-ſhire, being a Peculiar belonging to the Epiſcopal Juriſdiction of the Deane of Windſor. And, finding one precedent in his Predeceſſour, he collated this Parſonage on himſelf, and there made ſhift for ſo much Engliſh as ſufficed him to read the Nine and thirty Articles (as an * Auditour there preſent hath informed me) which formerly he had ſubſcribed. Thus had he two Houſes furniſhed above plenty, even unto magnificence, and might alternately exchange ſociety, for privacy, at pleaſure.

* Mr. Caſar Calendrine Miniſter of the Dutch Church.

His great avarice.

4. He improved the profit of his Places to the utmoſt, and had a deſigne to queſtion all his Predeceſſours Leaſes at the Savoy; and began to be very vexatious to his Tenants. Some of them repaired to Doctor King, Biſhop of London; who, at their requeſt, took Spalato to task, and, as gravely, as ſharply reproved him: that, being a Forreigner, he would fall out with Natives, endevouring to put others here out of their peaceable Poſſeſſions, who himſelf had fled hither for his own refuge. Eſpecially, having profeſſed in print, That he had depoſed all affection to, and guſt of earthly things; and, that he himſelf, being almoſt naked, did follow a naked Chriſt. Hereupon, at the reverend Biſhop's admonition, he let fall his former deſign. But, it was not the counſel of this King, but of a greater KING, which deterr'd him from his project, viz.: K. JAMES himſelf, to whom Spalato complain'd, That the Lands of the Savoy were let out for little Rents to the great loſs of his place, and poor therein (not that he cared for the poor, but bare d In præfat. lib. 1. De Repub. Eccl. num. 6. edit. Lond. pri. pag. 191.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 19 Ann. Dom. 1622.

bare the bag, and what was put into it) acquainting His MAJESTY with his intent, to rectifie those abuses, and call those Leases into question. To whom the KING in some choler, Extraneus, extraneus es, relinque res sicut eas inveniſti, You are a ſtranger, you are a ſtranger, leave things as you found them. And yet the same man would very passionately perswade others to bounty to the Poor, though he would give nothing himself, witnesse his earnest moving the Chapter of Windsor in this kind, to whom one of the Prebendaries answered, QUI SUA DET, SUA DET, Let him that perswades others, give something of his own.

5. I am also credibly informed from an excellent hand, of the truth of this story. Spalato had found a small flaw in a Lease of value, which a Gentlewoman of quality held of the Dean and Chapter of Windsor. To her house he comes with all his men, where she magnificently entertains him, as overjoyed, that her chief Land-Lord came so courteously to visit her. Spalato next morning, after his plentiful Supper, having setled himself in the Parlour, suddenly cries out, Abſcedite omnes, abſcedite; Be ye all gone, be ye gone: intending to take possession for himself. The Gentlewoman perceiving him at this posture, with her self and servants well favouredly thrust him out of her house, coming off with sufficient disgrace. Afterwards consulting the Learned in our Lawes about the Lease, they told him, That though possibly he might get the better of her in the Common-Law, yet the Chancery would relieve her, who so dearly had bought, so truly had paid for, and so peaceably had possessed her estate therein. Fie for shame! (saith Spalato) are your English Lawes so contrived, that, what is done by one Court, may be undone by another? This may suffice to evidence his avarice. Nor must it be forgotten, though he pretended at his coming over, that for conscience he freely left his Archbishoprick of Spalato, that in very deed he resigned the same to his Nephew, conditionally to pay him an annual Pension out of it; Sed magnus nebulo nil ſolvit, But the great knave payes me nothing, as he himself complained to my reverend friend the Archbishop of Armagh.

Another instance of his ungratefull covetousnes.

6. He falls now to perfect his Books. For, his Works were not now composed, but corrected; not compiled, but completed; as being, though of Engliſh birth, of Italian conception. For, formerly the Collections were made by him at Spalato, but he durst not make them publick for fear of the Inquiſition. His Works (being three fair Folio's, De Republicâ Eccleſiaſticâ) give ample testimony of his sufficiency. Indeed, he had a controversial head, with a strong and clear stile, nor doth an hair hang at the neb of his pen to blurre his writings with obscurity: but, first understanding himself, he could make others understand him. His writings are of great use for the Protestant cause. Many (saith the f Prophet) ſhall run to and fro, and knowledge ſhall be encreaſed. And surely the transcursion of Italians hither, added much to the discovery of the Papal abominations. Yet, allowing Spalato diligent in writing, his expression was a notorious hyperbole, when saying, In reading, meditation, and writing I am almoſt pined away; otherwise, his fat cheeks did confute his false tongue in that expression.

His learned Writings against Romish errour.

f Dan. 12. 4. g In lectione, meditatione, & ſcriptione pene marceſco. Reſp. Archiepiſ. Spal. Feb. 11. ad Artic. 3. 1622.

7. Amongst other of his ill qualities, he delighted in jeering, and would spare none who came in his way. One of his ſarcaſmes he unhappily bestowed on Count Gondomar, the Spaniſh Ambassador, telling him, That three turns at Tiburne was the onely way to cure his Fiſtula. The Don, highly offended hereat (pained for the present more with this flout, than his fiſtula) meditates revenge, and repairs to King JAMES. He told His MAJESTY, that His charity (an errour common in good Princes) abuſed His judgment, in conceiving Spalato a true convert, who ſtill in heart remained a Roman Catholick. Indeed, His Majeſty had a rare felicity in diſcovering the falſity of Witches, and forgery of such who pretended themselves poſſeſſed: but, under favour, was deluded with this mans falſe ſpirit, and, by His Majeſties leave, he would detect unto Him this his hypocriſie. The KING cheerfully embraced his motion, and left him to the liberty of his own undertakings.

The jeerer jeered.

8. The

Spalato his hypocrisie discovered.

8. The Ambassadour writeth to His Catholick Majesty; He to his Holinesse, Gregory the fifteenth, that Spalato might be pardoned, and preferred in the Church of Rome, which was easily obtained. Letters are sent from Rome tō Count Gondamar, written by the Cardinal Millin, to impart them to Spalato, informing him, that the POPE had forgiven, and forgotten all which he had done or written against the Catholick Religion; and, upon his return, would preferre him to the Bishoprick of Salerno in Naples, worth twelve thousand crowns by the year. A Cardinals Hat also should be bestowed upon him. And, if Spalato, with his hand subscribed to this Letter, would renounce and disclaim what formerly he had printed, an Apostolical Breve, with pardon, should solemnly be sent him to Bruxels. Spalato embraceth the motion, likes the pardon well, the preferment better, accepts both, recants his opinions largely, subscribes solemnly, and thanks his Holinesse affectionately for his favour. Gondamar carries his subscription to King JAMES, who is glad to behold the Hypocrite unmasked, appearing in his own colours; yet the discovery was concealed, and lay dormant some daies in the deck, which was in due time to be awakened.

Ann. Dom. 1622. Ann. Regn. Jac. 19

He is incensed with a repulse.

9. Now it happened a false rumour was spread, that Tobie Matthew, Archbishop of Yorke, (who died yearly in report) was certainly deceased. Presently posts Spalato to Theobalds; becomes an importunate Petitioner to the KING for the vacant Archbishoprick, and is as flatly denied; the KING conceiving, He had given enough already to him, if gratefull; too much, if ungratefull. Besides, the KING would never bestow an Episcopal charge in England, on a forraigner, no not on His own Countrey-men; some Scotish-men being preferred to Deanries, none to Bishopricks. Spalato, offended at this repulse (for he had rather had Yorke, than Salerno, as equal in wealth, higher in dignity, neerer in place) requests His MAJESTY by his Letter, to grant His good leave to depart the Kingdome, and to return into Italy; Pope Paul, his fierce foe, being now dead, and Gregory the fifteenth, his fast friend now seated in the Chair. The Copie of whose Letter we have here inserted:

To the high and mighty Prince, JAMES by the Grace of God King of Great Britaine, &c. Defender of the Faith, &c.

M. Anthonie de Dominis, Archbishop of Spalato, wisheth all happinesse.

THose two Popes which were most displeased at my leaving of Italy, and coming into England, Paulus Quintus, and he which now liveth Gregory the Fifteenth, have both laboured to call me back from hence, and used divers Messages for that purpose; to which notwithstanding I gave no heed. But now of late, when this same Pope (being certified of my Zeal in advancing, and furthering the union of all Christian Churches) did hereupon take new care, and endevour to invite me again unto him, and signified withall, that he did seek nothing therein but Gods glory, and to use my poor help also to work the inward peace and tranquillity of this Your Majesties Kingdome. Mine own conscience told me, that it behoved me to give ready eare unto his Holinesse. Besides all this, the diseases and inconveniences of old age growing upon me, and the sharpnesse of the cold aire of this Countrey, and the great want (I feel here amongst strangers) of some friends and kinsfolks, which might take more diligent and exact care of me, make my longer stay in this Climate very offensive to my body. Having therefore made an end of my Works, and enjoyed Your Majesties goodnesse, in bestowing on me all things needfull and fit for me; and in heaping so many, and so Royal benefits upon me; I can doe no lesse than promise perpetual memory and thankfulnesse, and tender to You my continuance in Your Majesties service wheresoever I goe, and will become in all places a reporter and extoller of Your Majesties

Ann. Reg. Jac. 19 Ann. Dom. 1621.

jesties praises. Now if my busines proceed, and be brought to a good end, I well hope that I shall obtain Your Majesties good leave to depart, without the least diminution of Your Majesties wonted favour towards me. I hear of Your Majesties late great danger, and congratulate with Your Majesty for Your singular deliverance from it by Gods great goodnes, who hath preserved You safe from it, as one most dear unto him, for the great good of his Church, I hope.

Farewell, the glory and ornament of Princes.

From the Savoy,
Jan. the 16. 1621.

Your Majesties ever most devoted Servant,

Ant. de Dominis, Archbishop of Spalato.

Jan. 16.

21. To this Letter no present Answer was returned; but five daies after, the Bishops of London, and Duresme, with the Dean of Westminster, by His MAJESTIES direction, repaired to this Archbishop, propounding unto him Sixteen Quares, all arising out of his former Letter, and requiring him to give the explanation of five most material under his hand, for His MAJESTIES greater satisfaction, which he did accordingly, yet not so clearly, but that it occasioned a second meeting, wherein more interrogatories were by command propounded unto him; which, with his Answers thereunto, because publickly printed, are purposely omitted: and, notwithstanding all obstructions, Spalato still continued his importunity to depart.

31.

Reasons pleaded for his return.

10. He pretended many Reasons for his return: First, Longing after his own Countrey. Who so iron-hearted as not to be drawn home, with the load-stone of his native Land? Secondly, To see his Friends, Kinred, Nephews, but especially his beloved Neice; a story hangs thereon, and it is strange, what was but whispered in Italy, was heard over so plain into England. In the Hebrew Tongue Nephews, and Nieces, are called Sons, and Daughters; but the Italian Clergie, on the contrary often term their Sons, and Daughters, Nephews, and Nieces. Thirdly, The late-pretended-discovery of many errors in our English Church (how quick-sighted did the promised Bishoprick make him?) whereof formerly he took no notice, and all which are learnedly answered in the posthume book of Doctor Crakenthorpe, carefully set forth by Dr. Barkham, after the Authors death, and may all orphan-works have the happinesse of so faithfull a Guardian. Lastly, and chiefly (as he confesseth himself) allectus pristino octuplicis stipendii, allured with the reward of a salarie eight times as great, as his revenues in England. In which computation, as he ungratefully depresseth the value of what he had in hand: so he undiscreetly advanced the worth of what in hope he promised himself: not to speak of the difference of Italian Ducates, when told out, and when told off at so great a distance.

Spalato's second Letter to King James.

11. In pursuance of which his desire, he wrote a second Letter to K. JAMES: the tenour whereof we thought fit here to insert for the better clearing of the matter:

Most excellent Prince, and most gracious Lord,

AS I signified lately unto Your Majesty in my former Letter, I neither ought, nor could neglect the Popes fair and gracious invitation of me; especially, when I saw that he dealt with me concerning the service of Christ, and his Church. And, being now at length better certified, that all things are in a readines for me, I am tied to my former promises. Yet I make it my humble request, that I may take my journey with Your Majesties good will. And for that purpose, I die now most humbly, and earnestly crave your leave by these Letters, which I would much more willingly have begg'd by word of mouth in Your presence (that I might have parted with

*, viz. That the King had employed Spalato to the Pope, to make a reconciliation betwixt us and Rome.

Your Majesty with all due thanks and submission) but that my accesse to Your Majesty might have confirmed the vain, and foolish * rumours of the people. I beseech Your Majesty therefore to vouchsafe to give me some Letters, whereby my departure may be made both safe, and creditable. As for the Ecclesiastical Titles and Revenues, which I hold by Your Majesties gift, I shall resigne them by publick Indentures. So from the bottom of my heart, I doe commit my self to Your Royall favour, and vow my self your servant for ever,

Ann Dom. 1621. Ann. Regn Jac. 19.

Your MAJESTIES, &c.

London:
From the Savoy, Feb. 3.

M. Ant. de Dom. Archbishop of Spalato. Feb. 3.

This Letter produced new Interrogatories, and severall fruitfull Controversies (one alwaies begetting another) but the last was a sharp one at Lambeth, March the 30, which cut off all future discourse. For, a Commission was issued out to the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Lincolne (Lord Keeper of the Great Seale of England) London, Duresme, Winchester, and severall other Privie Councellors, before whom Spalato personally appeared. When the Archbishop of Canterbury in the name of the rest, by His MAJESTIES speciall command, in a long Latine Speech, recapitulated the many misdemeanors of Spalato, principally insisting on his changing of Religion, as appeared by his purpose of returning to Rome: and that, contrary to the Laws of the Realm, he had held correspondency by Letters with the Pope, without the privity of the King's Majesty. To which Charge when Spalato had made, rather a shuffling Excuse, than a just Defence, the Archbishop in His Majestie's name commanded him to depart the Kingdome, at his own peril, within twenty daies, and never to return again. To this he promised obedience, protesting he would ever justifie the Church of England for orthodox in fundamentals, even in the presence of the Pope, or whomsoever, though with the losse of his life. 1622. Mar. 30.

Desires in vain still to stay:

12. However, loth to depart was his last tune. And no wonder, if well considering, whence, and whither he went. He left a Land where he lacked nothing, but a thankfull heart to God, and a contented soul in himself. He went to a place of promise, suspicious whether ever it should be performed. He feared (not without cause) he might lose his grey Head to fetch a red Hat. And an ominous instance was lately set before his eyes: One Fulgentius, a Minorite, had inveighed at Venice against the Pope, and was by his Nuncio trained to Rome, on promise of safe conduct: where, being favoured, and feasted at first, soon after in the field of Flora he was burnt to ashes. This made Spalato effectually, but secretly, to deal with his friends in the English Court, that His Majesty would permit him to stay. But in vain, and therefore within the time appointed, he went over in the same ship with Count Swartzenburgh, the Emperours Ambassadour, returning hence into Flanders.

Departeth to Rome.

13. And now Spalato is shipped. A good winde, and faire weather goe after him. His sails shall not be stuffed with a blast of my curses, conceiving, that his fault was sufficient punishment. But[b] others have compared him to the house i swept, and garnished, to which the Devil returned with seven spirits more wicked than himself. Which they thus reckon up, Avarice, Ambition, and Hypocrisie, whilst he stayed here; Apostasie, and Perjury, when going hence; Ingratitude, and Calumnie, when returned to Rome. Yea, they finde as many punishments lighting on him; God angry with him, the Devil tormenting him, his conscience corroding him, the world cursing him, the true Church disdaining him, Protestant pens confuting him, and the Pope, at last, in revenge executing him. And, now the Master hath had the just shame for his Apostasie, let the Man receive the due praise of his perseverance, one Gio Pietro Paravicino, a Grizon, who waited on Spalato in his chamber, whom neither frights nor flatteries could remove, but he died in Holland a firm professour of the Protestant Religion.

[b] Dr. Barlow in his Dedicatory Epistle to King James.

i Mat. 12. 44.

14. Being

Ann. Reg. Jac. 20 Ann. Dom. 1622.

14. Being come to Bruxels, he recants his Religion, and rails bitterly on the Engliſh Church: calling his coming hither an unhappy, irrational, peſtiferous, devilish voyage, to which he was moved with ſickneſs of ſoule, impatience, and a kinde of phrenſie of anger. Here he ſtayed ſix moneths for the Pope's Breve, which was long a coming, and at laſt was utterly denied him. Inſomuch that Spalato was fain to run the hazard, and deſperately adventure to Rome, having nothing in Scriptis for his ſecurity, but barely preſuming on promiſes, and the friendſhip of Gregory the fifteenth, now Pope; formerly his Collegue, and chamber-fellow.

Returns to his railing vomit.

k In his Book, call'd, Concilium Reditus, pag. 9.

l Ibid. pag. 5.

15. I finde not his promiſed Biſhoprick conferred upon him; who as well might have been made Primate, and Metropolitane of Terra incognita. Yea, returning to Sodome (though not turned into a pillar of ſalt) he became unſavoury ſalt, cared for of no ſide. Such a crooked-ſtick, which had bowed all waies, was adjudged unfit to make a beam, or rafter, either in Popiſh, or Proteſtant Church. And now, what would not make timber to build, muſt make fewel to burn, to which end he came at laſt. But for ſome years he lived at Rome, on a penſion which Pope Gregory aſſigned him out of his own revenues; untill there aroſe a new Pope, who never knew Spalato (with the leaſt knowledge of approbation) viz: Urban the eighth, brought in by the antifaction of the French. He finding his revenue charged with a penſion paid to his adverſary, (thrift is a floure even in the Triple Crown) prohibits the future iſſuing out of the ſame. His penſion being ſtopped, Spalato's mouth is open, and paſſionately diſcourſeth reputed hereſie in ſeverall companies.

Lives at Rome not loved, and dies unlamented.

16. There was reſiding at Rome, one Cardinal Cleſel, an High Germane, betwixt whom, and Spalato, formerly great familiarity, whilſt Cleſel was the Pope's Legate de Latere, with the Emperour at Vienna, where Spalato negotiated buſineſs for the State of Venice. This Cardinal expected Spalato's applications unto him, after he was returned to Rome, which he refuſed, being (belike) too high in the inſtep, or rather too ſtiffe in the knees to bow to beg a kindneſſe. Cleſel, perceiving his amity made contemptible, reſolved to make his enmity conſiderable: yet, diſſembling friendſhip for the better opportunity of revenge, he invites Spalato to ſupper; and, a train of diſcourſe being laid at a liberal meal, Spalato is as free in talking, as in eating; and lets fall this expreſſion, that (though divers had endevoured it) no Catholick had as yet anſwered his Books, De Republica Eccleſiaſtica; but adding moreover, That he himſelf was able to anſwer them. Preſently his perſon is clapt into priſon, his ſtudy ſeiſed on, wherein many papers were found ſpeaking hereſie enough, his Adverſaries being admitted ſole Interpreters thereof.

Cardinal Cleſel's neglected friendſhip deſtructive to Spalato.

17. As for his death, ſome moneths after, ſome ſay he was ſtifled, others ſtrangled, others ſtabb'd, others ſtarv'd, others poyſon'd, others ſmothered to death; but my intelligence from his own Kinred at Venice informs me, that he died a natural death: adding moreover, non ſine præveniente gratiâ, not without God's preventing grace; for, had his life been longer, his death had been more miſerable. Yea, they ſay, the Pope ſent four of his ſworn Phyſicians, to recognize his corps, who on their oath depoſed, that no impreſſion of violence was viſible thereon. However after his death, his excommunicated corps were put to publick ſhame, and ſolemnly proceeded againſt in the Inquiſition, for relapſing into hereſie ſince his return to Rome. His Kinred were ſummoned to appear for him, if they pleaſed, but durſt not plead for a dead man, for fear of infection of the like puniſhment on themſelves. Several Articles of hereſie are charged upon him, and he found convict thereof, is condemned to have his body burnt by the publick Executioner in the field of Flora, which was performed accordingly. Such honour have all Apoſtates.

Spalato's body burnt after his death.

18. We muſt not forget, that Spalato (I am confident I am not miſtaken therein) was the firſt, who, profeſſing himſelf a Proteſtant, uſed the word PURITANE, to ſignifie the defenders of matters doctrinal in the Engliſh Church. Formerly the word

The word Puritane how firſt abuſed by Spalato.

Ann. Dom. 1622. Ann. Regn. Ja. 18.

word was onely taken to denote such, as dissented from the Hierarchie in Discipline, and Church-Government, which now was extended to brand such as were Anti-Arminians in their judgments. As Spalato first abused the word in this sense: so we could wish he had carried it away with him in his return to Rome. Whereas now leaving the word behinde him in this extensive signification thereof, it hath since by others been improved to aspersе the most orthodox in doctrine, and religious in conversation.

His unpartial character.

19. He was of a comely personage, tall stature, gray beard, grave countenance, fair language, fluent expression, somewhat abdominous, and corpulent in his body. Of so imperious, and domineering spirit, that (as if the Tenant were the Land Lord) though a stranger, he offered to controll the Archbishop of Canterbury in his own house. An excellent Preacher (every first Sunday in the moneth to the Italian Nation at Mercers-Chappel) as his Sermon called Scopelos, or the Rocks, doth plentifully witnesse, wherein he demonstrates, That all the Errors of the Roman Church proceed from their pride and covetousnesse. And (under the Rose be it spoken) if the great ship of Rome split it self on these Rocks, Spalato his own pinnace made m shipwrack of the faith on the same, which were his bosome-sins. In a word, he had too much Wit, and Learning, to be a cordial Papist; and too little Honesty, and Religion, to be a sincere Protestant.

m 1 Tim. 1. 19.

Three other Italian Jugglers.

20. About the same time three other Italians made their escape into England. One, Antonio (as I take it, a Capuchian) who here married a Wife, and was beneficed in Essex. The other two, Benedictines, living, the one with the Archbishop of Canterbury; the other, with the Archbishop of Yorke. All these three were neither good dough, nor good bread, but like Ephraim, n a cake not turned, though they pretended to true conversion. The first of these, being kinne to Spinola the Low-Countrey-General, was by him (on what terms I know not) trained over, and reconciled to Rome. The other two (onely racking, no thorough-paced Protestants) watched their opportunity to run away. Yet let not this breed in us a jealousie of all Italian-Converts, seeing Vergerius, Peter Martyr, Emanuel Tremellius, &c. may reconcile us to a good opinion of them, and to believe, That God hath p a few names even in Sardis, where the Throne of the Beast is erected. And indeed Italian-Converts, like Origen, where they doe well, none better; where ill, none worse.

n Hos. 7. 8.

p Revel. 3. 4.

The Spanish Match the discourse general.

21. All mens mouthes were now fill'd with discourse of Prince CHARLES his match with Donna MARIA the Infanta of Spaine. The Protestants grieved thereat, fearing that this marriage would be the funeralls of their Religion: and their jealousies so descanted thereon, that they suspected, if taking effect, more water of Tiber, than Thames, would run under London-bridge. The Church-Catholicks grew insolent thereat, and such, who formerly had a Pope in their belly, shewed him now in their tongues, and faces, avouching their Religion, which they concealed before. Yet at last this Match (so probable) brake off, Heaven forbidding the Banns, even at the third, and last asking thereof.

Gondomar procures the inlargment of all Iesuits.

22. Count Gondomar was the active Instrument to advance this Match, who so carried himself in the twilight of jest-earnest, that with his jests he pleased His MAJESTY of England, and with his earnest he pleasured his Master of Spaine. Having found out the length of King JAMES's foot, he fitted Him with so easie a shooe, which pained Him not (no, not when He was troubled with the gout;) this cunning Don being able to please Him in His greatest passion. And although the Match was never effected, yet Gondomar, whilst negotiating the same, in favour to the Catholick cause, procured of His MAJESTY, the enlargment of all Priests and Jesuits through the English Dominions.

A malicious Comment on a mercifull Text.

23. The actions of Princes are subject to be censured, even of such people who reap the greatest benefit thereby, as here it came to passe. These Jesuits, when at liberty, did not gratefully ascribe their freedome to His MAJETIE's mercy, but onely to His willingnesse, to rid and clear His gaoles over-pestered with prisoners.

Ann. Reg. Jac. 20 Ann. Dom. 1622.

soners: As if His Majestie (if so minded) could not have made the gallows, the besome to sweep the gaole, and as easily have sent these prisoners from Newgate up westward by land, as over Southward by Sea. What moved King JAMES to this lenity at this time, I neither doe know, nor will enquire. Surely, such as sit at the stern, and hold the helm, can render a reason why they steer to this or that point of the compasse, though they give not to every mariner (much lesse passenger in the ship) an account thereof. I, being onely by my place Remigius, a rower, or minister in the vessel, content my self in silence with the will of the Master thereof. But let us exemplifie the Lord Keeper's Letter to this purpose:

To the Judges.

After my hearty commendations to you: His Majesty having resolved (out of deep Reasons of State, and in expectation of the like correspondence from forraign Princes, to the profession of our Religion) to grant some grace, and connivency to the imprisoned Papists of this Kingdome, hath commanded me to passe some Writs under the Broad Seal to this purpose: Requiring the Judges of every Circuit to enlarge the said Prisoners according to the tenour, and effect of the same. I am to give you to understand (from His Majesty) how His Majesties Royal pleasure is, that upon receipt of these Writs, you shall make no niceness or difficulty to extend that His Princely favour to all such Papists, as you shall finde Prisoners in the Gaols of your Circuits, for any Church-Recusancy whatsoever, or refusing the Oath of Supremacy, or dispersing Popish Books, or hearing, saying of Masse, or any other point of Recusancie, which doth touch, or concern Religion only, and not matters of State. And so I bid you farewell.

Your loving friend,

Westminster-Colledge,
August 2. 1622.

John Lincoln.

Now although one will easily believe many Priests and Jesuits were set at liberty, Yet surely that [p] Gentleman is no true accomptant, if affirming no fewer than four thousand to be set free at this time: Especially considering that [q] one, who undertakes to give in a perfect list of all the Jesuits in England (and is since conceived rather to aspersе some Protestants than conceal any Papists) cannot mount their number higher than two hundred twenty and five. To which, if such whom he detects for Popish Physicians, with all those whom he accuses for Popish Books, be cast in, they will not make up the tithe of four thousand.

p Mr. Pr.'s in loc.

q Fo. Gee in his Foot out of the snare.

24. However, most distastful was Gondomar's greatnesse to the English antient Nobility, who manifested the same, as occasion was offered, as by this one instance may appear: Henry Vere Earle of Oxford, chanced to meet with Count Gondomar at a great entertainment. The Don accosted him with high Complements, vowing, That amongst all the Nobility of England there was none he had tendred his service with more sincerity than to his Lordship, though hitherto such his unhappinesse, that his affections were not accepted according to his integrity who tendred them. It seems (replied the Earle of Oxford) that your Lordship had good leisure, when stooping in your thoughts to one so inconsiderable as my self, whose whole life hath afforded but two things memorable therein. It is your Lordships modesty (returned Gondomar) to undervalue your self, whilst we, the spectators of your Honours deserts, make a true and unpartiall estimate thereof, Hundreds of Memorables have met in your Lordships life: But, good my Lord, what are those Two signall things more conspicuous than all the rest? They are these two (said the Earl) I was Born in the Eighty Eight, and Christned on the Fift of November.

Bitter Complements betwixt Gondomar and the Earl of Oxford.

Dec. 21. 25. Henry Copinger, formerly Fellow of S. John's Coll: in Cambridge, Prebendary of Yorke, once Chaplain to Ambrose Earl of Warwick, (whose funeral Sermon he preached) made Master of Magdalene Colledge in Cambridge by Her MAJESTIES Mandate (though afterwards Resigning his Right at the

The death of Master Henry Copinger.

Ann. Dom. 1612 — Ann. Reg. Ja. 10

Queens (shall I call it?) request to prevent trouble; ended his religious life. He was the sixth Son of Henry Copinger of Bucks-Hall in Suffolke Esquire, by Agnes, Daughter of Sir Thomas Jermyn. His Father on his death-bed, asking him what course of life he would embrace? He answered, he intended to be a Divine. I like it well, (said the old Gentleman) otherwise what shall I say to Martin Luther when I shall see him in heaven, and he knows that GOD gave me eleven Sons, and I made not one of them a Minister? An expression proportionable enough to Luther's judgement, who maintained some houres before his death, That the Saints in heaven shall knowingly converse one with another.

r Pamelius de Illustribus Germaniæ in Vita Lutheri. p. 82.

26. Laneham Living fell void, which both deserved a good Minister, being a rich Parsonage, and needed one, it being more than suspicious that Dr. Reinolds, late Incumbent, (who ran away to Rome) had left some superstitious leaven behinde him. The Earl of Oxford, being Patrone, presents Mr. Copinger to it, but adding withall, That he would pay no Tithes of his Park, being almost half the land of the Parish. Copinger desired to resigne it again to his Lordship, rather than by such sinfull gratitude to betray the Rights of the Church. Well! if you be of that minde, then take the Tithes, (saith the Earl) I scorn that my Estate should swell with Church-goods. However, it afterwards cost Master Copinger Sixteen hundred pounds, in keeping his questioned, and recovering his detained rights, in suit with the Agent for the next [minor] E. of Oxford, and others: all which he left to his Churches quiet possession, being zealous in Gods cause, but remisse in his own.

A free Patrone, and faithfull Incumbent well met.

27. He lived forty and five years the painfull Parson of Laneham, in which Market-Town there were about nine hundred Communicants, amongst whom, all his time, no difference did arise which he did not compound. He had a bountiful hand & plentiful purse (his paternal inheritance by death of elder Brothers, and others transactions descending upon him) bequeathing Twenty pounds in money, and Ten pounds per annum to the Poor of the Parish, in the Chancell whereof he lyeth buried under a fair Monument, dying on S. Thomas his day, in the Threescore and twelfth year of his age.

His long and good life.

28. Papists now appearing very daring; a Conference, or Dispute (if you please) was entertained betwixt Doctor White, and Doctor Featley, Protestants; Father Fisher, and Father Sweete, Jesuits; on this occasion: Edward Buggs Esq. living in London, aged seventy, and a professed Protestant, was in his sickness seduced to the Romish Religion. But recovering, this Dispute was held at his request, in the house of Sir Humphrey Linde, a learned and religious Gentleman; about the Visibility of the Church, and the Tenents now maintained by the Protestants to have been before Luther. The printed Book hereof may satisfie the Reader, as this Conference did so satisfie Master Buggs, that renouncing his former wavering, he was confirmed in the Protestant-Truth.

A Conference with Jesuits. — Dec. 11.

29. Now hapned the sad Vespers, or dolfull Evening-song at Black Fryers in London: Father Drury a Jesuite of excellent Morals, and ingratiating Converse, (wanting nothing, saving the embracing of the truth, to make him valuable in himself, and acceptable to others) Preached in a great upper-Room in Black-Fryers, next to the house of the French-Ambassadour, where some Three hundred persons were assembled. His Text the 18 Chap. of S. Matthew, ver. 32. O thou ungracious servant! I forgave thee all the debt because thou desiredst me, shouldst not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant? &c. In application whereof, he fell upon a bitter invective against the Protestants.

The fatal Vespers at Black-Fryers. — Octob. 26.

30. His Sermon began to incline to the middle, the Day to the end thereof; when on the soddain the Flore fell down whereon they were assembled. It gave no charitable warning-groan before-hand, but cracks, brake, and fell, all in an instant. Many were killed, more bruised, all frighted; sad sight to behold the flesh and blood of different persons mingled together, and the brains of one on the head of another. One lackt a leg, another an arm; a third whole and intire wanted nothing but breath stifled in the ruines. Some Protestants coming meerly to see, were made to suffer, and bare the heavy burden of their own curiosity. 1623.

Death without giving any warning.

About

Ann. Reg. Jac. 11

Ann. Dom. 1613.

About Ninety five persons were slain out-right, amongst whom Mr. Drury, and Mr. Rodiat, Priests; with the Lady Webbe, were of the greatest quality. Nor must we forget, how when one comforted a Maid-childe about 10 years of age, Exhorting her to patience for her Mother and Sister. The Childe replied, That however it fared with them, this would be a great scandall to their Religion. A speech commendable in any, admirable in one of her age.

31. Yet marvellous was God's mercy in the preservation of some there present. One corner of the first Flore rather hung still than stood, (without any beams) by the relative strength from the side walls, and about Twenty persons upon it. These beheld that Tragedy wherein instantly they expected to act, and, which was the worst, their fall would not onely kill them, but by their weight they should be the unwilling slayers of others, which as yet laboured for life beneath them. It was put into their mindes with their knives (fright adding force unto them) to cut their passage out of a lome wall into the next chamber, whereby their lives were preserved. Of those that fell, one was kept alive (though imbraced by death on either side) a chair falling hollow upon her. Thus any arms are of proof, if Divine Providence be but pleased to put them on.

I will sing of mercy and justice.

32. Next day was Impannelled a Coroner's Inquest of substantial Citizens to inquire into the cause and manner of their death. These found it done neither by miracle nor malice, no plot or indirect practice appearing (as some no lesse falsly, than maliciously gave it out) the Roof standing, Side-wall sound, Foundation firm, onely the Flore broken by God's wisdome permitting it; and their own folly occasioning it. Nor could the Carpenter be justly accused for slight and unfaithfull building, making it substantiall enough for any private purpose, and none could foresee that they would bring a Church into a Chamber. Twenty of the poorer sort were buried hard by in one Grave, and the rest bestowed by their friends in severall places of Sepulture.

A fair and true verdict.

33. The sad death of these persons, the Object of Pity to all good and wise men, was the Subject of Envy to some, so fillily superstitious, as to repine at it, That they had not a share in this slaughter. On this accompt, because the Priest or Clerk after every Masse in the City of London, solemnly invited the people present with a loud voice to say, Three Pater noster's, and three Ave Maria's for the souls of such as died in Black-Friers. Particularly one Parker * who narrowly escaped the danger there, professed, That nothing grieved him more but that he had not been one of those that died by the aforesaid mischance. But see what hapned, this man going over to Doway to take Priestly Orders the week following, was drowned in his passage: Thus wild-wishes for death, prove sometimes such Guests as come home to the Inviters before they be welcome unto them.

Beware wilde-wishes.

* Fo. Ges in his Book called the Foot out of the snare.

34. This accident fell on Sunday, the 26 of October, which according to the new style observed beyond-sea (having the speed of ours by ten daies) fell upon their fifth of November: a day notoriously known in the Popish Calendar. Whereupon, Master Edward Benlowes, a Religious and Learned Gentleman, no small Promoter of my former and present Labours, thus expressed himself:

Quinta Novembris eat, Graias orsura Calendas;
Sit quocunq; Stilo, quinta Novembris eat.
Illa Dies Letho Britonum devoverat Aulam;
Letho Devotam sospitat illa dies.
Ista dies duxit Sacra ad Miseranda Misellos;
Adductos Sacris sustulit ista dies.
Lapsa repentè domus vos irâ atroce peremit,
Quêis fuit irâ atrox lapsa repentè Domus.

Drurie,

Ann. Dom. 1623. Ann. Reg. Jac.

Drurie, cum Cerebro conſpergis Pulpita vano,
Dum ſpargis Cerebri Phaſmata vana tui,
Trabe peremptus obis, qui Lignea vivus adoras,
Lignea vivus ades, Trabe peremptus obis;
Ligna, Lapiſq; manus in fœdera dantia, mactant
Hos, quibus in ſacra ſunt fœdera Ligna, Lapis
Quêis Crux cœca Deus (tenebroſa Magiſtra) colentes
In tenebras Cœcos cœca Magiſtra rapit.
Ah! erit Exemplum cui non hoc triſte timori,
Triſtis hic Exemplum triſte timoris erit.

Hæc (Romiſta cave) Domus unâ ut corruit horâ,
Unâ ſic horâ Roma, caveto, Ruet.

A Caveat to Rome.

I have nothing elſe to adde of this ſad diſaſter, ſave that the news thereof next Monday-morning, October the 27, was freſh in every mans mouth in His MAJESTIE's Chappell in White-Hall; at what time the 13 Chap. of S. Luke's Goſpel was read for the Leſſon appointed for the day by the Rubrick of the Church of England: Wherein neer the beginning, Or thoſe eighteen upon whom the Tower of Shilo fell and ſlew them, think ye that they were ſinners above all men that dwelt in Hieruſalem? I tell you nay: but except you repent, ye ſhall likewiſe periſh. 27.

SECTION

Ann. Regis Jac. I. Ann. Dom. 1623.

SECTION VII.

TO

THOMAS SHUGBOROUGH

OF

BYRDENBURY in WARWICK-Shire,

Esquire.

THemistocles was wont to say, That it was the best Musick for a Man to hear his own Commendation. Should I play a Lesson thereof unto your eares, (insisting on your Bounty to publick Books) sure I am, the Tune would be more chearfull to me, than gratefull to you, better pleased in deserving than hearing your own Encomium. I therefore will turn my praising of you, into praying for you, as more proportionable to my publick Profession, and acceptable to your modest Disposition.

* Plut. in his Life.

MAny Papists not truly humbled with this late sad accident, so demeaned themselves, that indeed most offensive was their insolence to all true Englishmen, the rather because it was generally reported, that His Majestie intended a Toleration of Religion, which made the Archbishop of Canterbury (though under a cloud for his disaster) to adventure humbly to present the King with his apprehensions, losing with some the reputation of a politick States-man, but preserving with others the character of an honest down right Protestant. Which Letter, though sent and delivered with all privacy, came by some (whether his friends or foes, uncertain) to be generally known, and afterwards publickly printed, as followeth.

The Archbishops Letter against a Toleration.

Ann. Dom. 1623. Ann. Regis Jac. 21.

May it please your Majestie,

I Have been too long silent, and am afraid, by my silence, I have neglected the duty of the place it hath pleased God to call me unto, and your Majestie to place me in. And now I humbly crave leave, I may discharge my conscience towards God, and my duty to your Majestie. And therefore I beseech your Majestie, give me leave freely to deliver my self, and then let your Majestie doe with me what You please. Your Majestie hath propounded a Toleration of Religion: I beseech you Sir, take into Your consideration, what the Act is, next what the Consequence may be. By your Act you labour to set up that most damnable, and heretical Doctrine of the Church of Rome, the Whore of Babylon. How hatefull will it be to God, and grievous unto Your good Subjects, the true Professours of the Gospel; that your Majestie, who hath often disputed, and learnedly written against those wicked Heresies, should now shew Your self a Patron of those Doctrines, which your Pen hath told the world, and Your conscience tells Your self, are superstitious, idolatrous, and detestable. Adde hereunto what You have done in sending the Prince into Spain, without the consent of your Councell, the privity and approbation of Your people. And though, Sir, you have a large interest in the Prince, as the Son of Your flesh, yet hath the People a greater, as the Son of the Kingdome, upon whom (next after your Majestie) their eyes are fixed, and welfare depends. And so tenderly is His going apprehended, as, believe it Sir, however His return may be safe, yet the Drawers of Him to that action, so dangerous to Himself, so desperate to the Kingdome, will not passe away unquestioned, and unpunished. Besides, this Toleration which You endeavour to set up by Proclamation, cannot be done without a Parliament, unlesse your Majestie will let your Subjects see, that you will take unto Your self a liberty to throw down the Laws of the Land at Your pleasure. What dreadfull consequence these things may draw after them, I beseech your Majestie to consider. And above all, lest by this Toleration, and discontinuance of the true profession of the Gospel, whereby God hath blessed us, and under which this Kingdome hath for many years flourished, your Majestie doe not draw upon the Kingdome in generall, and your Self in particular, Gods heavy wrath and indignation. Thus in discharge of my duty towards God, to your Majestie, and the place of my calling, I have taken humble boldnesse to deliver my conscience. And now, Sir, doe with me what you please.

Toleration the general table-talk argued.

2. What effect this Letter took, is unknown; sure it is, all mens mouths were filled with a discourse of a Toleration for, or against it. Some no professed Papists, but who lived at the signe of the Protestant, engage in their Arguments very earnestly in the defence thereof, whilst others were as zealous to prove a Toleration intolerable by Reasons drawn both from piety and policy. We will onely instance in few out of many as they were bandied on both sides, and chiefly such as concern Religion.

PRO.	CON.
1. Argument. The Papists of late were grown very peaceable, justly recovering the reputation of Loyall Subjects: in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, scarce escaped a year without a Treason from them; now they vied obedience with Protestants themselves. Pity it was but they should be encouraged, and their Loyalty fixed for ever, by granting them a Toleration.	1. Answer. Papists were not more peaceable, but more politick than formerly for private ends. Though their practise more plausible, their Positions and Principles were as pernicious as ever before, viz.: That Princes excommunicated may be deposed. No faith to be kept with Hereticks. That the Pope &c.
2. We see the same liberty allowed the	2. The case is different. This liberty was

Ann. Regis Jac. 21. Ann. Dom. 1623.

PRO.

the Hugonites in France, to whom the King permits their Churches, Miniſters, Service, Sermons, Sacraments, according to the direction of their own Conſcience.

3. The King of Spain would be highly affected with this favour allowed to the Engliſh Catholicks, and this would faſten him in firme friendſhip to the Engliſh Crown, to which his amity for the preſent was not onely uſefull, but neceſſary.

4. Truth will ever triumph over falſehood, and verity gain the victory of errour, the Proteſtaniſme (notwithſtanding the Toleration) would get ground on Popery by the demonſtration of the Spirit in the Scriptures.

5. The Apiſh and Mimicall Popiſh Pageant, with the toyes and trifles in their ſervice, would render their Religion ridiculous. No danger that any wiſe man ſhould ever be ſeduced thereby.

6. Proteſtant Miniſters would bee more painfull in preaching, and carefull in reſiding on their Cures, to keep them from infection.

7. The thing in effect was already allowed to Papiſts, who now (though privately) ſafely celebrated Maſſe in many places, which favourable connivance fell but little ſhort of a Toleration.

CON.

was not ſo much given to, as gotten by the Hugonites ſo numerous and puiſſant, it was conceived dangerous to deny them ſuch Priviledges. Thanks be to God not ſuch as yet the condition of Catholicks in England, whoſe Party was not ſo powerfull, but certain by ſuch a Toleration to be improved.

3. The neceſſity of his friendſhip at this time was onely fancied by ſuch as deſired it. Beſides, the King of heaven muſt not be offended, that the King of Spain may be pleaſed.

4. Though Truth it ſelfe be ſtronger than falſehood, yet generally the Promoters of falſehood are more active and ſedulous than the Advancers of Truth. Beſides, it is juſt with God upon the granting of ſuch an unlawfull Toleration to weaken the converting power of Truth, and ſtrengthen the perverting power of Falſehood, giving the Engliſh over to be deluded thereby.

5. The world hath ever conſiſted of more fools than wiſe people, ſuch who carry their judgment more in their eyes than in their brains; Popery being made luſcious to peoples ſenſes, too probably would court many to the imbracing thereof.

6. It is no policie to let in the Wolfe meerly on deſigne to make the Shepherds more watchfull: Rather on the contrary, Proteſtant Miniſters would be utterly diſheartned in the performance of their place when the Pariſhioners were countenanced to deſert them without any puniſhment.

7. If the Papiſts already have what they would have, let them be contented therewith. Why deſire they any more? but indeed there is a grand difference betwixt a States winking at their wickedneſſe for a time, and a formall and finall tolerating thereof. During the former, Catholicks ſin on their own account, and at their own peril, the Laws though not executed ſtanding in full force againſt them, but a publick Toleration of their Superſtition adopts the ſame to become the Act of the Engliſh Nation.

Here it would be tedious to recite the Texts of Scripture (ſome more, ſome leſſe proper

The Pulpit is loud againſt the Toleration.

Ann. Dom. 1623. Ann. Regis Jacob.

proper to the purpose) alledged by severall persons against the Toleration: some Typicall, Thou shalt not plow with an Oxe and an Asse. Some Historicall, Gods Children must not speak two tongues, Ashdod, and [b] Hebrew. Some Doctrinall, We must not doe evil that good may come thereof. The best was, the Toleration bare date with the Spanish Match, with which it was propounded, and agitated, advanced, expected, desired by some; opposed, suspected, detested by others; and at last both together finally frustrated, and defeated.

[a] Deut. 22. 10.
[b] Neh. 13. 24.
[c] Rom. 3. 8.

His Majesties care to regulate Preaching.

3. Now was His Majestie informed, that it was high time, to apply some cure to the Pulpits, as sick of a Sermon-surfeit, and other exorbitances. Some medled with State-matters, and generally (by an improper Transposition) the Peoples duty was preached to the King at Court, the Kings to the People in the Countrey. Many shallow Preachers handled the profound points of Predestination; wherein (pretending to guide their flocks) they lost themselves. Sermons were turned into Satyrs against Papists, or Non Conformists.

4. To represse the present, and prevent future mischiefs in this kinde, His Majestie issued out His Directions to be written fair in every Registers Office, whence any Preacher (if so pleased) might with his own hand, take out Copies gratis, paying nothing for [d] expedition. Herein, the King revived the primitive and profitable order of Catechizing in the afternoon (better observed in all other Reformed Churches than of late in England) according to the tenour ensuing:

[d] Gabala part. 2. pag. 191.

His Directions.

Most Reverend Father in God, right trusty and entirely beloved Counsellour, We greet you well.

Forasmuch as the abuses and extravagancies of Preachers in the Pulpit have been in all times represst in this Realm, by some Act of Councill, or State, with the advice and resolution of grave and learned Prelates: Insomuch, that the very licensing of Preachers, had beginning by an Order of Star-Chamber, the eighth day of July, in the 19th year of the Reign of King Henry the eighth, our Noble Predecessour: And whereas at this present, divers young Students, by reading of late Writers, and ungrounded Divines, doe breach many times unprofitable, unsound seditions, and dangerous Doctrines, to the scandall of the Church, and disquiet of the State, and present Government: We, upon humble representations unto Us of these inconveniencies by your selfe, and sundry other grave and reverend Prelates of this Church, as also, of our Princely care and Zeal for the extirpation of Schisme, and dissention growing from these seeds, and for the setling of a religious and peaceable Government, both in Church, and Common-wealth; doe by these Our speciall Letters, straitly charge and command you, to use all possible care, and diligence, that these Limitations and Cautions herewith sent unto you concerning Preachers, be duly and strictly from henceforth put in practice and observed by the severall Bishops within your Jurisdiction. And to this end Our pleasure is, that you send them forthwith Copies of these Directions to be by them speedily sent and communicated unto every Parson, Vicar, Curate, Lecturer, and Minister, in every Cathedrall, or Parish Church, within their severall Diocese, and that you earnestly require them to employ their utmost endeavours, in the performance of this so important a businesse, letting them know that We have a speciall eye unto their proceedings, and expect a strict account thereof, both of you, and every one of them: and these Our Letters shall be your sufficient Warrant and discharge in that behalf.

Given under our Signet at Our Castle of Windsor the 4th of August, in the twentieth year of Our Reign.

Directions

Ann. Regis Jac. 21. Ann. Dom. 1623.

Directions concerning Preachers sent with the Letter.

1. THat no Preacher under the degree and calling of a Bishop, or Dean of a Cathedral, or Collegiate Church (and they upon the Kings dayes, and set Festivals) doe take occasion (by the expounding of any Text of Scripture whatsoever to fall into any set Discourse or Common place, otherwise than by the opening the Coherence and Division of the Text, which shall not be comprehended and warranted in essence, substance, effect, or naturall inference, within some one of the Articles of Religion, set forth 1562. or in some of the Homilies set forth by authority of the Church of England, not onely for the help of the Non-Preaching, but withall for a Pattern and Boundary (as it were) for the Preaching Ministers. And for their further instructions for the performance hereof, that they forthwith reade over and peruse diligently the said Book of Articles, and the two Books of Homilies.

2. That no Parson, Vicar, Curate, or Lecturer, shall preach any Sermons or Collation hereafter upon Sundaies and Holidaies in the afternoon in any Cathedrall or Parish-Church throughout the Kingdome, but upon some part of the Catechisme, or some Text taken out of the Creed, ten Commandments, or the Lords Prayer, (Funeral Sermons onely excepted) and that those Preachers be most encouraged and approved of who spend the Afternoons exercise in the examination of Children in their Catechisme, which is the most antient and laudable custome of teaching in the Church of England.

3. That no Preacher of what title soever under the degree of a Bishop or Dean, at the least, doe from henceforth presume to preach in any popular Auditory deep points of Predestination, Election, Reprobation, or of the Universality, Efficacy, Resistibility, or Irresistibility of GODS grace, but leave those themes rather to be handled by the Learned men, and that moderately and modestly by way of Use and Application, rather than by way of Positive Doctrines, being fitter for the Schools than for simple Auditories.

4. That no Preacher of what title or denomination soever, from henceforth shall presume in any Auditory within this Kingdome, to declare, limit, or bound out, by way of Positive Doctrine in any Lecture, or Sermon, the Power, Prerogative, and Jurisdiction, Authority or Duty of Sovereign Princes, or otherwise meddle with matters of State, and the differences between Princes and the People, than as they are instructed, and precedented in the Homilies of Obedience, and the rest of the Homilies, and Articles of Religion, set forth, (as before is mentioned) by publique Authority: but rather confine themselves wholly to those two heads, of faith and good life, which are all the subjects of the antient Sermons, and Homilies.

5. That no Preacher of what title or denomination soever, shall presume causlesly, or (without invitation from the Text) to fall into bitter invectives and undecent railing speeches against the persons of either Papists, or Puritans; but modestly and gravely, when they are occasioned thereunto by the Text of Scripture, free both the Doctrine, and the Discipline of the Church of England, from the aspersions of either Adversaries, especially where the Auditory is suspected to be tainted with the one or the other infection.

6. Lastly, that the Archbishops and Bishops of the Kingdome (whom His Majestie hath good cause to blame for their former remisnes) be more wary and choice in their licensing of Preachers, and revoke all Grants made to any Chancellour, Official, or Commissary, to passe Licences in this kinde, and that all the Lecturers throughout the Kingdome of England (a new body severed from the antient Clergy, as being neither Parsons, Vicars, nor Curates) be licensed henceforward in the Court of Faculties, but onely, from a Recommendation of the party, from the Bishop of the Diocese under his hand and seale, with a Fiat from the L. Archbishop of Canterbury, a Confirmation under the Great Seal of England. And that such as doe transgresse any one of these Directions, be suspended by the Bishop of the Diocesse, or in his defaults by the Archbishop of the Province, ab Officio, & Beneficio, for a year and a day, untill his Majestie by the advice of the next Convocation, shall prescribe some further punishment.

Various censures on the Kings Letters.

5. No sooner were these the Kings Declarations dispersed into every Diocesse, but various were mens opinions thereof. Some counted it a cruell act, which cut off half the preaching in England (all afternoon-Sermons) at one blow. Others thought the King did but Uti jure suo, doing not onely what in justice He might, but what in prudence He ought in this juncture of time. But hear what I have heard and read in this case.

Objections.

1. Christ grants Ministers their Commission, Go teach all Nations. S. Paul corroborates the same, Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season. Man therefore ought not to forbid, what God enjoyns.

2. This is the way to starve soules by confining them to one meale a day: or, at the best by giving them onely a messe of milk for their supper, and so to bed.

3. Such as are licensed to make Sermons, may be intrusted to choose their own Texts, and not in the Afternoons to be restrained to the Lords Prayer, Creed, and ten Commandements.

4. In prohibiting the preaching of Predestination, man makes that the forbidden fruit, which God appointed for the tree of life: so cordial the comforts contained therein to a distressed conscience.

5. Bishops and Deans (forsooth) and none under their dignity, may preach of Predestination. What is this but to have the word of God in respect of persons? As if all discretion were confined to Cathedral men, and they best able to preach who use it the least.

6. Papists and Puritans in the Kings Letters are put into the same ballance, and Papists in the prime scale first named, as preferred in the Kings care, chiefly to secure them from Invectives in Sermons.

7. Lecturers are made such riddles in Answers.

1. Ministers, if commanded not at all to speak, or teach in the name of Jesus, are with the Apostles, to obey God rather than man. But vast the difference betwixt a total prohibition, and (as in this case) a prudential regulation of preaching.

2. Milk (catechetical Doctrine) is best for babes, which generally make up more than a moyety of every Congregation.

3. Such restraint hath liberty enough, seeing all things are clearly contained in, or justly reducible to these three, which are to be desired, believed, and performed.

4. Indeed Predestination, solidly and soberly handled, is an antidote against despair. But, as many ignorant Preachers ordered it, the cordial was turned into a poyson; and therefore such mysteries might well be forborn by mean Ministers in popular Congregations.

5. It must be presumed that such of necessity must be of age and experience, and may in civility be believed of more than ordinary learning, before they attained such preferment. Besides, Cathedrall Auditories being of a middle nature for understanding, (as beneath the University, so above common City and Country Congregations) are fitter for such high points to be preached therein.

6. The Kings Letter looks on both under the notion of guilty persons. Had Puritans been placed first, such as now take exception at their post-posing, would have collected, that the King esteemed them the greatest offenders.

7. Lectures are no creatures of the Church

Ann. Dom. 1623.

Objections. Answers.

in the Kings Letters, reduceable to no Ministerial function in England. Whereas indeed the flower of piety, and power of godlinesse flourished most in those places where such Preachers are most countenanced.

Church of England, by their original (like those mixed kinds, little better than monsters in nature, to which God, as here the State, never said, multiply and encrease) and therefore the King had just cause to behold them with jealous eyes, who generally supplanted the Incumbents of Livings in the affections of their Parishioners, and gave the greatest growth to Non-conformity.

These Instructions from His Majestie were not pressed with equall rigour in all places, seeing some over-active Officials, more busie than their Bishops, tied up Preachers in the Afternoon to the very letter of the Catechisme, questioning them if exceeding the questions and answers therein, as allowing them no liberty to dilate, and enlarge themselves thereupon.

A needlesse subject waved.

6. Expect not of me a particular account of the politick intricacies touching the Spanish Match, or no Match rather. First, because Spanish, and so alien from my subject. Secondly, because the passages thereof are so largely and publickly in print. Thirdly, because in fine it proved nothing, though kept on foot so long, till K. James, by endeavouring to gain a Daughter-in Law, had in effect, lost His own Daughter, Her Husband, and Children, being reduced to great extremities.

A Crown not joyed in.

7. Truly K. James never affected his Son in Law's acceptance of the Bohemian Crown, nor promised Himself any good successe thence, though great the hope of the German Protestants therein. Indeed, some of them were too credulous of a blinde Prophesie commonly currant amongst them,

POST TER VIGINTI, CESSABIT GLORIA QUINTI.

Expecting the ending of the Austrian Family, sixty years being now expired since the death of Charles the fift: but discreet persons slighted such vanities, and the Quinti had like to have proved the extirpation of Frederick, fift of that name, Palatine of Rhyne, had not God almost miraculously lately countermanded it.

K. James accused by some.

8. Yea, K. James privately foretold to some principal persons, that this matter would prove the ruine of his Daughter. There want not some who say, That he went about to vitiate his own Prediction, by not sending seasonable succours for their assistance, who, had He turned His Embassies into Armies, might probably have prevented much Protestant misery.

Defended by others.

9. Others excuse K. James, partly from the just hopes He had to accommodate all interests in a peaceable way; partly from the difficulty of conveying effectual forces into so farre distant a Countrey.

Both the Palatinates lost.

10. Mean time both the Palatinates were lost, the Upper seized on by the Emperour, the Nether (but higher in value) by the King of Spaine, the City of Heidelberg taken and plunder'd, and the inestimable Library of Books therein carried over the Alpes on Mules backs to Rome. Each Mule laded with that learned burthen, had a silver plate on his forehead, wherein was engraven, FERO BIBLIOTHECAM PRINCIPIS PALATINI. Now those Books are placed in the Pope's Vatican, entituling Protestants to visit the place, who one day may have as good successe, as now they have just right to recover them.

Land of Promise, Now Land of Performance.

The nether Palatinate.*

11. As for the Palatinate, Satyricall tongues commonly called it the Land of Promise, so frequently and so solemnly was the restitution thereof promised to King James, fed only with delayes, which amounted to mannerly denials. Since it hath pleased God to turn this Land of Promise into a Land of Performance*, the present Palatine being peaceably possessed thereof.

Prince Charles goes to Spain.

12. Prince Charles, with the Duke of Buckingham, lately went privately through France, where He saw the Lady, (whom afterwards He married) into Spain. It is questionable, whether then more blamed K. James for sending him, or afterwards blessed God for his safe return. Sumptuous his entertainment in the Spanish Court, where where it was not the Kings faults, but Kingdomes defect that any thing was wanting. He quickly discovered (the coarsness of fine pretending wares at distance are easily confuted neer hand) that the Spanish State had no minde or meaning of a Match, as who demanded such unreasonable Liberty in education of the Royall Off-spring (in case any were born betwixt them) and other Priviledges for English Papists, that the King neither could nor would in honour or conscience consent thereunto. However, Prince Charles (whose person was in their power) took his fair farewell with courteous compliance.

Ann. Dom. 1623. Ann. Regn Jacob.

His return. * The Reader is requested to pardon our short setting back of time.

12. Though He entred Spain like a private person, He departed it like Himself, and the Son of his Father, a stately Fleet attending Him home. Foul weather forced them to put in at the Isle of Sullie, (the parings of England, South-west of Cornwall) where in two daies they fed on more, and better fleth than they found in Spain for many moneths. Soon after He arrived at Portesmouth, and the next day came to London, to the great rejoicing of all sorts of people, signified by their bonefires, ringing of bells, with other externall expressions of joy.

*Sept. 12.

Octob. 5. 6.

The Palatinate beheld desperate.

13. King James now despaired of any restitution, especially since the Duke of Bavaria was invested in the upper Palatinate, and so His Son-in-Laws Land cantoned betwixt a Duke, a King, and an Emperour. Whose joynt consent, being requisite to the restoring thereof, One would be sure to dissent from the seeming-consenting of other two. Whereupon, King James not onely broke off all treaty with Spaine, but also called the great Councill of his Kingdome together.

An happy Parliament.

14. Indeed, the Malecontents in England used to say, That the King took Physick, and called Parliaments both alike, using both for meer need, and not caring for either how little time they lasted. But now there hapned as sweet a compliance betwixt the King and his Subjects, as ever happen'd in mans memory, the King not asking more than what was granted. Both Houses in the Name of the whole Kingdome, promising their assistance with their lives and fortunes for the recovery of the Palatinate. A smart Petition was presented against the Papists, and order promised for the education of their Children in true Religion.

The Convocation.

15. As for the Convocation contemporary with this Parliament, large Subsidies were granted by the Clergie, otherwise no great matter of moment passed therein. I am informed Doctor Joseph Hall preached the Latine Sermon, and Doctor Donne was the Prolocutor.

Doctor Donns Prolocutor.

16. This is that Doctor Donne, born in London, (but extracted from Wales) by his Mother side, great-great Grandchilde to Sir Thomas More, whom he much resembled in his endowments; a great Traveller, first, Secretary to the Lord Egerton, and after by the perswasion of K. James, (and encouragement of Bishop Morton) entred into Orders, made Doctor of Divinity (of Trinity Colledge in Cambridge) and Dean of S. Pauls, whose Life is no lesse truly, than elegantly written by my worthily respected friend Mr. Isaac Walton, whence the Reader may store himself with further information.

A Book falsly fathered on I. Casaubon.

17. A Book was translated out of the French Copie, by Abraham Darcye, intituled, [The Originall of Idolatry:] pretended made by Dr. Isaac Casaubon, dead ten years before, dedicated to Prince Charles, but presented to King James, and all the Lords of the Councill. A Book printed in French before the said Isaac Casaubon was born, whose name was fraudulently inserted in the Title-page of the foregoing Copie.

The falshood detected.

18. Merick Casaubon his Son then Student of Christs-Church, by Letter informed King James of the wrong done to his Father, by making him the Authour of such a Book; contrary to his Genius and constant profession, being full of impertinent allegations, out of obscure and late Authors, whom his Father never thought worthy the reading, much lesse the using their Authority. His Majestie was much incensed hereat, and Doctor Mountaine Bishop of London had much adoe to make his Chaplains peace for licensing thereof, the Printer and Translator being for some time kept in Prison.

Yet still continued.

19. Yet after all this, and after Merick Casaubon had written a Latine Vindication

Ann. Regis 22. Ann. Dom. 1624.

cation to give satisfaction to all, the same Translation since is printed in Amsterdam, with a Justificatory Preface of the former Edition. So impudent are some, falsly to father Books on worthy Authors, to make them more vendible for their own profit, though it discredit the memory of others.

20. The businesse of the Palatinate being now debated by Martialists, the Kings Councill of Warre, disswading from regaining it in kinde, advised Him rather to recover it in value where he could with the best conveniency out of the Spanish Dominions: For, the Palatinate was not worth the rewinning, which (grant recover'd by the English) could not recover it self for many years, such the havock and waste made therein. Secondly, it was hard to be gotten, such the distance thereof; and harder to be kept, so ill-neighboured it was on all sides. So that the King if so pleased, might with as much honour, and more ease, carve out his own reparations nearer home. None of the worst counsel.

21. During these Agitations, K. James fell sick at Theobalds of a tertian Ague, commonly called in Spring; for a King rather Physicall than dangerous. But soon after his Ague was heighten'd into a Fever; four mischiefs meeting therein. King James falleth sick.

22. First, the malignity of the Malady in it self, hard to be cured. Secondly, an aged Person, of sixty years current. Thirdly, a pletborick Body, full of ill humours. Fourthly, the Kings aversnes to Physick, and impatience under it. Yet the last was quickly removed, above expectation, The King (contrary to His custome) being very orderable in all His sickness. Such sudden alterations, some apprehend, a certain prognostick of death, as if when mens mindes acquire new qualities, they begin to habit and cloath themselves for a new world. A confluence of four mischiefs.

23. The Countesse of Buckingham contracted much suspition to her selfe, and her Son, for applying a plaster to the Kings wrists, without the consent of His Physicians. And yet it plainly appeared, that Dr. John Remington of Dunmow in Essex, made the same plaster: (one honest, able, and successful in his practice, who had cured many Patients by the same,) a piece whereof applied to the King, one eat down into His belly, without the least hurt or disturbance of nature. However, after the applying thereof, the King grew worse. A plaster applied to His wrists.

24. The Physicians refused to administer physick unto Him till the plasters were taken off, which being done accordingly, His fift, sixt, and seventh fits were easier (as Dr. Chambers said.) On the Monday after, the plasters were laid on again without the advice of the Physicians, and His Majestie grew worse and worse. so that Mr. Hayes (the Kings Chirurgeon) was called out of his bed to take off the plasters. Mr. Baker (the Dukes servant) made the King a Julip, which the Duke brought to the King with his own hand, of which the King drank twice, but refused the third time. After His death, a Bill was brought to the Physicians to sign, that the ingredients of the Julip and Plasters were safe: but most refused it, because they knew not whether the ingredients mentioned in the Bill were the same in the Julip and Plasters. This is the naked truth delivered by oath from the Physicians to a select Committee two years after, when the Parliament voted the Dukes act a transcendent presumption, though most thought it done without any ill intention. And Julip without the advice of His Physicians.

25. Four daies before His death, He desired to receive the Sacrament, and being demanded whether He was prepared in point of faith and charity for so great mysteries? He said, He was, and gave humble thanks to God for the same. Being desired to declare His faith, and what He thought of those Books He had written in that kinde? He repeated the Articles of the Creed one by one, and said, He believed them all as they were received and expounded by that part of the Catholick Church which was established here in England: And said, with a kinde of sprightfulnesse and vivacity, that whatever He had written of this Faith in his life, he was now ready to seal with his death. Being questioned in point of charity; He answered presently, that He forgave all men that offended Him, and desired to be forgiven by all Christians, whom He in any wise had offended. Catechized on His death-bed in His Faith and Charity.

Ann. Dom. 1624. Ann. Regis Jac. 22.

His death.

26. Then after absolution read and pronounced, He received the Sacrament, and some hours after, He professed to the standers by, that they could not imagine what ease and comfort he found in himself since the receiving hereof; And so quietly resigned His soul to God, having reigned twenty two years and three daies.

Of a peaceable nature. *Stowes Chro. p. 819.

27. He was of a peaceable disposition. Indeed, when he first entred England, at Barwick, He himself gave fire to, and shot off a * piece of Ordnance, and that with good judgment. This was the onely military act personally performed by Him. So that He may have seemed in that Cannon to have discharged Warre out of England.

Made Nobility lesse respected by the commonnesse thereof.

28. Coming to Yorke, He was somewhat amazed with the equipage of the Northern Lords repairing unto Him, (especially with the Earl of Cumberland's) admiring there should be in England so many Kings, for less; He could not conjecture them, such the multitude and gallantry of their attendance. But (following the counsel of His English Secretary there present) He soon found a way to abate the formidable greatness of the English Nobility, by conferring Honour upon many persons, whereby Nobility was spread so broad, that it became very thin, which much lessened the antient esteem thereof.

His eloquence,

29. He was very eloquent in speech, whose Latine had no faults, but that it was too good for a King, whom carelessness (not curiosity) becomes in that kinde. His Scotch tone he rather affected than declin'd: and though His speaking spoil'd His speech in some English ears, yet the masculine worth of his set Orations, commanded reverence, if not admiration in all judicious hearers. But in common speaking, (as in His hunting he stood not on the cleanest but nearest way) He would never go about to make any expressions.

And piercing wit.

30. His wit was passing-sharp and piercing, equally pleased in making and taking a smart jest, His Majestie so much stooping to His mirth, that He never refused that coine which he paid to other folk. This made Him please Himself so much in the company of Count Gondomer: and some will say, the King was contented (for reasons best known to Himself) to be deceived by him, and humoured into a peace to His own disadvantage.

King James his return to Gondomer.

31. Once, King James in an Afternoon was praising the plentifull provision of England, especially for flesh, and fowle; adding, the like not to be had in all Spaine, what one County here did afford. Yea, but my Master (quoth Gondomer, there present) hath the gold and silver in the East and West Indies: And I, by my Saule, (saith the King) have much adoe to keep my men from taking it away from Him. To which the Don's Spanish gravity returned silence.

Judicious, bountifull, and mercifull.

32. His judgment was most solid in matters of Divinity, not fathering Books of others, (as some of His Predecessours) but His Works are allowed His own by His very adversaries. Most bountiful to all, especially to Scholars, no King of England ever doing (though His Successour suffered) more, to preserve the revenues of the English Hierarchy. Most mercifull to Offendors, no one person of Honour (without parallel since the Conquest) being put to death in His Reign. In a word, He left His own Coffers empty, but His Subjects Chests full, the Land being never more wealthy; it being easier then to get, than since to save an estate.

The end of the Reign of King JAMES.

THE CHURCH-HISTORY OF BRITAIN.

THE ELEVENTH BOOK.

Containing the Reign of

KING CHARLES.

THE CHURCH-HISTORY OF BRITAIN.

THE ELEVENTH BOOK.

Containing the Reign of

KING CHARLES.

To the Honourable

EDWARD MOUNTAGUE

Esquire,

Son and Heire to the Right Honourable

EDWARD

LORD MOUNTAGUE

of BOUGHTON.

IT is a strange casualty which an [a] Historian reporteth of five Earls of PEMBROOKE, successively, (of the Family of HASTINGES) that the Father of them, never saw his Son, as born either in his absence, or after his death.

[a] Cambd: Brit: in Pembr:shire.

I know not whether more remarkable, the fatality of that; or the felicity of your Family: where, in a lineal descent, five have followed one another, the Father not onely surviving to see his Son of Age, but also (your self excepted, excepted, who in due time may be) happy in their Marriage, hopefull in their Iſſue.

Theſe five have all been of the ſame Chriſtian Name. Yet is there no fear of Confuſion, to the prejudice of your Pedigree, (which Heralds commonly in the like caſes complain of) ſeeing each of them being, as eminent in their kinde, ſo different in their eminency, are ſufficiently diſtinguiſhed by their own character to Poſterity.

Of theſe, the firſt a Judge; for his gravity and learning famous in his Generation.

The ſecond, a worthy Patriot, and bountifull Houſe-keeper; bleſſed in a numerous Iſſue. his four younger Sonnes, affording a Biſhop to the Church; a Judge, and Peer to the State; a Commander to the Camp, and an Officer to the Court.

The third, was the firſt Baron of the Houſe, of whoſe worth I will ſay nothing, becauſe I can never ſay enough.

The fourth, your Honourable Father, who becauſe he doth ſtill, and may he long, ſurvive; I cannot doe the right which I would to his merit, without doing wrong, which I dare not to his modeſty.

You are the fift in a direct Line; and let me acquaint quaint you with what the world expected, (not to ſay requireth of you) to dignifie your ſelf with ſome ſelect and peculiar deſert, ſo to be differenced from your Anceſtours, that your memory may not be miſtaken, in the Homonymie of your Chriſtian Names; which, to me ſeemeth as improbable, as that a burning-Beacon, (at a reaſonable diſtance) ſhould not be beheld; ſuch the brightneſſe of your parts, and advantage of your education.

You was bred in that Schoole which hath no ſuperiour in England; and ſucceſsively in thoſe two Univerſities, which have no equall in Europe. Such the ſtock of your native perfection, before graffed with the forraigne accompliſhments of your travells. So that men confidently promiſe themſelves to read the beſt, laſt, and largeſt Edition of MERCATOR'S ATLAS, in your experience and diſcourſe.

That good God who went with you out of your Native Countrey, and ſince watched over you in forraign parts, return with you in ſafety in due time, to his Glory, and your own Good, which is the daily deſire of

Your Honour's moſt devoted Servant,

THOMAS FULLER.

THE CHURCH-HISTORY OF BRITAIN.

XVII. CENTURIE.

Anno Regis Caroli primi 1 March 27 Sunday May 14

Anno Dom. 1625

1. THE ſad newes of King James his death was ſoon brought to White-hall, at that very inſtant, when Dr Land Biſhop of St Davids, was preaching therein. This cauſed him to [a] break off his Sermon in the middeſt thereof, out of civil complyance with the ſadneſs of the congregation: and the ſame day was King Charles proclaimed at White-Hall.

News of the King's death brought to White Hall.

a See his own Diarie on that day.

2. On the ~~fourteenth~~ Seventh of May following King James his funeralls were performed very ſolemnly, in the Collegiate-Church at Weſtminſter, his lively ſtatue being preſented on a magnificent Herſe. King Charles was preſent thereat. For, though modern ſtate uſed of late to lock up the chief Mourner in his Chamber, where his grief muſt be preſumed too great for publique appearance; yet the King cauſed this ceremonie of ſorrow ſo to yeeld to the ſubſtance thereof, and pomp herein to ſtoop to pietie, that in his perſon he ſorrowfully attended the funerals of his Father.

His ſolemn funeralls.

3. Dr. Williams, Lord Keeper and Biſhop of Lincolne, preached the Sermon, taking for his Text 2 Chron. 9. 29, 30. and part of the 31, verſe. containing the happy reign, quiet death, and ſtately buriall of King Solomon. The effect of his Sermon was to advance a parallel betwixt two peaceable Princes, King Solomon and King James. A parallel which willingly went, (not to ſay ran of its own accord) and when it chanced to ſtay, was fairly led on by the art, and ingenuitie of the Biſhop, not enforcing, but improving the conformitie betwixt theſe two Kings in ten particulars, all expreſſed in the Text, as we read in the vulgar Latin ſomewhat different from the new Tranſlation.

Dr. Williams his text, Sermon, and parallel betwixt K. Solomon and K. James.

King Solomon,	King James,
1. His eloquence, the reſt of the words of Solomon.	1. Had [b] profluentem, & qua Principem deceret, eloquentiam.
2. His actions, and all that he did.	2. Was eminent in his actions of Religion, Juſtice, War, and Peace.
3. A well within to ſupply the ſame, and his wiſedome.	3. So wiſe that there was nothing that any [c] would learn, which he was not able to teach.

b Tacitus of Auguſtus.

c pag. 19.

4. The preservation thereof to eternitie, Are they not written in the book of the acts of Solomon, made by Nathan the Prophet, Ahijah the Shilonite, and Iddo the Seer?

d pag. 61.

5. He reigned in Jerusalem, a great Citie, by him enlarged, and repaired.

6. Over all Israel, the whole Empire.

7. A great space of time, full fourtie years.

c pag. 66.

8. Then he slept, importing no sudden and violent dying, but a premeditate and affected kinde of sleeping.

9. With his fathers, David especially, his Soul being disposed of in happines.

10. And was buried in the City of David.

4. As Trajan was nicknamed herba parietaria, a Wal-flower, because his name was engraven on every wal: so King James shall be called herba chartacea, the paper-flower, and his glory be read in [d] in all writers.

5. He reigned in the capital City of London, by him much augmented.

6. Over great Britain, by him happily united, and other Dominions.

7. In all fiftie eight (though over all Britain but two and twenty years) reigning as [e] better, so also longer than King Solomon.

8. Left the world most resolved, most prepared, embracing his Grave for his Bed.

9. Reigning gloriously with God in Heaven.

10. Whilest his body was interred with all possible solemnitie in King Henry the seventh his Chappell.

Anno Dom. 1625 | Anno Regis Caroli primi 1

Be it here remembred, that in this Parallel the Bishop premised to set forth Solomon, not in his full proportion, faults and all, but half-faced (imagine lusca, as Apelles painted Antigonus to conceal the want of his eye) adding, that Solomons vices could be no blemish to King James, who resembled him onely in his choicest vertues. He concluded all with that verse Ecclesiasticus 30. 4. Though his Father die, yet he is as though he were not dead, for he hath left one behinde him that is like himself: in application to his present Majestie.

Exceptions taken at his Sermon.

4. Some Auditors, who came thither rather to observe than edifie, cavill than observe, found, or made faults in the Sermon, censuring him for touching too often, and staying too long on an harsh string, three times straining the same, making eloquence too essentiall, and so absolutely necessary in a King, that the want thereof made Moses in a manner [f] refuse all Government though offered by God: that no [g] man ever got great power without eloquence; Nero being the first of the Cæsars qui alienâ facundiâ eguit, who usurp'd another mans language to speake for him. Expressions which might be forborn in the presence of his Sonne, and Successor, whose impediment in speech was known to be great, and mistook to be greater. Some conceived him too long in praising the passed, too short in promising for the present King (though saying much of him in a little) and the Bishops Adversaries (whereof then no want at Court) some took distaste, others made advantage thereof. Thus is it easier, and better for us to please one God, than many men with our Sermons. However the Sermon was publiquely set forth by the Printer (but not the expres command) of his Majestie, which gave but the steddier Mark to his enemies, noting the marginall notes thereof, and making all his Sermon the text of their captious interpretations.

f pag. 16.

g pag. 5.

Discontents begin in the Court.

5. Now began animosities to discover themselves in the Court, whose sad influences operated many years after, many being discontented that on this change they received not proportionable advancement to their expectations.

Anno Regis Car. 1. 1

Anno Dom. 1625

expectations. It is the prerogative of the King of Heaven alone, that he maketh all his Sonnes Heires, all his Subjects Favourites, the gain of one being no losse to the other. Whereas the happiest Kings on Earth are unhappy herein, that unable to gratifie all their Servants (having many Suitors for the same place) by conferring a favour on one, they disoblige all other competitors, conceiving themselves, as they make the estimate of their own deserts, as much (if not more) meriting the same preferment.

6. As for Doctor Preston, he still continued, and increased in the favor of the King, and Duke; it being much observed, that on the day of King James his death, he [h] rode with Prince, and Duke, in a Coach shut down from Theobalds to London, applying comfort now to one now to the other, on so sad an occasion. His partie would perswade us, that he might have chose his own mitre, much commending the moderation of his mortified minde, denying all preferment which courted his acceptance; verifying the Anagram which a [i] friend of his made on his name Johannes Prestonius, En stas pius in honore. Indeed he was conceived to hold the Helme of his own partie, able to steere it to what point he pleased, which made the Duke [as yet] much to desire his favor.

Dr. Preston a great favourite.

b See his Life pag. 503.

i Mr. Ayrs of Lincolns Inn.

7. A booke came forth called Appello Cæsarem made by M[r]. Mountague. He formerly had been Fellow of Kings Colledge in Cambridge, at the present a Parson of Essex and Fellow of Eaton. One much skilled in the Fathers, and Ecclesiasticall Antiquity, and in the Latin and Greek Tongues. Our great [k] Antiquarie confesseth as much (Græcè simul & Latinè doctus) though pens were brandished betwixt them: and vertues allowed by ones adversarie may passe for undeniable truths. These his great parts were attended with tartnesse of writing, very sharp the neb of his pen, and much gall in his inke, against such as opposed him. However, such the equability of the sharpnesse of his style he was unpartiall therein, be he antient or modern writer, Papist or Protestant, that stood in his way, they should all equally taste thereof.

Mr. Mountague his character.

k Mr. Selden in his book De Diis Syris pag. 362.

8. Passe we from the Author to his Book, whereof this was the occasion. He had lately writen satyrically enough against the Papists in confutation of The Gagger of Protestants: Now two Divines of Norwich Dioces, M[r]. Yates, and M[r]. Ward informed against him for dangerous errours of Arminianisme and Poperie, deserting our cause, in stead of defending it. M[r]. Mountague, in his own vindication, writes a second Book licensed by Francis White, Dean of Carlile, finished, and partly printed in the reign of James, to whom the Author intended the dedication. But on King James his death, it seems it descended by succession on King Charles his Sonne, to whom M[r]. Mountague applyed the words which Ockam once used to Lewes of Bavier, Emperour of Germanie, Domine Imperator defende me gladio, & ego te defendam calamo, Lord Emperour defend me with thy Sword, and I will defend thee with my Pen. Many bitter passages in this his Book gave great exception, whereof largely, hereafter.

Setteth forth his Appello Cæsarem.

9. On Sunday being the twelfth of June, about seven of the clock at night, Queen Marie landed at Dover: at what time a piece of Ordinance being discharged from the Castle, flew in fitters, yet did no bodie any harm. Moe were fearfull at the presage, than thankfull for the providence. Next day, the King coming from Canterburie, met her at Dover, whence with all solemnitie she was conducted to Sommerset-House in London, where a Chappell was new prepared for her devotion, with a Covent adjoyning of Capuchin-Friers, according to the Articles of her Mariage.

June 13.

Queen Mary her first arrival at Dover.

10. A Parliament began at London, wherein the first Statute agreed upon, was for the more strict observation of the Lords-day. Which day, as it first honoured the King (His Reign beginning thereon) so the King first honoured honoured it by passing an Act for the greater solemnicie thereof. The House of Commons fell very heavie on Mr. Mountague, for many bitter passages in his Book: who in all probability, had now been severely censured, but that the King himself was pleased to interpose in his behalf, signifying to the House, That those things which were then spoken, and determined concerning Mountague, without his Privitie, did not please him; who by his Court-friends being imployed in the Kings Service, his Majesty signifyed to the Parliament that he thought his Chaplains (whereof Mr. Montague was one) might have as much protection as the Servant of an ordinary Burgess: nevertheless his bond of two thousand pounds wherewith he was tailed, continued uncancelled, and was called on the next Parliament. Anno Dom. 1625. Anno Regis Caroli 1. July 7 Thursday 9. Saturday.

The King rescueth Mr. Mountague from the House of Commons.

The Parliament removed to Oxford, and brake up in discontent.

11. The Plague increasing in London, the Parliament was removed to Oxford. But alas! no avoiding Gods hand. The infection followed, or rather met the Houses there, (whereof worthy Dr. Challenor died, much lamented) yet were the Members of Parliament, not so carefull to save their own persons from the Plague, as to secure the Land from a worse, and more spreading contagion, the daily growth of Poperie. In prevention whereof they presented a Petition to his Majesty, containing sixteen particulars, all which were most graciously answered by his Majesty, to their full satisfaction. Thus this meeting began hopefully, and cheerfully; proceeded turbulently, and suspiciously, brake off suddenly, and sorrowfully; the reason whereof is to be fetch'd from our Civill Historians.

Dr. James his motion in the Convocation.

12. The Convocation kept here, is scarce worth the mentioning, seeing little the appearance thereat, nothing the performance therein. Dean Bowles, the Prolocutour, absented himself for fear of infection, Dr. Thomas Goad officiating in his place, and their meeting was kept in the Chappell of Merton Colledge. Here Dr. James that great Book-man, made a motion, that all Manuscript-Fathers in the Libraries of the Universities, and elsewhere in England, might be perused, and that such places in them as had been corrupted in Popish editions (much superstition being generated from such corruptions) might faithfully be printed, according to those ancient Copies. Indeed, though England at the dissolving of Abbies lost moe Manuscripes than any Countrey of Christendome (of her dimensions) ever had, yet still enough were left her, if well improved, to evidence the truth herein to all posteritie. This designe might have been much beneficiall to the Protestant cause, if prosecuted with as great endevour, as it was propounded with good intention: but, alas! this motion was ended, when it was ended, expiring in the place with the words of the mover thereof.

The insolence of Papists seasonably restrained. Nov. 11.

13. The King according to his late answer in the Parliament at Ox. issued out a Commission to the Judges to see the Law against Recusants put in execution. This was read in all the Courts of Judicature at Reading (where Michaelmas Terme was kept) and a letter directed to the Arch-bishop of Cant. to take speciall care for the discovery of Jesuits, Seminary Priests &c. within his Province. A necessary severity, seing Papists (presuming on Protection by reason of the late Match) were grown very insolent. And a Popish Lord when the King was at Chappell was heard to prate on purpose lowder in a Gallery adjoyning then the Chaplain prayed, whereat the King was so moved that he sent him this message; Either come and doe as we doe, or I will make you prate further off.

Severall Writers against Mr. Mountague.

14. In this, and the next yeer, many Books from persons of severall abilities, and professions, were writen against Mr. Mountague, By

1. Dr. Sutcliffe, Dean of Exeter. One who was miles emeritus, age giving him a Supersedeas, save that his zeale would imploy it self, and some conceived, that his choler became his old age.

2. Mr. Henry Burton, who then began to be well (as afterwards wards too well) known to the World.

Anno Regni Caroli 1 | Anno Dom. 1625

3. Mr. Francis Rowse, a Lay-man by profession.

4. Mr. Yates, a Minister of Norfolk, formerly a Fellow of Emmanuel in Cambridge: he intitles his Book Ibis ad Cæsarem.

5. Dr. Carleton, Bishop of Chichester.

6. Anthonie Wootton, Divinitie-Professour in Gresham-Colledge.

In this Armie of Writers the strength is conceived to consist in the rere, and that the last wrote the solidest confutations. Of these six, Dean Sutcliffe is said to have chode heartily, Mr. Rowse meant honestly, Mr. Burton wrote plainly, Bishop Carleton very pithily, Mr. Yates learnedly, and Mr. Wootton most solidly.

15. I remember not at this time any of Master Mountague's partie engaged in print in his behalf. Whether, because they conceived this their Champion, sufficient of himselfe to encounter all opposers; or, because they apprehended it unsafe (though of the same judgment) to justifie a Book which was grown so generally offensive. Insomuch as his Majesty himself, sensible of his Subjects great distaste thereat (founded by the Duke of Buckingham to that purpose) was resolved to leave Mr. Mountague to stand or fall, according to the justice of his cause. The Duke imparted as much to Dr. Laud, Bishop of Saint Davids, who conceived it of such ominous concernment, that he entred the same in his Diarie, viz. I seem to see a cloud arising, and threatning the Church of England, God for his mercie dissipate it.

Mr. Mountague left to defend himself.

Jan. 19. 1624

16. The day of the Kings Coronation drawing neer, his Majesty sent to survey, and peruse the Regalia, or Royal Ornaments, which then were to be used. It happened that the left wing of the Dove on the Scepter was quite broken off, by what casualty God himself knows. The King sent for Mr. Acton then his Goldsmith, commanding him that the very same should be set on again. The Goldsmith replied, that it was impossible to be done so fairly, but that some mark would remain thereof. To whom the King in some passion returned, [1] If you will not do it, another shall. Hereupon Mr. Acton carried it home, and got another Dove of Gold to be artificially set on; whereat, when brought back, his Majesty was well contented, as making no discovery thereof.

A maim on the embleme of Peace.

[1] His Son succeeding his Father in that place and then present, attested to me the truth hereof.

17. The Bishop of Lincolne, Lord-Keeper, was now dayly descendant in the Kings favour; who so highly distasted him, that he would not have him, as Dean of Westminster, to perform any part of His Coronation; yet so (was it a favour, or a triall?) that it was left to his free choice, to prefer any Prebendary of the Church to officiate in his place. The Bishop met with a Dilemma herein. To recommend Dr. Laud, Bishop of Saint Davids (and Prebendary of Westminster) for that performance, was to grace one of his greatest enemies: to passe him by, and prefer a private Prebendary for that purpose before a Bishop, would seem unhandsome, and be interpreted a neglect of his own Order. To avoid all exceptions, he presented a list of all the Prebendaries of that Church, referring the election to his Majesty himself, who made choise of Dr. Laud, Bishop of Saint Davids, for that attendance.

A Dilemma well waved.

Feb 2.

18. Dr. Senhouse, Bishop of Carlile (Chaplain to the King when Prince) preached at the Coronation; his text, —— And I will give unto thee a Crown of life. In some sort it may be said, that he preached his own funerall, dying shortly after; and even then the black Jaundice had so possessed him (a disease which hings the face with mourning as against its buriall) that all despaired of his recovery. Now, seeing this Coronation cometh within (if not the pales and Park) the purlews of Ecclesiastical Historie, we will present so much thereof, as was acted in the Church of Westminster. Let Heraulds marshall the solemnitie of their advance from Westminster-

The Coronation Sermon.

Hall to this Church, where our pen takes the first possession of this subject.

Anno Dom. 1625. Anno Regis Car. I. 1

The solemn advance to the Church.

19. But first we will premise the equipage, according to which they advanced from Westminster-Hall, to the Abbey-Church, in order as followeth.

1. The Aldermen of London two by two, ushered by an Herauld.
2. Eightie Knights of the Bath in their Robes, each having an Esquire to support, and Page to attend him.
3. The Kings Serjeants at Law, Solicitour, Atturney, Masters of Request, and Judges.
4. Privie-Counsellors that were Knights, and chief Officers of the Kings Houshold.
5. Barons of the Kingdome, all bare-headed, in their Parliament-Robes, with swords by their sides.
6. The Bishops with Scarlet-gowns, and Lawn-sleeves, bare-headed.
7. The Vice-Counts, and Earles (not in their Parliament, but) in their Coronation-Robes, with Coronetted-Caps on their Heads.
8. The Officers of State for the day; whereof these are the principall.

Sr. Richard Winn.
Sr. George Goring.
The Lord Privie-Seal.
The Archbishop of Canterbury.

The Earl of Dorset	carrying	The first Sword naked.
The Earl of Essex		The second Sword naked.
The Earl of Kent		The third Sword naked.
The Earl of Montgomerie		The Spurs.
The Earl of Sussex		The Globe, and Crosse upon it.
The Bishop of London		The Golden Cup for the Communion.
The Bishop of Winchester		The Golden Plate for the Communion.
The Earl of Rutland		The Scepter.
The Marquesse Hammilton		The Sword of State naked.
The Earl of Pembroke		The Crown.

The Lord Maior in a crimson Velvet gown, carried a short Scepter before the King, amongst the Serjeants. But I am not satisfied in the criticalness of his place.

The Earl of Arundel, as Earl-Marshall of England, and the Duke of Buckingham, as Lord High-Constable of England for that day, went before his Majestity in this great solemnity.

The manner of the Kings Coronation.

20. The King entred at the West-gate of the Church, under a rich Canopy carried by the Barons of the Cinque-Ports, his own person being supported by Dr. Neyle Bishop of Durham on the one hand; and Dr. Lake, Bishop of Bath and Wells, on the other. His train being six yards long of purple Velvet, was held up by the Lord Compton (as belonging to the Robes) and the Lord Viscount Dorcester. Here he was met by the Prebends of Westminster (Bishop Land supplying the Dean his place) in their rich Copes, who delivered into his Majesties hand the Staff of King Edward the Confessor, with which he walked up to the Scaffold.

The fashion of the Scaffold.

21. This was made of wood at the upper end of the Church, from the Quire to the Altar. His Majesty mounted it, none under the degree of a Baron standing thereon, save only the Prebends of Westminster who attended on the Altar, three Chaires were appointed for him in severall places; one of Repose, the second the ancient Chair of Coronation, and the third (placed on an high square of five Staires ascent) being the Chair of State.

The King presented and accepted by the People.

22. All being settled and reposed, the Lord Archbishop did present his Majesty to the Lords and Commons, East, West, North, South, asking their minds four severall times, if they did consent to the Coronation of King Charles their lawfull Soveraign. The King mean time presented himself ſelf bare-headed: the conſent being given four times with great acclamation, the King took his Chaire of repoſe.

Anno Regis Car. 1. Anno Dom. 1625

23. After the Sermon (whereof before) the L. Archbiſhop, inveſted in a rich Coape, tendered to the King (kneeling down on cuſhions at the Communion-Table) a large Oath, then were his Majeſties Robes taken off him, and were offered on the Altar. He ſtood for a while ſtripped to his Doublet and Hoſe, which were of white Satten (with Ribbons on the Armes and Shoulders, to open them) and he appeared a proper Perſon to all that beheld him. Then was he led by the L. Archbiſhop and the Biſhop of St. Davids, and placed in the Chaire of Coronation (a cloſe Canopie being ſpread over him) the L. Archbiſhop anointing his head, ſhoulders, armes, and hands with a coſtly ointment, the Quire ſinging an Antheme of theſe words, Zadok the Prieſt anointed King Solomon. Sworn and annointed.

24. Hence the King was led up in his Doublet and Hoſe with a white Coyfe on his head to the Communion Table, where Biſhop Laud (Deputy for the Dean of Weſtminſter) brought forth the ancient Habiliments of King Edward the Confeſſour, and put them upon him. Then was his Majeſtie brought back to the Chaire of Coronation, and received the Crown of King Edward (preſented by Biſhop Laud, and) put on his head by the Archbiſhop of Canterburie. The Quire ſinging an Antheme, Thou ſhalt put a Crown of pure Gold upon his head. Whereupon the Earles and Viſcounts put on their Crimſon Velvet Caps with Coronets about them (the Barons and Biſhops alwayes ſtanding bare headed) Then every Biſhop came ſeverally to his Majeſty to bring his benediction upon him, and he in King Edwards Robes with the Crown upon his head, roſe from his Chaire, and did bow ſeverally to every Biſhop apart. Solemnly Crowned,

25. Then was King Edwards Sword girt about him, which he took off again and offered up at the Communion Table with two Swords more (ſurely not in relation to Scotland and Ireland, but to ſome ancient Principalities his Predeceſſors enjoyed in France.) Then the Duke of Buckingam (as Maſter of the Horſe) put on his Spurres, and thus completely crowned, his Majeſty offered firſt Gold, then Silver at the Altar, and afterwards Bread and Wine which were to be uſed at the holy Communion. And girt with ſeveral Swords.

26. Then was his Majeſty conducted by the Nobility to the Throne upon that ſquare Baſis of five aſcents, the Quire ſinging Te deum. Here his Majeſty took an Oath of homage from the Duke of Buckingam (as Lord high Conſtable for that day) and the Duke did ſweare all the Nobilitie beſides to be Homagers to his Majeſtie at his Majeſties knees. Homage done by the Nobility to his Majeſty.

27. Then as many Earles and Barons as could conveniently ſtand about the Throne, did lay their hands on the Crowne on his Majeſties head, proteſting to ſpend their bloods, to maintain it to him and his lawfull Heirs. The Biſhops ſeverally kneeled down, but took no oath as the Barons did, the King kiſſing every one of them. With their ſolemne oath.

28. Then the King took a Scrowle of parchment out of his boſom and gave it to the Lord Keeper Williams, who read it to the Commons four ſeverall times, Eaſt, Weſt, North and South. The effect whereof was, that his Majeſty did offer a pardon to all his Subjects who would take it under his Broad-Seale. A Pardon generall granted.

29. From the Throne, his Majeſty was conducted to the Communion Table, where the Lord Archbiſhop kneeling on the North ſide, read prayers in the Quire, and ſung the Nicene Creed. The Biſhop of Landaff and Norwich, read the Epiſtle and Goſpell, with whom the Biſhops of Durham and St. Davids in rich Copes kneeled with his Majeſty and received the Communion; the bread, from the Archbiſhop, the wine, from the Biſhop of St. Davids, his Majeſty receiving laſt of all, whileſt Gloria in excelſis The Communion concludes the ſolemnity.

Anno Dom. 162½ | Anno Regis Caroli 1.

excelsis was sung by the Quire, and some prayers read by the Archbishop concluded the solemnity.

The return to white-Hall

30. The King after he had disrobed himself in King Edwards Chappell, came forth in a short Robe of red Velvet girt unto him, lined with Ermins, and a Crown of his own on his head set with very pretious stones, and thus the Train going to the Barges on the water side returned to White Hall in the same order wherein they came, about three a clocke in the afternoon.

Our prolixity herein excused.

31. I have insisted the longer on this Subject moved thereunto by this consideration, that if it be the last Solemnitie performed on an English King in this kinde, Posteritie will conceive my paines well bestowed, because on the last. But if hereafter Divine providence shall assign England another King, though the transactions herein be not wholly precedentiall, something of State may be chosen out gratefull for imitation.

A foul mouth railer.

32. And here if a Blister was not, it deserved to be on the fingers of that scandalous Pamphleteer, who hath written that King Charles was not Crowned like other Kings. Whereas all essentialls of his Coronation were performed with as much ceremonie as ever before, and all Robes of State used according to ancient prescription. But if he indulged his own fancie for the colour of his clothes, a White Sute &c. Persons meaner than Princes, have in greater matters assumed as much libery to themselves.

Why the King rode not through the Citie.

33. Indeed one Solemnitie (no part of, but preface to the Coronation) was declined on good consideration. For whereas the Kings of England used to ride from the Tower, through the City to Westminster; King Charles went thither by water, out of double providence, to save health and wealth thereby. For though the infectious Aire in the City of London had lately been corrected with a sharp Winter, yet was it not so amended, but that a just suspicion of danger did remain. Besides such a procession would have cost him threescore thousand Pounds, to be disbursed on Scarlet for his Train. A summe which if then demanded of his Exchequer, would scarce receive a satisfactory answer thereunto; and surely some who since condemne him for want of state, in omitting this Royall Pageant, would have condemned him more for prodigality, had he made use thereof.

A memorable aberration in a Pagane,

34. As for any other alterations in Prayers or Ceremonies, though heavily charged on Bishop Land, are since conceived by unpartiall people, done by a Committee, wherein (though the Bishop accused as most active) others did equally consent. Indeed a passage not in fashion, since the Reign of King Henry the sixt, was used in a prayer at this time. Obtineat gratiam huic populo sicut Aaron in Tabernaculo, Elizeus in Fluvio, Zacharias in Templo, sit Petrus in Clave, Paulus in Dogmate. Let him obtain favor for this people like Aaron in the Tabernacle, Elisha in the Waters, Zacharias in the Temple, give him Peters Key of dicipline, Pauls Doctrine. This I may call a Protestant passage, though anciently used in Popish times, as fixing more spirituall power in the King, than the Pope will willingly allow, jealous that any should finger Peters Keyes save himself.

A Conference at York House.

Feb 6 11.

35. A few dayes after a Parliament began, wherein Mr. Mountague was much troubled about his Book, but made a shift by his powerfull Friends to save himself. During the sitting whereof, at the instance and procurement of Robert Rich Earle of Warwick, a conference was Kept in York house, before the Duke of Buckingam and other Lords, betwixt Dr. Buckridge, Bishop of Rochester, and Dr. White, Dean of Carlile, on the one side, and Dr. Morton Bishop of Coventry, and Dr. Preston on the other, about Arminian points, and chiefly the possibilitie of one elected to fall from grace. The passages of which conference are variously reported. For it is not in tongue combats, combats, as in other battails, where the victorie cannot be disguised, as discovering it self in keeping the field, number of the slain, Captives, and Colours taken. Whilest here no such visible effects appearing, the persons present were left to their libertie, to judge of the Conquest, as each one stood affected. However William Earle of Pembrooke was heard to say, that none returned Arminians thence, save such who repaired thither with the same opinions.

Anno Regis Caroli 3 | Anno Dom. 1627

Feb. 17. 36. Soon after a second conference was entertained, in the same place, on the same points, before the same Persons; betwixt Dr. White Dean of Carlile, and Mr. Mountague, on the on side; and Dr. Morton, Bishop of Lichfield, and Dr. Preston on the other. Dr. Preston carried it clear at the first, by dividing his adversaries, who quickly perceiving their error, pieced themselves together in a joynt opposition against him. The passages also of this conference, are as differently related as the former. Some makeing it a [a] clear conquest on one, some on the other side, and a third sort a drawn battail betwixt both. Thus the success of these meetings, answered neither the commendable intentions, nor hopefull expectations, of such who procured them. Now whil'st other dare say, Universally of such conferences, what David saith of mankinde, that of them [b] there is none that doth good, no not one, we dare onely intimate, that (what Statesmen observe of Interviews betwixt Princes; so) these conferences betwixt Divines rather increase the differences than abate them.

A second on the same Subject.

a Thus the writer of Dr. Prestons Life concludes the conquest on his side b Psalms 14 3.

37. The Bishop of Lincoln fell now through the Dukes, into the Kings displeasure; and such who will read the late letters in the Cabala, may conjecture the cause thereof, but the certainty we leave to be reported by the Historians of the State; belonging in his Episcopall capacity to my pen, but as Lord Keeper properly to theirs.

The Bishop of Lincoln loseth his Keepers place.

38. The Bishop finding his own tottering condition, addressed himself to all who had intimacie with the Duke to reingratiate himself. But such After-games at Court seldome succeed. All would not doe, for as Amicus omnium optimus was part of the Dukes Epitaph *, so no fiercer foe when displeased, and nothing under the Bishops removall from his office would give him satisfaction.

The Duke incensed against him.

* On his Tomb in Westminster Chappell.

39. Sir John Suckling was sent unto him from the King, to demand the broad Seale of him, which the cautious Bishop refused to surrender into his hands, to prevent such uses as might be made thereof (by him or others) in the intervall betwixt this resigning it, and the Kings conferring it on another; but he charily locked it up in a Box, and sent the Box by the Knight, and Key thereof inclosed in a letter to his Majesty.

The Bishops wariness in resigning the Seale.

40. However his bruise was the less, because he fell but from the first Loft and saved himself on the second Floere. Outed his Lord Keepership, but keeping his Bishoprick of Lincoln and Deanarie of Westminster, though forced to part with the Kings Purse, he held his owne and that well repleniſhed; And now he is retired to Bugden-great, where, whither greater his anger at his enemies for what he had lost, or gratitude to God, for what he had left, though others may conjecture, his owne Conscience only could decide. Here we leave him at his hospitable Table, where sometimes he talked so loud, that his discourse at the second hand was heard to London, by those who bare no good will unto him.

But keeps his Bishoprick.

41. An old Hall turned into a new Colledge, was this yeare finished at Oxford. This formerly was called Broadegates Hall and had many Students therein, amongst whom Edmund Bonner afterwards Bishop of London (Scholar enough and Tyrant too much) had his education. But this place was not endowed with any Revenues till about this time, for Thomas Tisdale of Glimpton in the County of Oxford Esquire, bequeathed five thousand Pounds, wherewith Lands were purchased to the value of two

A new Colledge of an old Hall in Oxford

Anno Dom. 1617 | Anno Regis Caroli 1

hundred and fiftie pounds per annum, for the maintenance of seven Fellowes and six Scholars. Afterwards Richard Wightwick Bachelor of Divinity, Rector of East-Isle in Berkshire, gave Lands to the yearly value of one hundred pounds, for the maintenance of three Fellowes and four Scholars; whereupon petition being made to King James, this new Colledge was erected, and a Charter of Mortmain of seven hundred pounds per annum, granted thereunto.

Called Pembrook Colledge

42. It was called Pembrook Colledge, partly in respect to William Earle of Pembrook, then Chancellor of the University, partly in expectation to receive some favour from him. And probably had not that noble Lord died suddenly soon after, this Colledge might have received more than a bare Name from him. The best, where a Child hath rich parents it needeth the less any gifts from the Godfather.

Masters	Benefactors	Bishops	Learned Writers.
1 Dr. Clayton	King Charles, who gave the Patronage of St. Aldates the Church adjoyning.
2 Dr. Langley

So that this Colledge consisteth of a Master, ten Fellowes, and ten Scholars with other Students and Officers to the number of one hundred sixty nine.

* Dr. Prestons Life, p. 505.
* Rom. 12. 11. τῷ καιρῷ συμφέροντες. Ambrosius.

43. The Doctor and the Duke were both of them unwilling to an open breach, loved for to temporise and wait upon events. Surely Temporise here is taken in the Apostle sense, according to some * copies, serving the Times. And henceforwards the Duke resolved to shake off the Doctor, who would not stick close unto him, betaking himself to the opposite Interest. Nor was the other surprized herein, as expecting the alteration long before.

Dr. Preston declines in the Dukes favour.

44. By the late conferences at York-house it appeared, that by the Dukes cold carriage towards him (and smiling on his Opponents) Dr. Preston was now entring into the Autumn of the Dukes favour. Indeed they were well met, each observing, neither trusting other (as I read in the Doctors Life, written by his judicious Pupil.)

The death of godly Bishop Lakes.

45. This year concluded the life of Arthur Lakes, Warden of New-Colledge in Oxford, Master of St. Crosses, Dean of Worcester, and at last promoted Bishop of Bath and Wells, not so much by the power of his Brother Sir Thomas (Secretarie to King James) as his own desert; as one whose piety may be justly exemplary to all of his Order. He seldom (if at all) is said to have dreamt, justly imputed, not to the dulness of his fancie, in which faculty he had no defect, but to the staidness of his judgment, wherein he did much excell, as by his learned Sermons doth appear.)

The death and character of Bishop Andrews.

46. About the same time Lancelot Andrews ended his religious life, born at Alhallows-Barking in London, Scholar, Fellow, and Master of Pembrook-Hall in Cambridge. Then Deane of Westminster, Bishop of Chicester, Ely, and at last of Winchester. The world wanted learning to know how learned this Man was, so skil'd in all (especially oriental) Languages, that some conceive he might (if then living) almost have served as an INTERPRETER GENERALL at the confusion of Tongues. Nor are the Fathers more faithfully cited in his books, than lively copied out in his countenance and carriage, his gravity in a manner awing King James, who refrained from that mirth and liberty, in the presence of this Prelate, which otherwise he assumed to himself. He lyeth buried in the Chappell of St. Mary Overees, having on his Monument a large, elegant *, and TRUE Epitaph.

* Stows Survay of London, pag.

47. Since his death some have unjustly snarld at his memory, accusing him for

Anno Regis Car. I. 2. Anno Dom 1626

for covetousness, who was neither rapax, to get by unjust courses (as a profest enemy to usury, simony, and bribery:) nor tenax, to hold money when just occasion called for it: for in his life time he repaired all places he lived in, and at his death left the main of his Estate to pious uses. Indeed he was wont to say, that Good Husbandry was good Divinity, the truth whereof no wise man will deny.

Unjustly accused for Covetousness,

48. Another falls foully upon him for the ornaments of his Chappel as Popish and superstitious, in the [b] superabundant ceremonies thereof. To which I can say little; but this I dare affirm, that whersoever he was a Parson, a Dean, or a Bishop, he never troubled Parish, Colledge, or Diocess with pressing other ceremonies upon them, then such which he found used there before his coming thither. And it had not been amiss, if such who would be accounted his friends and admirers, had followed him in the footsteps of his moderation, content with the enjoying, without the injoyning their private practises, and opinions, on others.

And Superstition.

b W. Prynne, in Canterbury's Doom pag. 121 & sequentibus.

49. As for such who causlesly have charged his Sermons as affected, and [c] surcharged with verball allusions, when they themselves have set forth the like, it will then be time enough to make this Bishops first defence, against their calumniations. Nor is it a wonder that the Masters Pen, was so in his writings, whose very Servant (a Lay man) was so successfull in the same: I mean Mr. Henry Isackson (lately gone to God) the industrious Author of the usefull Chronologie.

Causlesly charged with affectation in his Sermons.

c Mr. Bayley in hh Ladensium Autocatacrites.

50. It is pitie to part this Patron from his Chaplain, Nicholas Fuller, born, as I take it, in Hampshire, bred in Oxford, where he was Tutor to Sir Henry Walhop, who afterwards preferred him to the small Parsonage of Aldingeton in Wiltshire: And Robert Abbot, Bishop of Salisbury, made him Canon of that Church. Afterwards a Living of great value was sent by Bishop Andrews (the Patron [d] thereof) on the welcom errand to finde out Mr. Fuller to accept the same, who was hardly contented to be surprised with a presentation thereunto; such his love to his former small Living and retired life. He was the Prince of all our English Criticks; And whereas men of that tribe are generally morose, so that they cannot dissent from another without disdaining, nor oppose without inveighing against him, it is hard to say whether more candor, learning, or judgement, was blended in his Miscellanies. By discovering how much Hebrew there is in the New-Testament-Greek, he cleereth many reall difficulties from his verball observations.

Nicholas Fuller his Chaplain, that profitable Critick.

d See Bishop And. his funeral Sermon

3 1627

51. A Commission was granted unto five Bishops (whereof Bishop Laud of the Quorum) to suspend Archbishop Abbot from exercising his Authority any longer, because uncanonicall for casuall Homicide; the proceeding against him being generally condemned as over-rigid and severe.

Severe proceedings against Archbishop Abbot suspended from his Jurisdiction.

1. The Act was committed seven years since, in the reign of King James.

2. On a Commission then appointed for that purpose, he was cleered from all Irregularity, by Bishop Andrews, in Divinity; Sir Ed. Coke, in Common; and Sir Henr. Martin, in Canon Law.

3. It would be of dangerous consequence to condemn him by the Canons of forain Councels, which never were allowed any Legislative Power in this Land.

4. The Archbishop had manifested much remorse and self-affliction, for this (rather sad than sinful) act.

5. God may be presumed to have forgotten so much as there was of fault in the fact, and why then should man remember it?

6. Ever since he had executed his Jurisdiction without any interruption.

Anno Dom. 1627 | Anno Regis Car. 1. 3

7. The Archbishop had both feet in the Grave, and all his whole Body likely soon after to follow them.

8. Such heightning of Casual-Homicide, did savour of Intentional malice.

The truth is, the Archbishops own stiffness and averseness to comply with the Court-Designes, advantaged his Adversaries against him, and made him the more obnoxious to the Kings displeasure. But the blame did most light on Bishop Land, men accounting this a kinde of Filius ante diem, &c. As if not content to succeed, he indeavored to supplant him; who might well have suffered his decayed old age to have died in honor: What needs the felling of the tree a falling?

Two good effects of a bad cause.

52. However a double good accrued hereby to the Archbishop. First, he became the more beloved of Men: (the Countrey hath constantly a blessing for those, for whom the Court hath a curse.) And secondly, he may charitably be presumed to love God the more, whose service he did the better attend, being freed from the drudgery of the World, as that soul which hath the least of Martha, hath the most of Mary therein.

The character of Archbishop Abbot.

53. And although this Archbishop survived some years after, yet it will be seasonable here for us to take a fair farewell of his memorie, seeing henceforward he was buried to the World. He was bred in Oxford, Master of University Colledge; an excellent Preacher, as appears by his Lectures on Jonah; Chaplain to the Earl of Dunbar (with whom he was once solemnly sent by King James into Scotland to preach there) and afterwards by his means promoted to the Arch-bishop-rick of Canterbury, haply according to his own; but sure I am above, if not against, the expectations of others; A grave man in his conversavion, and unblameable in his life.

Accounted no great friend to the Clergy.

54. Indeed it is charged on him that non amavit Gentem nostram, he loved not our Nation, forsaking the Birds of his own feather to flie with others, and generally favoring the Laity above the Clergie, in all cases brought before him. But this he endeavored to excuse to a private friend, by protesting he was himself so severe to the Clergie on purpose to rescue them from the severity of others, and to prevent the punishment of them from Lay Judges to their greater shame.

Accused for the favor of male-contents.

e In answer to the Pamphlet intituled, The Court and Character of King James, page 132.

f Dr. Barnard his Houshold Chaplain.

55. I also reade in a nameless e Author, that towards his death he was not onely discontented himself, but his house was the randezvouz of all male-contents in Church and State: making mid-night of noon-day, by constant keeping of candles light in his Chamber and Study; as also such visitants as repaired unto him, called themselves Nicodemits, because of their secret addresses. But a credible f person, and one of his neerest relations knew nothing thereof, which with me much shaketh the probability of the report. And thus we leave this Archbishop, and the rest of his praises to be reported by the poor people of Gilford in Surrey, where he founded and indowed a fair Almes-house in the Town of his Nativity.

A Toleration blasted in Ireland.

56. The Kings Treasury now began to grow low, and his expenses to mount high. No wonder then if the Statesmen were much troubled to make up the distance betwixt his Exchequer and his Occasions. Amongst other designes, the Papists in Ireland (taking advantage of the Kings wants) proffered to pay constantly 5000 Men, if they might but enjoy a Toleration. But that motion was crusht by the Bishops opposing it, and chiefly by Bishop Downhams sermon in Dublin, on this Text, Luke 1. 74. That we being delivered from the hands of our Enemies might serve him without fear.

Hopes to spring in England:

57. Many a man, sunk in his Estate in England, hath happily recovered it by removing into Ireland; whereas, by a contrary motion, this project, banknupt in Ireland, presumed to make it self up in England: Where the Papists promised to maintain a proportion of Ships, on the aforesaid condition,

Anno Regis Car. 1. Anno Dom.

tion, of free exercise of their Religion. Some were desirous the King should accept their tender, who might lawfully take what they were so forward to give, seeing no injury is done to them who are willing.

58. It was urged on the other side, that where such willingness to be injured proceeds from the Principle of an erroneous conscience, there their simplicity ought to be informed, not abused. Grant Papists so weak as to buy, Protestants should be more honest than to sell such base wares unto them. Such Ships must needs spring many leaks, rig'd, victualed, and manned with il-gotten money, gained by the sale of Souls. And here all the objections were revived, which in the reign of King James were improved against such a Toleration. But is rejected.

59. Here Sir John Savil interposed, that if the King were pleased but to call on the Recusants to pay thirds (legally due to the Crown) it would prove a way more effectual and less offensive to raise a mass of Money: it being but just, who were so rich and free to purchase new Priviledges, should first pay their old Penalties. This motion was listned unto, and Sir John (with some others) appointed for that purpose in the Counties beyond Trent, scarce a third of England in ground, but almost the half thereof for the growth of Recusants therein. But whether the Returns seasonably furnished the Kings occasions is to me unknown. Sir John Savil his motion.

4 1628

60. It is suspicious that all such Projects to quench the thirst of the Kings necessities proved no better then sucking-bottles, soon emptied, & but cold the liquor they afforded. Nothing so naturall as the milk of the breast; I mean Subsidies granted by Parliament, which the King at this time assembled. But alas, to follow the Metaphor, both the breasts, the two Houses, were so sore with several grievances, that all money came from them with much pain and difficulty; the rather, because they complained of Doctrines destructive to their propriety, lately preached at Court. A Parliament cal'd, which proves full of troubles.

61. For towards the end of this Session of Parliament Dr. Manwaring was severely censured for two Sermons he had preached and printed about the power of the Kings Prerogative. Such is the precipice of this matter (wherein each casual slip of my Pen may prove a deadly fall) that I had rather the Reader should take all from Mr. Pimm's mouth, than from my hand, who thus uttered himself: Mr. Pimm's Speech against Dr. Manwaring.

June 9

Master Speaker, I am to deliver from the Sub-Committee, a Charge against Mr. Manwaring, a Preacher and Doctor of Divinity, but a man so criminous that he hath turned his titles into accusations; for the better they are, the worse is he that hath dishonoured them. Here is a great Charge that lies upon him; it is great in it self, and great because it hath many great Charges in it: Serpens, qui Serpentem devorat, fit Draco; his Charge, having digested many Charges into it, is become a Monster of Charges. The main and great one is this; A plot and policie, to alter and subvert the frame and fabrick of the State and Commonwealth. This is the great one, and it hath others in it, that gains it more greatness. For, to this end, he labours to infuse into the conscience of his Majesty, the perswasion of a power not bounding it self with Laws, which King James of famous memorie calls, in his Speech in Parliament 1619, Tyrannie, yea Tyrannie accompanied with Perjurie.

a Transcribed out of his Manuscript Speech.

2. Secondly, He endeavours to perswade the consciences of the Subjects, that they are bound to obey illegal commands; yea, he damns them for not obeying them.

3. Thirdly, He robs the Subjects of the propertie of their goods.

4. Fourthly, He brands them that will not lose this propertie, with most scandalous and odious titles, to make them hatefull both to Prince and People,

Anno Dom. 1628 | Anno Regis Caroli 4

so to set a division between the Head and Members, and between the Members themselves.

5. Fifthly, To the same end (not much unlike to Faux and his fellows) he seeks to blow up Parliaments and Parliamentarie Power. These five being duly viewed, will appear to be so many Charges, and withall they make up the main and great Charge, A mischievous Plot to alter and subvert the frame and Government of this State and Commonwealth. And now that you may be sure that Mr. Manwaring, though he leave us no propriety in our Goods, yet he hath an absolute propriety in his Charge; Audite ipsam belluam, heare Mr. Manwaring by his own words making up his own Charge.

Here he produced the Book, particularly insisting on pag. 19. 29. and 30. in the first Sermon, pag. 35. 46. and 48 in the second Sermon. All which passages he heightned with much eloquence and acrimonie; thus concluding his Speech, I have shewed you an evill Tree that bringeth forth evill Fruit; and now it rests with you to determine, whether the following sentence shall follow, Cut it down and cast it into the fire.

The severe censure on the Doctor.

62. Four daies after the Parliament proceeded to his censure, consisting of eight particulars, it being ordered by the House of Lords against him, as followeth: June 13

1. To be imprisoned during the pleasure of the House.
2. To be fined a thousand pounds.
3. To make his submission at the Bar in this House, and in the House of Commons, at the Bar there, in verbis conceptis, by a Committee of this House.
4. To be suspended from his Ministerial function three yeers, and in the mean time a sufficient preaching man to be provided out of the profits of his living, and this to be left to be performed by the Ecclesiastical Court.
5. To be disabled for ever hereafter from preaching at Court.
6. To be for ever disabled of having any Ecclesiastical Dignity in the Church of England.
7. To be uncapable of any secular Office or preferment.
8. That his Books are worthy to be burned, and his Majesty to be moved that it may be so in London, and both the Universities.

But much of this censure was remitted, in consideration of the performance of his humble submission at both the Bars in Parliament:

His humble submission.

63. Where he appeared on the three and twentieth of June following, and on his knees, before both Houses, submitted himself, as followeth, with outward expression of sorrow: 23

I doe here in all sorrow of heart, and true repentance, acknowledge those many errors and indiscretions which I have committed in preaching and publishing the two Sermons of mine, which I called Religion and Allegiance, and my great fault in falling upon this theam again, and handling the same rashly, scandalously, and unadvisedly in my own Parish-Church in St. Giles in the fields, the fourth of May last past. I humbly acknowledg these three Sermons to have been full of dangerous passages and inferences, and scandalous aspersions, in most part of the same. And I doe humbly acknowledge the just proceedings of this Honourable House against me, and the just sentence and judgment past'd upon me for my great offence. And I doe from the bottom of my heart crave pardon of God, the King, and this Honourable House, and the Commonweal in general, and those worthy persons adjudged to be reflected upon by me in particular, for those great offences and errors.

How

Anno Regis Caroli 4 — Anno Dom 1628

How this Doctor, Roger Manwaring (notwithstanding the foresaid censure) was afterwards preferred, first to the Deanarie of Worcester, next to the Bishoprick of St. Davids, God willing in due place thereof.

June 26. 64. On Thursday the 26th. of this moneth, ended the Session of Parliament, wherein little, relating to Religion, was concluded; save onely that diverse abuses on the Lords-day were restrained: All Cariers, Carters, Waggoners, Wain-men, Drovers of Cattell forbidden to travell thereon, on the forfeit of twenty shillings for every offence. Likewise, Butchers to lose six shillings and eight pence for killing or selling any victuals on that day. A Law was also made, That whosoever goeth himself, or sendeth others beyond the Seas to be trained up in Poperie, &c. shall be disabled to sue, &c. and shall lose all his Goods, and shall forfeit all his Lands, &c. for life. Five entire Subsidies were granted to the King by the Spirituality, and the said Grant confirm'd by the Act of this Parliament, which now was first prorogued to the twentieth of October following, and then, (on some intervening obstructions) put off to the twentieth of January when it began again.

The Acts of this Parliament.

65. As for the Convocation, concurent [in time] with this Parliament, nothing considerable was acted therein. Dr. Thomas Winniff, Dean of Gloucester, preach'd the Latin Sermon; his text Acts 20. 28. Attendite ad vos ipsos, & totum gregem, &c. Dr. Curle was chosen Prolocutor: and a low voice would serve the turn where nothing was to be spoken.

Nothing done in the Convocation.

July 10 66. On the twentieth of July following Dr. Preston dyed in his native Country of Northamptonshire, neer the place of his birth, of a consumption, and was buried at Fawsley, Mr. Dod preaching his funeral Sermon: An excellent Preacher, of whom Mr. Noy was wont to say, that he preached as if he knew Gods Will: a subtile Disputant and great Politician; so that his Foes must confess, that (if not having too little of the Dove) he had enough of the Serpent. Some will not stick to say he had large parts of sufficient receipt to manage the Broad Seale it self, which if the condition had pleased him, was proffered unto him: For he might have been the Dukes right hand, though at last less than his little finger unto him: Who despairing that this Patriarch of the Presbyterian Party would bring off his side unto him, used him no longer who would not or could not be usefull unto him. Most of this Doctor's posthume-books have been happie in their education, I mean in being well brought forth into the World, though all of them have not lighted on so good guardians: But his life is so largely and learnedly written by one of his own* Pupils, that nothing can be added unto it.

The death of Dr. Preston.

* Mr. The. Balle of Northampton.

67. About this time George Carleton, that grave and godly Bishop of Chichester ended his pious life. He was born at [b] Norham in Northumberland, where his Father was the Keeper of that important Castle in the Marches; an imployment speaking him wise and valiant, in those dangerous and warlike dayes. He was bred and brought up under Mr. Bernard Gilpin, that Apostolical man (whose Life he wrote in gratitude to his memorie) and retained his youthfull and Poeticall studies fresh in his old age. He was selected by King James one of the five Divines sent over to the Synod of Dort. He wrote many small Tracts (one against Sir John Heydon, about judicial Astrology) which conjoyned would amount to a great volume. Mr. Richard Mountague, one of a different judgement, succeeded in his See, who at first met with some small opposition on the following occasion.

The death of Bishop Carleton.

b Camden Brit In Northumberland.

Aug. 11. 68. There is a solemnity performed before the consecration of every Bishop, in this manner. The Royall assent being passed on his election, the Archbishops Vicar-general proceeds to his Confirmation, commonly kept in Bow Church. A Process is issued forth to call all persons to appear, to shew cause why the Elect there present should not be confirmed. For, seeing a Bishop is in a manner married to his See (save that hereafter he taketh his surname

Mr. Mountagues Confirmation opposed.

surname from his Wife, and not she from him) this ceremony is a kinde of asking the Banes, to see if any can alledge any lawfull cause to forbid them. Now at the confirmation of Mr. Mountague, when liberty was given to any objectors against him, one Mr. Humphreys (since a Parliament Colonel, lately deceased) and William Fones, a Stationer of London (who alone is mentioned in the Record) excepted against Mr. Mountague, as unfitting for the Episcopal office, chiefly on this account, because lately censured by Parliament for his book, and rendered uncapable of all preferment in the Church. Anno Dom. 1628. Anno Regis Caroli 4

But the opposition ineffectual.

69. But exception was taken at Fones his exceptions (which the Record calls pretensos articulos) as defective in some legal formalities. I have been informed, it was alledged against him for bringing in his objections vivâ voce, and not by a Proctor, that Court adjudging all private persons effectually dumbe, who speak not by one admitted to plead therein. Fones returned, that he could not get any Proctor, though pressing them importunately, and proffering them their fee, to present his exceptions, and therefore was necessitated ore tenus there to alledge them against Mr. Mountague. The Register mentioneth no particular defects in his exceptions, but Dr. Rives (Substitute at that time for the Vicar-general) declined to take any notice of them, and concludeth Fones amongst the contumacious, quòd nullo modo legitimè comparuit, nec aliquid in hac parte juxta juris exigentiam diceret, excipiret, vel opponeret. Yet this good Fones did Bishop Mountague, that he caused his addresses to the King to procure a pardon, which was granted unto him, in forme like those given at the Coronation, save that some particulars were inserted therein, for the pardoning of all errors heretofore committed, either in speaking, writing, or printing, whereby he might hereafter be questioned. The like at the same time was granted to Dr. Manwaring, on whom the rich Parsonage of Stanford Rivers in Essex was conferred, as voyd by Bishop Mountagues preferment.

c Registrum Cantuar. fol. 140. in anno 1628.

Caution seasonably used.

70. An intention there was for the Bishop and all the companie employed at his Confirmation, to dine at a Tavern, but Dr. Thomas Rives utterly refused it, rendring this reason; that he had heard, that the dining at a Tavern gave all the colour to that far-spreading and long-lasting lie, of Matthew Parker his being consecrated at the Nags-Head in Cheapside; and, for ought he knew, captious people would be ready to raise the like report on the same occasion. It being therefore Christian caution, not onely to quench the fire of sin, but also (if possible) to put out the smoak of scandal, they removed their dining to another place.

The Parliament dissolved.

71. On the twentieth of January the Parliament was reassembled, which dyed issueless (as I may say) the March following, leaving no Acts (abortions are no Children) completed behind it. Let the Reader who desireth farther instructions of the passages herein consult the Historians of the State. Indeed if the way were good, and weather fair, a travailer, to please his curiosity in seeing the Countrey, might adventure to ride a little out of the rode; but he is none of the wisest, who in a tempest and miric way will lose time and leave his own journey. If pleasant and generally acceptable were the transactions in this Parliament, it might have tempted me to touch a little thereon, out of the track of my Church-Storie; but finding nothing but stirs and storms therein, I will onely goe on fair and softly in my beaten path of Ecclesiastical affairs. Bishop Land had no great cause to be a Mourner at the Funerals of this Parliament, having entred it in his Diarie, that it endevored his destruction. January 20

Proclamation against the Bishop of Chalcedon.

72. At this time Richard Smith (distinct from Henrie Smith, alias Lloyd, a Jesuite, whom some confound as the same person) being in title Bishop of Chalcedon in Greece, in truth a dangerous English Priest, acted and exercised Episcopal

Anno Regis Caroli 4 March 24 — Anno Dom. 1618

Episcopal Jurisdiction over the Catholiques here, by Commission from the Pope, appearing in his Pontificalibus in Lancashire, with his Miter and Crosier to the wonder of poor People, and conferring Orders, and the like. This was much offensive to the Regulars, as intrenching on their Priviledges, who countermined him as much as they might. His Majestie, having notice of this Romish Agent, renewed his Proclamation (one of a former date taking no effect) for his apprehension, promising an hundred pounds to be presently paid to him that did it, besides all the profits which accrewed to the Crown, as legally due from the person who entertained him.

72. However such as hid and harbored him, were neither frighted with the penalty, nor flattered with the profit, to discover him. But Smith, conceiving his longer stay here to be dangerous, conveyed himself over into France, where he became a Confident of Cardinal Richelieu's. The conveniencie and validity of his Episcopal power was made the subject of several Books which were written thereon,

He flyeth into France.

In favor of him.	In opposition to him.
1. N. de Maistre, a Sorbon-Priest, in his book entituled De persecutione Episcoporum, & De illustrissimo Antistite Chalcedonensi.	1. Daniel, a Jesuite.
2. The Faculty of Paris, which censured all such as opposed him.	2. Horucan.
	3. Lumley.
	4. Nicolas Smith.

This Chalcedon Smith wrote a book called The Prudential Ballance, much commended by men of his own perswasion; and, for ought I know, is still alive.

74. Within the compass of this year dyed the Reverend Tobie Matthew, Archbishop of York. He was born in the Somersetshire-side of Bristol, and in his childhood had a marvellous preservation, when with a fall he brake his foot, ancle, and small of his leg, which were so soon recovered to eye, [d] use, sight, service, that not the least mark remained thereof. Coming to Oxford, he fixed at last in Christ-Church, and became Dean thereof. He was one of a proper person (such People, cæteris paribus, and sometimes cæteris imparibus, were preferred by the Queen) and an excellent Preacher, Campian himself confessing, that he did dominari in Concionibus. He was of a cheerfull spirit, yet without any trespass on Episcopal gravity, there lying a real distinction between facetiousness and nugacitie. None could condemn him for his pleasant wit, though often he would condemn himself, as so habited therein, he could as well not be, as not be merrie, and not take up an innocent jeast as it lay in the way of his discourse.

The death and Character of Tobie Matthew.

[d] Sr. John Harington, in his continuation of Bishop Godwin's Catalogue of Bishops.

75. One passage must not be forgotten. After he had arrived at his greatness, he made one journey into the West, to visit his two Mothers; her that bare him at Bristol, and her that bred him in learning, the University of Oxford. Coming neer to the latter, attended with a train suitable to his present condition, he was met almost with an equall number, who came out of Oxford to give him entertainment. Thus augmented with another troop, and remembring he had passed over a small water a poor Scholar, when first coming to the University, he kneeled down and took up the expression of Jacob, With my staff came I over this Jordan, and now I am become two Bands. I am credibly informed, that, mutatis mutandis, the same was performed by his Predecessor, Archbishop Hutton at Sophisters Hills nigh Cambridge, and am so far from distrusting either, that I beleeve both.

His gratitude unto God,

76. He dyed yeerly in report, and I doubt not, but that in the Apostles sense he dyed dayly in his mortifying meditations. He went over the graves of many who looked for his Archbishoprick; I will not say they catched a cold in waiting barefoot for a living mans shoes. His wife, the Daughter of Bishop Barlow (a Confessor in Queen Maries dayes) was a prudent, and a provident matrone. Of this extraction came Sir Tobie Matthew, having all his Fathers name, many of his natural parts, few of his moral vertues, fewer of his spiritual graces, as being an invererate enemy to the Protestant Religion. George Mountaine succeeded him, scarce warm in his Church before cold in his Coffin, as not continuing many moneths therein.

Died yeerly.

Anno Dom. 1528 | Anno Regis Caroli 4

The death of Bishop Felton.

77 I humbly crave the Readers Pardon for omitting due time of the death of reverend Dr. Nicholas Felton Bishop of Ely, as buried before (though dying some dayes after) Bishop Andrews: and indeed great was the conformity betwixt them: Both being Sons of Seafaring * Men, (who by Gods blessing on their industry, attained comfortable estates) both Scholars, Fellows, and Masters of Pembrook Hall, both great Scholars, painfull Preachers in London for many years, with no less profit to others than credit to themselves, both successively Bishops of Ely. This Bishop Felton had a sound Head and a sanctified Heart, beloved of God, and all good men, very Hospitable to all, and charitable to the poor. He died the 5. of October 1626, and lieth buried under the Communion Table in St. Antholins in London, whereof he had been Minister for twenty * eight years. One (whilst a private man) happy in his Curates (whereof two Dr. Bowles, and Dr. Westfield afterwards became Bishops) and (when a Bishop) no lesse happy in his learned and religious Chaplains.

* Bishop Andrews in London, and Felton in Yarmouth.

* Attested unto me by John Nargate his Son in Law.

TO

TO JOHN CARY,

OF

STANSTED in HARTFORD-SHIRE, Esq;

RAre is your hapineſs in leaving the Court, before it left you. Not in deſerting your attendance on your Maſter, (of whom none more conſtantly obſervant) but in quitting ſuch vanities, which the Court then in Power did tender, and You, then in Prime, might have accepted. Whileſt you ſeaſonably retrenched your Self, and reduced your Soul to an Holy Seriouſnes, declining ſuch expenſive Recreations, (on Principles of Piety, as wel as Providence) wherewith your Youth was ſo much affected.

And now Sir, ſeeing you are ſo judicious in RACING, give me leave to proſecute the Apoſtles Metaphore, in applying my beſt wiſhes to you and to your worthy Lady, which hath repaired the Loſſes cauſed by Loyalty, ſo that you have found in a virtuous Mate, what you have loſt for a gracious Maſter.

Heaven is your Mark, Chriſt your way thither, the Word the way to Chriſt, Gods Spirit the Guide to both. When in this Race Impatience ſhall make you to tire, or Ignorance to ſtray, or Idleneſs to ſtay, or Weakneſs to ſtumble, or Wilfulnes to fall; may Repentance raiſe you, Faith quicken you, Patience ſtrengthen you, til Perſeverance bring you both to the Mark.

Anno Regis Caroli 5 — Anno Dom. 1629 — Wednesday May 13.

1. QUeen Mary ſurpriſed with ſome fright, (as is generally beleeved) antedated the time of her travel by ſome weeks, and was delivered of a Son. But a greater acceleration was endeavoured in his Baptiſme, than what happened at his Birth, ſuch the forwardnes of the Popiſh Prieſts, to ſnatch him from the hands of thoſe as dreſſed him, had not the care of K. Charles prevented them, aſſigning Dr. Web (then waiting his Moneth) to Chriſten him. He died about an houre after; the King very patiently bearing the loſs, as receiving the first fruits of some of his Subjects estates, and as willingly paying those of his own Body, to the King of Heaven.

The birth and death of Pr. Charles.

Anno Dom. 1629 | Anno Regis Caroli 5

Oxford Musck. 2. The University of Oxford, (Cambridge being then heavily infected with the Plague) at once in their verses congratulated the safe Birth, and condoled the short life of this Prince, and a Tetrastich, made by one of Christ-Church, (thus in making his addresse to the Queen) I must not omit.

Quòd Lucina tuos semel est frustrata Labores,
Nec fortunantes præbuit illa manus,
Ignoscas Regina: uno molimine Ventris,
Non potuit Princeps ad tria Regna dari.

This Prince the next day after was buried by Bishop Land in the Chappel at Westminster.

Dr. Leighton his railing Book. 3. During the sitting of the last Parliament, one Leighton a Scotish-man presented a Book unto them: had he been an English man, we durst call him a furious, and now will terme him a fiery (whence kindled let other ghess) Writter. His Book consisted of a continued railing, from the beginning to the end; exciting the Parliament and People to kil all the Bishops, and to smite them under the fifth Rib. He bitterly enveyed against the Queen, calling her a Daughter of Heth, a Canaanite and Idolatress, and ZIONS PLEA was the specious Title of his Pamphet; for which he was sentenced in the Star-chamber, to be whipt and stigmatized, to have his eares cropt and nose slit. But betwixt the pronouncing and inflicting this Censure, he makes his escape into Bedford-shire. May 14

Recovered (after his escape) and severely punished. 4. The Warden of the Fleet was in a Bushel of Troubles about his escape, though alledging that some helped him over the wal, and that he himself knew nothing thereof til the noon after. But no plea seemed available for one in his place but either the keeping, or recovering of his Prisoner, unfortunate in the former, he was happy in the latter, & brought him back into his custody; so that the aforesaid censure was inflicted on him. It is remarkable, that amongst the many accusations charged on Archbishop Land at his trial, the severity on Leighton is not at all mentioned, chiefly because (though he might be suspected active therein) his faults were of so high a nature none then or since dare appear in his defence. The Papists boast that they have beyond the Seat, with them, his Son of another perswasion.

Feoffees to buy in impropriations. 5. Some three yeers since, certain feoffees were (though not incorporated by the Kings Letters Patent, or any Act of Parliament) legally setled in trust to purchase in impropriations with their own and other well disposed Persons money, and with their profit to set up and maintain a constant preaching Ministry in places of greatest need, where the word was most wanting. These consisted of a number neither too few, as the work should burden them, nor so many, as might be a burden to the work, twelve in all, diversly qualified.

1	William Gouge	Drs. in Divinity.
2	Richard Sibbs
3	C. Offspring
4	F. Davenport
5	Ralph Eyre	of Lincolns Inn.
6	S. Brown
7	C. Sherland	of Graves Inn.
8	John White	of Middle Temple.
9	John Geering	Citizens.
10	Richard Davis
11	George Harwood
12	Francis Bridges

Here

Anno Regis Caroli 6 | Anno Dom. 1630

Here were four Divines, to perſwade mens conſciences, four Lawyers to draw all conveiances, and four Citizens who commanded rich Coffers, wanting nothing, ſave (ſince doth all things) ſome Swordmen, to defend all the reſt. Beſides theſe the Capemerchants (as I may term them) there were other inferiour Factors, Mr. Foxley, &c. who were imployed by appointment, or of officiouſnes imployed themſelves in this deſigne.

Begin and proceed hopefully.

6. It is incredible, what large ſums were advanced in a ſhort time towards ſo laudable an imployment. There are indeed in England of Pariſh Churches, nine thouſand two hundred eighty four, endowed with Glebe and Tithes. But of theſe, (when theſe Feoffees entered on their work) three thouſand eight hundred fourty five were either { Appropriated to Biſhops, Cathedrals and Colledges, or { Impropriated (as Lay-fees) to private perſons, as formerly belonging to Abbies.

The redeeming and reſtoring of the latter, was theſe Feoffees deſigne, and it was verily believed (if not obſtructed in their endeavours) within fifty yeers, rather Purchaſes then Money would have been wanting unto them, buying them generally (as Candle-rents) at or under twelve yeers valuation. My Pen paſſing by them at the preſent, may ſafely ſalute them with a God ſpeed, as neither ſeeing nor ſuſpecting any danger in the Deſigne.

The Biſhop of Chalcedon his Epiſcopizing in England

7. Richard Smith titulary Biſhop of Chalcedon taking his honor from Greece, his profit from England (where he Biſhoped it over all the Romiſh Catholiques) was now very buſie in his imployment. But when, where and how oft he acted here, is paſt our diſcoverie, it being never known when Men of his profeſſion come hither, till they be caught here. Now if any demand why the Pope did not intitle him to ſome Engliſh rather then this Grecian Biſhoprick (the grant of both being but of the ſame price of his Holyneſs his breath, and the confirmation equally cheap in wax and parchment) eſpecially ſeeing that in Ireland he had made Anti-Biſhops to all Sees, it is eaſie for one (though none of his Conclave) to conjecture. For in Ireland he had in every Dioceſſe and Pariſh a Counter-Part of People for number and quality, which he had not in England, and therefore to intitle Biſhops here, had but rendered it the more ridiculous in the granter, and dangerous in the accepter thereof.

June 1

Oppoſed by Nicholas Smith.

8. Nicholas Smith a Regular, (and perchance a Jeſuit) much ſtomacked the advancement and activitie of Richard Smith Biſhop of Chalcedon and wrote bitterly againſt him, the hammer of one Smith claſhing againſt another. He fell foul alſo on Dr. Kelliſon Preſident of the Colledge of Doway, who lately ſet forth a Treatiſe of the Dignitie and neceſſity of Biſhop and Secular Clergy, generally oppoſing his Doctrine, and particularly in relation to the Engliſh Biſhops, inſtancing in the following exceptions.

Alledging a Biſhop over Engliſh Catholiques uſeleſſe in perſecution.

9. Firſt, a Biſhop over the Engliſh was uſeleſſe, and might well be ſpared in times of perſecution, there being but two peculiar performances of a Biſhop. viz. Ordination and Confirmation. For the former it might be ſupplyed by Forein Biſhops; the Prieſts of our Engliſh nation being generally bred beyond the Seas. As for confirmation of the Children of Engliſh Catholiques, he much decryed the neceſſity thereof (though not ſo far as to un-ſeven the Sacraments of the Church of Rome) affirming it out of St. * Thomas of Aquin, and other Divines, that, by commiſſion from the Pope, a Prieſt, though no Biſhop, might confirme. To this Dr. Kelliſon his Scholar (or himſelfe under the vizard) replyed, that in the definition of St. Cyprian. A Church was a people united to its Biſhop, and therefore an abſolute neceſſity of that function.

* 3. p. q. 79. art. 11. ad 1.

And burthenſome.

10. Secondly, he was burthenſome to the Church, conſidering the preſent preſſures of poor Engliſh Catholiques, needing now no unneceſſary expences for the maintenance of the Biſhop and his Agents. To this it was anſwered, that Mr. Nicholas Smith, and his Brethren, Regulars, dayly put the Catholiques

Anno Dom. 1630 | Anno Regis Carol. 6

to farre greater charges, as [a] appeareth by the stately Houses, Purchases &c. Indeed generally the little finger of a Jesuit was conceived, in his entertainment, heavier than the Loines of a Secular. Mean time in what care were our English Lay Catholiques, with Issachar couching down between two burthens, [b] bearing the weight of both Regulars and Seculars? But who need pity them who will not pity themselves?

[a] Reply to Mr. N. Smith pag. 294.

[b] Gen. 49.

11. Thirdly, he took exceptions at the person of this Bishop of Chalcedon, as not lawfully called in Canonical Criticisme. First, because not estated in his Episcopall inspection over England, during his life (as a Bishop ought to be) but onely constituted ad beneplacitum Papæ, at the pleasure of the Pope, which restriction destroyeth his being a Lawfull Ordinary. Secondly, he carpeth at him as made by Delegation and Commission, and therefore a Delegate not an Ordinarie. To which the other replyed, that even Legates have that clause in their Commission, limited to the Popes pleasure, and yet no Catholique will question them to be Lawfull Ordinaries. As to the second exception, the same (saith he) doth not destroy his Ordinary-ship, but onely sheweth he was made an Ordinary, in an extraordinary manner: which distinction how farre it will hold good in the Canon Law, let those enquire who are concerned therein.

And this Bishop no Ordinary.

12. Notwithstanding Dr. Kellison his confutation, the insolency of the Regulars daily increased in England, so that they themselves may seem the most seculars; so fixed were they to the wealth and vanity of this world. The Irish Regulars exceeded the English in pride, maintaining (amongst other printed propositions) that the Superiours of Regulars are more worthy than Bishops themselves, because the honor of the Pastor is to be measured from the condition of the Flock: quemadmodum Opilio dignior est subulco, as a Shepheard is of more esteem than a Hoggard. In application of the first to themselves, the last to the Seculars, it is hard to say whether their pride was more in their owne praise, or charity lesse in condemning of others. It was therefore high time for the Doctors of Sorbone in Paris (who for many ages have maintained in their Colledge, the hereditarie reputation of learning) to take these Regulars to taske. Sixty of the Sorbone Doctors censured the aforesaid proposition, and the Archbishop of Paris condemned the Booke of Nicholas Smith, as also another tending to the same subject, made by one Daniel a Jesuit.

Regulars pride & proposition condemned.

163⅓ January 15 30.

13. On what tearms the Regulars and Seculars stand in England at this day, I neither know nor list to enquire. Probably they have learned wit from our woes, and our late sad differences have occasioned their reconcilement. Only I learn this distinction from them, the Catholiques [a] as Catholiques agree always in matters of faith, but the best Catholiques as men may varie in their opinions. I hope they will allow to us, what liberty they assume to themselves.

Quere whether now reconciled

[a] Reply to Mr. N. Smith preface p. 20.

14. Dr. John Davenant Bishop of Salisburie preached his course on a Sunday in Lent at White-Hall before the King and Court, finishing a Text Rom. 6. 23. the former part whereof he had handled the yeer before. In prosecution whereof it seems he was conceived to fall on some forbidden points, in so much that his Majestie (whether at first by his own inclination, or others instigation, is uncertain) manifested much displeasure thereat. Sermon ending his Adversaries at Court hoped hereby to make him fall totally and finally from the Kings favour, though missing their mark herein, as in fine it did appear.

Bishop Davenant his Sermon at Court.

March

15. Two daies after he was called before the Privie Councell, where he presented himself on his knees, and so had still continued for any favour he found from any of his own function there present. But the Temporall Lords bad him arise and stand to his own defence, being as yet only accused, not convicted. Dr. Harsnet Archbishop of York managed all the businesse against him (Bishop Laud walking by all the while in silence spake not one word) making a long oration uttered with much vehemency to this effect.

For which he is convented before the Councell.

First,

Anno Regis Caroli 6 — Anno Dom. 1631.

First, He magnified King James his bounty unto him, who from a private Master of a Colledge in Cambridge (without any other immediate preferment) advanced him by an unusuall rise to the great and rich Bishoprick of Salisbury.

Secondly, He extolled the piety and prudence of King Charles in setting forth lately an usefull Declaration, wherein he had commanded that many intricate questions tending more to distraction then edification of people, should utterly be forborn in preaching, and which had already produced much peace in the Church.

Thirdly, He aggravated the hainousnesse of the Bishops offence, who so ill requited his Majesties favour unto him, as to offer in his own presence, in so great an Auditorie to break his Declaration, inviting others by his example to doe the like.

Fourthly, that high contempt was the lowest tearm could be given to such an offence, seeing ignorance could in no probability be pretended in a person of his reputed learning and eminent Profession.

What the other answered hereunto will best appear by his own letter written to his worthy friend Doctor Ward, giving him an exact account of all proceedings herein in manner as followeth.

March 24 — Bishop Davenant his relation of the whole matter in his letter to Doctor Ward.

"16. As for my Court businesse, though it grieved me that the establi"shed Doctrine of our Church should be distasted, yet it grieved me the "lesse, because the truth of what I delivered was acknowledged even by "those which thought fit to have me questioned, for the deliverie of it.
"Presently after my Sermon was ended, it was signified unto me by my "L. of York, and my L. of Winchester, and my L. Chamberlain, that his Majesty "was much displeased, that I had stirred this question which he had for-"bidden to be medled withall, one way or other: My answer was that I had "delivered nothing, but the received Doctrine of our Church established "in the 17 Article, and that I was ready to justify the truth of what I had "then taught. Their answer was, the Doctrine was not gainsaid, but his "Highnesse had given command, these questions should not be debated,
"and therefore he took it more offensively that any should be so bold, as "in his own hearing to break his royall commands. And here my L. of "York aggravated the offence, from many other circumstances. My reply "was only this. That I never understood that his Majesty had forbid a "handling of any Doctrine comprised in the Articles of our Church, but "only raising of new questions, or adding of new sense thereunto, which I "had not done, nor ever should doe. This was all that passed betwixt us "on Sunday night after my Sermon. The matter thus rested, and I heard
"no more of it, till coming unto the Tuesday Sermon, one of the Clerks
"of the Councell told me, that I was to attend at the Councell-Table, the "next day at two of the clock. I told him I would wait upon their Lord-
"ships at the hour appointed. When I came thither, my L. of York made "a speech well nigh of half an hour long, aggravating the boldnesse of mine "offence, and shewing many inconveniences that it was likely to draw after "it. And he much insisted upon this; what good effect his Majesties De"claration had wrought, how these controversies had ever since been bu"ried in silence, no man medling with them one way or other. When his "Grace had finished his speech, I desired the Lords, that since I was called "thither as an offender, I might not be put to answer a long speech upon
"the suddain, but that my Lords grace would be pleased to charge me
"point by point, and so to receive my answer, for I did not yet understand
"wherein I had broken any commandement of his Majesties, which my "Lord in his whole discourse took for granted. Having made this motion,

Anno Dom. 1637. Anno Regis Caroli 6

" I gave no further answer, and all the Lords were silent for a while. At " length my Lords Grace said I knew well enough the point which was ur- " ged against me, namely the breach of the Kings Declaration. Then I " stood upon this Defence, that the Doctrine of Predestination which I " taught, was not forbidden by the Declaration: First, because in the De- " claration all the Articles are established, amongst which, the Article of " Predestination is one. Secondly, because all Ministers are urged to sub- " scribe unto the truth of the Article, and all Subjects to continue in the " profession of that as well as of the rest. Upon these and such like grounds, I " gathered, it could not be esteemed amongst forbidden, curious, or need- " less Doctrines; and here I desired that out of any Clause in the Declara- " tion it might be shewed me, that keeping my selfe within the bounds of " the Article, I had transgressed his Majesties command; but the Declara- " tion was not produced, nor any particular words in it; onely this was ur- " ged that the Kings will was, that for the peace of the Church these high " questions should be forborne. My answer then was, that I was sorry I " understood not his Majesties intention, which if I had done before, I " should have made choice of some other matter to intreat of, which might " have given none offence; and that for the time to come, I should conform " my self as readily as any other to his Majesties command. The Earle of " Arundell seemed to approve of this my answer, and withall advised me to " proceed no further in my defence. This is in substance all which was done " or said in this matter, and so I was dismissed. The Lords said nothing ei- " ther in approbation of what I had alleadged, to shew that I had not wit- " tingly broken the Kings known command, or in confirmation of the con- " trary, urged against me by my Lords Grace. At my departure I intreated " their Lordships to let his Majesty understand, that I had not boldly, or " wilfully and wittingly, against his Declaration, medled with the fore- " named point; and that now understanding fully his Majesties minde, and " intention, I should humbly yeeld obedience thereunto. This business " thus ended, I went the next day to my L. Chamberlain, and intreated him " to doe me the favor, that I might be brought to kisse the Kings hand, be- " fore I went out of Town, which his Lordship most readily promised and " performed. When I came in, his Majesty declared his resolution, that " he would not have this high point medled withall or debated, either the " one way or the other, because it was too high for the peoples understand- " ing, and other points which concern Reformation and newnes of life, " were more needfull and profitable. I promised obedience herein, and so " kissing his Majesties hand departed. I thought fit to acquaint you with the " whole cariage of this business, because I am afraid many false reports will " be made of it, and contrary one to another, as men stand contrarily affe- " cted. I shewed no letter or instructions, neither have any but these gene- " rall instructions, which King James gave us at our going to Dort, which " make little or nothing to this business. I sought amongst my papers, but " could not finde them on the suddain, and I suppose you have them alrea- " dy. As for my Sermon the brief heads were these: Eternall life is the gift Text, Rom. 6. 23. " of God, through Jesus Christ our Lord. As in the former part, I had spoken " of the threefold miserie of the wicked; so here I expounded the threefold " happines of the godly to be considered.

1. Happy in the Lord whom they serve: God or Christ Jesus.
2. Happy in the reward of their service: Eternall life.
3. Happy in the manner of their reward: χαρισμα, or gratuitum donum in Christo.

" The two former points were not excepted against. In the third and last I " confidered eternall life in three divers instances, in the eternall destination

" thereunto

Anno Regis Caroli 7 Anno Dom. 1631

"thereunto which we call Election, in our Conversion, Regeneration, or "Justification, which I termed the Embryo of Eternall life, John 4. 14. And "last of all in our Coronation, when full possession of eternall life is given "us. In all these I shewed it to be χάρισμα or the free gift of God through "Christ, & not procured, or premerited, by any speciall Acts depending up- "on the free will of Men. The last point, wherein I opposed the Popish Do- "ctrin of Merit was not disliked. The second, wherein I shewed the "effectuall Vocation or Regeneration (whereby we have Eternall life in- "choated and begun in us) is a free gift, was not expressly taxed. Only the "first was it which bred the offence, not in regard of the Doctrin it self, "but because (as my Lords grace said) the King had prohibited the deba- "ting thereof. And thus having let you understand the carriage of this bu- "sinesse I commit you to the protection of the Almighty.

17. This yeer Thomas Dove Bishop of Peterborough ended his life. He was bred in Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge, chosen Tanquam therein, which it seems is a Fellow in all things save the name thereof. Afterwards Chaplain to Q. Elizabeth who made him Dean of Norwich, being much affected with his Preaching, as wont to say that, The * Holy Ghost was again come down in the Dove. He was a constant Housekeeper and Reliever of the Poor, so that such who in his life time condemned him for Covetousnesse, have since justly praised his Hospitality. Now though Doves are generally said to want gall, yet the Non-conformists in his Diocesse will complain of his severity in asserting Ecclesiasticall Discipline, when he silenced five of them in one morning, on the same token that King James is said to say it might have served for five yeers. He was an aged man, being the only Queen Elizabeths Bishop of that Province which died in the Reign of King Charles, living in a poor Bishoprick, and leaving a plentifull estate: to shew that it is not the moisture of the Place, but the long lying of the stone, which gathereth the great mosse therein. In a word, had he been more carefull in conferring of Orders (too commonly bestowed by him) few of his Order had exceeded him for the unblamablenesse of his behaviour.

The death of Bishop Dove.

* Godwin in the Bishops of Peterborough, and Sir John Harington in his continuation.

18. Now began great discontents to grow up in the University of Oxford on this occasion. Many conceived that Innovations (defended by others for Renovations, and now only reduced, as used in the Primitive times) were multiplied in Divine service. Offended whereat, they in their Sermons brake out into (what was interpreted) bitter invectives. Yea their very Texts gave some offence, one preaching on Numbers 14. 4. Let us make us a Captain, and let us return into Egypt. Another on 1 Kings 13. 2. And he cried against the Altar in the word of the Lord, and said, O Altar, Altar, &c. In prosecution whereof they had not only tart reflexion on some eminent Persons in the Church, but also were apprehended to violate the Kings Declaration, for the sopiting of all Arminian controversies.

Troubles begin in Oxford.

19. Dr. Smith Warden of Wadham convented the principal persons (viz. Mr. Thorn of Baliol Col. and Mr. Ford of Magdalen Hall) as offenders against the Kings instructions, and ordered them to bring in the Copies of their Sermons. They suspecting partiality in the Vice-Chancellor, appealed from him to the Proctors, two men of eminent integrity and ability, Mr. Atherton Bruch, and Mr. John Doughty, who received their appeal, presuming the same justifiable by the Statutes of the University. But it seems the Proctors were better Scholars than Lawyers, except any will say both Law, and Learning must submit, when Power is pleased to interpose.

An appeale from the Vice-chancellor to the Proctors.

20. Archbishop Laud did not like these retrograde appeals, but sensible that his own strength moved rather ascendendo, than descendendo, procured the cause to be heard before the King at Woodstock, where it was so ordered, that,

Severely punished.

1 The Preachers complained of, were expelled the University.

Anno Dom. 1631 | Anno Regni Caroli 7

2. The Proctors were deprived of their places for accepting their appeal.

3. Dr. Prideaux, and Dr. Wilkinson were shrewdly checkt for engaging in their behalf.

The former of these two Doctors ingenuously confessing to the King, Nemo mortalium omnibus horis sapit, wrought more on his Majesties affections, than if he had harangued it with a long oration in his own defence.

And ill resented.

21. The expulsion of these Preachers expelled not, but increased the difference in Oxford, which burnt the more for blazing the lesse, many complaining, that the Sword of Justice did not cut indifferently on both sides, but that it was more Penal for some to touch, than others to break the Kings declaration.

The death of Mr. Hildersham.

22. This yeare ended the dayes of Mr. Arthur Hildersham, born at Stechworth in the County, bred in Christ-College in the University of Cambridge, whose education was an experimentall Comment on the words of David, When my father and mother forsake me, then the Lord taketh me up.*

* Psalm 27. 10.

Mr. Father	Thomas Hildersham a Gentleman of an ancient Family.
And Mother	Anne Poole, daughter to Sir Jeffery, neece to Cardinall Poole, grandchild to Sir Richard Poole, and Margaret Countess of Sarisbury, who was daughter to George Duke of Clarence.
Forsake me	Quite casting him off because he would not be bred a Papist, and goe to Rome.
THEN	An emphatical Monosyllable, just in that nick of time.
The Lord taketh me up.	Not immediately (miracles being ceased) but in and by the Hands of Henry Earl of Huntingdon (his honorable kinsman) providing plentifull maintenance for him.

Often silenced and restored.

23. However, after he was entred in the Ministery, he met with many molestations, as hereby doth appear.

1	silenced by	The High Commission, 1590. in June.
2		Bishop Chaderton, 1605. April 24.
3		Bishop Neile, 1611. in November.
4		The Court at Leeds. 1630. March 4.
1	restored by	The High Commission, 1591. in January.
2		Bishop Barlow, 1608. in January.
3		Doctor * Ridley, 1625. June 20.
4		The same Court, 1631. August. 2.

* Vicar Gen. to Archbishop Abbot.

And now me thinks I hear the Spirit speaking unto him, as once to the Prophet * Ezechiel, Thou shal speak and be no more dumb, singing now with the Celestiall Quire of Saints and Angels. Indeed though himself a Non-conformist, he loved all honest men, were they of a different judgment, minded like Luther herein, who gave for his Motto, In quo aliquid CHRISTI video, illum diligo.

* 24. 27.

His long and assiduous preaching.

24. He was Minister of Ashby de la Zouch fourty and three yeers. This putteth me in minde of Theodosius and of Valentinian (two worthy Christian Emperors) their constitutions making those Readers of the Civil Law, Counts of

Anno Regis Caroli | Anno Dom.

of the first Order, cùm ad viginti annos observatione jugi, ac sedulo docendi labore pervenerint, when with daily observation and diligent labor of teaching they shall arrive at twenty yeers.* Surely the Readers of Gods Law which double that time shal not lose their reward.

* c. Th. Lib. 6 tit. 21.

25. The same yeer died Robert Bolton, born in Lancashire, bred in Brasennose Colledge in Oxford, beneficed at Broughton in Northamptonshire. An authoritative Preacher, who majestically became the Pulpit, and whose life is exactly * written at large, to which I refer such as desire farther satisfaction. And here may the Reader be pleased to take notice, that henceforward we shall on just grounds forbear the description of such Divines, as yeerly deceased. To say nothing of them save the dates of their deaths, will add little to the readers information, to say much in praise or dispraise of them, (wherein their relations are so nearly concerned) may add too much to the Writers danger. Except therefore they be persons so eminent for their learning, or active for their lives, as their omission may make a maim in our History, we shall passe them over in silence hereafter.

The death of Bolton.

* By my good friend Mr. Baxshaw.

26. Archbishop Land began to look with a jealous eye on the Feoffees for Impropriations, as who in process of time would prove a thorne in the sides of Episcopacy, and by their purchases become the prime Patrones, for number and greatness of benefices. This would multiply their dependents, and give a secret growth to Non-conformity. Whereupon by the Archbishops procurement a Bil was exhibited in the Eschequer Chamber, by Mr. Noy the Atturny Generall, against the Feoffees aforesaid, and that great Lawyer endevoured to overthrow (as one termed it) their Apocrypha Incorporation.

Impropriation Feoffees questioned.

8 1632

27. It was charged against them, first, that they diverted the charity, wherewith they were intrusted, to other uses, * when erecting a Lecture every morning at St. Antholines in London. What was this but lighting candles to the Sun, London being already the Land of Goshen, and none of those dark and far distant corners, where Soules were ready to famish for lack of the food of the word? What was this but a bold breach of their trust, even in the Eye of the Kingdome?

Their first accusation.

* Being by their Feoffment to erect them where preaching was wanting.

28. They answered that London being the chief staple of charity and the place where the principall contributers to so pious a work did reside, it was but fit, that it should share in the benefit of their bounty. That they were not so confined to the uses in their Feoffment, but that in their choice they might reflect as well on the Eminency, as Necessity of the place; that they expended much of their own (as well as other mens) money, and good reason they should doe therewith as they pleased.

And answere thereunto.

29. It was pressed against them, that they generally preferred Non conformists to the Lectures of their Erection. To this it was answered, that none were placed therein, but such whose Sufficiency and Conformity were first examined and approved by the Ordinary, to be to such a Degree as the Law required. Yea it is said that Mr. White, one of the Feoffees, privately proffered Bishop Land at his house in Fulham, that if he disliked either the Persons, who managed, or Order which they took in this work, they would willingly submit the alteration to his Lordships discretion.

A second charge against them.

30. In conclusion the Court condemned their proceedings, as dangerous to the Church and State, pronouncing the Gifts, Feoffments and Contrivances made to the Uses aforesaid to be illegall, and so dissolved the same, confiscating their money unto the Kings use. Their criminall part was referred to, but never prosecuted in, the Star-chamber, because the Design was generally approved, and both discreet and devout men were (as desirous of the Regulation, so) dolefull at the ruin of so pious a Project.

They are overthrown.

31. Samuel Harsenet about this time ended his life, born in Colchester, bred Scholar, Fellow, Master of Pembroke-Hall in Cambridge, afterwards

The death of Archbishop Harsenet.

Anno Dom. 1633 | Anno Regis Caroli 9

Bishop of Chicheſter and Norwich, Archbishop of York, and privy Counſellor. He was a zealous asſerter of ceremonies, using to complain of (the first I believe who used the expreſſion) of CONFORMABLE PURITANS, who practiſed it out of policy, yet diſſented from it in their judgments. He lieth buried in Chigwell Church in Eſſex, (where he built a School) with this Epitaph, Indignus Epiſcopus Cicestrenſis, indignior Norvicenſis, & indigniſſimus Archiepiſcopus Eboracenſis.

Bradborn his erroneous opinion.

32. Now the Sabbatarian controverſie begun to be revived, which brake forth into a long and hot contention. Theophilus Bradborn, a Miniſter of Suffolk, sounded the first trumpet to this fight, who some five yeers since, namely anno 1628. set forth a Book, dedicated to his Majesty, intituled, A defence of the moſt ancient, and ſacred ordinance of God, The Sabbath Day: maintaining therein,

1. The fourth Commandement simply, and entirely moral.
2. Christians, as well as Jews, obliged to the everlasting observation of that day.
3. That the Lords-day is an ordinary working-day, it being will-worship, and superstition to make it a Sabbath by vertue of the fourth Commandement.

But whileſt Mr. Bradborn was marching furiously, and crying Victoria to himself, he fell into the ambush of the High Commiſſion, whose well tempered severity herein so prevailed upon him, that, submitting himself to a private conference, and perceiving the unsoundneſſe of his own principles, he became a Convert, conforming himself quietly to the Church of England.

Sabbatarian controverſies revived.

2. Francis White Bishop (formerly of Norwich) then of Ely, was employed by his Majesty, to confute Mr. Bradborn his erroneous opinion. In the writing whereof, some expreſſions fell from his pen, whereat many strict people (but far enough from Bradborn's conceipt) took great distaſte. Hereupon Books begat Books, and controverſies on this subject were multiplied, reducible to five principal heads.

1. What is the fittest name to signifie the day set apart for Gods publique service?
2. When that day is to begin, and end?
3. Upon what authority the keeping thereof is bottomed?
4. Whether or no the day is alterable?
5. Whether any recreations, and what kindes of them, be lawfull on that day?

And they are distinguiſhable into three severall opinions:

Sabbatarians.	Moderate men.	Anti-Sabbatarians.
1	1.	1
Are charged to affect the word Sabbath as a Shibboleth in their writing, preaching, and discourſing, to distinguiſh the true Iſraelites from liſping Ephraimites, as a badg of more [pretended] puritie. As for Sunday, some would	Sabbath (especially if Chriſtian be premiſed) may inoffensively be used, as importing in the original only a Reſt. And it is strange that some who have a dearneſſe, yea fondneſs, for some words of Jewiſh extraction [Altar, Temple, &c.] should have such an antipathie against the Sabbath. Sunday may not only safely be used, without danger of Paganiſme, but with increaſe of piety, if retaining the name, we alter the notion, and therewith the notion thereof, because	The word Sabbath (as now used) containeth therein a secret Magazeen of Judaiſm, as if the affecters thereof by spirituall Necromancy endeavoured the reviving of dead and rotten Moſaicall Ceremonies.

Sabbatarians.

Anno Regis Caroli 9 | Anno Dom. 1633

Sabbatarians.

not have it mentioned in Christian mouthes, as resenting of Saxon Idolatry, so called from, and dedicated to the Sunne, which they adored.

2.

Some make the Sabbath to begin on Saturday night, (The evening and the morning were the first day) and others on the next day in the morning, both agreeing on the extent thereof for four and twenty hours.

3.

They found it partly on the law, and light of nature, deriving some countenances for the septenary number, out of heathen authours: and partly on the fourth Commandement, which they avouch equally moral with the rest.

Moderate-Men.

on that day The[a] Sunne of Righteousnesse did arise with healing in his wings. But the most proper name is the Lords-day, as ancient, used in the Apostles[b] time; and most expressive, being both an Historian, and Preacher. For, the Lords day looking backward mindeth us what the Lord did for us thereon, rising from the dead: and, looking forward, it monisheth us what we ought to doe for him on the same, spending it to his glory, in the proper duties thereof.

2.

The question is not of so great concernment. For, in all circular motions, it matters not so much where one beginneth, so be it he continueth the same, untill he return unto that point again. Either of the aforesaid compurations of the day may be embraced.

—— Diésq; quiésq; redibit in orbem.

3.

In the Lords day three things are considerable.

1. A day, founded on the light of nature; pure impure Pagans destining whole daies to their idolatrous service.
2. One day in seven, grounded on the moral equity of the fourth Commandement, which is like the feet and toes of Nebuchad-nezzar's[c] Image, part of potters clay, and part of iron. The clay part, and ceremonial moitie of that Commandement (viz. that seventh day, or Jewish Sabbath) is mouldred away, and buried in Christ's grave. The iron part thereof, viz. a mixture of moralitie therein, one day in seven, is perpetuall, and everlasting.
3. This seventh day (being indeed the eighth from the creation, but one of the seven in the week) is built Anti-Sabbatarians.

2.

They confine the observation of the day, only to the few hours of publique service.

3.

These unhinge the day off from any Divine Right, and hang it meerly on Ecclesiasticall authority first introducing it, as custome, and consent of the Church had since established it.

a Mal. 4. 2.

b Revel. 1. 10.

c Dan. 2. 41.

Sabbatarians.	Moderate-Men.	Anti-Sabbatarians.	Anno Dom. 1633	Anno Regis Carol. 9 on Divine right in a larger ſenſe, having an analogy in the Old, and inſinuations in the New Teſtament, with the continued practice of the Church.
4. The Church, no not ex plenitudine ſuæ poteſtatis, may, or can, alter the ſame.	4. Would be right glad of the generall agreement of the Chriſtian Church; but, withall, right ſorry, that the ſame ſhould be abuſed for the alteration of the Lords day. But, as there is but little hope of the former: ſo is there no fear of the latter, it being utterly unexpedient to attempt the altering thereof.	4. The Univerſall conſent of the Chriſtian Church may alter it. Yea, [d] one ſaith, that the Church of Geneva went about to tranſlate it to Thurſday, but, it ſeems, it was carried in the negative.
5. No exerciſes at all (walking excepted, with which ſtrictneſſe it ſelf cannot be offended) are lawful on this day. Inſomuch as ſome of them have been accuſed of turning the day of reſt, into the day of torture, and ſelf-mastration.	5. The Sabbath (in ſome ſort) was Lord (yea, Tyrant) over the Jews; and they by their ſuperſtition, contented vaſſalls under it. Chriſt was [e] Lord of the Sabbath, and ſtruck out the teeth thereof. Indeed ſuch recreations as are unlawfull on any day, are moſt unlawfull on that day; yea, recreations doubtfull on other daies, are to be forborn on that day, on the ſuſpicion of unlawfulneſſe. So are all thoſe, which, by their over violence, put people paſt a praying capacity. Add alſo thoſe, which, though acted after Evening-Service, muſt needs be preacted by the fancy (ſuch the volatility thereof) all the day before, diſtracting the minde, though the body be at Church. Theſe recreations forbidden, other innocent ones may be permitted.	5. Mixt dancings, Maſques, Interludes, Revells &c. are by them permitted in the intervalls betwixt, but generally after Evening-Service ended.

d Pocklington in his Sunday no Sabbath pag. 8.

e Matth. 12. 8.

f Dr. Paul Micklewaite.

A worthy [f] Doctor, who in his Sermons at the Temple, no leſs piouſly than learnedly, handled the point of the Lords-day, worthily preſſed, that Gentlefolke were obliged to a ſtricter obſervation of the Lords-day, than labouring people. The whole have no need of the Phyſitian, but thoſe who are ſick. Such as are not annihilated with labour, have no title to be recreated with liberty. Let Servants, whoſe hands are ever working, whileſt their eies are waking; let ſuch, who all the foregoing week had their Cheeks moiſtned with ſweat, and hands hardened with labor, let ſuch have ſome recreation on the Lords-day indulged unto them: whilſt perſons of quality, who may be ſaid to keep Sabbath all the week long, I mean who reſt from hard labor, are concerned in in conscience, to observe the Lords-day with the greater abstinence from recreations.

Anno Regni Caroli 9 | Anno Dom.

Troubles begin in Somerset-shire.

34. Pass we now from the pen, to the practicall part of the Sabbatarian difference. Somerset-shire was the stage, whereon the first and fiercest Scene thereof was acted. Here Wakes (much different, I dare say, from the watching prescribed by our Saviour) were kept on th Lords day, with Church-Ales, Bid-Ales, and Clerks-Ales. If the Reader know not the critical meaning, and difference of these words, I list not to be the interpreter; and his ignorance herein, neither is any disgrace, nor can be any damage unto him. The Gentry of that County, perceiving such revells the cause of many, and occasion of moe misdemeanors (many acts of wantonness bearing their dates from such meetings) importuned Sr. Thomas Richardson, Lord Chief Justice, and Baron Denham, then Judges, riding the Western circuit in the Lent vacation, to make a severe Order for the suppressing of all Ales, and Revells on the Lords-day.

March 19

Judg Richardsons order against Lords-day Revells.

35. In complyance with their desire, the aforesaid Judges made an order on the 19. day of March (founded on former precedents signed by Judge Popham, Lord Chief Justice in the latter end of Queen Elizabeth her Reign) therein suppressing such Revells, in regard of the infinite number of inconveniences daily arising by means thereof, injoyning the Constables to deliver a copie thereof to the Minister of every Parish, who, on the first Sunday in February, and likewise the two first Sundays before Easter, was to publish the same every yeare.

Which he would not revoke.

36. The Archbishop of Canterbury beheld this as an usurpation on Ecclesiasticall Jurisdiction, and complained of the Judges to his Majesty, procuring a Commission to Bishop Pierce, and other Divines, to enquire into the manner of publishing this Order, and the Chief Justice his cariage in this business. Notwithstanding all which, the next Assise Judge Richardson gave another strict charge against these Revels, required an account of the publication, and execution of the aforesaid Order, punishing some persons for the breach thereof. After whose return to London the Archbishop sent for him, and commanded him to revoke his former Order, as he would answer the contrary at his peril, telling him it was his Majesties pleasure he should reverse it. The Judge alledged it done at the request of the Justices of the Peace in the County, with the generall consent of the whole Bench, on the view of ancient precedents in that kinde. However, the next Assise he revoked his Order with this limitation, as much as in him lay. At what time also the Justices of the Peace in Somerset shire (who in birth, brains, spirit and estate were inferiour to no County in England) drew up an humble petition to his Majesty, for the suppressing of the aforesaid unlawfull assemblies, concurring with the Lord Chief Justice therein, sending it up by the hand of the Custos Rotulorum, to deliver it to the Earle of Pembroke, Lord Lieutenant of their County, to present it to his Majesty.

1634

The Kings Declaration. * See the 15. of K. James.

37. Just in this juncture of time a Declaration for sports, set forth the fifteenth of King James, was revived, and enlarged. For, his Majesty being troubled with petitions on both sides, thought good to follow his Fathers royal example, upon the like occasion in Lancashire; and we refer the Reader to what we have writen * before, for arguments pro and con about the lawfulnesse of publique reading thereof.

The Archbishop excuseth himself.

38. It was charged at his triall, on the Archbishop of Canterbury, that he had caused the reviving, and enlarging of this Declaration, strong presumptions being urged for the proof thereof. He denied it, yet professing his judgment for recreations on that day, alledging the practice of the Church of Geneva, allowing shooting in long Bowes &c. thereon. Adding also, that, though indulging liberty to others, in his own person he strictly observed served that day. A self-praise, or rather self-purging, because spoken on his life, which seem'd uttered without pride, and with truth, and was not cleerly confured. Indeed they are the best carvers of libertie on that day, who cut most for others, and leave least for themselves.

No Injunction to the Ministers.

39. However, there was no expres in this Declaration, that the Minister of the Parish should be pressed to the publishing. Many counted it no Ministers work, and more proper for the place of the Constable, or Tithing-man to perform it. Must they, who were (if not worst able) most unfitting, hold the Candle to lighten, and let in licentiousnesse? But, because the Judges had enjoyned the Ministers to read their order in the Church, the Kings Declaration was inforced by the Bishops, to be published by them in the same place.

Yet some silenced for refusall to read the book.

40. As for such whose consciences reluctated to publish the Declaration, various were their evasions. Some left it to their Curats to read. Nor was this the plucking out of a thorn from their own, to put it in another Mans conscience, seeing their Curats were perswaded of the lawfulnesse thereof. Others read it indeed themselves, but presently after read the fourth Commandement. And was this fair play, setting God and their King (as they conceived) at odds, that so they themselves might escape in the fray? Others point-blanck refused the reading thereof; for which some of them were suspended ab officio & beneficio, some deprived, and moe molested in the High Commission: it being questionable, whether their sufferings procured more pity to them, or more hatred to the causers thereof.

Moderation of some Bishops therein.

41. All Bishops urged not the reading of the Book with rigour alike, nor punished the refusall with equall severity. I hear the loudest, longest, and thickest complaints come from the Dioceses of Norwich, and of Bath and Wells. I knew a Bishop in the West (to whom I stood related in kindred, and service) who, being pressed by some to return the names of such as refused to read the Book, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, utterly denied: and his words to me were these, I will never turn an accuser of my Brethren, there be enough in the World to take that office. As for the Archbishop of Canterbury, much was his moderation in his own Dioceses, silencing but three (in whom also a concurrence of other non-conformities) through the whole extent thereof. But oh! The necessity of the generall day of Judgment, wherein all Mens actions shall be expounded according to their intentions, which here are interpretable according to other Mens inclinations! The Archbishops adversaries imputed this, not to his charity, but policy, Fox-like preying farthest from his own den, and instigating other Bishops to doe more than he would appear in himself. As for his own Visitation-Articles, some complained they were but narrow as they were made, and broad as they were measured; his under-officers improving, and enforcing the same, by their enquiries, beyond the letter thereof.

Licentiousness increaseth.

42. Many complain that Mans badness took occasion to be worse, under the protection of these sports permitted unto them. For, although liberty on the Lords-day may be so limited in the notions of learned men, as to make it lawfull, it is difficult (if not impossible) so to confine it in the actions of lewd people, but that their liberty will degenerate into licentiousness.

Conceived by some, a concurring cause of our civil Warrs.

43. Many moderate Men are of opinion, that this abuse of the Lords-day was a principall procurer of Gods anger, since poured out on this land, in a long and bloody civil war. Such observe, that our fights of chief concernment were often fought on the Lords-day, as pointing at the punishing of the profanation thereof. Indeed amongst so many battells which in ten yeers time have rent the bowels of England, some on necessity would fall on that day (seeing we have be-rubrick'd each day in the week, almost in the yeer, with English blood) and therefore to pick a solemne providence out of a common

Anno Regis Carol. | Anno Dom.

common-casualty, savours more of curiosity than conscience. Ye, seeing Edge-hill-fight (which first brake the peace, and made an irreconcileable breach betwixt the two parties) was fought on that day, and some battells since of greatest consequence, there may be more in the observation, than what many are willing to acknowledge. But, whatsoever it is which hence may be collected, sure I am, those are the best Christians, who least censure others, and most reform themselves.

A sad alteration.

44. But here it is much to be lamented, that such who at the time of the Sabbatarian controversie, were the strictest observers of the Lords day, are now reeled by their violence into another extreme, to be the greatest neglecters, yea, contemners thereof. These Transcendents, accounting themselves mounted above the Predicament of common piety, averr, they need not keep any, because they keep all days Lords daies, in their elevated holinesse. But alas, Christian duties said to be ever done, will prove never done, if not sometimes solemnly done. These are the most dangerous Levellers, equalling all times, places, and persons, making a generall confusion to be Gospell perfection. Whereas to speak plainly, we in England are, rebus sic stantibus, concerned now more strictly to observe the Lords day, than ever before. Holy-daies are not, and Holy-eves are not, and Wednesday and Friday-Letanies are not, and Lords day eves are not, and now some (out of errour, and others out of profanencss) goe about to take away the Lords-day also, all these things make against Gods solemn and publique service. Oh let not his publique worship, now contracted to fewer chanells, have also a shallower stream. But enough of this subject; wherein if I have exceeded the bounds of an Historian, by being to large therein, such will pardon me, who know (if pleasing to remember) that Divinity is my proper profession.

Irish impropriations restored.

45. At this time miserable the maintenance of the Irish Clergy, where Scandalous means, made Scandalous Ministers. And yet a Popish Priest would grow fat in that Parish where a Protestant would be famished, as have not their lively-hood on the oblations of those of their own Religion. But now such Impropriations as were in the Crown, by the King were restored to the Church, to a great diminution of the Royall Revenew, though his Majesty never was sensible of any loss to himself, if thereby gain might redound to God, in his Ministers. Bishop Laud was a worthy Instrument in moving the King to so pious a work, and yet this his procuring the restoring of Irish, did not satisfy such discontented at his obstructing the buying in of English Impropriations: thus those conceived, to have done hurt at home will hardly make reparations with other good deeds at distance.

The 39 Articles received in Ireland.

46. A Convocation (concurrent with a Parliament) was called and kept at Dublin in Ireland, wherein the 39. Articles of the Church of England were received in Ireland for all to subscribe unto. It was adjudged fit, seeing that Kingdome complies with England in the Civill government, it should also conform thereto in matters of Religion. Mean time the Irish Articles concluded formerly in a Synode 1615. (wherein Arminianisne was condemned in terminis terminantibus and the observation of the Lords day resolved jure Divino) were utterly excluded.

Bishop Laud refuseth a Cardinalls-Cap.

47. A Cardinals-Cap once and again offered by the Pope, to Bishop Laud, was as often refused by him. The fashion thereof, could not fit his Head, who had studied and written so much against the Romish Religion. He who formerly had foiled the Fisher himself in a publick disputation, would not now be taken with so silly a bait, but acquainted the King therewith: timuit Romam vel dona ferentem, refusing to receive any thing from Rome till she was better reformed.

1633

Bishop Juxon made Lord Treasurer.

48. Doctor William Juxon Bishop of London, was by Bishop Lauds procurement made Lord Treasurer of England, entring on that Office with many and great disadvantages. First, because no Clergy-man had executed the same, since William Grey Bishop of Ely, almost two hundred yeare agoe, in the raign of King Edward the fourth. Secondly, because the Treasury was very poor, and ill in private houses, bare walls make giddy Hous-wives, in Princes Palaces, empty Coffers make unsteady Statesmen. Thirdly, because a very Potent (I cannot say Competitor, the Bishop himself being never a Petitor for the Place, but) desirer of this Office was frustrated in his [almost assured] expectation of the same to himself.

Anno Dom. 1635 | Anno Regis Caroli 10

His commendable carriage.

49. However so discreet his carriage in that place, it procured a generall love unto him, and politick malice, despairing to bite, resolved not to bark at him. He had a perfect command of his passion, (an happiness not granted to all Clergy-men in that age, though privy-Counsellors,) slow, not of speech as a defect, but to speak, out of discretion, because when speaking he plentifully payed the principall and interest of his Auditors expectation. No hands, having so much money passing thorough them, had their fingers less soiled therewith. It is probable his frugality would have cured the consumption of the Kings Exchequer, had not the [unexpected] Scotch commotion, put it into a desperate relapse. In this particular he was happy above others of his order, that whereas they may be said, in some sort to have left their Bishopricks (flying into the Kings quarters for safety) he staid at home till his Bishoprick left him, rouled from his Swans-nest at Fulham for a bird of another feather to build therein.

Arch-bishop Land presses conformity.

50. Dr. Land, (formerly Archbishop in power) now so in place, after the decease of Bishop Abbots, this yeer kept his metropoliticall visitation, & hence-forward conformity was more vigorously pressed than before. Insomuch that a Minister was censured in the High-Commission for this expression in a sermon, That it was suspicious that now the night did approach because the shadows were so much longer than the body, and ceremonies more in force then the power of godlinesse. And now many differences about divine worship, began to arise, whereof many books were writen pro and con. So common in all hands, that my pains may be well spared in rendering a particular account of what is so universally known. So that a word or two will suffice.

Our Churches succeed not to the Temple, but Synagogues.

51. One controversy was about the Holiness of our Churches, some maintaining, that they succeed to the same degree of sanctity with the Tabernacle of Moses, & Temple of Solomon, which others flatly denyed. First, because the Tabernacle, and Temple, were, and might be, but one at a time, whil'st our Churches, without fault, may be multiplyed without any [set] number. They both for their fashion, fabrick, and utensils, were jure divino, their Architects being inspired, whil'st our Churches are the product of humane fancy. Thirdly, God gloriously appeared both in the Tabernacle and Temple, only graciously present in our Churches. Fourthly, The Temple was a type of Christs Body, which ours are not. More true it is, our Churches are heirs to the holyness of the Jewish Synagogues, which were many, and to whom a reverence was due, as publiquely destined to divine service.

Adoration towards the Altar.

52. Not less the difference about the manner of adoration to be used in Gods-House, which some would have done towards the Communion-Table, as the most remarkable place of Gods presence. Those used a distinction between bowing ad altare towards the Altar, as directing their adoration that way, and ad altare to the Altar, as terminating their worship therein; the latter they detested as Idolatrous, the former they defended as lawfull and necessary, such a* slovenly unmannerlynes had lately possessed many people in their approaches to Gods House that it was high time to reform.

* Mal. 1. 7.

Disliked by many.

53. But such as disliked the gesture, could not, or would not, understand the distinction as in the Suburbs of Superstition. These allowing some corporall adoration lawfull, yea necessary, seeing no reason the Body of Man, yea the

Totall

Anno Regis Caroli 13 Anno Dom. 1637

Totall Sunne of Him, which is visible [his Body,] should be exempted from Gods service, except such a Writ of Ease could be produced and proved from Scripture. But they were displeased with this adoration because such as injoyn it maintain one kinde of reverence due to the very place, another to the Elements of the Sacraments, if on the Table, a third to God himself: these severall degrees of reverence ought to be rayled about as well as the Communion-Table and cleerly distinguished, lest that be given to the Creature which belongs to the Creator, and such as shun profanation run into Idolatry.

54. A controversy was also started about the Pasture of the Lords-Board, Communion-Table, or Altar, the last name beginning now in many Mens mouths to out the two former. Some would have it constantly fixed with the sides East and West ends North and South, on a graduated advance next the East-wall of the Chancell, citing a Canon and the practise in the Kings-Chappell for the same. Others pressed the Queens injunctions that (allowing it at other times to stand, but not Altar-wise in the Chancell) it ought to be set in the body of the Church when the Sacrament is celebrated thereon.

55. Such the heat about this Altar till both sides had almost Sacrificed up their mutual charity thereon, and this controversy was prosecuted with much needless animosity. This mindeth me of a passage in Cambridge, when King James was there present, to whom a great Person complained of the inverted situation of a Colledge-Chappell, [North and South] out of designe to put the House to the cost of new building the same. To whom the King answered, It matters not how the Chappell stands, so their hearts who goe thither be set aright in Gods service. Indeed if moderate men had had the managing of these matters, the accommodation had been easy with a little condescension on both sides. But as a small accidentall heat or cold (such as a healthfull body would not be sensible of) is enough to put him into a fit, who was formerly in latitudine febris, so mens minds distempered in this age with what I may call a mutinous tendency, were exasperated with such small occasions which otherwise might have been passed over and no notice taken thereof.

June 14. Wednesday

Mr William Prinne.

56. For now came the censure of Mr. Prinne, Dr. Bastwick, and Mr. Burton, and we must goe a little backwards to take notice of the nature of their offences. Mr. William Prinne born (about Bath) in Glocestershire, bred some time in Oxford, afterwards Utter-Barister of Lincolns-Inn, began with the writing of some usefull and Orthodox Books. I have heard some of his Detractours account him as only the hand of a better head setting forth at first the endeavours of others. Afterwards he delighted more to be numerous with many then ponderous with select quotations, which maketh his Books to swell with the loss oft-times of the Reader, sometimes of the Printer, and his Pen generally querulous hath more of the Plaintiff then of the Defendant therein.

a The perpetuity of the regenerate man his estate.

57. Some three yeers since he set forth a Book called Histriomastrix, or the Whip of Stage-players. Whip so held and used by his hand, that some conceived the Lashes thereof flew into the face of the Queen her self, as much delighted in Masques. For which he was severely censured to lose his EARES on the Pillory, and for a long time (after two removalls to the Fleet) imprisoned in the Tower. Where he wrote, and whence he dispersed new Pamphlets, which were interpreted to be Libells against the established Discipline of the Church of England, for which he was indited in the Star-chamber.

Accused for libelling against the Bishops.

58. Dr. John Bastwick (by vulgar errour generally mistaken to be a Scotchman) was born at Writtle in Essex, bred a short time in Emanuell-Colledge, then travailed nine yeers beyond the Seas, made Dr. of Physick at Padua. Returning home he practised it at Colchester, and set forth a Book in Latine (wherein his Pen commanded a pure and fluent style) entituled Flagel-

Dr. Bastwick his accusation.

lum Pontificis, & Episcoporum Latialium. But it seems he confined not his character so to the Latian Bishops beyond the Alpes, but that our English Prelates counted themselves touched therein. Hereupon he was accused in the High-Commission, committed to the Gate-house, where he wrote a second Book taxing the injustice of the proceedings of the High-Commission, for which he was indicted in the Star-Chamber.

Mr. Burton his character.

59. Mr. Henry Burton Minister rather took a snap then made a meal in any University, was first Schoolmaster to the Sonnes of the Lord Cary (afterwards Earl of Monmouth) whose Lady was Governesse to King Charles when Prince. And this opportunity (say some) more then his own deserts, preferred him to the service of Pr. Ch. being designed (as I have heard) to wait on him in Spain, but afterwards (when part of his goods were shipped for the voyage) excluded the attendance. Whether because his parts and learning were conceived not such, as to credit our English Church in Forain-Countries, or because his Principles were accounted uncomplying with that imployment.

The cause of his discontent.

60. The crudity of this affront lay long on his minde, hot stomachs (contrary to corporall concoction) being in this kinde the slowest of digestion. After the venting of many mediate discontents, on the last fifth of November he took for his Text Prov. 24. 21. My Sonne fear thou the Lord and the King, and meddle not with them that are given to change. This Sermon was afterwards printed, charging the Prelats for introducing of severall innovations into Divine worship, for which, as a Libell, he was indicted in the Star-Chamber.

Their fault generall.

61. But the fault generall, which at this day was charged on these three Prisoners at the Barr in the Star-Chamber, was this. That they had not put in their effectuall answer into that Court wherein they were accused, though sufficient notice, and competent time was allowed them for the performance thereof. The Lord Keeper Coventry minded them, that for such neglect, they had a Precedent, wherein the Court after six dales had taken a cause pro confesso, whereas the favour of six weeks was allowed unto them, and now leave given them to tender reason, why the Court should not proceed to present censure.

Mr. Prinne his Plea rejected.

62. Hereat Mr. Prinne first moved that they would be pleased to accept a cross Bill (which he there tendered) against the Prelates. This the Lord-Keeper refused to accept of at the present, as not being the business of the day. Then he moved that the Prelates might be dismissed the Court: It being agreeable neither to nature, reason, nor justice, that those who were their Adversaries should be their Judges. This also was rejected by the Lord Keeper, because by the same proportion, had he libelled against the Temporall Lords, Judges, and Privy Counsellors in the place; by this Plea, none should passe censure upon them, because all were made Parties.

And his answer refused.

63. Mr. Prinne proceeded to shew he had done his endeavour to prepare his answer, being hindred first by his close imprisonment, denyed pen, ink and paper, and by the imprisonment also of his Servant, who was to sollicit his business. That the Councell assigned him came very late, and though twice payed for their pains, deferred the drawing up of his answer, and durst not set their hands unto it. Mr. Hele, one of his Councell being present, confessed that he found his answer would be very long, and of such a nature as he durst not subscribe it, fearing to give their Lordships distaste.

So is Dr. Bastwicks.

64. Dr. Bastwick being spoken to, to speak for himself, why he brought not in his answer before; laid the blame on the cowardise of his Councell that durst not sign it for fear of the Prelates. He there tendred his answer on oath with his own hand, which would not be accepted. He spake much of his own Abilities, that he had been a Souldier able to lead an Army of men into the Field, and now was a Physitian able to cure Kings, Princes, and and Emperors; and therefore how unworthy it was to curtallize his EARES, generally given out by the Bishops Servants, as a punishment intended unto him. He minded them of the mutability of all earthly things, and chiefly of the changes in the Court; where he, * lately the chief Judge therein, was the next day to have his own cause censured: wishing them seriously to consider, that some who now sate there on the Bench, might stand Prisoners at the Barre another day, and need the favour which now they denyed.

Anno Regis Caroli 13 Anno Dom. 1637

* The Bishop of Lincoln.

65. Mr. Burton being asked what he could alledge, why the Court should not take his Fault pro confesso, pleaded that he had put in his answer, drawn up with great pains and cost, signed by his Councell, and received into the Court. The Lord-Keeper rejoyned that the Judges had cast his answere out as imperfect. Judge Finch affirming that they did him a good turn in making it imperfect, being otherwise as libellous as his Book, and deserving a censure alone.

Mr. Burtons cast out for imperfect.

66. Here the Prisoners desiring to speak were commanded silence, and the premises notwithstanding the Court proceeded to censure: namely, that they should lose their EARES in the Palace Yard at Westminster, fining them also five thousand pound a man to his Majesty, perpetuall imprisonment in three remote places. The Lord Finch added to Mr. Prinnes censure, that he should be branded in each Cheek with S. L. for Slanderous Libeller, to which the whole Court agreed. The Archbishop of Canterbury made a long speech, since printed, to excuse himself from the introducing of any Innovations in the Church, concluding it, that he left the Prisoners to Gods mercie and the Kings justice.

The severe censure.

67. It will be lawfull and safe to report the discourse of severall persons hereon. This censure fell out scarce adaquate to any judgement, as conceiving it either too low, or too high for their offence. High Conformists counted it too low, and that it had been better if the Pillorie had been changed into a Gallowes. They esteemed it improvidence (but by their leaves more of Machiavill than of Christ in such Counsell) to kindle revenge, and not to quench life in such turbulent Spirits. The only way with them, had been to rid them out of the way.

Esteemed too low by some.

68. Most moderate men thought the censure too sharp, too base and ignominious for Gentlemen of their ingenuous vocation. Besides, though it be easie in the notion, it is hard in the action to fix shame on the Professors, and sever it from the Professions of Divinity, Law, and Physick. As for the former, though Burton was first * degraded, yet such who maintain an indelible character of Priesthood hold that Degradation cannot delete what Ordination hath impressed; and grant the censure pronounced ad terrorem, it might have become the Bishops to mediate for a mitigation thereof. Let Canvas be rough and rugged, Lawn ought to be soft and smooth. Meekness, Mildness, and Mercy being more proper for men of the Episcopall Function.

Too high by most.

* By Sir John Lamb in the high Commission in St. Pauls.

June 27

69. Two dayes after, three Pillories were set up in the Palace-yard, or one double one, and a single one at some distance, for Mr. Prinne as the chief Offender. Mr. Burton first suffered, making a long speech in the Pillorie, not entire and continued, but interrupted with occasionall expressions. But the main intent thereof was to parallel his sufferings with our Saviours. For at the first sight of the Pillory, Me thinks, said he, I see Mount-Calvary whereon the three Crosses were erected. If Christ was numbred amongst Theeves, shall a Christian think much for his sake to be numbred amongst Rogues? And whereas one told an Halberteer standing by, who had an old rusty Halbert (the Iron whereof was tacked to the staffe with an old crooked nail) What an old rusty weapon is this? Mr. Burton over-hearing them answered: It seems to be one of those Halberts which accompanied Judas when Christ was betrayed and apprehended.

30

Mr. Burton his words on the Pillory.

Severall censures on his behaviour.

70. His Eares were cut off very close, so that the Temporall or Head Artery being cut, the blood in abundance streamed down upon the Scaffold, all which he manfully endured, without manifesting the least shrinking thereat. Indeed of such who measured his minde by his words, some conceived his carriage farre above: others (though using the same scale) suspected the same to be somewhat beside himself. But let such who desire more of his character, consult with his printed life, written with his own hand, though it be hard for the most Excellent Artist truely to draw his own Picture.

Mr. Bastwick his Speech.

71. Dr. Bastwick succeeded him, making a Speech to this effect. Here are many spectatours of us, who stand here as Delinquents, yet am I not conscious to my self of the least trespasse, wherein I have deserved this outward shame. Indeed I wrote a Book against Antichrist the Pope, and the Pope of Canterbury said it was written against him. But were the Presse open unto us, we would scatter his Kingdome, and fight courageously against Gog and Magog. There be many here that have set many daies apart in our behalf (let the Prelates take notice thereof) and have sent up strong prayers to God for us, the strength and fruit whereof we have felt all along in this cause. In a word, so farre am I from fear or care that had I as much blood as would swell the Thames (then visible unto him, his face respecting the South) I would lose every drop thereof in this cause.

Many Men many mindes

72. His Friends much admired and highly commended the erection of his minde triumphing over pain and shame, making the one easie, the other honourable, and imputed the same to an immediate Spirituall support. Others conceived that anger in him acted the part of patience, as to the stout undergoing of his sufferings, and that in a Christian there lyeth a reall distinction betwixt Spirit and Stomach, Valour and Stubbornesse.

Mr. Prinns his Speech.

73. Mr. Prinne concluded the sad sight of that day, and spake to this purpose. The cause of my standing here is for not bringing in my Answer, God knoweth, my conscience beareth witnesse, and my Counsell can tell, for I paid them twice though to no purpose. But their cowardise stands upon Record. And that's the reason why they did proceed, and take the cause pro confesso against me. But rather than I would have my cause a leading cause to the depriving of the Subjects liberties, which I seek to maintain, I choose to suffer my body to become an example of this punishment.

His behaviour at the censure.

74. The censure was with all rigour executed on him, and he who felt the most, fretted the least; commended for more kindly patience than either of his Predecessours in that place. So various were mens fancies in reading the same letters, imprinted in his face, that some made them to spell the guiltiness of the Sufferer, but others the cruelty of the Imposer. Of the latter sort many for the cause, more for the man, most for humanity sake bestowed pity upon him: and now all three were remanded to their former Prisons; and Mr. Prinne as he returned by water to the Tower, made this Distick upon his own stigmatizing.

S. L.

Stigmata maxillis referens, insignia Laudis, Exultans remeo, Victima grata Deo.

Not long after they were removed: Mr. Prinne to Carnarvan-Castle in Wales: Dr. Bastwicke, and Mr. Burton; the one to Lancaster-Castle, the other to Launceston in Cornwall.

Their removall.

75. But it seems these places were conceived to have, either too little of Privacy, or too much of Pleasure. The two latter therefore were removed again; One to the Isle of Scilly, the other to the Isle of Gernzey; and Mr. Prinne to Mount Orgueile-Castle in Jersey. This in vulgar apprehensions, added breadth to the former depth of their sufferings, scattering the same over all all the English Dominions, making the Islands thereof as well as the Continent partake of their patience. And here we leave them all in their Prisons, and particularly Mr. Prinne improving the Rocks and the Seas (good Spirituall Husbandrie) with pious meditations. But we shall heare more of them hereafter at the beginning of the Parliament.

Anno Regis Caroli 13 | Anno Dom. 1637

A preparative to the censure of the Bishop of Lincoln.

76. Next came the Bishop of Lincoln to be censured in the Star-chamber, and something must be premised preparative thereunto. After the great Seal some ten yeares since was taken from him, he retired himself to Bugden in Huntingdonshire, where he may be said to have lived in a publick privacie. So many his Visitants, hospitall his house-keeping: it being hard to say, whether his Table were more free and full in dyet or discourse: indeed he had a plentifull estate to maintain it, besides his purchased Land. The revenues of his Bishoprick, and Deanery of Westminster, out of which, long since he had been shaken, if not fastned therein, by the Letters Patents of King James. His Adversaries beheld him with envious eyes, and one great Prelate plainly said in the presence of the King, that the Bishop of Lincoln lived in as much pompe and plenty as any Cardinall in Rome, for Dyet, Musick, and attendance. They resolved therefore to humble his height, the concurrence of many matters ministring occasion thereunto.

The Bishop his discourse at the table with Sir John Lamb.

77. Sir John Lambe Dean of the Arches formerly a Favourite of Lincoln (fetcht off from being prosecuted in Parliament, and knighted by his means) with Dr. Sibthorp, Allen and Burden (two Proctors as I take them) were entertained at the Bishops table at Bugden, where their table was (the discourse generall of those dayes) against Puritans. The Bishop advised them to take off their heavy hand from them, informing them that his Majesty intended to use them hereafter with more mildeness, as a considerable party having great influence on the Parliament, without whose concurrence the King could not comfortably supply his necessities: adding moreover that his Majesty had communicated this unto him by his own mouth, with his resolutions hereafter of more gentleness to men of that opinion.

Informed against him in the Star-chamber.

78. Some yeers after upon the denial of an Officials place in Leicestershire (which notwithstanding, he carried in despight of the Bishop) Sir John Lambe fell foul with his old Friend, and in revenge complained of him for revealing the Kings secrets concredited to his privacy. Hereupon Attorney Noy was employ'd to put the same into an Information in the Star-chamber, unto which Bishop Williams by good advise of counsell did plead and demurre, as containing no matter fit for the cognizance of that Court, as concerning words spoken of matters done in Parliament, & secrets pretended to be revealed by him, a Privy Counsellor and Peere of Parliament, and therefore not to be heard but in that High-Court. This Demurrer being heard & argued by Counsell Pro and Con in open Court for two or three houres (the Lord Keeper and other Lords there present finding no cause nor colour to overrule it) was referred to Judge Richison (who lately having singed his Coat from blasts at the Court) by him to be smothered, who in a private Chamber presently after dinner over-ruled the same in a quarter of an houre.

Deserteth his intents of compounding with the King.

79. The Demurrer thus rendred useless in the Bishops defence, he used what means he could by the Lord Weston (a proper person, because Treasurer to meddle in money matters) to compound with his Majesty: but his Majesty resolved to have the Bishops answer, and confession of his fault before he would compound with him. Whereupon the Bishop quitting all thoughts of composition, resolved to weather out the Tempest of his Majesties displeasure at open sea, either out of confidence of the strength of his tackling, his own innocence, or skill of his Pilots, who were to steere his suit, having the learnedst Counsel of the Land by whose advise he put in a strong plea, which likewise being argued and debated in open Court, came at last to the the ſame untimely end with the Demurrer, as referred to Judge Richiſon, and ſmothered by him in a Chamber.

Anno Dom. 1637 | Anno Regis Caroli 13

Puts in an eſpeciall anſwer.

80. This Plea thus overruled, the Biſhop put in an eſpeciall anſwer to the information, declaring, how all was grounded by a conſpiracy and combination of the perſons named in the Bill, to wit, (Lambe, Sibthorpe, Allen and Burden) out of an intent to advance themſelves, and hatred they bare to him, for not permitting them to pole and pill the Kings Subjects in Leiceſterſhire, in their Eccleſiaſticall Courts by haling them into their nets ex officio mero without any previous complaint, under an imaginary colour of Puritaniſm. To this eſpeciall anſwer, Atturney Noy rejoyned in iſſue, admitting the Biſhop to prove his eſpeciall matters, who proceeded to the examination of his witneſſes therein.

Kilvert entertained his Proſecutor.

81. Now began Atturney Noy to grow weary of the matter, and became ſlow and remiſſe in the proſecution thereof, whether out of reſpect to the Biſhop whom he honoured (though tart in tearms againſt him to pleaſe a greater Prelate) or out of conſciouſneſſe that more weight was hung thereon, then the ſlender Wyres of the cauſe would bear. Hereupon Richard Kilvert was entertained to follow the Suite (though not entring himſelf as he ought Proſecutour upon record) at the beſt being a neceſſary evill, to doe what an honeſt man would be aſhamed of. Indeed like an Engliſh Maſtiffe he would fiercely flye upon any perſon, or project, if ſet on with promiſe of profit, and having formerly made his Breakfaſt on Sir John Bennet, he intended to dine and ſupp on the Biſhop. And though his ſtrength conſiſted much in a cunning head, yet farre more in an able back as ſeconded in this ſuit and abetted from the Court in his undertakings. This Kilvert ſo wrought himſelf into Warren an Examiner of the Star-Chamber, that (ſome ſay) contrary to his oath he revealed unto him that the Teſtimony of one John Pregion Regiſter of Lincoln and Leiceſter was moſt materiall in the Biſhop his defence.

Pregion a principall witneſſe of the Biſhop much molefted.

82. Then was it Kilvert his deſigne to uncredit the Teſtimony of Pregion, by charging him with ſeveral accuſations, particularly getting a Baſtard though being no matters upon record, to take away the validity of his witneſſe. The Biſhop apprehending himſelf neceſſitated to weigh up Pregion his repute, engaged himſelf more zealouſly therein, then was conceived conſiſtent with the gravity of ſo great a Prelate for ſo inconſiderable a perſon. Eſpecially to ſuch who knew not that Dr. Morriſon and this Pregion, were the only perſons of note preſent at the Biſhop his Table when the diſcourſe paſſed betwixt him and Sir John Lambe. The Baſtard laid to his charge, is bandied at Lincoln-Seſſions, backward and forward betwixt Pregion and another. The firſt Court fathe[illegible] upon him, the next freed him from it, and a third returned it upon him again. This laſt order of Seſſions was again diſſolved as illegall, by the Judges of the Kings-Bench, and Pregion cleared from the child charged on him. Sir John Munſon a Juſtice of that County appearing very active againſt him, and the Biſhop no leſſe earneſt in his behalf.

Deſireth his [illegible] with the King.

TO

Anno Regis Caroli 13 | Anno Dom. 1637

83. Here hapned the occasion of that wch was afterwards so highly charged, and heavily censured on the Bishop Williams, viz. tampering to suborne witnesses. Henceforward Kilvert let fall his first information, which from this day sunk in silence, and employed all his power on the proof of Subornation. That Bandogg, let goe his first hold, too hard for his Teeth to enter, and fastned his fangs on a softer place, so to pinch the Bishop to purpose; yea so expensive was the suit that the Bishop (well skilled in the charge of charitable works) might with the same cost have built and endowed a small Colledge.

Subornation of perjury charged on the Bishop.

84. Some daies before the hearing, a Noble Lord of his Majesties Councell, the Bishops great Friend, interposed himself to compound the matter, prevailing so farre that on his payment of two thousand pound, the Suit should be superseded in the Star-Chamber, and he freed from further molestation. But at this Lords return the price was risen in the market, and besides the aforesaid summe, it was demanded of him, that to procure his peace he must part with his Deanery of Westminster, Parsonage of Walgrave, and Prebend of Lincoln which he kept in commendam. To this the Bishop answered, that he would in no case forgoe those few remainders of the favour which his dead master King James had conferred upon him.

In vain endeavoureth a composition with the King

85. Not long after another bargain was driven, by the well intended endeavours of the same Lord, that seeing his Majesty at that time had much occasion of moneys: if he would but double the former summe, and lay down four thousand pounds, he should be freed from further trouble, and might goe home with all his parcells about him. The Bishop returned that he took no delight, to fence at law with his Soveraign, and thankfully embracing the motion, prepared himself for the payment. When a great Adversary stepping in, so violented his Majesty to a Tryall, that all was not onely frustrated, but this afterwards urged against the Bishop, to prove him conscious of a crime from his forwardness to entertain a composition.

frustrated therein by his great Adversary.

May 11. Tuesday.

86. The day of censure being come, Sir John Finch Lord chief Justice fined the Bishop ten thousand pound for tampering to suborn Witnesses; Secretary Windebank concurred with (that little Bell, being the lowdest and shrillest in the whole peal) as who alone motioned to degrade him; which was lustily pronounced by a Knight and Layman, having no precedent for the same in former ages. The other Lords brought the fine downe to eight thousand pound, and a thousand marks to Sir John Munson, with suspension ab officio et beneficio, and imprisoning him, during the Kings pleasure. The Earl of Arundell added, that the cause in its self was extraordinary, not so much prosecuted by the Attorney, as immediately by the King himself recommended to their justice. Manchester Lord privy Seal said that this was the first precedent, wherein a Master had undone himself to save his Servant.

His heavy censure.

87. The Archbishop of Canterbury did consent thereunto, aggravating the fault of Subornation of perjury, with a pathetical speech of almost an houre long, shewing how the world was above three thousand years old before ripe enough to commit so great a wickednes, and Jesabell the first in Scripture branded with that infamie, whose false Witnesses the holy Spirit refused to name, otherwise than under the Character of Men of Belial. Wherefore although (as he said) he himself had been five times down on his knees to his Majesty, in the Bishops behalf; yet considering the guilt so great, he could not but agree with the heaviest censure. And although some Lords, the Bishops Friends, as Treasurer Weston, Earl of Dorset &c. concurred in the fine, with hope the King should have the sole honor of the mitigation thereof, yet his Majesties necessities, meeting with the person adjudged guilty, and well known for solvable; no wonder if the utmost penny of the fine was exacted.

To which the Archbishop of Canterbury did concurre.

88. At the same time were fined with the Bishop, George Walker his Secretary,

Three of his Servants fined with him.

Anno Dom. 1637 | Anno Regis Caroli 13

tary, Cadwallader Powell his Steward, at three hundred pounds a piece, and Thomas Lund the Bishop his Servant at a thousand Markes, all as Defendants in the same cause, yet none of them was imprisoned, save Lund for a few weeks, and their fine never called upon unto this day, which the Bishop said, was commuted into such Offices, as hereafter they were to doe in the favour of Kilvert.

The complaints against the unjust proceedings against him, put in by the Bishop into the Parliament.

7. To make this our History entire, the matter shall rather rule the time than the time the matter, in this particular suite. Be it therefore known to the Reader, that some foure years after, viz. 1640. when this Bishop was fetcht out of the Tower, and restored a Peer in Parliament, he therein presented severall grievances, concerning the indirect prosecution of this cause against him, whereof these the principall.

First, that his Adversaries utterly waved, and declined the matter of their first Information, about revealing the Kings secrets; as hopeless of success therein, and sprung a new mine to blow up his credit, about perjury in the examination of Witnesses. Whereas he conceived it just, that all accidentalls and occasionalls should sink with the substance of the accusation, otherwise suits would be endless, if the branches thereof should still survive when the root doth expire.

* These complains I extracted out of the Bishop his Originall.

* Secondly, that he was deprived of the benefit of bringing in any exceptions against the Testimonies of Sir John Lambe and Dr. Sibthorp, to prove their combination against him, because they deposing pro Domino Rege, none must impeach the credit of the Kings Witnesses, who must be reputed holy and sacred in what they averre, in so much that after Briefs were drawn by Counsells on both sides, the Court was moved to expunge those Witnesses, which made most against the King, and for the Defendant.

Thirdly, that Kilvert used all wayes to menace, and intimidate the Bishop his Witnesses, frighting them as much as he could, out of their own consciences, with dangers presented unto them. To this purpose, he obained from Secretary Windebank, that a Messenger of the Star-chamber, one Pechye by name, was directed to attend him all along the speeding of the Commission in the Country, with his Coat of Armes upon him, with power to apprehend, and close imprison any person whom Kilvert should appoint, pretending from the Secretary Warrants for matters of State, and deep consequence so to doe; by vertue whereof, in the face of the Commission, he seised on, and committed George Walker and Thomas Lund, two materiall Witnesses for the Bishop, and by the terror thereof chased away many more, whose Depositions were necessary to the cleering of the Bishop his integrity: yet when the aforesaid two Prisoners, in the custody of the Messenger were produced before Secretary Winchbank, he told them he had no matters of State against them, but turned them over to Kilvert, wishing them to give him satisfaction, and were not permitted to have their liberty, untill after long close imprisonment, they were forced to confess under their own hands, Crimes against themselves and the Bishop, which afterwards they denyed and revoked upon their Oathes.

Lastly and chiefly, that the Judges privately overruled his Plees, so that what shame, and the honour of the Court, with the inspection of so many eyes, would not permit to be done publickly in the Sunshine of Justice, was posted over by a Judge privately in a corner.

These and many more Kilvertisms, as he calls them, did the Bishop complain plain of in Parliament, who so far tendered his innocency therein, that they ordered all the Records of that Suit in the Star-chamber to be obliterated. Yea we may justly conceive, that these Grievances of the Bishop did much hasten, if not chiefly cause the suppression of that Court.

Anno Regis Caroli 13 — Anno Dom. 1637

July 14. Monday.

8. Thirteen dayes after he was suspended by the High-commission, and imprisoned in the Tower for almost four years, during whose durance therein, two Bishops and three Doctors were sent thither unto him; to take his answer to a Book of Articles, of twenty foure Sheets of papes writen on both sides. They proffered him the Bible to take the oath thereon, which he utterly refused, claiming the priviledge of a Peer, adding moreover that being a Bishop, it was against law and Precedent in Antiquity, that young Priests his Graces (and some who had been his own) Chaplains, and Lay Doctors should sit as Judges of a Bishop his Doctrine, with power to deprive him of his Bishoprick, it disliking the same. This was overruled, and he as one of the Kings Subjects required to make his answer.

Is examined again in the Tower.

9. First the article that all Books licenced by his Graces Chaplaines (as Chaine his, and Sala his Book with Doctor Manwaring his Sermons) are presumed by all true Subjects to be orthodox, and agreeable to sound Religion. This the Bishop utterly denyed, and wondered at their impudencie, to propound such an Article unto him.

Whether some Books were orthodox.

10. Secondly they alleadged, that no Bishop but his Grace, the Lord of London, and their Chaplains, had power to allow Bookes. This the other denyed, saying that all Bishops, who were as learned as they, had as much power as they, citing for the same the Councell of Lateran under Leo the tenth. Reformatio Cleri, under Cardinall Poole. Queen Elizabeth her injunctions, and the Decree of the Star-chamber relating to all these: He also stoutly averred the priviledge, to belong onely to the Bishops, and not to their Servants: howbeit his Grace had shuffled in his Chaplaines to the last printed Star-chamber decree. More frivolous were the ensuing Articles whereon he was examined.

Who had power to licence them.

That he called a Book intitled A cole from the Altar, a Pamphlet.

That he said, that all flesh in England had corrupted their wayes.

That he said scoffingly he had heard of a Mother-Church, but not of a Mother-Chappell, meaning the Kings, to which all Churches in ceremonies were to conform.

That he wickedly jested upon St. Martins hood.

That he said, that the people are not to be lashed by every mans whip.

That he said (citing a nationall Councell for it) that the people are Gods, and the Kings, and not the Priests people.

That he doth not allow Priests to jeere and make invectives against the People.

11. To all which the Bishop made so warie an answer, that no advantage could be gained thereby: yea though some dayes after they returned to reexamine him, upon the same Articles, to try as he thought the steddiness of his memory, or else to plunge him into some crime of perjury, if in any materiall point he dissented from his former depositions; but the Bishop like a good boy said his Lesson over again and again, so that no advantage could be taken against him, & thereupon they gave him leave to play, proceeding no further in this cause; only they painted him out in an ugly shape to the King, as disaffected to the present government, and God willing we shall hear more of their proceedings against him hereafter.

His cautious answer.

12. But now we are summoned to a sadder subject; from the sufferings of a Private Person, to the miseries and almost mutuall ruin of two Kingdomes, England and Scotland. I confesse my hands have alwaies been unwilling Transition to a sad Subject.

Anno Dom. 1637 | Anno Regis Caroli 13

willing to write of that cold Country, for fear my fingers should be frost-bitten therewith, but necessity to make our story intire, puts me upon the imployment. Miseries caused from the sending of the Book of Service, or new Liturgy thither, which may sadly be termed a RUBRICK indeed, died with the blood of so many of both Nations, slain on that occasion.

95. It seemes the designe began in the reign of King James, who desired and endeavoured an uniformity of publique Praiers, through the Kingdome of Scotland. In order whereunto an Act was passed in the generall Assembly * at Aberdeene 1616, to authorise some Bishops present to compile, and frame a Publique form of Common Prair: and let us observe the motions thereof.

The project of a publick Prayer-book, began in the reign of King James.

1. It was committed to the Bishops aforesaid, and principally to the Archbishop of St. Andrews * and William Cooper Bishop of Galloway, to draw up the order thereof.

a The Kings large Declaration concerning the tumults in Scotland pag. 16

* See the life of Archbishop Spotiswood.

2. It was transmitted into England to King James, who punctually perused every particular passage therein.

3. It was remitted with the Kings Observations, Additions, Expunctions, Mutations, Accommodations to Scotland again.

But here the designe sunk with the suddain death of King James, and lay not only dormant but dead; till some yeers after it was awakened or rather revived again.

Why a difference betwixt the Scotch and English Liturgy.

96. In the reign of King Charles, the project being resumed (but whether the same book or no God knoweth) it was concluded not to send into Scotland the same Liturgy of England Totidem verbis, lest this should be misconstrued a badge of dependence of that Church on ours. It was resolved also, That the two Liturgies should not differ in substance, lest the Romane party should upbraid us with weighty and materiall differences. A Similitude therefore not Identity being resolved of, it was drawn up with some, as they termed them, insensible alterations, but such as were quickly found and felt by the Scotch to their great distaste. These alterations are of two natures. First, ingratiating, which may be presumed, made to gain the affections of that Nation. Secondly, distasting, which (if not in the intent) in the event proved the great grievance and generall cause that the book was hated and rejected. We will insist on three of the first sort.

b Kings Declaration pag. 18.

Canonicall Scripture only used in the Scotch Liturgy

First, Whereas there was an ancient complaint, That so much of the Apocrypha was read in Churches, viz. about sixty Chapters for the first lesson (from the 28. of September till the 24. of November) Canonicall Scripture is alone appointed to be read in the Scotch Liturgy, one day alone excepted, viz. All Saints day, when Wisdome the 3, and Ecclesiasticus the 14, are ordered for Morning and Evening Praier, on the same token there wanted not such, who said that those two Chapters were left there, to keep possession, that all the rest might in due time be reintroduced.

The word Priest therein declined.

Secondly, The word Priest often used in the English Liturgy, gave offence to many, in so much that c one writeth, To call us Priests as touching our office, is either to call back again the old Priesthood of the Law, which is to deny Christ to be come, or else to keep a memory of the Popish Priesthood of abomination still amongst us; besides we never read in the New-Testament, that the word Priest (as touching office) is used in the good part. Whereupon to prevent exception, it was mollified into Presbyter in the Scotch Rubrick.

c Cartwright in his Admonition 3. cap. 2. division.

Scotch Saints inserted into the Kalender.

97. The names of sundry Saints omitted in the English, are inserted into the Scotch Kalender (but only in black letters) on their severall daies according to the form following.

Anno Regis Caroli 13 | Anno Dom. 1637

January.	February.	March.
11 David King.	18 Colman.	11 Constantine the 3. King.
13 Mungo Bishop, in Latin Kentigernus.		17 Patrick.
		20 Cutbert.

April.	May.	June.
1 Gilbert Bishop.		9 Columba.
20 Serfe Bishop.

July.	August.	September.
6 Palladius.		18 Ninian Bishop.
		25 Adaman Bishop.

October.	November.	December.
	16 Margaret Queen.	4 Droftane.
	27 Ode Virgin.

Some of these were Kings, all of them Natives of that Countrey, (Scotch and Irish in former ages being effectually the same) and which in probability might render them to the favor of their countrey-men, some of them (as Colman &c.) zealous opposites to the Church of Rome in the celebration of Easter.

98. But these Scotch Saints were so farr from making the English Liturgy acceptable, that the English Liturgy, rather made the Saints odious unto them. Such the Distasting alterations in the Book reduceable to 1. Additions, 2. Omissions, 3. Variations, 4. and Transpositions. To instance in the most materiall of the first kinde.

Alterations of Addition in the Scotch Liturgie.

1. In the Baptisme, these words are inserted [d] Sanctifie this fountain of water, thou which art the Sanctifier of all things. Which words are enjoyned to be spoken by the Minister, so often as the water in the Fount is changed, which must be at least twice a moneth.

d Fol. 106. pag. 2.

2. In the Praier after the Doxologie, and before the Communion, this Passage (expunged by the English Reformers out of our Liturgy) is out of the Ordinary of Sarum inserted in the Scotch Prayer Book. And of thy almighty [e] goodnesse vouchsafe so to blesse, and sanctifie with thy word and holy word, these thy gifts and Creatures of Bread and Wine, that they may be unto us the body and blood of thy most dearly beloved Sonne: from which words saith the Scotch Author, all Papists use to draw the truth of the Transubstantiation.

3. He that Celebrateth, is injoyned to cover that which remaineth of the consecrated Elements, with a faire linen Cloth or Corporall [f]; a word unknown to vulgar Eares of either Nations, in other sense then to signify an under-officer in a foot Company, and complained of to be purposely placed here, to wrap up therein all Romish superstition of Christs Carnall Corporall presence in the Sacrament.

4. In the Prayer for the State of Christs Church Militant, these words are added. And [h] we also blesse thy holy name, for all those thy servants who having finished their course in faith, doe now rest from their labours. And we yeeld unto thee most high praise and hearty thanks, for the wonderfull grace and vertue declared in all thy Saints, who have been the choice vessells of thy grace and the lights of the world in their severall generations: most humbly beseeching thee, that we may have grace to follow the example of their stedfastnesse in thy faith, and obedience to thy holy commandements, that at the day of the generall Resurrection, we, and all they which are of the mysticall body of thy Sonne, may be set on his right hand, and hear that his most joyfull voice, Come yee blessed &c.

99. Amongst the Omissions none more complained of than the deleting these words, in the delivery of the bread at the Sacrament.

Take [i] and eat this in remembrance that Christ dyed for thee, and feed on him in thine heart by faith with thanksgiving.

A passage destructive to Transubstantiation, as diverting Communicants from Carnall Manducation, and directing their Soules to a spirituall repast on their Saviour. All which in the Scotch Liturgy is cut off with an Amen from the Receiver.

The Variations and Transpositions are of lesse moment, as where the money gathered at the offertory, distributable by the English Liturgy to the poor alone, hath a moyety thereof assigned the Minister therewith to buy him books of holy Divinity, and some praiers are transposed from their place, and ordered elsewhere, whereat some doe take no small exception. Other smaller differences (if worth the while) will quickly appear to the curious perusers of both Liturgies.

100. Pass we now from the constitution of the book, to the condition of the Scotch Nation, in this unhappy juncture of time when it was imposed upon him. For it found them in a discontented posture (and high Royalists will maintain, that murmuring and muting against Princes differ only in degree, not in kinde) occasioned on severall accounts.

1. Some years since, the King had passed an Act of revocation of Crown Lands (alienated in the minority of his Ancestors) whereby much Land of the Nobility became obnoxious to forfeiture. [k] And though all was forgiven again by the Kings clemency, and nothing acted hereby to the prejudice of any, yet it vexed some to hold that as remitted by the Kings bounty, wherein they conceived themselves to be before unquestionably estated.

2. Whereas many formerly in Scotland, were rather Subjects than Tenants, rather Vassalls than Subjects: Such the Land-lords Princely [e] fol. 102. pagina 1.

[f] Reyly in his Canterburians Self-conviction pag.

[g] fol. 103. pag. 1.

[h] folio 98. pagina 1.

The most materiall omission.

[i] fol. 103. pag. 2.

The discontented condition of the Scotch Nation when the Liturgy was first brought unto them.

[k] The Kings declaration at large pag. 6.

Anno Regni Carol. 13 | Anno Dom. 1637

Princely (not to say Tyrannically) power over them, the King had lately freed many from such dangerous dependence. Especially in point of payment of Tythes to the Lords of the Erection, equivalent to our English lay Impropriators (but allowing the Land-lords a valuable consideration, according to the purchases [l] of that Countrey) whereby the King got the smiles of those who were most in number, but the frowns of such who were greatest in power.

l Idem pag. 9.

3. Many were offended that at the Kings Coronation, some six yeares agoe, and a Parliament following thereon, an act of ratification was passed concerning the Church her liberties and priviledges, which some complained of, was done without Plurality of Suffrages.

4. Some Persons of honor desiring higher Titles [m] were offended, that they were denyed unto them, whilst his Majesty conferred them on others.

m Pag. 11.

There want not those also, who confidently suggest it to Posterity, that Pensions constantly payed out of the English Exchequer in the Reign of King James to some principall pastors in the Scottish Church were since detained. So also the bounty of boons was now restrained in the Reign of King Charles, which could not fall so freely, as in the dayes of his father (the Cloud being almost drained) adding moreover that the want of watering of Scotland with such showers, made them to chap into such Clefts and Chinks of Parties and Factions, disaffected to the Kings proceedings.

101. To increase these distempers, some complain (how justly, their own Countrey-men best know) of the pride and pragmaticalness of the Scotch Bishops, who being but Probationers on their good behaviour (as but reintroduced by King James) offended the ancient Nobility, with their medleing in State matters. And I finde two principally accused on this account; Doctor Forbes Bishop of the new Bishoprick of Edenburg, and Doctor Wedderburne Bishop of Dunblane. Thus was the Scotch Nation full of discontents, when this Book being brought unto them bare the blame of their breaking forth into more dangerous designs, as when the Cup is brim full before, the last (though least) superadded drop is charged alone to be the cause of all the running over.

The Book bears the blame of all.

102. Besides the Church of Scotland claimed not only to be Independent, & free as any Church in Christendome (a Sister not Daughter of England) but also had so high an opinion of its own puritie, that it participated more of Moses his platform in the Mount, than other Protestant Churches, being a reformed reformation; So that the practice thereof might be directory to others, and she fit to give, not take, write, but receive copies from any Neighbouring Church, desiring that all others were like unto them, save only in their afflictions.

The Scotch Church standeth on the termes of its own independency.

103. So much for the [complained of] burden of the book, as also for the sore back of that Nation (galled with the aforesaid grievances) when this Liturgy was sent unto them: and now we must not forget the hatred they bare to the hand, which they accused for laying it upon them. Generally they excused the King in their writings, as innocent therein, but charged Archbishop Laud as the principall (and Doctor [n] Cosins for the instrumentall) compiler thereof, which may appear by what we read, in a Writer [o] of that Nation, after was employed into England, about the advancing of the Covenant betwixt both Nations, and other Church affaires.

Arch-bishop Laud accused as principall Composer of of the Book.

n Rasly ut prius pag. 102.

o Idem pag. 95. & 96.

This unhappy Book was his Graces invention, if he should deny it, his own deeds would convince him. The manifold letters which in this Pestiferous

affaire

affaire have passed betwixt him and our Prelates are yet extant. If we might be heard, we would spread out sundry of them, before the Convocation-House of England, making it clear as the light, that in all this designe his hand had ever been the prime stickler, so that upon his back mainly, will he will he, would be laid the charge of all the fruits good or evill, which from that Tree are like to fall on the Kings Countries.

Anno Dom. 1637 | Anno Regni Caroli 13

Surely if any such evidence was extant, we shall hear of it hereafter at his arraignment, produced and urged by the Scotch-Commissioners.

The tumult at Edenborough at the first reading the book.

102. But leaving the Roots to lye under the Earth, let us look on the Branches spreading themselves above ground, and passing from the secret Author of this Book, behold the evident effects thereof. No sooner had the Dean of Edenborough began to read the Book in the Church of St. Gyles, in the presence of the Privy-Councell, both the Archbishops, divers Bishops and Magistrates of the City, but presently such a Tumult was raised, that through clapping of hands, cursing, and crying one could neither hear nor be heard. The Bishop of Edenborough indeavoured in vain to appease the Tumult; whom a Stool aimed to be thrown at him, had killed, [p] if not diverted by one present, so that the same Book had occasioned his Death, and prescribed the form of his burial, and this Hubbub was hardly suppressed by the Lord Provost and Bayliffs of Edenborough.

July 23. Sunday

[p] The Kings large declaration pag. 23.

More considerable persons engaged in the cause.

[q] The Kings large declaration pag. 37.

The occasion of the Scotch covenant.

105. This first Tumult was caused by such, whom I finde called the Skum of the City, considerable for nothing but their number: But few dayes after the cream of the Nation (some of the highest and best quality therein) ingaged in the same cause, crying out, God defend all those who will defend Gods cause, and God confound the Service-Book and all the maintainers of it.

106. The Lords of the Councell interposed their power, and to appease all parties issued out a Proclamation to remove the Session (much like to our Term in London) to Lithgow. This abated their anger as fire is quenched with Oile, seeing the best part of the Edenburgers livelyhood depends on the Session kept in their City, yea so highly were the People enraged against Bishops as the procurers of all these Troubles, that the Bishop of Galloway passing peaceably along the street towards the Councell-House, was way-layed in his coming thither, if by divine Providence, and by Francis Stewart Sonne to the late Earl of Bothwell, he had not with much adoe been got within the dores of the Councell-House. Indeed there is no fence, but flight, nor counsell, but concealment, to secure any single party against an offended multitude.

October 17.

[r] Kings large declaration pag. 35.

107. These troublesome beginnings afterwards did occasion the solemn League and Covenant, whereby the greatest part of the Nation united themselves, to defend their Privileges, and which laid the foundation of a long and wofull War in both Kingdomes. And here I crave the Readers pardon to break off; and leave the prosecution of this sad subject, to Pens more able to undertake it. For first, I know none will pity me, if I needlesly prick my fingers with meddling with a Thistle, which belongs not unto me. Secondly, I despaire of perfect notice of particulars, at so great a distance of place, and greater of Parties concerned therein. Thirdly, if exact intelligence were obtained: as ages long agoe are written with more safety then truth, so the story hereof might be writen with more truth then safety. Lastly, being a civill business it is alienes from my subject, and may justly be declined. If any object that it is reducible to Ecclesiastical story, because one as they said termed this, Bellum Episcopale, The Warr for Bishops: I conceive it presumption for so mean a Minister as my self (and indeed for any under that great order) to undertake the writing thereof.

The Authors excuse, why not proceeding in this subject.

TO

Anno Regis Caroli 13 | Anno Dom. 1637

TO

HENRY PUCKERINGNEVVTON

SONNE and HEIRE to

Sr. HENRY PUCKERINGNEWTON

BARONET.

NO Gentleman in this Nation is more advantaged to be a Scholar born then your self. You may be free of the City of the Muſes by the Copy of your Grandfathers.

By your Fathers ſide, Sir Adam Newton, Tutour to Prince Henry.

By your Mothers ſide, Mr. Murray, Tutour to K. Charles.

If you be not more then an ordinary Scholar, it will not be leſſe then an extraordinary diſgrace: Good is not good, where better is expected. But I am confident, if your pains be added to your parts, your prayers to your pains, Gods bleſſing will be added to your prayers to crown all with ſucceſſe.

NOw Biſhop Williams was ſentenced the ſecond time in the Star-Chamber on this occaſion, Mr. Lambert Osbaſton School-maſter of Weſtminſter wrote a Letter unto him wherein this paſſage. The little vermin the Urchin and Hocus pocus is this ſtormy Chriſtmas at true and reall variance with the Leviathan. Now the Biſhop was accuſed for divulging ſcandalous Libells on Privy-Counſellors, and that the Archbiſhop of Canterbury was meant by the former names. The Lord Treaſurer Weſton by the Leviathan, becauſe he ſhould have preſented the libellous Letter at the receit thereof, thereof, to some Justice of Peace, and not dispersed the same. Anno Dom. Anno Regis Carol.

Biſhop Williams his ſecond cenſure.

2. The Bishop pleaded, that he remembred not the receiving of any such letter, that he conceived no law directs the subject to bring to a Justice of Peace, Enigmaes or Riddles, but plain literall and grammaticall Libells, against a known and clearly deciphered Person. Mr. Osbaston denyed the words so meant by him, and deposed that he intended one Doctor Spicer a Civilian by Hocus Pocus, and the Lord Richardson (alive when the letter was written, but then dead) for the Leviathan.

3. Here a paper was produced by Mr. Walker the Bishops Secretary, and found in a band-box at Bugden, wherein the Bishop had thus written unto him.

> Here is a strange thing, Mr. Osbaston importunes me to contribute to my Lord Treasurers use, some charges upon the little great man, and assures me they are mortally out. I have utterly refused to meddle in this business, and I pray you learn from Mr. S. and Mr. H. if any such falling out be, or whether some body hath not guld the Schoolmaster in these three last letters, and keep it to your self what I write unto you. If my Lord Treasurer would be served by me, he must use a more neere, solid, and trusty Messenger, and free me from the bonds of the Star-chamber, else let them fight it out for me.

Now Mr. Walker being pressed by a friend, why he would discover this letter to his Masters prejudice, averred, he brought it forth as a main witness of his innocency, and as able to clear him of all in the informaton: however it was strongly misunderstood; for by comparing both letters together the Court collected the Bishop guilty.

4. Sir John Finch fined him a just ten thousand pounds, Rotundi numeri causa, whom Secretary Windebank did follow. The rest brought it down to eight thousand pounds only, one Lord thought fitting to impose no fine upon him, rendring this reason, Qui jacet in terra non habet unde cadet.

5. The Bishop already being sequestred from all his Temporall Lands, spirituall preferment, and his Person imprisoned, Mr. Osbaston was sentenced five Thousand pounds, loss of his good living at Whethamstede, and to have his eares tackt to the Pillory in the presence of his Scholars, whom his industry had improved to as great eminency of learning as any of his Predecessors, insomuch that he had at the present above foureſore Doctors, in the two Universities, and three learned faculties, all gratefully acknowledging their education under him. But this last personall penalty he escaped by going beyond Canterbury, conceived seasonably gone beyond the Seas, whilst he secretly concealed himself in London.

6. All this put not a period to the Bishops troubles; his unsequestred Spirit so supported him, that some of his Adversaries frowned because he could smile under so great vexations. A design is set a foot, either to make him voluntarily surrender his Bishoprick, Deanary and dignities (permitted perchance a poor Bishoprick in Ireland) or else to press his degradation: in order whereunto a new information with ten Articles is drawn up against him, though for the main, but the consequence and deductions of the fault for tampering with Witnesses, for which in the 13. of King Charles he had been so severely censured. 1638 14

7. To this the Bishop put in a Plea, and Demurrer, that Deus non judicat bis in id ipsum, God punisheth not the same fault twice: that this is the way to make causes immense and punishments infinite: that whereas there was two things that Philosophers denied, infiniteneſſe and vacuity, Kilvert had found them both in this prosecution; infiniteneſſe in the Bishops cause and vacuity in his purse: that the profane wits of this age should begin to doubt, doubt of the neceſſity of beleeving a Hell hereafter, when ſuch eternall puniſhments are found here in ſuch kind of proſecution: he added alſo that he could prove it that it was a conſpiracy of Kilverts with other perſons, if he might have freedome to bring his witneſſes againſt them; which becauſe it caſt ſcandal on thoſe who were Pro domino Rege, was now denied him.

Anno Regis Caroli 14 | Anno Dom. 1638

8. Then put he in a Rejoynder and an Appeal unto the next Parliament, whenſoever it ſhould be aſſembled, pleading his priviledge of Peerage, as his freehold, and that he could not be degraded of his Orders and Dignities. This was filed in the Star-Chamber under the Clarks Book; and Copies thereof ſigned with the uſuall Officers. Now although this was but a poor help, no light of a Parliament dawning at that time; yet it ſo far quaſhed the proceedings that it never came to farther hearing, and the matter ſuperſeded from any finall Cenſure.

15 | 1639

9. And now began Scotland to be an Actor, and England, [as yet] a ſad Spectator thereof, as ſuſpecting ere long to feel what ſhe beheld. There is an Hye Hill in Cumberland called Skiddaw, & another anſwering thereto, [Scruſſell by name] in Anandale in Scotland, and the people dwelling by, have an old Rythme.

Scots broiles begin.

——— If* Skiddaw hath a Cap,
Scruſſe wots full well of that.

* Camdens Brit. in Cumber. p. 767.

Meaning that ſuch the vicinity (and as I may ſay ſympathy) betwixt theſe two Hills, that if one be ſick with a miſt of clouds, the other ſoon after is ſad on the like occaſion. Thus none, ſeeing it now foul weather in Scotland, could expect it fair ſunſhine in England but that ſhe muſt ſhare in the ſame miſeries: as ſoon after it came to paſſe.

March 27. June 17.

10. Let thoſe who deſire perfect information hereof, ſatisfy themſelves, from ſuch as have, or may hereafter write the Hiſtory of the State. In whom they ſhall find how King Charles took his journey Northward, againſt the Scottiſh Covenanters. How ſome weeks after, on certain conditions a Peace was concluded betwixt them. How his Majeſty returned to London: and how this palliated cure ſoon after brake out again, more dangerous than ever before.

The Reader referred to other Authors.

April 13. Monday.

11. In theſe diſtracted times a Parliament was called, with the wiſhes of all, and hopes of moſt that were honeſt, yet not without the feares of ſome, who were wiſe, what would be the ſucceſſe thereof. With this Parliament began a Convocation; all the mediate tranſactions (for ought I can finde out) are embezled; and therein it was ordered, that none preſent ſhould take any private notes in the Houſe; whereby the particular paſſages thereof are left at great uncertainty. However, ſo far as I can remember, I will faithfully relate; being comforted with this conſideration, that generally he is accounted an unpartial Arbitratour who diſpleaſeth both ſides.

A Parliament and Convocation called.

14. Tuesd.

12. On the firſt day thereof Dr. Turner, Chaplain to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, made a Latine Sermon in the Quire of St. Pauls. His text Matth. 10. 16. Behold, I ſend you forth as Sheep in the mid'ſt of Wolves. In the cloſe of his Sermon he complained, that all Biſhops held not the reins of Church-diſcipline with an even hand, but that ſome of them were too eaſie, and remiſs, in the ordering thereof. Whereby whiles they ſought to gain to themſelves the popular praiſe of meekneſſe, and mildneſſe, they occaſionally caſt on other Biſhops (more ſevere then themſelves) the unjuſt imputation of rigour, and tyranny; and therefore he adviſed them all with equall ſtrictneſs to urge an univerſal conformitie. Sermon ended, we choſe Dr. Stewart Dean of Chicheſter Prolocutor.

Doctor Turner his text, and Sermon.

17. Friday.

13. Next day of ſitting we met at Weſtminſter, in the Chappell of King

The effect of the Archbiſhop. Latin ſpeech.

Anno Dom. 1640 | Anno Regis Caroli 16

Henry the seventh both the Houses of Convocation being joyned together; when the Archbishop of Canterbury entertained them with a Latin Speech, welnigh three quarters of an hour gravely uttered, his eies oft-times being but one remove from weeping. It consisted most of generals, bemoaning the distempers of the Church, but concluded it with a speciall passage, acquainting us how highly we were indebted to his Majesties favour so far intrusting the integrity, and ability of that Convocation, as to empower them with his Commission, the like whereof was not granted for may yeers before, to alter old, or make new Canons for the better government of the Church.

The just suspicions of wise men.

14. Some wise men in the Convocation began now to be jealous of the event of new Canons, yea, became fearfull of their own selves, for having too great power, lest it should tempt them to be over tampering in innovations. They thought it better, that this Convocation, with its predecessors, should be censured for lazinesse, and the solemn doing of just nothing, rather than to runne the hazard by over activity to doe any thing unjust. For, as waters long dammed up, oft-times flownce, and fl e out too violently, when their sluces are pulled up, and they let loose on a sudden: so the judicious feared, lest the Convocation, whose power of meddling with Church-matters, had been bridled up for many yeers before, should now, enabled with such power, over-act their parts, especially in such dangerous, and discontented times. Yea, they suspected, lest those who formerly had out-runne the Canons with their additionall conformitie (ceremonizing more then was enjoyned) now would make the Canons come up to them, making it necessary for others, what voluntarily they had prepractised themselves.

The Parliament suddenly dissolved.

15. Matters began to be in agitation, when on a sudden the Parliament (wherein many things were started, nothing hunted down, or brought to perfection) was dissolved. Whilest the immediate cause hereof is commonly cast on the King, and Court, demanding so many Subsidies at once (England being as yet unacquainted with such prodigious payments;) the more conscientious look higher, and remoter, on the crying sinnes of our Kingdome. And from this very time did God begin to gather the twiggs of that rod [a civill warr] wherewith soon after he intended to whip a wanton nation. May 5

Yet the Convocation still continues.

16. Next day the Convocation came together, as most supposed, meerly meeting to part, and finally to dissolve themselves. When, contrary to generall expectation, it was motioned, to improve the present opportunity, in perfecting the new Canons which they had begun. And soon after a new Commission was brought from his Majesty, by virtue whereof we were warranted still to sit, not in the capacity of a Convocation, but of a Synod, to prepare our Canons for the Royall Assent thereunto. But Doctor Brownrigg, Doctor Hacket, Doctor Holdsworth, Master Warmistre with others, to the number of thirty six (the whole House consisting of about six score) earnestly protested against the continuance of the Convocation. 6

A party dissenters, and protests against the continuance thereof.

17. These importunately pressed that it might sink with the Parliament, it being ominous & without precedent, that the one should survive, when the other was expired. To satisfy these, an Instrument was brought into Synod, signed with the hands of the Lord Privy-Seal, the two chief Justices, and other Judges, justifying our so sitting in the nature of a Synod, to be legal according to the Lawes of the Realm. It ill becometh Clergy-men to pretend to more skill in the Lawes, then so learned Sages in that profession, and therefore unpartiall judgements may take off from the fault of the followers, and lay it on the leaders, that this Synod sate when the Parliament was dissolved. This made the aforesaid thirty six dissenters (though solemnly making their orall protests to the contrary, yet) not to dissever themselves, themselves, or enter any act in Scriptis against the legality of this Assembly: the rather, because they hoped to moderate proceedings with their presence. Surely some of their own coat, which since have censured these dissenters for cowardly compliance, and doing no more in this cause, would have done lesse themselves, if in their condition.

Anno Regis Caroli 16 — Anno Dom. 1640

18. Thus was an old Convocation converted into a new Synod; and now their disjoynted meeting being set together again, they betook themselves to consult about new Canons. Now because great bodies move slowly, and are fitter to be the consenters to, than the contrivers of businesse, it was thought fit to contract the Synod into a select Committee of some six and twenty, beside the Prolocutour, who were to ripen matters, as to the propounding and drawing up the formes to what should passe, yet so, that nothing should be accounted the act of the House, till thrice (as I take it) publiquely voted therein.

Out of the burial of an old Convocation the birth of a new Synod.

19. Expect not here of me an exemplification of such Canons, as were concluded of in this Convocation. Partly, because being printed they are publique to every eie, but chiefly because they were never put in practice, or generally received. The men in Persia did never look on their little ones, till they were seven yeers old (bred till that time with their Mothers, and Nurses) nor did they account them in their Genealogies amongst their children (but amongst the more long-lived abortives) if dying before seven yeers of age. I conceive such Canons come not under our cognizance, which last not (at least) an apprenticeship of yeers in use, and practice, and therefore we decline the setting down the Acts of this Synod. It is enough for us to present the number, and titles of the severall Canons.

Why the Canons of this Synod are not by us exemplified.

1. Concerning the Regal power.
2. For the better keeping of the day of his Majesties most happy Inauguration.
3. For suppressing of the growth of Popery.
4. Against Socinianism.
5. Against Sectaries.
6. An Oath injoyned for the preventing of all Innovations in Doctrine and Government.
7. A Declaration concerning some Rites, and Ceremonies.
8. Of Preaching for Conformity.
9. One Book of Articles of inquiry to be used at all Parochiall Visitations.
10. Concerning the Conversation of the Clergy.
11. Chancellors Patents.
12. Chancellors alone not to censure any of the Clergy in sundry Cases.
13. Excommunication, and Absolution not to be pronounced but by a Priest.
14. Concerning the Commutations, and the disposing of them.
15. Touching concurrent Jurisdictions.
16. Concerning Licences to Marry.
17. Against vexatious Citations.

20. As for the Oath concluded on in this Synod, because since the subject of so much discourse, it is here set forth at large, according to the true tenour thereof, as followeth.

The form of the Oath &c.

I A. B. doe swear, That I doe approve the Doctrine and Discipline or Government established in the Church of England, as containing all things necessary to salvation: And that I will not endeavour by my self or any other, directly or indirectly, to bring in any Popish Doctrine contrary to that which is so established: nor will I ever give my consent to alter the Government of this Church, by Archbishops, Bishops, Deanes, and Archdeacons, &c. as it stands now established, and as by right it ought to stand, nor yet ever to subject it to the usurpation and superstitions of the Sea of Rome. And all these things I doe plainly and sincerely acknowledge and swear, according to the plaine and common sense and understanding of the same words, without any equivocation or mentall evasion, or secret reservation whatsoever. And this I doe heartily, willingly, and truly, upon the faith of a Christian. So help me God, in Jesus Christ.

A motion for a new edition of the Welsh Bible.

21. Towards the close of the Convocation Doctor Griffith, a Clark for some Welsh Diocesse, (whose moderate carriage all the while was very commendable) made a motion that there might be a new edition of the Welsh Church-Bible, some sixty yeers since first translated into Welsh, by the worthy endeavours of Bishop Morgan, but not without many mistakes and omissions of the printer. He insisted on two most remarkable, a whole verse left out Exod. 12. concerning the Angels passing over the houses besprinkled with blood, which mangleth the sense of the whole Chapter. Another Habak. 25. where that passage, He is a proud man, is wholly omitted. The matter was committed to the care of the Welsh Bishops, who (I fear) surprised with the troublesome times effected nothing therein.

Glocester his singularity why armed with suspension.

22. The day before the ending of the Synod, Godfrey Goodman, Bishop of Glocester, privately repaired to the Archbishop of Canterbury, acquainting him, that he could not in his conscience subscribe the new Canons. It appeared afterwards that he scrupled some passages about the Corporal presence. But, whether upon Popish, or Lutheran principles, he best knoweth himself. The Archbishop advised him to avoide obstinacy, and singularity therein. However the next day, when we all subscribed the Canons (suffering our selves, according to the order of such meetings, to be all concluded by the majority of Votes, though some of us in the Committee privately dissenting in the passing of many particulars) he alone utterly refused his subscription thereunto. Whereupon the Archbishop, being present with us in King Henry the seventh his Chappell, was highly offended at him; My Lord of Glocester, (said he) I admonish you to subscribe: and presently after, My Lord of Glocester, I admonish you the second time to subscribe: and immediately after, I admonish you the third time to subscribe: To all which the Bishop pleaded conscience, and returned a denial.

His Suspension suspended.

23. Then were the judgements of the Bishops severally asked, whether they should proceed to the present suspension of Glocester, for his obstinacy herein. Davenant, Bishop of Sarisbury, being demanded his opinion, conceived it fit some Lawyers should first be consulted with, how far forth the power of a Synod in such cases did extend. He added moreover, that the threefold admonition of a Bishop ought solemnly to be done with some considerable intervalls betwixt them, in which he might have time of convenient deliberation. However since they did subscribe what committed (by the Kings command, as I take it) to the Gate-house, where he got by his restraint what he could never have gained by his liberty, namely, of one reputed Popish, to become for a short time popular, as the only Confessor suffering for not subscribing the Canons. Soon after the same Canons were subscribed at York, where the Convocation is but three days journey distant, and sitting, and pointing as directed by the clock of the Province of Canterbury: and so on the last of June following, the said Canons were publiquely printed, with the Royall Assent affixed thereunto.

June 30.

Hot exceptions against the Canons.

24. No sooner came these Canons abroad into publique view, but various were mens censures upon them. Some were offended, because bowing toward the Communion-Table (now called Altar by many) was not only left indifferent, but also caution taken, that the observers, or the omitters thereof should not mutually censure each other: yet many complained, that this ceremony, though left indifferent as hereafter to salvation, was made necessary as here to preferment. Yea, this knee-mark of bowing or not bowing, ing, would be made the distinguishing character, that hereafter all such should be condemned as halting in conformity, who were not through paced in these additionall ceremonies.

Anno Regis Caroli 16 Anno Dom 1640

25. Many took exception at the hollownesse of the Oath in the middle thereof, having its bowells puffed up with a windie &c. a cheverel word, which might be stretched as men would measure it. Others pleaded for it, as only inserted to save the enumeration of many mean Officers in the Church, whose mention was beneath the dignity of an Oath, and would but clog the same. Yea since, some have endeavoured to excuse the same by the interpretative &c. incorporated into the body of the Covenant, whereby people are bound to defend the priviledges of Parliament, though what they be is unknown to most that take the same. Second exception.

26. But most took exception against that clause in the Oath, we will never give any consent to alter this Church-government, as if the same were intended to abridge the liberty of King and State in future Parliaments, and Convocations, if hereafter they saw cause to change any thing therein. And this obligation seemed the more unreasonable, because some of those Orders specified in the Oath (as Archbishops, Deans, Archdeacons) stand only establshed jure humano, sive Ecclesiastico; and no wise man ever denied, but that by the same power, and authority they are alterable on just occasion. Third and greatest exception.

27. Yet there wanted not others, who with a favourable sense endeavoured to qualify this suspicious clause, whereby the taker of this Oath was tied up from consenting to any alteration. These argued, that if the Authority Civil, or Ecclesiasticall, did not herein impose an Oath, binding those that took it hereafter to disobey themselves, and reject such orders, which the foresaid Civil, or Ecclesiastical power might afterwards lawfully enact, or establish. For, seeing in all oaths this is an undoubted Maxime, Quacunque forma verborum juratur, Deus sic juramentum accipit, sicut ille cui juratur intelligit, none can probably suppose, that the governors in this oath intended any clause thereof, to be an abridgment of their own lawfull power, or to debar their inferiours from consenting, and submitting to such alterations, as by themselves should lawfully be made. Wherefore these words, We will never give any consent to alter, are intended here to be meant only of a voluntary, and pragmaticall alteration; when men conspire, consent, labour, and endeavour to change the present government of the Church, in such particulars as they doe dislike, without the consent of their superiours. Endeavoured to be excused.

28. But the exception of exceptions against these Canons, is, because they were generally condemned as illegally passed, to the prejudice of the fundamentall liberty of the Subject, whereof we shall hear enough in the next Parliament. Mean time some Bishops were very forward in pressing this Oath, even before the time thereof. For, whereas a liberty was allowed to all, to deliberate thereon, untill the feast of Michael the Archangel, some pressed the Ministers of their Dioceses, for the taking thereof, and, [illegible] knowledge, enjoyned them to take this oath kneeling. A ceremony (to my best remembrance) never exacted, or observed in taking the Oath of Supremacy or Allegiance; which some accounted an essay of their activity, if providence had not prevented them. The ever activity of some Bishops.

29. Many impressions of English-Bibles, printed at Amsterdam, and one at Edinburgh in Scotland, were daily brought over hither, and sold here. Little their volumes, and low their prices, as being of bad paper, worse print, little Margent, yet greater then the care of the Corrector, many most abominable errata being passed therein. Take one instance for all. The importation of false printed Bibles.

For.

Anno Dom. Anno Regis Caroli 16

Jer. 4. 17. speaking of the whole Common-wealth of Judah.

Instead of, it is printed Edinburgh 1637.

because she hath been rebellious against me, saith the Lord. because she hath been religious against me, saith the Lord.

Many complaints were made, especially by the company of Stationers, against these false printed Bibles, as giving great advantage to the Papists, but nothing was therein effected. For in this juncture of time came in the Scotish Army, and invaded the Northern parts of England. What secret solicitations invited them hither, is not my work to enquire. Many beheld them as the only Physitians of the distempered State, and believed, that they gave not their Patient a visit on pure charity, but having either received, or being well promised their fee before.

Parliament and Convocation begin.

30. Soon after began the long lasting Parliament, so known to all posterity for the remarkable tranactions therein. The King went to the House privately by water, many commending his thrift in sparing expences, when two Armies in the bowels of the Land expected their pay from his purse. Others distinguishing betwixt needlesse Pomp, and necessary State, suspected this might be misinterpreted as if the Scotch had frighted him out of that Ceremony of Majesty: and some feared such an omission presaged that Parliament would end with sadnesse to him, which began without any solemnity. Abreast therewith began a Convocation though unable long to keep pace together, the latter soon tyreing as never inspirited by commission from the King to meddle with any matters of Religion: Mr. Warmistre (a Clark for Worcester) made a motion therein, that they should endeavour (according to the Leviticall Law) to cover the pit which they had opened, and to prevent their adversaries intention, by condemning such offensive Canons, as were made in the last Convocation. But it found no acceptance, they being loath to confesse themselves guilty before they were accused.

The insolence of Anabaptists.

31. This day hapned the first fruits of Anabaptisticall insolence, when 80 of that Sect meeting at a house in St. Saviours in Southwark, preached that the Statute in the 35. of Eliz. for the administration of the Common-Prayer was no good Law because made by Bishops. That the King cannot make a good Law because not perfectly regenerate. That he was only to be obeyed in Civill matters. Being brought before the Lords they confessed the articles, but no penalty was inflicted upon them. 1641 Jan. 11.

The 3 Exiles brought home in Triumph.

32. About this time Mr. Prinn, Dr. Bastwick, and Mr. Burton were brought out of durance and exile, with great Triumph into London, it not sufficing their friends to welcome them peaceably, but victoriously, with bayes and rosemary in their hands and hats. Wise men conceived that their private returning to the Town, had signifyed as much gratitude to God, and lesse affront to authority. But some wildnesse of the loooks must be pardoned in such, who came suddenly into the light out of long darknesse.

Dr Pocklinton and Dr. Bray censured.

33. As Bishop Williams and Mr. Osbaston, were the two first Clergy-men who found the favour of this Parliament, (being remitted their fines, and restored to their livings and liberty) so Doctor Pocklington and Doctor Bray were the two first that felt their displeasures. The former for preaching and printing, the latter for licencing two books, one called Sunday no Sabbath, the other The Christian altar. Bishop Williams moved, that Doctor Bray might recant seven errours in the first, four and twenty in the second Treatise. Soon after both the Doctors decealed, for grief, say some, that they had writen what they should not, for shame, say others, that they had recanted what they would not; though a third sort more charitably take notice neither of the one nor the other, but meerly impute it to the approach of the time of their dissolution.

34. Doctor

Anno Regis Caroli 16 | Anno Dom. 1640

34. Doctor Cosen soon after was highly accused, for superstition and unjust proceedings against one Mr. Smart on this occasion. The Doctor is charged to have set up in the Church of Durham a Marble Altar with Cherubins, which cost two thousands pounds, with all the appurtenances thereof, namely, a Cope with the Trinity, and God the Father in the figure of an old man, another with a Crucifix and the Image of Christ, with a red Beard and blew Cap. Besides he was accused for lighting two hundred wax Candles about the Altar on Candlemas day. For forbidding any Psalmes to be sung before or after Sermon, though making an Anthem, to be sung of the three Kings of Collen (by the names of) Gasper, Balthazar, and Melchior; and for procuring a consecrated Knife only to cut the Bread at the Communion.

Superstitions charged on Dr. Cosen.

35. Mr. Smart a prebendary of the Church, one of a grave aspect and reverend presence, sharply enveyed in a Sermon against these innovations, taking for his text: I hate all those that hold superstitious vanities, but thy law doe I love.

Cruel usage of Mr. Smart.

36. Hereupon he was kept prisoner four moneths by the high Commission of York, before any Articles were exhibited against him, and five moneths before any Proctor was allowed him. Hence was he carried to the High-Commission at Lambeth, and after long trouble remanded to York, fined 500. pounds, committed to prison, ordered to recant, and for that neglect thereof, fined again, excommunicated, degraded, and deprived, his damage (as brought in) amounting to many thousand pounds.

Relieved by Parliament.

37. But now Mr. Rows of the House of Commons, bringing up the charge to the Lords against Doctor Cosen, termed Mr. Smart the Proto martyr of England in these latter dayes of persecution, and large reparations was allowed unto him, though he lived not long after to enjoy them.

Dr. Cosen his due praise.

38. Now though none can excuse and defend Doctor Cosen his carriage herein, yet this must be reported to his due commendation. Some yeers after getting over into France, he neither joyned with the Church of French Protestants at Charentoun nigh Paris, nor kept any communion with the Papists therein, but confined himself to the Church of old English Protestants therein. Where by his pious living and constant praying and preaching, he reduced some recusants to, and confirmed more doubters in the Protestant Religion. Many his incounters with Jesuits and Priests defeating the suspicions of his foes, and exceeding the expectation of his Friends, in the successe of such disputes.

Jan. 23

39. The Commons desired the Lords to joyn with them to finde out, who moved the King to reprieve John Goodman a seminary Priest, who (as they said) had been twice condemned, and now the second time reprieved, whilest the Parliament sate.

Goodman a Priest handled betwixt life and death.

Jan. 25

40. The King sent a message by the Lord Privy-Seal, that Goodman was not (as the Commons were informed) condemned and banished, but only sentenced for being a Priest, and therefore that in reprieving him he shewed but the like mercy which Queen Eliz. and King James had shewed in the like cases.

Jan. 27

41. The Lords joyned with the Commons in their desire concerning Goodman, that the Statutes might speedily be executed upon him, as necessary in this juncture of time, wherein Papists swarmed in all parts presuming on indemnity. With what credit or comfort could they sit to enact new Lawes, whilst they beheld former Statutes dayly broken before their eyes?

Feb. 3

42. The King acquainted the Houses that though Queen Eliz. and King James never condemned Priest meerly for Religion, yet rather then he would discontent his Subjects he left him to the judgment of both Houses, to be disposed of at their pleasure.

Yet he escapeth with life at last.

43. Goodman petitioned the King that like Jonah the Prophet, he might be cast into the Sea, to still the tempest betwixt the King and his People, conceiving his blood well spent to cement them together. But in fine he escaped with his life, not so much by any favour indulged him, as principally because the accusations could not be so fully proved against him.

The first mention of the Protestation.

44. About this time was the first motion of a new Protestation, to be taken all over England (the Copy whereof is omitted as obvious every where) which some moneths after, was generally performed as containing nothing but what was lawfull and commendable therein. Yet some refused it as suspecting the adding of new, would substract obedience from former oathes, (men being prone to love that best which left the last relish in their souls) and in fine such new obligations of conscience like suckers, would draw from the stock of the old oathes of supremacy and alleagiance.

A Committee of the Lords to settle religion.

45. March began very blusteringly, on the first day whereof Archbishop Laud was in Mr. Maxfeild his Coach carried to the Tower, and not long after the Lords appointed a Committee of their own Members for settling of peace in the Church. What hopefull opinion the aforesaid Archbishop had of their proceedings, will appear by the following note which he entred into his [a] Diarie.

a March 21. pag. 34.

> A Committee for Religion settled in the upper house of Parliament. Ten Earles, ten Bishops, ten Barons. So the Lay-Votes will be double to the Clergy. This Committee will meddle with Doctrine as well as Ceremonies, and will call some Divines to them to consider of the businesse, as appears by a Letter hereto annexed, sent by the Lord Bishop of Lincoln to some Divines, to attend this service: upon the whole matter, I believe this Committee will prove the Nationall Synod of England, to the great dishonour of the Church. And what else may follow upon it, God knowes.

A Sub-Committee for the same purpose.

46. At the same time the Lords appointed a Sub-committee, to prepare matters fit for their cognizance, (the Bishop of Lincoln having the Chair in both) authorized to call together divers Bishops and Divines, to consult together for correction of what was amisse, and to settle peace. viz.

b More were named, but these chiefly were present.

[b] The Archbishop of Armagh.	Doctor Ralph Brounrigg.
The Bishop of Durham.	Doctor Richard Holdsworth.
The Bishop of Exeter.	Doctor John Hacket.
Doctor Samuel Ward.	Doctor Cornelius Burges.
Doctor John Prideaux.	Master John White.
Doctor William Twisse.	Master Stephen Marshall.
Doctor Robert Sanderson.	Master Edmund Calamy.
Doctor Daniel Featlye.	Master Thomas Hill.

Jerusalem-Chamber in the Dean of Westminsters house, was the place of their meeting, (where they had solemn debates six severall dayes) alwaies entertained at his Table with such bountifull chear as well became a Bishop. But this we behold as the last course, of all publick Episcopall-Treatments, whose Guests may now even put up their Knives, seeing soon after the Voider was called for, which took away all Bishops lands, and most of English-Hospitality.

They consult on Innovations in Doctrin

47. First they took the Innovations of Doctrine into consideration, and here some complained, that all the tenets of the Councell of Trent, had (by one or other) been preached and printed, abating only such points of State-Popery against the Kings Supremacy, made treason by the Statute. Good works co-causes with faith, by justification: private confession, by particular enumeration of sinnes, Anno Dom. 1640 — Anno Regis Caroli 16 — Febr. 4. — March 1. — Mond. 21.

Anno Regis Carol. 16 | Anno Dom. 1640

ſinnes, needfull neceſſitate medii to ſalvation, that the oblation (or as others, the conſumption) of the Elements, in the Lords-Supper, holdeth the nature of a true ſacrifice, prayers for the dead, lawfulneſſe of monaſticall vowes, the groſſe ſubſtance of Arminianiſm, and ſome dangerous points of Socinianiſme.

48. Secondly, they enquired into preter-canonicall conformity, and innovations in diſcipline. Advancing Candleſticks in parochiall Churches in the day time, on the Altar ſo called. Making Canopyes over, with traverſes of Curtains (in imitation of the Vaile before the Holy of Holyes) on each ſide and before it. Having a credentia, or ſide-Table, (as a Chappel of eaſe, to the Mother Altar) for divers uſes in the Lords Supper. Forbidding a direct prayer before Sermon, and Miniſters to expound the Catechiſm at large to their Pariſhioners, carrying children (when baptized) to the Altar ſo called, and there offering them up to God, pretending for ſome of theſe innovations, the injunctions and advertiſements of Queen Eliz. which are not in force, and appertaining to the printed Liturgy ſecundo & tertio Edvardi ſexti, which is reformed by Parliament. And in diſcipline.

49. Thirdly, they conſulted about the Common Prayer-Book, whether ſome legendary, and ſome much doubted ſaints, with ſome ſuperſtitious memorialls were not to be expunged the calendar.[c] Whether it was not fit that the Leſſons ſhould be only out of Canonicall Scripture, the Epiſtles, Goſpells, Pſalmes, and Hymes, to be read in the new tranſlation, &c. Whether times prohibited for Marriage, are not totally to be taken away. Whether it were not fit that hereafter none ſhould have a Licence, or have their Banes of Matrimony asked, ſave ſuch who ſhould bring a Certificate from their Miniſter, that they were inſtructed in their Catechiſm. Whether the Rubick is not to be mended, altered and explained in many particulars. And concerning the Common-Prayer.

[c] This I did write out of the private notes of one of the Committe.

50. Laſtly, they entered on the regulating of Eccleſiaſticall government, which was not brought in, becauſe the Biſhop of Lincoln had undertaken the draught thereof, but not finiſhed it, as imployed at the ſame time in the managing of many matters of State: ſo eaſy it is for a great perſon never to be at leiſure, to doe, what he hath no great minde ſhould be done. And regulation of government.

51. Some are of opinion that the moderation and mutuall compliance of theſe Divines, might have produced much good, if not interrupted, conceiving ſuch lopping might have ſaved the felling of Epiſcopacy. Yea they are confident, had this expedient been purſued and perfected, Divers opinions what this conference might have produced.

Troiaq. nunc ſtares, Priamiq. arx alta maneres.
Troy ſtill had ſtood in power,
And King Priams lofty Tower,
Had remained at this hower:

it might, under God, have been a means, not only to have checkt, but choakt our civill War in the infancy thereof. But the Court prelates expected no good from the reſult of this meeting, ſuſpecting the Doctrinal Puritans, (as they nicknamed them) joyned with the Diſciplinary Puritans, would betray the Church betwixt them. Some hot ſpirits would not have one ace of epiſcopal power or profit abated, and (though ſince confuted by their own hunger) preferred no bread, before half a loaf. Theſe maintained that any giving back of ground, was in effect the granting of the day to the oppoſit party, ſo covetous they be to multiply their cravings, on the others conceſſions. But what the iſſue of this conference concluded would have been, is only known to him who knew what * the Men of Keilah would doe, and whoſe preſcience extends not only to things future, but futurable, having the certain cogniſance of contingents, which might, yet never actually ſhall, come to paſſe.

* 1 Sam. 23. 12.

52. This conſultation continued till the middle of May, and the weaving thereof was fairly forward on the Loome, when Atropos occat, the bringing Broken off.

in the Bill against Deanes and Chapters, Root and Branch, cut off all the threds, putting such a distance betwixt the fore-said Divines, that never their Judgements, (and scarce their Persons) met after together. Anno Dom. 1641. Anno Regis Caroli 16.

The death of Bishop Davenant.

53. In the midst of these troublesome times, John Davenant Bishop of Salisbury ended his life. His Father was a wealthy and religious Citizen of London, but born at Davenants-lands in Sible Henningham in Essex. Where his Ancestours had continued in a worshipfull degree from Sir John Davenant, who lived in the time of King Henry the third. He bred his sonne a Fellow Commoner in Queens Colledge in Cambridge, and would not suffer him to accept a Fellowship, though offered, as conceiving it a bending of these places from the direct intent of the Founders, when they are bestowed on such as have plenty. Though indeed such preferments are appointed, as well for the reward of those that are worthy, as the relief of those that want: and after his Fathers death he was chosen into that Society. In his youthfull exercises, he gave such an earnest of his future maturity, that Dr. Whitacre, hearing him dispute, said, The he would in time prove the Honour of the University. A Prediction that proved not untrue; when afterward he was chosen Margaret Professour of Divinity, being as yet but a private Fellow of the Colledge. Whereof some yeers after he was made Master, and at last Bishop of Salisbury. Where with what gravity, and moderation he behaved himself, how humble, hospitable, painfull in preaching and writing, may better be reported hereafter, when his memory (green as yet) shall be mellowed by time. He sate Bishop about twenty yeers, and died of a Consumption anno 1641. to which, sensibleness of the sorrowfull times, (which he saw were bad, and foresaw would be worse) did contribute not a little. I cannot omit, how some few hours before his death, having lyen for a long time (though not speechless, yet) not speaking, nor able to speak (as we beholders thought, though indeed he hid that little strength we thought he had lost, and reserved himself for pupose) he fell into a most emphaticall prayer for half a quarter of an hour. Amongst many heavenly passages therein, He thanked God for this his fatherly correction, because in all his life time he never had one heavie affliction, which made him often much suspect with himself, whether he was a true Child of God or no, untill this his last sickness. Then he sweetly fell asleep in Christ, and so we softly draw the Curtains about him.

Deans and Chapters first opposed by Parliament.

54. The whole Bodies of Cathedrall Churches, being of too great a bulk, to be blown up by their adversaries at once, they began with the Quires, accusing the members thereof for useless and unprofitable. The Prelaticall Court Clergy, were not so active and diligent in defending these foundations, as it was expected from their interest and relations. Whether because they were disheartned at the imprisonment of their chief the Archbishop of Cant. or because some of them being otherwise obnoxious to the Parliament were loath therein to appear; or because they vainly hoped that this heat once over, all things would continue in their pristine condition; or because they were loath to plead in that Suit, wherein they despaired to prevaile, as foreseeing those places destined to dissolution.

An unjust charge.

55. Yet some of the same side causelesly complained of the backwardnesse of other moderate Cathedrall men, that they improved not their power with their Parliament friends so zealously as they might in this cause, as beginning too late, and proceeding too lazily therein, who should sooner have set their shoulders and backs to those tottering Quires, so either to support them, or to be buried under the ruines thereof. Whereas they did whatsoever good men could, or wise men would doe in their condition, leaving no stone unturned which might advantage them herein.

The Cathedrall-men endeavour to preserve their foundations.

56. Indeed it was conceived inconsistent with their gravity, to set themselves

April 21.

Anno Regis Caroli 16 | Anno Dom. 1641

ſelves to fight againſt the ſhadow of common rumour (and ſo to feign an enemy to themſelves) whileſt as yet no certainty of the Parliaments intentions to deſtroy Deanes and Chapters. What had this been but perchance to put that into their brains, which otherwiſe they charitably beleeved would not enter therein? But no ſooner were they certified of the reality of their deſigne, but they vigorouſly in their callings endeavoured the prevention thereof.

By
- Appointing one in each Cathedrall Church to ſollicite their friends on this behalf.
- Drawing up a Petition (the ſame mutatis mutandis) to Houſe of Lords and Commons, which (becauſe never formally preſented) I forbear to inſert.
- Retaining and inſtructing learned Councell to move for them in the Houſe.

Untill they were informed that the Orders of the Houſe, would not bear any to plead for them, but that they muſt perſonally appear and viva voce plead for themſelves.

May 12. 57. Leſt therefore their longer ſilence ſhould by poſterity be interpreted, either Sullenneſſe, that they would not; or guiltineſſe, that they durſt not ſpeak for themſelves, by their friends they obtained leave to be admitted into the Houſe of Commons, and to be heard what they could alledge in their own behalf. They made choice of Dr. John Hacket, Prebendary of Pauls, and Archdeacon of to be the mouth in the behalf of the reſt. The brief heads of whoſe ſpeech, copied (by his leave) out of his own papers, are here inſerted.

Dr. Hacket his Speech in the defence of Deans and Chapters.

58. Firſt he craved the favour of that Honourable Houſe, to whom he was to ſpeak on a double diſadvantage. One cauſed from the ſhortneſſe of time, this employment being impoſed on him but in the afternoon of the day before. The other becauſe he had not heard what crimes or offences were charged on Deanes and Chapters, (that ſo he might purge them from ſuch imputations) reports only flying abroad that they were accounted of ſome, of no uſe, and convenience; the contrary whereof he ſhould endeavour to prove, reducing the ſame to two heads, quoad res, & quoad Perſonas, in regard of things of great moment, and divers Perſons concerned in ſuch Foundations.

59. To the firſt. It is fit that to ſupply the defects of prayer committed by private men, the publick duty thereof ſhould be conſtantly performed in ſome principall place (in imitation of the primitive practice) and this is dayly done in Cathedrall Churches. And whereas ſome complain that ſuch ſervice gives offence for the ſuper-exquiſiteneſſe of the Muſick therein, (ſo that what was intended for Devotion vaniſhed away into Quavers and Aire) he with the reſt of his Brethren there preſent wiſhed the amendment thereof, that it might be reduced to the form which Athanaſius commends, ut legentibus ſint quàm cantantibus ſimiliores. And here he ſpake much in prayſe of the Church-Muſick, when moderated to Edification.

60. Hence he paſſed to what he tearmeth the other wing of the Cherubin, which is Preaching, firſt planted ſince the Reformation in Cathedrall Churches, as appears by the learned Sermons which Dr. Allens (afterwards Biſhop of Exceſter) preached in the Church of St. Pauls, and ſince continued therein. Where by the way he took occaſion to refell that ſlander, which ſome caſt on Lecture-Preachers as an upſtart-Corporation, alledging that the locall Statutes of moſt, or all Cathedrall Churches doe require Lectures on the week dayes. And in the name of his Brethren he requeſted that Honourable Houſe, that the godly and profitable performance of preaching might be the more exacted.

Anno Dom. 1641 | Anno Regis Carol. 16

61. In the third place he insisted on the advancement of learning, as the proper use and convenience of Cathedralls, each of them being a small Academie, for the Champions of Christ his cause against the Adversarie by their learned pens. Here he proffered to prove by a catalogue of their names and works, which he could produce, that most excellent labours in this kinde (excepting some few) have proceeded from persons preferred in Cathedralls or the Universities. Now what a disheartning would it be to young Students, if such promotions were taken away, witnesse the fewnesse of such admitted this last yeer into the Universities, and the deadnesse of the sale of good Books in St. Pauls Church yard, meerly upon a timorous imagination abroad, that we are now shutting up learning in a case and laying it aside. But if the bare threatening make such a stop in literature, what wil the blow given doe thereon?

62. Fourthly, he alledged that the ancient and genuine use of Deans and Chapters was, as Senatus Episcopi, to assist the Bishop in his jurisdiction. Now whereas some of his reverend Brethren had lately complained, that Bishops have for many yeers usurped the sole government to themselves, and their Consistories, the continuing of Chapters rightly used, would reduce it from one Man, to a plurality of assistants.

63. Lastly, the structures themselves should (said he) speak for the structures. Not that he would have them with Christs disciples fondly to admire the Fabricks, but to put them in remembrance, that Cathedrall Churches were the first monuments of Christianity in the Kingdome.

64. From things, he passed to Persons, and began with the multitude of such members as had maintenance from Cathedralls, (some one of them allowing lively-hood to three hundred, and) the totall amounting to many thousands. All which by the dissolutions of Deans and Chapters, must be exposed to poverty. Next he instanced in their Tenants, who holding Leases from Deans and Chapters, are sensible of their own happinesse, (in enjoying six parts of seven in pure gain) and therefore have petitioned the House to continue their ancient Land-lords. Thirdly, such Cities wherein Cathedrals stand, (if maritime) being very poor in Trade, are inriched by the hospitality of the Clergy, & the frequent resort of strangers unto them.

65. Then proceeded he to speak of the branches of the whole Kingdome, all being in hope to reap benefit by the continuance of Deans and Chapters lands as now emploied. For all men (said he) are not born elder Brothers, nor all elder Brothers inheriters of Land. Divers of low degree, but generous Spirits would be glad to advance themselves, and atchieve an estate by qualifying themselves by industry and virtue, to attain a share of Cathedrall Endowments, as the common possession of the Realm, inclosed in no private mens estate.

66. And whereas travailers inform them, that all ranks and degrees of people in England, [Knights, Gentlemen, Yeamen,] live more freely and fashionably, than in any other Countries, he trusted their Honours would account it reasonable, that the Clergy had in some sort, a better maintenance then in neighbouring reformed Churches, and not with Jeroboams Priests, to be the basest of all the People.

67. Then did he instance in some famous Protestants of forrain parts, who had found great relief and comfort by being installed Prebendaries in our Cathedrall and Collegiate Churches, as Dr. Saravia, preferred by Queen Elizabeth, Dr. Casaubon, (Father and Son) by King James, Dr. Primrose, Mr. Vossius, in the reign of King Charles, and Dr. Peter Moulin alive at this day, and who intended to leave Sedan, (if the warlike preparations there proceeded) and come over into England, where he should have but sad welcome if all his livelyhood were taken away from him.

68. Nor could an Act be done more to gratify the Church of Rome, than than to destroy Deans and Chapters, seeing * Sanders himself seemeth to complain, that Queen Elizabeth had left Provosts, Deans, Canons and Prebendaries, in Cathedrall and Collegiate Churches, because he foresaw, such foundations would conduce to the stability of religion, so that by his words, a fatter Sacrifice could not be offered up, to such as himself, than the extirpation of them.

Anno Regis Caroli 16 | Anno Dom. 1641

* De schismate Anglicano pag. 163.

69. He went forwards to shew the benefit the King, and Commonwealth reapt by such Lands, as paying greater summs to the Exchequer, for first fruits, tenths and subsidies, according to the proportion, than any other estates, & Corporations in the Kingdome. And are ready (said he) if called upon, cheerfully to contribute in an extraordinary manner to the charge of the Kingdome.

70. Now as he was by their Honours favour admitted to plead under that roof, where their noble Progenitors had given to the Clergy, so many Charters, Priviledges, & Immunities, so he implored to finde the ancient & honourable justice of the House unto his Brethren, who were not charged, much lesse convicted of any scandalous faults, justly for the same to forfeit their estates.

71. At last he led them to the highest degree of all considerations, viz. the honour of God, to whose worship and service such Fabricks and Lands were dedicated, and barred all alienation with (which he said is tremenda vox) curses and imprecations; he minded them of the censers of Korah and his complices, pronounced hallowed, * because pretended to doe God service therewith. And lest any should wave this as a Leviticall nicety, it was * proverbiall Divinity a received rule in every mans mouth. It is a snare to a man that devoureth that which is holy. He added the smart question of St. Paul, Thou that abhorrest Idols, doest thou commit Sacrilege? and concluded, that on the ruins of the rewards of learning, no structure can be raised but ignorance, and upon the chaos of ignorance, nothing can be built but profaneness and confusion.

* Numbers 16. 38.

* Proverbs 20. 25.

72. This his speech was uttered with such becoming gravity, that it was generally well relented and wrought much on the House for the present, so that had the aliening of such Lands been then put to the Vote, some (who conceived themselves knowing of the sense of the House) concluded it would have been carried on the Negative by more than six score suffrages.

The Speech well accepted.

73. In the afternoon Dr. Cornelius Burges, as Speaker for his Party, made a vehement invective against Deans and Chapters, and the unprofitablenesse of such Corporations. He heavily aggravated the debauchednesse of Singingmen, not only useleſse, but hurtfull by their vicious conversations. Yet he concluded with the utter unlawfulnesse, to convert such Endowments to any private Persons profit. So that the same Doctrine was delivered by both the Doctors, only they differed in their Applications, the former being for the continuing such lands to their ancient, the latter for diverting them to other, but neither for alienating them from publique and pious imployments.

Dr. Burges his Speech against Deans and Chapters.

74. If since Dr. Burges hath been a large purchaser of such lands to himself, if since St. Andrew * the first converted, and St. Paul the last converted Apostle have met in his purse, I doubt not but that he can give sufficient reason for the same, both to himself and any other, that shall question him therein. The rather because lately he read his learned Lectures in St. Pauls, on the Criticisms of Conscience, no lesse carefully then curiously weighing satisfaction to scruples, and if there be any fault, so able a Confessor, knows how to get his absolution.

His ability in casuistical Divinity. * 1 Joh. 1. and Luke.

75. A Bill brought up from the Commons to the Lords against Bishops and Clergy-men, which having severall branches was severally voted.

A medly Bill against Bishops partly granted, partly denyed.

1. That they should have no votes in Parliament.
2. That they should not be in the Commission of the Peace, nor Judges in Temporall Courts.
3. Nor sit in the Star-Chamber, nor be Privy-Counsellors.

The

Anno Dom. 1641 — Anno Regis Caroli 16

The two last branches of this Bill passed by generall consent; not above two dissenting. But the first branch was voted in the Negative, wherein all the Bishops gave their own voices for themselves. Yet had their suffrages been secluded, and the question only put to the lay Lords, it had been carried for the Bishops by sixteen decisive.

June 8

76. After some dayes debate, the Lords who were against the Bishops, protested that the former manner of voting the Bill by branches, was unparlamentary and illegall. Wherefore they moved the House that they should be so joyned together, as either to take the Bill in wholly or cast it all out. Whereupon the whole Bill was utterly cast out by many voices; had not the Bishops (as again they did) given their suffrages in the same.

At last wholly cast out.

77. Master Maynard made a Speech in the Committee of Lords against the Canons, made by the Bishops in the last Convocation, therein with much learning indeavouring to prove

Mr. Maynards Speech against the Canons.

1. That in the Saxons times (as Malmesbury, Hoveden, Sir Henry Spelman &c. doe witnesse) Lawes and constitutions Ecclesiasticall had the confirmation of Peers and sometimes of the People, to which great Councells our Parliaments do succeed.
2. That it appears out of the aforesaid Authors, and others, that there was some checking about the disuse of the generall making of such Church Lawes.
3. That for Kings to make Canons without consent of Parliament cannot stand, because built on a bad foundation, viz. on the Popes making Canons by his sole Power, so that the groundwork not being good the superstructure sinketh therewith.
4. He examined the Statute [illegible] of Henry 8, avouching that that clause, The Clergy shall not make Canons without the Kings leave, implyeth not, that by his leave alone they may make them.

Lastly he endeavoured to prove that these Canons were against the Kings Prerogative, the Rights, Liberties and Properties of the Subject, insisting herein on severall particulars.

1. The first Canon puts a penalty on such as disobey them.
2. One of them determineth the Kings Power and the Subjects right.
3. It sheweth that the Ordinance of Kings is by the Law of Nature, and then they should be in all places and all alike.
4. One of the Canons saith that the King may not be resisted.
5. Another makes a Holy Day, whereas that the Parliam[illegible] there shall be such and no more.

This his Speech lost neither life nor lustre, being reported to [illegible]y the Bishop of Lincoln a back friend to the Canons, becaus[illegible] absence and durance in the Tower.

Severall judgments of the Clergyes offence.

78. One in the House of Commons heightned [illegible] lergy herein, into Treason, which their more moder[illegible] into a Premunire. Many much insisted on [illegible]on for presuming (being but private men [illegible] Parliament) to grant subsidies, and so without [illegible] to give away the estates of their fellow-subjects.

A Bill read against the High-Commission.

78. A Bill was read to repeal that Statute of 1 Eliz. whereby the High-Commission Court is erected. This Bill a[illegible]'s for[illegible] Archbishop, Bishop &c. deriving power from the K[illegible] pain, penalty, amercement, imprisonment, or corpor[illegible] any ecclesiasticall offence or transgression. Forbidding them likewise to administer the Oath Ex officio or give Oath to Church-Wardens, Sides-men or any others, whereby their own or others offences should be discovered.

June 17

DIGNISIMO

Anno Regis Caroli 16 | Anno Dom. 1640

DIGNISSIMO

DOM. THOMAE FISHER

BARONETTO.

CUM Insignia tua Gentilitia intueor, non sum adeò Heraldicæ Artis ignarus, quin probè sciam, quid sibi velit Manus illa, Scutello inserta.

Te scilicet Baronettum designat, cùm omnes in illum Ordinem cooptati, ex Institutione sua, ad * Ultoniam, (Hiberniæ Provinciam) forti dextrâ defendendam teneantur.

At sensum (præter hunc vulgarem) alium latiorem, & (quoad meipsum) lætiorem, Manui illi expansæ, quæ in tuo Clypeo spectabilis, subesse video. Index est summæ tuæ Munificentiæ, quo nomine me tibi divinctissimum profiteor.

* Seldenus in titulis Honoris.

June 14

1.

Mitting matters of greater consequence, know that the Bill against the High Commission, was the third time read in the House of Lords and passed it, which some dayes after was confirmed by his Majesty. Thus the edge of the Spiritual Sword, as to discipline, was taken away. For although I read of a Proviso made in the House of Lords, that the generall words in this Bill should extend only to the High-Commission-Court, and not reach other Ecclesiasticall jurisdiction: yet that Proviso being but writen and the Statute printed, all coercive power of Church Consistories were taken away. Mr. Pim triumphed at this successe, crying out, Di-

The High Commission Court put down.

June 17

gitus Dei, it is the finger of God, that the Bishops should so supinely suffer themselves to be surprised in their power. Some disaffected to Episcopy observed a Justice, that seeing many simple souls were in the high Commission Court by captious interrogatories circumvented into a self-accusation, an unsuspected clause in this Statute should abolish all their lawfull authority. Anno Dom. 1641 | Anno Regis Caroli 16

The Bill for Regulation of Bishops. July 2

2. The Bishop of Lincoln brought up a Bill to regulate Bishops and their jurisdiction, consisting of severall particulars:

1. That every Bishop being in his Dioceſſe not sick should preach once every Lords day, or pay five pounds to the poor to be levyed by the next Justice of Peace, and distresse made by the Constable.
2. That no Bishop shall be Justice of Peace, save the Dean of Westminster in Westminster, and St. Martines.
3. That every Bishop should have twelve assistants (besides the Dean and Chapter) four chosen by the King, four by the Lords, and four by the Commons, for jurisdiction and ordination.
4. That in all vacancies they should present to the King, three of the ablest Divines in the Dioceſſe, out of which his Majesty might choose one to be Bishop.
5. Deans and Prebends to be resident at the Cathedralls but sixty
6. dayes.
That Sermons be preached therein twice every Lords day, once every Holy day, and a Lecture on Wednesday mpathe salary of 100. Marks.
7. All Archbishops, Bishops, Collegiate Churches, &c. to give a fourth part of their fines and improved rents, to buy out Impropriations.
8. All double beneficed men to pay a moiety of their benefice to their Curates.
9. No appeal to the Court of Arches or Audience.
10. Canons and Eccleſiaſtcall capitulations, to be drawn up and fitted to the Lawes of the Land by sixteen learned men, chosen six by the King, five by the Lords, and five by the Commons.

This Bill was but once read in the House, and no great matter made thereof: the Antiepiscopall party conceived it needleſſe to shave their beards, whose heads they intended to cut off, designing an utter extirpation of Bishops.

A crying sinne of the English Clergy.

3. By the way the mention of a moiety to the Curats, minds me of a crying sin of the English Clergy conceived by the most conscientious amongst them, a great incentive of Divine anger against them; namely, the miserable and scandalous Stipends afforded to their Curats. Which made Lay-men follow their pattern in Vicaridges unindowed, seeing such who knew most what belong to the work, allowed the least wages to the Ministry. Hence is it that God since hath changed his hand, making many who were poor Curats rich Rectors, and many wealthy Incumbents to become poor Curats. It will not be amisse to wish thankfulneſſe without pride to the one, and patience without dejection to the other.

A Bill against Bishop Wren. July 10

4. A Bill was sent up by the Commons against Matthew Wren Bishop of Ely, containing twenty five Articles, charging him for being Popishly affected, a suppreſſor of Preaching, and introducer of Arbitrary Power to the hazard of the estates and lives of many. They desired he might be sequestred from the Kings Person and Service.

The Bishops impeached for making of Canons.

5. To return to the Bishops, the Commons perceiving that they were so tenacious of their votes in Parliament, resolved vigorously to prosecute the impeachment against them for making of Canons, expecting the Bishops should willingly quit their votes as Barons to be acquitted of their Premunire, Anno Regis Caroli 16 — Anno Dom. 1641 — Aug. 16.

premunire, whereby they forfeited all their Personall estates, yet the sound of so great a charge did not so affright them but that they persisted legally to defend their innocence.

6. The Bishops that were impeached for making Canons, craved time till Michaelmas Term to make their answer. This was vehemently opposed by some Lords, and two questions were put.

1. Whether the Bishops should sit still in the House though without voting (to which themselves consented) whilst the circumstance of time for their answer was in debate.
2. What time they should have for their answer.

Have time and councell allowed them.

The first of these was carried for them by one present voice, and four proxies; and for the second, time was allowed them till the tenth of November. And although the adverse Lords pleaded that in offences criminall, for matters of fact, no councell should be allowed them, but to answer yea or no: yet on the Lord Keepers affirming it ordinary and just to allow councell in such cases, it was permitted unto them.

The impeachment of the Bishops waved and why.

Bishop Wren of Norwich is chosen by joynt consent, to solicite the cause, and to argue the point of cost therein. Of the Councell he retained, two only appeared, Serjeant Fermin, who declined to plead for them, except the Bishops would first procure him a Warrant from the House of Commons (which they refused to doe:) and Mr. Chuite, who being demanded of the Lords whether he would plead for the Bishops, Yea (said he) so long as I have a tongue in my head. Soon after he drew up a Demurrer in their behalf, that their offence in making Canons could not amount to a Premunire. This being shown to the Bishop of Lincoln, he protested that he never saw a stronger demurrer all the dayes of his life: and the notice hereof to the Lords was probably the cause, that they waved any further prosecution of the charge, which thenceforward sunk in silence.

The Bishops accused for mean birth.

8. Fain we now from the outworks of Episcopacy (I mean the Deans and Chapters) unto which fiercely stormed (but as yet not taken) to the Bishops themselves, who began to shake, seeing their interest and respects in the House of Lords did daily decay, and decline. Yea, about this time came forth and Lord Brook his book against Bishops, accusing them in respect of their parentage to be de fæce populi, of the dregs of the people; and in respect of their studies no way fit for government, or to be Barons in Parliament.

Vindicated their parentage.

9. Whereupon the Bishops taking this accusation to heart, meet together; and in their own necessary defence, thought fit to vindicate their extractions, some publickly, some in private discourse.

Dr. Williams began, then Archbishop of York (Canterbury being in the Tower) was accused in the Star-Chamber, for purchasing the two ancientest Houses and and inheritances in North-Wales (which are Penrhyne and Quowilocke) in regard he was descended from them. So that he might as truely accuse all the ancient Nobility of Britain, as tax him for meanly descended.

Dr. Juxon Bishop of London did or might plead that his parents lived in good fashion, and gave him large allowance first in the University, then in Grays-Inn, where he lived as fashionably as other Gentlemen, so that the Lord Brooks might question the parentage of any Inns-of-Court-Gentlemen, as well as his.

Bishop Morton of Durham, averred that his father had been Lord Major of York, and born all the Offices of that City with credit and honour; so that the Lord Brook might as justly quarrell the descent of any Citizens Sons in England.

Bishop Curle of Winchester his father was for many yeers Auditor in the Court of Wards, to Queen Elizabeth, and King James: and the aforesaid Lord may as well condemn all the sonnes of Officers to be meanly born as accuse him.

Bishop Cook of Hereford, his Fathers family had continued in Darbyshire, in the same house, and in the same means, four hundred yeers at least, often Sheriffs of that County, and matched to all the best houses therein. So that the Lord Brook might as well have charged all the ancient Gentry of that shire for mean parentage as accuse him.

Bishop Owen of Asaph, that there was not a Gentleman in the two Counties of Carnarvan and Anglesey, of three hundred pounds a yeer, but was his Kinsman or allieman in the fourth degree; which he thinks, will sufficiently justify his parentage.

Bishop Goodman of Glocester, that though his very name seemed to point out his descent from Yeomantry, yet (though the youngest sonne of the youngest brother) he had more left unto him, than the Lord Brook his father had to maintain him and all his family. That his grandfather by his father side, purchased the whole estate of Sir Thomas Exmew, Lord Maior London 1517. and that by his mothers side he was descended of the best parentage of the City of London.

The rest of the Bishops might sufficiently vindicate their parentage, as most the Sonnes of Ministers, or Lay-Gentlemen, whose extractions ran not so low as to any such feculencie charged upon them.

The degrees whereby the Bishops declined in Parliament.

10. But moe symptomes of their dying power in Parliament daily discovered themselves, some whereof we will recount, that posterity may perceive by what degrees they did lessen in the House, before they lost their Votes therein.

First, whereas it was customary, that in all Commissions, such a number of Bishops should be joyned with the temporall Lords, of late their due proportions were not observed.

The Clark of the Parliament, applying himselfe to the prevalent party, in the reading of Bills turned his back to the Bishops, who could not (and it seems he intended they should not) distinctly hear any thing, as if their consent or dissent were little concerned therein.

When a Bill passed for exchange of Lands, betwixt the Bishop of London and Sir Nicolas Crispe, the temporall Lords were offended that the Bishop was styled Right Honourable therein, which at last was expung'd and he intitled, one of his Majesties most Honourable Privy Councell; the honour being fixed upon his State imployment, not Episcopall function.

On a solemn Fast in their going to Church, the temporall Lords first took precedency of the Bishops (who quietly submitted themselves to come behind) on the same token, that [a] one of the Lay-Lords said, Is this a day Humiliation, wherein we shew so much pride, in taking place of those to whom our ancestors ever allow'd it?

[a] The young Lord Spenser afterwards E. of Sunderland.

But the main matter was, that the Bishops were denied all medling even in the Commission of preparatory examinations concerning the Earl of Strafford, as causa sanguinis, and they as men of mercy not to deal in the condemnation of any person. The Bishops pleaded, though it was not proper for them to condemn the guilty, yet they might acquit the innocent, and such an one as yet that Earl was charitably presumed to be, untill legally convicted to be otherwise. They alledged also in their own behalf, that a Commission was granted in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, to certain Privy-Counsellors,

Anno Regis Carol. 16 | Anno Dom. 1640

Counsellors for the examination of the Queen of Scots, even to her condemnation if just cause appear'd, [b] and John Whitgift Archbishop of Canterbury, first named therein. All would not prevaile, the Bishops being forbidden any interposing in that matter.

b Camdens Eliz. in An. 1586.

11. It must not be forgotten, how about this time the Lord Kimbolton made a motion to perswade the Bishops, willingly to depart with their Votes in Parliament; adding, that if the same would surrender their suffrages, the temporall Lords who remained in the House, were obliged in honour, to be more tender of and carefull for the Bishops preservation in their Jurisdictions and Revenues. An instrument was imployed by the Earl of Essex (or else he imployed himself, conceiving the service acceptable) who dealt privately with severall Bishops to secure themselves by prevention, to surrender that which would be taken away from them. But the Bishops persisted in the negative, refusing by any voluntary act to be accessarie to their own injury, resolving to keep possession of their Votes, till a prevalent power outed them thereof.

Bishops refuse willingly to resigne their Votes.

12. Now no day passed, wherein some petition was not presented to the Lords or Commons, from severall persons against the Bishops as grand grievancers, causing the generall decay of trade, obstructing the proceedings in Parliament, and what not? In so much, that the very Porters (as they said) were able no longer to undergoe the burden of Episcopall tyranny, and petitioned against it. But hitherto these were but blunt petitions, the last was a sharp one (with point and edg) brought up for the same purpose by the armed Apprentices.

Multitudes of petitions against Bishops

13. Now, seeing mens judgments are at such a distance, about the nature of this their practice, some terming it a tumult, mutiny, riot; others calling it courage, zeal, and industry; some admiring them as acted with a publique spirit, above their age and education; others condemning them much, their countenancers more, their secret abetters and contrivers, most of all: I say, when men are thus divided in point of judgement, it will be safest for us to confine our selves, meerly to matter of fact. Wherein also we meet with much diversity of relation; though surely, what a [c] Parlitary Chronicler writes thereof, must be believed.

A land-tide of Apprentices flow to Westminster.

c John Vicars in his God in the Mount or Parliamentarie Chronicle, lib. 1. pag. 58.

Decem. 26.

Now, see how it pleased the Lord it should come to passe; some of the Apprentices, and Citizens were again affronted about Westminster-Abbey, and a great noise and hubbub fell out thereabouts. Others, some of them, watched (as it seems by the sequell) the Bishops coming to the Parliament, who, considering the disquiet and great noise by land all about Westminster, durst not come to Parliament that way, for fear of the Apprentices, and therefore intended to have come to Parliament, by water in Barges. But the Apprentices watched them that way also; and as they thought to come to land, they were so pelted with stones, and frighted at the sight of such a company of them, that they durst not land, but were rowed back, and went away to their places.

Thus the Bishops were fain to shelter themselves from the showre of stones ready to fall upon them, and with great difficulty made their escape. Who otherwise on St. Stephans day, had gone St. Stephans way, to their graves.

14. As for the hubbub at Westminster Abbey lately mentioned, eye-witnesses have thus informed me of the manner thereof. Of those Apprences who coming up to the Parliament cryed, No Bishops, no Bishops, some rudely rushing into the Abby Church, were reproved by a Virger for their irreverent behaviour therein. Afterwards quitting the Church, the doors thereof by command from the Dean were shut up, to secure the Organs and Monuments therein, against the return of Apprentices. For though

The manner of the tumult at Westminster Abby and White-Hall belongs to the pens of State Historians.

Anno Dom. 1641 | Anno Regis Caroli 16

others could not foretell the intentions of such a tumult, who could not certainly tell their own, yet the suspicion was probable, by what was uttered amongst them. The multitude presently assault the Church, (under pretence that some of their party were detained therein) and force a pane out of the North door, but are beaten back by the officers & Scholars of the Colledge. Here an unhappy tile was cast by an unknown hand, from the leads or battlements of the Church, which so bruised Sir Richard Wiseman (conductor of the Apprentices) that he died thereof, and so ended that dayes distemper.

Why no more then 12 of the Bishops present at the Protest.

15. To return to the Bishops, the next day twelve of them repaired to Jerusalem-Chamber in the Deans lodgings; and if any demand where were the rest of them to make up twenty six, take this account of their absence.

13 Dr. Laud Archbishop of Cant. was in the Tower.
14 Dr. Juxon Bishop of London, was keeping his hospitality, (it being Christmas) at Fulham.
15 So was Dr. Curle at Winchester-House, and it was conceived unsafe (though but cross the Thames) to send unto him.
16 So also was Dr. Warner of Rochester, returned to entertain his neighbours in the Country.
17 Dr. Bridgeman of Chester
18 Dr. Roberts of Bangor
} were not as yet come out of the Country.
19 Dr. Manwaring Bishop of St. Davids sate not in the house, as disabled long since by his censure in Parliament.
26 Dr. Duppa Bishop of Salisbury, was attending his charge Prince Charles.

21 Dr. John Prideaux	were not yet consecrated Bishops of	Worcester.
22 Dr. Winniffe		Lincoln.
23 Dr. Ralf Brounrigge.		Exeter.
24 Dr. Henry King		Chicheſter.
25 Dr. John Weſtfield		Briſtoll.

20 Carlile was void by the late death of Dr. Potter, only confer'd by the King on Archbishop Usher to hold it in Commendam.

Thus have we made up their numbers, and must not forget that a secret item was given to some of the Bishops, by some of their well-wishers, to absent themselves in this licentious time of Christmas, though they had not the happinesse to make use of the advice.

The form thereof.

16. The other twelve Bishops being not yet fully recovered from their former fear, grief, and anger (which are confest by all, to be but bad counsellors, in cases of importance) drew up in hast and disturbance such a Protestation, that posterity already hath had more years to discusse and examine, then they had hours, (I had almost said minutes) to contrive and compose, and (most of them implicitly relying on the conceived infallability of the Archbishop of York in point of common law) all subscribed, as followeth.

To the Kings most excellent Majesty and the Lords and Peers, now assembled in Parliament.

Decem. 27.

WHereas the Petitioners are called up by ſeverall and reſpective writs, and under great penalties to attend the Parliament, and have a cleer and indubitable right to vote in Bills, and other matters whatſoever debatable in Parliament by the ancient cuſtomes, cuſtomes, Lawes and Statutes of this Realm, and ought to be protected by your Majeſty quietly to attend, and proſecute that great ſervice. They humbly remonſtrate, and proteſt before God, your Majeſty, and the noble Lords, and Peers, now aſſembled in Parliament, That as they have an indubitate right to ſit and vote in the Houſe of the Lords; ſo are they, if they may be protected from force and violence, moſt ready and willing to perform their duties accordingly. And that they doe abominate all actions or opinions tending to Popery, and the maintenance thereof, as alſo all propenſion and inclination to any malignant party or any other ſide or party whatſoever, to the which their own reaſons, and conſcience ſhall not move them to adhere. But whereas they have been at ſeverall times violently menaced, affronted and aſſaulted by multitudes of people in their coming to perform their ſervices in that Honourable Houſe, and lately chaſed away, and put in danger of their lives, and can finde no redreſſe or protection upon ſundry complaints made to both Houſes in theſe particulars; They humbly proteſt before your Majeſty, and the Noble Houſe of Peers, that ſaving unto themſelves all their rights and intereſt of ſitting, and voting in that Houſe at other times, they dare not ſit or vote in the Houſe of Peers, untill your Majeſty ſhall further ſecure them from all affronts, indignities and dangers in the premiſes. Laſtly, whereas their fears are not built upon phantaſies and conceits, but upon ſuch grounds and objects as may well terrifie men of reſolution and much conſtancy; they doe in all humility and duty proteſt before your Majeſty, and Peers of that moſt Honourable Houſe of Parliament, againſt all Lawes, Orders, Votes, Reſolutions, and Determinations, as in themſelves Null and of none effect, which in their abſence, ſince the 27th of this inſtant moneth of December 1641. have already paſſed; as likewiſe againſt all ſuch as ſhall hereafter paſſe in that moſt Honourable Houſe, during the time of this their forced and violent abſence from the ſaid moſt Honourable Houſe: not denying, but if their abſenting of themſelves were wilfull and voluntary, that moſt honourable Houſe might proceed in all their premiſes, their abſence or this proteſtation notwithſtanding. And humbly beſeeching your moſt excellent Majeſty to command the Clark of that houſe of Peers to enter this their Petition and Proteſtation among his Records.

Anno Regis Caroli 16 | Anno Dom. 1641

They will ever pray God to bleſſe &c.

John Eborac.	Jo. Aſaph.	Ma. Ely.
Jho. Dureſme.	Guli. Ba. and Wells.	Godfry Glouc.
Ro. Co. Lich.	Geo. Heref.	Jo. Peterburg.
Joſ. Norw.	Robt. Oxon.	Morice Landaſf.

This inſtrument they delivered to Archbiſhop Williams, who according to their deſire, his own counſell, and promiſe, at the next opportunity, preſented it to his Majeſty.

17. His

The Bishops impeached of High-Treason

17. His Majesty would not meddle therewith in this dangerous juncture of time, (his great Councell then sitting) but wholly remitted the matter to the Parliament. The next morning, a Privy-Counsellor brought this protestation into the house, at the reading whereof the anti-episcopall party much triumphed, that the Bishops had gratified them with such an advantage against themselves, which their adversaries might wish, but durst not hope for heretofore. A conference is desired with the Commons in the painted Chamber, and therein concluded, that the Bishops should be impeached of high Treason, for indeavouring to subvert the fundamentall laws of the land, and the very being of Parliaments.

Anno Dom. 1641 | Anno Regis Carol. 16

And committed to the Tower.

18. Hereupon the next day the twelve subscribers were voted to be committed to the Tower, save that Bishop Morton of Durham, and Hall of Norwich, found some favour, partly in respect of their old age; and partly in regard of the great good they had done with their pens and preaching, to the Church of God: So that they alone were sent to the custody of the black rod. The rest being brought into the Tower, had that honour granted them in the prison which was denied them in the Parliament, to be esteemed equall with, yea above, temporall Lords, as appeared by the fees demanded of them; Though in fine Sir John Biron Lieutenant of the Tower, proved very courteous in removing the rigor thereof. The Archbishop of Cant. by a civill message, excused himself for not conversing with them, because he was committed on a different account from them, and probably they might mutually fare the worse, for any intercourse. And here we leave them prisoners for eighteen weeks together, and proceed.

19 | 30

Viscount Newwark his two Speeches in the behalf of Bishops.

19. Now was the Bill against the Bishops sitting in Parliament brought up into the house of Lords, and the matter agitated with much eagerness on both sides. Amongst those, who sided with them, none appeared in print more zealous, then the Lord Viscount Newwarke (afterward Earle of Kingstone, &c.) whose two speeches in Parliament although spoken some * moneths before, yet for the entireness of the History may now seasonably be inserted.

* The first May 21. The second May 24 anno 1641.

I shall take the boldnesse to speak a word or two upon this subject, first as it is in it self, then as it is in the consequence: For the former, I think he is a great stranger in Antiquity, that is not well acquainted with that of their sitting here, they have done thus, and in this manner, almost since the conquest; and by the same power and the same right the other Peers did, and your Lordships now doe; and to be put from this their due, so much their due, by so many hundred yeers, strengthned and confirmed, and that without any offence, nay, pretence of any, seems to me to be very severe; if it be jus, I dare boldly say it is summum. That this hinders their Ecclesiasticall vocation, an argument I hear much of, hath in my apprehension more of shadow than substance in it: if this be a reason, sure I am it might have been one six hundred yeers agoe.

A

Anno Regis Caroli 16 | Anno Dom. 1641

A Bishop, my Lords, is not so circumscribed within the circumference of his Diocesse, that his sometimes absence can be termed, no not in the most strict sense, a neglect or hinderance of his duty, no more then that of a Lieutenant from his County; they both have their subordinate Ministers, upon which their influences fall, though the distance be remote.

Besides, my Lords, the lesser must yeeld to the greater good; to make wholsome and good Lawes for the happy and well regulating of Church and Common-wealth, is certainly more advantagious to both, then the want of the personall execution of their office, and that but once in three yeers, & then peradventure but a month or two, can be prejudicall to either. I will goe no further to prove this, which so long experience hath done so fully, so demonstratively.

And now my Lords, by your Lordships good leave, I shall speak to the consequence as it reflects both on your Lordships, and my Lords the Bishops. Dangers and inconveniences are ever best pre onginquo; this Precedent comes neer to yo ..ps, the bill indeed hath a direct aspect only upo ..n, but an oblique one upon your Lordships, and such a one, that mutato nomine de vobis. Pretences are never wanting, nay, sometimes the greatest evills appear in the most fair and specious outsides; witnesse the Shipmony, the most abominable, the most illegall thing that ever was, and yet this was painted over with colour of the Law; What Bench is secure, if to alleage be to convince, and which of your Lordships can say that he shall continue a member of th House, when at one blow six and twenty are cut off? It then behoves the Neighbour to look about him, cùm proximus ardet Ucalegon.

And for the Bishops, my Lords, in what condition will you leave them? The House of Commons represents the meanest person, so did the Ma.. r his Slave, but they have none to doe so much for them, nd what justice can tie them to the observation of those Lawes, to whose consti- tution they give to consent? [illegible]isedome of former times gave proxies unto this House [illegible]y upon this ground, that every one might have a hand [illegible]e making of that, which he had an Obligation to obey: [illegible] House could not represent, therefore proxies in room of persons were most justly allowed.

And now my Lords, before I conclude, I beseech your Lordships to cast your eyes upon the Church, which I know is most dear and tender to your Lordships; you will see her suffer in her most principall members, and deprived of that honour which here and throughout all the Christian World ever since Christianity she constantly hath enjoyed; for what Nation or Kingdome is there in whose great and publique assemblies, and that from h[illegible]ginning, she had not some of hers, if I may not say as [illegible]ll, I am sure I may say as integrall parts thereof: [illegible]truly my Lords, Christianity cannot alone boast of this, [illegible]llenge it only as hers, even Heathenisme [illegible] an equ[illegible]bare.

I never [illegible] any of [illegible], Civill or Barbarous, that gave not due honour to the [illegible]legion, so that it seems to me to have no other originall [illegible]law from no other spring, then nature it self.

But I have done, and will trouble your Lordships no longer; how it may stand with the honour and justice of this house to passe this Bill, I most humbly submit unto your Lordships, the most proper and only Judges of them both.

His second Speech.

I shall not speak to the preamble of the Bill that Bishops and Clergy-men ought not to intermeddle in temporall affaires. For, truly, My Lords, I cannot bring it under any respect to be spoken of. Ought is a word of relation, and must either refer to Humane or Divine Law: to prove the [illegible]fulnesse of their intermeddling by the former, would be to no more purpose, than to labour to convince that by reason, which is evident to sense. It is by all acknowledged. The unlawfulnesse by the later, the Bill by no means admits of, for, it excepts Universities and such persons as shall have honour descend upon them. And your Lordships know, that circumstance and chance alter not the nature and essence of a thing, nor can except any particular from an universall proposition position by God himself delivered. I will therefore take these two as granted, first that they ought by our Law to intermeddle in Temporall affaires; secondly, that from doing so they are not inhibited by the Law of God, it leaves it at least as a thing indifferent. And now my Lords, to apply my self to the businesse of the . I shall consider the conveniency, and that in the severall habitudes the f. But, very briefly; first in that which it hath to them meerly as men, à tales: then as parts of the Common-weale: Thirdly, from the best inner of constituting Laws: and lastly, from the practice of all times bo Christian and Heathen.

Anno Regni Caroli 17 Anno Dom. 1641

Homo sum, nihil humanum à me alienum puto, was indeed the saying of the Comedian, but it o bt well have become the mouth of the greatest Philosopher. We allo to sense, all the works and operations of sense, and shall we restrain rea n? Must only man be hindred from his proper actions? They are mo fit to doe reasonable things that are most reasonable. For, Science commonly is accompanied with conscience; so is not ignorance: they seldome or never meet. And why should we take that capacity from them, which God and nature have so liberally bestowed? 1.

My Lords, the politick body of the Common-wealth is analogicall to the body naturall: every member in that contributes something to the preservation of the whole, the superfluity or defect which hinders the performance of that duty, your Lordships know what the Philosopher calls, ἁμαρτίαν τῶν μορίων, natures sinne. And truly my Lords, to be part of the other body, and doe nothing beneficiall thereunto, cannot fall under a milder term. The Common-wealth subsists by Lawes and their execution: and they that have neither head in the making, nor hand in the executing of them, confer not any thing to the being or well being thereof. And can such be called members unless most unprofitable ones? only fruges consumere nati. 2.

Me thinks it springs from nature it self, or the very depths of justice, that none should be tyed by other lawes then himself makes; for, What more naturall and just, then to be bound only by his own consent? to be ruled by anothers will is meerly tyrannicall. Nature there suffers violence, and man degenerates into beast. The most flourishing Estates were ever governed by Lawes of an universall constitution; witnesse this our Kingdome, witnesse Senatus Populusq; Romanus, the most glorious Common-wealth that ever was, and those many others in Greece and elsewhere of eternall memory. 3.

Some things, my Lords, are so evident in themselves that they are difficult in their proofs. Amongst them I reckon this conveniency I have spoken of: I will therefore use but a word or two more in this way. The long experience that all Christendome hath had hereof for these 1300 yeers, is certainly, argumentum ad hominem. Nay, my Lords, I will goe further (for the same reason runs through all Religions) never was 4.

Anno Dom. 1641 | Anno Regis Caroli 16

there any Nation that imployed not their religious men in the greateſt affairs. But to come to the buſineſſe that now lyes before your Lordſhips. Biſhops have voted here ever ſince Parliaments began, and long before were imployed in the publique. The good they have done your Lordſhips all well know, and at this day enjoy: for this I hope ye will not put them out, nor for the evill they may doe, which yet your Lordſhips doe not know, and I am confident never ſhall ſuffer. A poſition ought not to be deſtroyed by a ſuppoſition, & à poſſe ad eſſe non valet conſequentia. My Lords I have done with proving of this poſitively, I ſhall now by your good favours doe it negatively in anſwering ſome inconveniences that may ſeem to ariſe.

Object. 1. For the Text, No man that wars intangles himſelf with the affairs of this life, which is the full ſenſe of the word both in Greek and Latine, it makes not at all againſt them, except to intermeddle and intangle be terms equivalent. Beſides my Lords, though this was directed to a Church-man, yet it is of a generall nature and reaches to all, Clergy and Laity, as the moſt learned and beſt expoſitors unanimouſly doe agree. To end this, Argumentum ſymbolicum non eſt argumentativum.

Object. 2. It may be ſaid that it is inconſiſtent with a ſpiritu[illegible] truly my Lord, Grace and Nature are in ſome reſpects [illegible] in ſome others moſt harmoniouſly agree, it perfects nature, and [illegible] it to a height above the common altitude, and makes it moſt fit for thoſe great works of God himſelf, to make lawes, to doe Juſtice. There is then no inconſiſtency between themſelves, it muſt ariſe out of Scripture, I am confident it doth not formally out of any place there, nor did I ever meet with any learned writer of theſe or other times that ſo expounded any Text.

Object. 3. But though in ſtrict terms this be not inconſiſtent, yet it may peradventure hinder the duty of their other calling. My Lords, there is not any that ſits here, more for preaching then I am, I know it is the ordinary means to ſalvation, yet, I likewiſe know, there is not that full neceſſity of it as was in the primitive times. God defend that 1600 yeers acquaintance ſhould make the Goſpell of Chriſt no better known unto us. Neither, my Lords, doth their office meerly and wholly conſiſt in preaching, but partly in that, partly in praying and adminiſtring the bleſſed Sacraments, in a godly and exemplary life, in wholſome admonitions, in exhortations to vertue, dehortations from vice, and partly in eaſing the burthened conſcience. Theſe my Lords compleat the office of a Churchman. Nor are they altogether tyed to time or place, though I confeſſe they are moſt properly exerciſed within their own verge, except upon good occaſion, nor then the omiſſion of ſome can be termed the breach of them all. I muſt add one more, an eſſentiall one, the very form of Epiſcopacy that diſtinguiſheth it from the inferiour Miniſtery, the orderly and good government of the Church: and how many of theſe, I am ſure, not the laſt, my Lords, is interrupted by their ſitting here, once in 3 yeers, and then peradventure but a very ſhort time: and can there be a great a greater occasion than the common good of the Church and State? I will tell your Lordships what the great and good Emperour Constantine did, in his expedition against the Persians, he had his Bishops with him, whom he consulted about his military affairs, as Eusebius has it in his life, lib. 4. c. 56.

Anno Regis Caroli 16 | Anno Dom. 1641

Reward and punishment are the great negotiators in all worldly businesses; these may be said to make the Bishops swim against the stream of their consciences; And may not the same be said of the Laity? Have these no operations, but only upon them? Has the King neither frown, honour, nor offices, but only for Bishops? Is there nothing that answers their transactions? Indeed my Lords, I must needs say, that in charity it is a supposition not to be supposed; no nor in reason, that they will goe against the light of [illegible] ing. The holinesse of their calling, their know- [illegible] tions and affections to which youth is very ob- [illegible] es of death, which, though not shut to any, [illegible] ld age: these my Lords, will surely make [illegible]

Object. 4.

Bu [illegible] disputation, some of them have done ill, Cri [illegible] es, is a poeticall not a logicall argument. S [illegible] one so, some of the Magistrates, and Officers; and [illegible] ce neither Judge, Magistrate, nor Officer more? A pers [illegible] oes not beyond the person that commits it, nor can anothers fa [illegible] me offence. If they have contracted any filth or cor- [illegible] ion through [illegible] wn or the vice of the times, cleanse and purge them but st [illegible] mber the great difference between reformation and nd be pleased to think of your Trienniall Bill which will save you this labour for the time to come; fear of punishment will keep them in [illegible] ld not themselves through the love of vertue. I have now my Lords, according to my poor ability, both shewed the conveniences, and answered those inconveniences that seem to make against them. I should now propose those that make for them. As their falling into a condition worse then slaves, not represented by any, and then the dangers and inconveniences that may happen to your Lordships; but I have done this heretofore, and will not offer your Lordships, Cramben bis coctam.

Object. 5.

These speeches (though they converted none of the opposite) confirmed those of the Episcopall party, making the Lords very zealous in the Bishops behalf.

Temporall Lords favourers of Bishops.

20. There were in the House, many other defenders of Episcopacy; as William, Lord Marques of Hartford; the Earle of Southampton, the Earle of Bristol, and the Lord Digby, his Son, and (the never to be forgotten) William, Earle of Bath, a learned Lord, and lover of learning, oftentimes on occasion, speaking for Bishops, once publiquely professing it, one of the greatest Honours which ever happily happened to his family, that one thereof, (Thomas Bourcher by name) was once dignified with the Archbishoprick of Canterbury. Many other Lords (though not haranging him long Orations,) by their effectuall Votes for Bishops, manifested their unfained affections unto them.

The death of Bishop Mountague.

22. About this time, there were many vacant Cathedrals, which the King lately had, or now did furnish with new Bishops; Dr. Joseph Hall being removed from Exeter to Norwich, voyd by the death of Richard Mountague, born in Westminster, bred in Eaton School, Fellow in Kings Colledge; a great Grecian, and Church Antiquary, well read in the Fathers. But (all in his Diocesse, not being so well skilled in Antiquity as himself) some charged him, with superstitious urging of Ceremonies, and being accused in Parliament, he appeared not (being very weak) but * went a more compendious way, to answer all in the High-Court of Heaven.

* He died on the 12 of April

Eminent and popular persons made Bishops.

22. As for new elected Bishops, his Majesty was most carefull to chuse them out of the most sound for Judgement, and blameless for Conversation.

1. Dr. John Prideaux, almost grown to the Kings-Professors-Chair in Oxford, he had set so long and close therein: Procuring by his painfull and learned Lectures, deserved repute at home, and amongst Forain Protestants: he was made Bishop of Worcester.

2. D. Thomas Winniffe, Dean of St. Pauls, a grave, learned, and moderate Divine; made Bishop of Lincoln.

3. Dr. Ralph Brownrig, of most quick, and solid parts, equally eminent for disputing, and preaching, made Bishop of Exeter.

4. Dr. Henry King, acceptable on the account of his own merit, and on the score of a Pious, and popular Father, made Bishop of Chichester.

5. Dr. John Westfield, for many yeers the painfull and profitable Preacher, of great St. Bartholomews London, made Bishop of Bristol. He dyed not long after.

Surely, si urbs defensa fuisset his dextris, if Divine Providence had appointed, that Episcopacy (at this time) should have been kept up and maintained, more probable Persons for that purpose, could not have been pick'd out of England, so that envie and detraction might even feed on their own flesh, their teeth finding nothing in the aforesaid Elects to fasten upon.

All would not don.

23. But Episcopacy was so far from faring the better for them, that they fared the worse for it, insomuch that many, who much loved them in their Gowns, did not at all like them in their Rochets.

A disadvantageous juncture of time for Bishops.

24. The Bill was again brought in, against Bishops Votes in Parliament, and that in a disadvantageous juncture of time, the Bishops then being under a threefold qualification.

1. Imprisoned in the Tower. Of these eleven besides Archbishop Laud, whose absence much weakned the party.

2. Lately Consecrated, and Later inducted into the House of Lords, as the Bishops of Worcester, Lincoln, Exeter, Chichester, Bristol, such their modesty, and manners, they conceived it fitting to practise their hearing, before speaking in the House. So that in some sort, they may be said, to have lost their Voices, before they found them in the Parliament.

3. The remainder of ancient Bishops, London, Salisbury, Bangor, &c. who seldome were seen (detained with other occasions) and more seldome heard in the Parliament.

So that the Adversaries of Episcopacy could not have obtained a fitter opportunity (the spirits of time at large being distilled thereinto) then in this very instant to accomplish their desires.

Bishop Warner the best Champion for Bishops.

25. Only Dr. John Warner Bishop of Rochester, was he, in whom dying Episcopacy gave the last groan in the House of Lords, one of good speech, and a cheerfull spirit, and which made both, a good Purse, and which made all three, a good cause, as he conceived in his conscience, which made him very pertinently and valiantly defend the Antiquity and Justice of Bishops Votes in Parliament.

Anno Regis Caroli 17 — Anno Dom. 1641

liament. This is he, of whose bounty many distressed soules since have tasted, whose reward no doubt is laid up for him in another World.

The principall Plea against Bishops Baronies.

26. The main argument which was most insisted on, against their temporall Baronies, were the words of the Apostle, * No man which warreth, entangleth himself with the affaires of this life. Their friends pleaded, 1. That the words equally concerned all Militant Christians, Bishops not being particularized therein. 2. That it was uncharitable to conclude their fingers more clasping of the World, or the World more glutinous to stick to their fingers, that they alone, of all persons, could not touch the World, but must be entangled therewith. But it was answered, that then, à fortiore, Clergy-men were concerned in the Text aforesaid not to meddle with Worldly matters, whose Governing of a whole Diocesse, was so great an imployment, that their attendance in Parliament must needs be detrimentall to so carefull a vocation.

* 2 Tim. 2. 4

Earl of Bristols Plea for Bishops.

27. The Earl of Bristol engaged himself a valiant Champion in the Bishops behalf, he affirmed, that it was according to the Orders of the House, that no Bill being once cast out, should be brought in again at the same Sessions. Seeing therefore the Bill against Bishops Votes, had formerly been cleerly carried by many decisive Votes for the Bishops, it was not only prater, but contra-Parliamentarie, it should be brought again this Sessions.

Refuted by others.

28. But seeing this Parliament was extraordinary in the manner and continuance thereof (one Session being likely to last for many yeers) it was not conceived fit they should be tied to the observance of such punctuall nicetie; and the resumption of the Bill was not only overruled by Votes, but also it was cleerly carryed in the Negative, that Bishops never more should vote as Peers in Parliament.

The King unwilling to consent.

29. Nothing now wanted, save the Royall Assent, to passe the said Votes into a Law. The King appeared very unwilling therein, partly because he conceived it an injury, to give away the Bishops undoubted right, partly because he suspected, that the haters of the function, and lovers of the Lands of Bishops, would grow on his grants, and improve themselves on his concessions, so that such yeelding unto them, would not satisfie their hunger, but quicken their Appetites to demand the more hereafter.

Febr. — But is importuned thereunto.

30. The importunity of others pressed upon him, that to prune off their Baronies, was the way to preserve their Bishopricks; that his Majesty lately obnoxious to the Parliament, for demanding the five Members, would now make plenary satisfaction, and give such assurance of his affections for the future, that all things would answer his desired expectation. This was set home unto him, by some (not the farthest) relations, insomuch that at last he signed the Bill, as he was in St. Augustines in Canterbury, passing with the Queen towards Dover, then undertaking her voyage into the Low-Countries.

18 — 1642 — Keep in thy calling.

31. Many expected, and more desired that the Kings condescension herein should put a period unto all differences. But their expectations were frustrate, and not long after the King apprehending himself in danger by tumults, deserted Whitehall, went into the North, erected his Standard at Nottingham, Edge-Hill field was fought, and much English blood on both sides shed in severall battles. But I seasonably remember that the Church is my Castle, viz. that the writing thereof is my House and Home, wherein I may stand on my own defence against all who assault me. It was good counsell King Joash gave to King Amaziah, * Tarry at home. The practise whereof shall I hope secure me from many mischiefs.

* 2 Kings 14. 10.

Malignant first coyned.

32. About this time the word Malignant, was first born (as to the Common use) in England; the deduction thereof being disputable, whether from malus ignis bad fire; or, malum lignum, bad fewell; but this is sure, betwixt both both, the name made a combustion all over England. It was fixed as a note of disgrace on those of the Kings party, and (because one had as good be dumb, as not speak with the Vulgar) possibly in that sense it may occur in our ensuing Historie. However the Royalists plead for themselves, that Malignity (a Scripture word) properly denoteth activity in doing evill, whereas they being ever since on the suffring side, in their Persons, Credits, and Estates, conceive the name improperly applied unto them. Which plea the Parliamentary-party smile at in stead of answering, taking notice of the affections of the Royalists, how Malignant they would have appeared, if successe had befriended them.

Anno Dom. 1642 — Anno Regis Caroli 18

* Rom. 1. 29

33. Contemporary with Malignant, was the word, Plunder, which some make of Latine originall, from planum dare, to levell, or plane all to nothing. Others make it of Duch extraction, as if it were to plume or pluck the feathers of a Bird to the bare skin. Sure I am, we first heard thereof in the Swedish wars, and if the name and thing be sent back from whence it came, few English eyes would weep thereat.

And the word, Plunder.

34. By this time ten of the eleven Bishops, formerly subscribing their protestation to the Parliament, were (after some moneths durance) upon good bale given) released, two of them, finding great favour in their tees from the Lieutenant of the Tower, in respect of their great charge, and small estate. These now at liberty severally disposed themselves; some went home to their own Diocesse, as the Bishops, of Norwich, Oxford, &c. Some continued in London, as the Bishop of Durham, not so rich in Age, as in all commendable Episcopall qualities. Some withdrew themselves into the Kings quarters; as Archbishop Williams, &c. Only Bishop Wren was still detained in the Tower, where his long imprisonment, (being never brought in to a publick answer) hath converted many of his adversaries into a more charitable opinion of him.

1642

The Bishops in the Tower released.

35. The Bishops Votes in Parliament, being dead, and departed, (neither to be helps with flatterie, nor hurt with malice) one word of enquiry in what notion, they formerly voted in Parliament.

A query, worth enquiring.

Whether, as a distinct third Estate of the Clergy, or,

This was formerly received for a trueth, countenanced with some passages in the old Statutes, reckoning the Lords spirituall, and Lords temporall, and the Commons, to be the three Estates, the King, (as Paramount of all) not comprehended therein.

Whether, as so many single Barons in their temporall capacity.

This is maintained by those, who account the King, the Lords, and Commons the three Estates, amongst which Lords the Bishops (though spirituall persons) appeared as so many temporall Barons: Whose absence, is no whit prejudiciall to the Acts past in Parliament.

Some of the Aged Bishops had their Tongues so used to the language of a third Estate, that more then once they ran on that [reputed] Rock, in their Speeches, for which they were publickly shent, and enjoyned an acknowledgement of their mistake.

36. The Convocation now not sitting, and matters of Religion many being brought under the Cognizance of the Parliament, their Wisdomes adjudged it, not only convenient but necessary, that some prime Clergy-men might be consulted with. In order whereunto, they resolved, to select some out of all Counties, whom they conceived best qualified, for their designe herein, and the first of July was the day appointed for their meeting.

1643 — 19

Divines consulted with in Parliament.

SECT.

Section IX.

To Mr { Giles Vandepit / Clegat / Peter Matthewes } of London Merchants.

A Threefold Cable is not eaſily broken, and a Triplicate of Friends may be preſumed effectual to protect my endeavours. Of whom two are of Dutch, the third in the midſt of Engliſh Extraction, not falling there by caſual confuſion, but placed by deſigned Conjunction. Me thinks it is a good ſight, to behold the Dutch embracing the Engliſh, and this Dedication may paſs for the Emblem of the late Agreement, which God long continue, if for the mutual good of both Nations.

Anno Regis Carol. 19. July 1. Satur. Anno Dom. 1643.

1. WHen on this day the Aſſembly of Divines, to conſult about matters of Religion, met at Weſtminſter in the Chappel of King Henry the Seventh. Then the conſtitution of this Aſſembly, as firſt elected, and deſigned, was to conſiſt of about one hundred and twenty perſons choſen by the Parliament (without reſpect of Dioceſſes) in relation to Shires, two or more of a County. They thought it not ſafe to entruſt the Clergie with their own choice, of whoſe generall corruption they conſtantly complained, and therefore adjudged it unfit that the Diſtempered Patients ſhould be or chooſe their own Phyſicians.

The firſt meeting of the Aſſembly.

The foure English quarters of the Assembly.

Anno Dom. 1643. Anno Regis Carol 19.

2. These Elects were of foure severall natures, as the quarters of the same body, easily distinguishable by these conditions or opinions.

First, men of Episcopal perswasion, as the Right Reverend James Usher Arch-Bishop of Armagh, Doctor Brownrig Bishop of Exeter, Doctor Westfield Bishop of Bristol, Dr Daniel Featly, Dr Richard Holdsworth &c.

Secondly, such who in their judgements favoured the Presbyterian Discipline, or in proces of time were brought over to embrace it, amongst whom (to mention those who seemed to be pillars, as on whose abilities the weight of the work most lay) we take special notice of.

Dr Hoyle Divinity Professor in Ireland.

Cambridge.	Oxford.
Dr Thomas Gouge of Black-Fryars.	Dr William Twisse.
Dr Smith of Barkeway.	Dr Cornelius Burgess.
Mr Oliver Boules.	Dr Stanton.
Mr Thomas Gataker.	Mr White of Dorchester.
Mr Henry Scudder.	Mr Harris of Hanwell.
Mr Anthony Tuckeners.	Mr Edward Reynolds.
Mr Steven Marshall.	Mr Charles Herl.
Mr John Arrowsmith.	Mr Corbet of Merton Colledge.
Mr Herbert Palmer.	Mr Conant.
Mr Thomas Throughgood.	Mr Francis Cheinell.
Mr Thomas Hill.	Mr Obadiah Sedgewick.
Mr Nathanael Hodges.	Mr Carter Senior.
Mr Gibbons.	Mr Carter Junior.
Mr Timothy Young.	Mr Joseph Caryll.
Mr Richard Vines.	Mr Strickland.
Mr Thomas Coleman.
Mr Matthew Newcomen.
Mr Jeremiah Whitaker.
&c.	&c.

I hope an et cætera (so distastfull elsewhere) may be permitted in the close of our Catalogue, and am confident that the rest here omitted as unknown unto me will take no exception. The like assurance I have, that none will cavil if not reckoned up in their just Seniority, both because they know I was none of the Register that entred their Admissions in the Universities, and because it may savour something of a Prelatical spirit to be offended about præcedencie.

Thirdly, some zealous Ministers, who formerly disliking conformity, to avoid the Censures of Episcopal Consistories removed themselves beyond the Seas, chiefly to Holland, where some had plentifull, all comfortable subsistence, whence they returned home at the beginning of this Parliament. These afterwards proved Dissenting Brethren to some transactions in the Assembly, as Tho: Goodwin, Sidrach Symson, Philip Nye &c.

Fourthly,

Anno Regis Carol. 19. Anno Dom. 1643.

Fourthly, ſome members of the houſe of Lords and Commons, were mingled amongſt them, and voted joyntly in their conſultations, as the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Say. The moſt learned Antiquary Mr John Selden. Mr Francis Rouſe, Mr Bulſtrod: Whitlock &c.

Thus was this Aſſemblie (as firſt choſen and intended) a Quint-Eſſence of four Parties. Some conceive ſo motly a meeting promiſed no good reſults, whilſt others grounded their hopes on what was the motive of the former to deſpair. The Miſcellaneous nature of the Aſſembly. For what ſpeedier way to make peace in a Diſtracted Church, then to take in all Intereſts to conſult together. It had been little better then a Spiritual Monopolie, only to employ thoſe of one Party, whileſt if all mens Arguments, Objections Complaints, Deſires, be indifferently admitted, an Expedient may be the ſooner found out for their juſt and general ſatisfaction.

The Scots Commiſſioners joyned in the Aſſembly.

3. So much for the Engliſh party of this Aſſembly. For know, that Commiſſioners from Scotland were joyned with them; ſome of the Nobility, as the Earl of Lothian, The Lord Lauderdale, The Lord Warriſtone. Others of the Clergie, as Mr Alexander Henderſon, Mr Galaſphie &c. So that as Livy calleth the general meeting of Ætolia Pan-Ætolium, this Aſſembly endeavoured to put on the face of Pan-Britanicum, that the walls of the Palace wherein they met might in ſome ſort be like the waves of the Sea, within the compaſs whereof they lived, as ſurrounding one Iſland and two Nations.

Dr Twiſſe the Prolocutor his ſermon.

4. Dr Twiſſe preached the firſt Sermon at the meeting of the Aſſembly, though the Schools not the Pulpit was his proper Element, (witneſs his Controverſal writings) and in his ſermon he exhorted them faithfully to diſcharge their high calling to the glory of God and the honour of his Church. He much bemoaned that one thing was wanting, namely the Royall aſſent to give comfort and encouragement to them. Yet he hoped that by the efficacie of their fervent prayers, it might in due time be obtained, and that a happy union might be procured betwixt him and the Parliament. Sermon ended, the Ordinance was read, by which was declared the cauſe, ground, and intent of their Convention, namely, to conſult with the Parliament for the ſetling of Religion, and Church-government: Then the liſt of their names was called over who were appointed to be preſent there, and a mark, (but no penalty) ſet on ſuch who appeared not at the time prefixed.

The Royaliſts reaſons of their non-appearance.

5. The appearance of the perſons elected anſwered not expectation, ſeeing of an hundred and twenty, but ſixty nine were preſent, and thoſe in Coats and Cloaks, of ſeveral forms and faſhions, ſo that Dr Weſtfield and ſome few others ſeemed the only Non-conformiſts amongſt them, for their conformity whoſe gowns and Canonical habits differed from all the reſt. For of the firſt ſort of Royaliſts, Epiſcopal in their judgements very few appeared, and ſcarce any continued any time in the Houſe (ſave Dr Daniel Featly, of whom hereafter) alledging privately ſeverall reaſons for their abſence or Departure.

1. Firſt, they had no call from the King, (having read how anciently the breath of Chriſtian Emperours gave the firſt being to Councils) Yea ſome on my knowledge had from his Majeſty a flat command to the contrary.

2. They were not choſen by the Clergy, and ſo could not appear as Repreſentatives, but in their perſonal capacities.

3. This meeting ſeemed ſet up to pluck down the Convocation (now neither ſitting, nor legally diſſolved) which ſolemnly was ſummoned for Eccleſiaſtical affairs.

4. If a[ny] ...ng there they should be beheld by the rest (what Joseph ...s on his Brethren) as spies come thither to see the nakedness of the Assembly.

5. Being [few], they should easily be out-voted by the Opposite Party, and so only worn as Countenances to credit their proceedings.

Anno Dom. 1643. Anno Regis Caroli 19.

However I have [heard] many of both Parties desire, that those Defenders of the Hierarchy had accepted their presence, as hoping that their learning and abilities, their temper and moderation might have conduced much to mitigate some violence and extremity in their proceedings. But God in his all-ordering providence saw it [otherwise], and whether or no any good had been effected by them, if present (seeing as yet no law to order mens conjectures) is left to the liberty of every mans opinion.

The Assembly constituted.

6. Soon after, the Assembly was compleatly constituted with all the Essentials thereunto, Dr Twisse Prolocutor, Mr Reborough and Adoniram Byfield, their Scribes and Notaries; And now their good success (next to the Parliaments) was publickly prayed for by the Preachers in the City and books dedicated unto them, under the title of the most * Sacred Assembly, which because they did disavow, by others they were interpreted to approve, four shillings a day allowance was allowed them, much too little as some thought for men of their merit, others grumbling at it as too much for what by them was performed. And now what place more proper for the building of Sion (as they propheticked it,) then the Chamber of Jerusalem (the fairest in the Deans Lodgings where late King Henry the fourth died, and) where these Divines did daily meet together.

* Mr Stalmarsh his Book against Tho. Fuller.

The superadded Divines.

7. Be it here remembred, that some (besides those Episcopally affected) chosen to be of the Assembly notwithstanding absented themselves, pretending age, indisposition, &c. as it is easie for ableunwillingness to finde out excuses, and [hard] proveable. Fit it was therefore so many evacuities should be filled up, to remount the Meeting to a competent number and Assemblies, as well as Armies grown thin, must be recruited. Hence it was that at severall times the Lords and Commons added more Members unto them, by the name of the Superadded Divines. Some of these though equall to the former in power, were [reputed] to fall short in parts, as chosen rather by the affections of others, then their own abilities, the Original members of the Assembly not overpleased that [power], such addition making the former rather more, then more considerable.

The Assemblies first petition for a fast.

8. One of the first publick Acts, which I finde by them performed, was the humble presenting of a Petition to both Houses, for the appointing of a solemn fast to be generally observed. And no wonder if their request met with fair acceptance, and full performance, seeing the Assemblies Petition, was the Parliaments intention, and this Ordinance of the Divines did not create new, but quicken the old resolutions in both Houses, presently a Fast is appointed, and accordingly kept on the following Friday, Mr Boules and Mr Newcomen (whose sermons are since printed) preaching on the same, and all the rest of the particulars promised to be taken into speedy consideration.

July 11. Frid.

The Covenant entreth England.

9. It was now pressed to finde out some Band or Tie, for the streighter Union of the English and Scotish amongst themselves, and both to the Parliament. In order whereunto the Covenant was now presented. This Covenant was of Scottish extraction, born beyond Tweed, but now brought to be bred on the South-side thereof.

The Covenant first taken.

10. The House of Commons in Parliament, and the Assembly of Divines solemnly took the Covenant at St. Margarets in Westminster, Sept. 25. Mon.

11. It

11. It was ordered by the Commons in Parliament that this Covenant be forthwith printed and published. Commanded to be printed.

12. Divers Lords, Knights, Gentlemen, Collonels, Officers, Souldiers and others, then residing in the City of London met at S^t Margarets in Westminster, and there took the said Covenant. M^r Coleman preaching a Sermon before them concerning the piety and legality thereof. Taken by Gentlemen.

13. It was commanded by the authority of both Houses, that the said Covenant on the Sabbath day ensuing, should be taken in all Churches and Chappels of London within the lines of Communication, and thoroughout the Kingdom in convenient time appointed thereunto, according to the Tenour following. Enjoyned all in London.

A Solemn league and Covenant, for Reformation and defence of Religion, the honour and happiness of the King, and the peace and safety of the three Kingdomes, of England, Scotland, and Ireland.

WE Noblemen, Barons, Knights, Gentlemen, Citizens, Burgesses, Ministers of the Gospel, and Commons, of all sorts in the Kingdom of England, Scotland, and Ireland, by the providence of God living under one King, and being of one Reformed Religion, having before our eyes the glory of God, and the advancement of the Kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, the honour and happiness of the King's Majesty and his posterity, and the true publick liberty, safety and peace of the Kingdom, wherein every ones private condition is included; And calling to minde the Treacherous and Bloody Plots, Conspiracies, attempts, and Practises of the enemies of God, against the true Religion and the professors thereof in all places, especially in these three Kingdoms ever since the Reformation of Religion, and how much their rage, power, and presumption are of late, and at this time encreased and exercised, whereof the deplorable estate of the Church and Kingdom of Ireland, the distressed estate of the Church and Kingdom of England, the dangerous estate of the Church and Kingdom of Scotland, are present and publick Testimonies, We have now at last after (other means of Supplications, Remonstrances, Protestations, and sufferings) for the preservation of our selves and our Religion from utter ruine and destruction, according to the commendable practises of these Kingdoms in former times, and the example of Gods people in other nations, after mature deliberation resolved and determined to enter into a mutual solemn League and Covenant, wherein we all subscribe, and each one of us for himself, with our hands lifted up to the most High God do swear,

That we shall sincerely, really, and constantly, through the grace of God endeavour in our several places and callings, the preservation of the reformed Religion in the Church of Scotland in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, against our common enemies, the Reformation of Religion in the Kingdoms of England and Ireland, in Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, and Government, according to the word of God, and the example of the best reformed Churches, and shall endeavour to bring the Churches of God in the three Kingdoms to the neerest conjunction, and uniformity in Religion, Confession of Faith, form of Church-Government, directory for Worship and Catechizing; That we and our posterity after us may as Brethren live in faith and love, and the Lord may delight to dwell in the midst of us.

That

That we ſhall in like manner without reſpect of perſons endeavour the extirpation of Popery, Prelacie, that is, Church-government by Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, their Chancellours, and Commiſſaries, Deans, Deans and Chapters, Arch-Deacons and all other Eccleſiaſtical Officers, depending on that Hierarchie, Superſtition, Hereſie, Schiſm, Prophaneneſs, and whatſoever ſhall be found to be contrary to ſound Doctrine, and the power of godlineſs; leſt we partake in other mens ſins, and thereby be in danger to receive of their plagues, and that the Lord may be one, and his name one in the three Kingdomes. Anno Dom. 1643. Anno Regis Carol. 19.

We ſhall with the ſame ſincerity, reality, and conſtancy in our ſeveral Vocations, endeavour with our eſtates and lives mutually to preſerve the Rights and priviledges of the Parliaments, and the due liberties of the kingdomes, and to preſerve, and defend the Kings Majeſty his perſon and authority, in the preſervation and defence of the true Religion, and liberties of the Kingdoms, that the world may bear witneſs with our conſciences of our loyalty, and that we have no thoughts or intentions to diminiſh his Majeſties juſt power and greatneſs.

We ſhall alſo with all faithfulneſs endeavour the diſcovery of all ſuch as have been or ſhall be Incendiaries, Malignants, or evill inſtruments by hindering the Reformation of Religion, dividing the King from his people, or one of the Kingdomes from another, or making any faction or parties amongſt the people contrary to this League and Covenant, that they may be brought to publick trial, and receive condign puniſhment, as the degree of their offences ſhall require or deſerve, or the ſupream Judicatories of both Kingdoms reſpectively, or others having power from them for that effect ſhall judge convenient.

And whereas the happineſs of a bleſſed peace between theſe Kingdoms, denied in former times to our progenitours, is by the good providence of God granted unto us, and hath been lately concluded, and ſetled by both Parliaments, we ſhall each one of us according to our place, and intereſt, endeavour that they remain conjoyned in a firme peace and union to all poſterity, and that juſtice may be done upon the wilfull oppoſers thereof in manner expreſſed in the precedent Article.

We ſhall alſo according to our places and callings, in this common cauſe of Religion, liberty, and peace of the Kingdoms, aſſiſt, and defend all thoſe that enter into this league and Covenant, in the maintaining and purſuing thereof, and ſhall not ſuffer our ſelves directly, or indirectly, by whatſoever combination, perſwaſion, or terrour to be divided, and withdrawn from this bleſſed Conjunction and union, whether to make defection to the contrary part, or to give our ſelves to a deteſtable indifferency or neutrality in this cauſe, which ſo much concerneth the glory of God, the good of the Kingdomes, and honour of the King, but ſhall all the dayes of our lives zealouſly and conſtantly endeavour to continue therein againſt all oppoſition, and promote the ſame according to our power againſt all lets and impediments whatſoever; and what we are not able of our ſelves to ſuppreſs or overcome, we ſhall reveal and make known, that it may be timely prevented or removed. All which we ſhall do as in the ſight of God.

And becauſe theſe Kingdoms are guilty of many ſins and provocations againſt God, and his Son Jeſus Chriſt, as is too manifeſt by our preſent diſtreſſes and dangers, the fruits thereof; We profeſs and declare declare before God and the world, our unfeined desire to be humbled for our own sins, and for the sins of these Kingdoms, especially that we have not as we ought valued the inestimable benefit of the Gospel, that we have not laboured for the purity and power thereof, and that we have not endeavoured to receive Christ in our hearts, nor to walk worthy of him in our lives, which are the causes of other sins and transgressions so much abounding amongst us, and our true and unfeined purpose, desire and endeavour for our selves, and all others under our charge, both in publick and in private, in all duties we owe to God and man, to amend our lives, and each one to goe before another in the example of a real reformation, that the Lord may turn away his wrath and heavie indignation, and establish these Churches and Kingdoms in truth and peace. And this Covenant we make in the presence of Almighty God the searcher of all hearts, with a true intention to perform the same, as we shall answer at the great day, when the secrets of all hearts shall be disclosed, most humbly beseeching the Lord to strengthen us by his Holy Spirit to this end, and to bless our desires and proceedings with such success, as may be deliverance and safety to his people, and encouragement to other Christian Churches groaning under, or in danger of the yoak of Anti-Christian Tyranny, to joyn in the same or like Association and Covenant, to the glory of God, the enlargement of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, and the peace and tranquillity of Christian Kingdoms, and Commonwealths.

Anno Regis Caroli 18. Anno Dom. 1643.

We listen not to their fancy, who have reckoned the words in the Covenant, six [a] hundred sixty six, Preface and Conclusion, as only circumstantial appendants, not accounted, and esteeme him who trieth it, as well at leisure (alias as idle) as he that first made the observation. Much less applaud we their paralel, who (the number in branches agreeing) compare it to the superstitious and cruel Six Articles enacted by King Henry the Eighth. But let us consider the solid and serious exceptions alledged against it, not so light and slight as to be puffed away with the breath of the present age, but whose weight is likely to sink them down to the consideration of posterity.

[a] Rev. 13. 19.

Exceptions general to the whole.

14. First, seeing this Covenant (though not as first penned) as prosecuted had heavie penalties inflicted on the refusers thereof, such pressing is inconsistent with the nature of any Contract; wherein consent, not constraint is presumed. In a Covenant men should go of their own good will, or be led by perswasions, not drawn by frights and fears, much less driven by forfeits and punishments.

Made without the Kings consent.

15. Secondly, Subjects are so far from having the express or tacit consent of the King for the taking thereof, that by publick Proclamation he hath forbidden the same. Now seeing Parents had power by the [b] law of God to rescind such vows which their children made without their privity: by the equity of the same law this Covenant is void, if contrary to the flat command of him who is Parens Patriæ.

[b] Num. 30. 6.

Full of doubtful words.

16. Many words occur in this Covenant, some obsure, others of doubtfull meaning, viz. Common enemies, Best-Reformed-Churches, Malignants, Highest Judicatories of both Kingdoms &c. Untill therefore the obscure be cleared, the doubtfull stated and fixed, the same cannot (as it ought) be taken in judgement.

Exceptions to the Preface.

Therein it is suggested, that Supplications, Remonstrance, Protestations to the King, were formerly used; which proving ineffectual, occasioned the trying of of this Covenant, as the laſt hopefull means to preſerve Religion from ruine &c. Now, ſeeing many joyned neither with their hands nor hearts in preſenting theſe writings, ſuch perſons ſcrupled this Covenant, which they cannot take in truth, becauſe founded on the failing of the aforeſaid means, to the uſing whereof they concurred not in the laaſt degree.

Pretended ancient, yet unprecedented.

17. It is pretended in the Preface, that this Covenant is according to the commendable practice of theſe Kingdoms in former times. Whereas indeed it is new in it ſelf, following no former Precedents; a grand Divine [a] of the Parliament-party publickly profeſſing, that, We read not either in Divine or Humane Hiſtories, the like Oath extant in any age, as to the matter, perſons, and other circumſtances thereof.

[a] Phil. Nye Covenant with Narrat. pag. 12.

Exceptions to the Firſt Article.

Cannot be taken knowingly.

18. They are unſatisfied to ſwear, to maintain the Preſervation of the Reformed Religion of Scotland, in Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline, and Government, as being ignorant (ſuch their diſtance thence, and ſmall intelligence there) of the particulars thereof. They are loath therefore to make a blind promiſe, for fear of a lame performance.

Nor without a double ſcandal.

19. As for the Reforming of Religion (which neceſſarily implies a changing thereof) of England, and Ireland, in Doctrine, Worſhip, Diſcipline, and Government; they cannot conſent thereunto without manifeſt ſcandal, both to Papiſts and Separatiſts. For (beſides that they ſhall deſert that juſt cauſe, which many pious Martyrs, Biſhops, and Divines of our Church, have defended both with their inke and blood, writings and ſufferings) hereby they ſhall advantage the cavils of Papiſts againſt our Religion, taxing it of uncertainty, not knowing where to fix our feet, as allways altering the ſame. Yea, they ſhall not only ſupply Papiſts with pleas for their Recuſancy, Sectaries for their Separation, acknowledging ſomething in our Church-Doctrine and Service, not well agreeing with Gods-word; but alſo ſhall implicitly confeſs Papiſts unjuſtly puniſhed by the Penal-Statutes, for not conforming with us to the ſame Publick-Service, wherein ſome things are by our ſelves, as well as them, miſliked and diſallowed.

Injury to themſelves.

20. Nor can they take this Covenant without injury and perjury to themſelves. Injurie, by inſnaring their conſciences, credits, and eſtates, if endeavouring to reform Religion (under the notion of faulty and vicious) to which formerly they had ſubſcribed, enjoyned thereto by the [b] Law of the Land, not yet abrogated, never as yet checked by the regrets of their own conſciences, nor confuted by the reaſons of others for the doing thereof.

[b] 13. Eliz. cap. 12.

Perjury to their ſouls.

21. Perjury, as contrary to the Proteſtation and ſolemn vow they had [c] lately taken, and Oath of Supremacy, ſwearing therein to defend all the Kings Rights and Priviledges, whereof His Spiritual Juriſdiction in reforming Church-matters, is a principal. Now, although a latter oath may be corroborative of the former, or conſtructive of a new obligation conſiſtent therewith, yet can it not be inductive of a tie, contrary to an oath lawfully taken before.

[c] May the 5. 1641.

Exceptions to the Second Article.

Ill but forc'd equipage of Prelacy.

22. It grieveth them therein to ſee Prelacy ſo unequally yoak'd; Popery being put before it; Superſtition, Hereſie, Schiſme, and Prophaneneſs following after. Such the pleaſure of thoſe that placed them, though nothing akin in themſelves. But a captive by the power of others may be fettered to thoſe whom he hates and abhorres.

Conſent

Anno Regis Caroli 19. Anno Dom. 1643.

Foure reasons against extirpation of Prelacy.

Consent they cannot to the extirpation of Prelacy, neither in respect,

1 The thing it self, being perswaded that neither Papal Monarchie, nor Presbyterian Democracie, nor Independant Anarchie are so conformable to the Scriptures as Episcopal Aristocracy, being if (not of Divine in a strict sence) of Apostolical Institution, confirmed with Church-practice (the best Comment on Scripture when obscure) for 1500 years, and bottomed on the same foundation with Infants-Baptisme, National Churches, observing the Lords-day, and the like.

Of
- 2 Themselves, of whom,
  - 1 All when taking degrees in the Universitie.
  - 2 Most, as many as are entred into Holy-Orders
  - 3 Not a few when lately petitioning the Parliament for the continuing of Episcopacy
  - 4 Some being members of Cathedral, and Collegiate Churches have subscribed with their hands, and with their corporal oaths avowed the justification and defence of that government.

- 3 Church of England, fearing many mischiefs from this alteration, (felt sooner than seen in all great and sudden changes) especially becaufe the Ecclesiastical Government is so interwoven in many Statutes of the land. And, if Schisms so encrease on the Suspension, what is to be expected on the Extirpation of Episcopacy.
- 4 His Majesty,
  - as contrary to their Oath of Supremacy, wherein they were bound
    - Priviledges, amongst which a principal is, that He is Supreme moderator over all Causes and Persons Spiritual, wherein no change is to be attempted without his consent.
  - to maintain His
    - Dignity, The Collations of Bishopricks and Deanries, with their profits in their vacancies belonging unto Him, and the First-fruits and Tenths of Ecclesiastical Dignities, a considerable part of the Royal Revenue.

Here we omit their Plea, whose chief means consisting of Cathedral preferment, alledge the like not done from the beginning of the world, that men (though deserving deprivation for their offences) should be forced to swear sincerely, seriously, and from their souls, to endeavour the rooting out of that, whence their best livelihood doth depend.

Exceptions against the Third Article.

23. It grieveth them herein to be sworn, to the Preservation of the Priviledges of Parliament, and liberties of the Kingdom, at large and without any restriction, being bound in the following words to defend the Kings person and Authority, as limited in the preservation and defence of true Religion, and the Liberties of the Realm; enlarging the former, that the later may be the more confined.

24. They are jealous what should be the cause of the inversion of the method, seeing in the Solemn Vow and Protestation, the Defence of the Kings Person and Authority is put first, which in this Covenant is postposed to the Priviledges of Parliament. However, seeing the Protestation was first taken, the Covenant as the younger cannot disinherit the elder, of the possession which it hath quietly taken in mens consciences.

Anno Dom. 1643. Anno Regis Carol 19.

Exceptions to the Fourth Article.

25. They are unsatisfied whether the same imposeth not a necessity for children to prosecute their Parents even to death, under the notion of Malignants against all rules of Religion and humanity. For even in case of Idolatry, children under the old * law were not bound publickly to accuse their Parents, so as to bring them to be stoned for the same; though such unnaturall cruelty be foretold by our * Saviour, to fall out under the Gospell, of those that shall rise up against their Parents, and cause them to be put to death.

* Deut. 13.6.

* Mat. 10.21.

Exceptions to the Fifth Article.

26. They understand not what is meant therein by the happiness of a blessed peace betwixt these Kingdoms, whereof Ireland must needs be one, whilest the same is rent with a wofull warr, and the other two lands distracted with homebred discords: whereof no settlement can be hoped untill first all interests be equally stated, and the Kings Authority, Priviledges of Parliament, and Liberties of Subjects justly bounded, and carefully preserved.

Exceptions to the Sixth Article.

27. They are unsatisfied therein as wholy hypothetical, supposing what as yet is not cleared by solid arguments, viz. that this is the common cause of Religion, Liberty, and peace of the Realms &c. And if the same be granted, it appeareth not to their conscience, that the means used to promote this Cause, are so lawfull and free from just objections which may be raised from the Laws of God and man.

Exceptions to the Conclusion.

28. They quake at the mention, that the taking of this Covenant should encourage other Churches groaning under the yoak of Antichristian Tyranny, to joyn in the same, fearing the dangerous consequences this may produce to forraign Protestants, and inrage Popish Princes (in whose Dominions they live) to cruelty against them, as disaffected to their Government. Besides, when Divine Providence layeth such burthens on his servants, even the yoak of Antichrist is then the yoak of Christ, not to be thrown off with force, but to be born with the confession of the truth, prayers, patience, and Christian courage.

29. So much concerning the Covenant, which some three moneths after began to be rigorously and generally urged. Nor have I ought else to observe thereof, save to adde in mine own defence, that I never saw the same, except at distance as hung up in Churches, nor ever had any occasion to read, or hear it read, till this * day in writing my History, what ever hath been reported and printed to the contray, of my taking thereof in London, who went away from the Savoy to the Kings quarters, long before any mention thereof in England.

* July 1 1654.

The Authors plea in his own just defence.

30. True it is, there was an Oath which never exceeded the Line of Communication, meeting with so much opposition that it expired in the infancy thereof, about the time when the plot was discovered, for which Mr Tomkins and Mr Chaloner suffered. This was tendered to me, and taken by me in Anno Regis Caſol. 19. Anno Dom. 1643.

in the Veſtry of the Savoy-Church, but firſt proteſting ſome limitations thereof to my ſelf. This not ſatisfying was complained of by ſome perſons preſent, to the Parliament, where it was ordered, that the next Lords-day I ſhould take the ſame oath in terminis terminantibus, in the face of the Church, which not agreeing with my conſcience, I withdrew my ſelf into the Kings parts, which (I hope) I may no leſs ſafely, than I do freely confeſs, becauſe puniſhed for the ſame with the loſs of my livelihood, and ſince (I ſuppoſe) pardoned in the Act of Oblivion.

The Parliaments purge to the Clergy.

31. Now began the great and generall purgation of the Clergie in the Parliaments quarters, many being outed for their misdemeanours by the Committee appointed for that purpoſe. Some of their offences were ſo foul, it is a ſhame to report them, crying to Juſtice for puniſhment. Indeed Conſtantine the Chriſtian Emperour was wont to ſay; If I ſee a Clergie-man offending, I will cover him with my cloak, but ſurely he meant ſuch offences as are frailties, and infirmities, no ſcandalous enormities. Such unſavoury ſalt is good for nothing * no not for the dunghil, becauſe as the ſavour is loſt which makes it uſefull, ſo the fretting is left, which makes it uſeleſs, whereby it is ſo far from being good compoſt to fatten ground, that it doth rather embarren it. Let Baal therefore plead for it ſelf, nothing can be ſaid in their Excuſe, if (what was the main matter) their crimes were ſufficiently proved.

* Luke 14.33.

The expelled Clergies plea.

32. But as to the point, hear what the Royaliſts at Oxford ſay for their Friends, whilſt they conceive themſelves to take juſt exceptions at the proceedings againſt theſe Miniſters.

1. Some of their faults were ſo foule, that the * foulneſs of them, is all that can be pleaded for them. For being Capital, the perſons deſerved to be outed of life, not of living, which leaves a ſuſpicion of imperfect proof.

* Centu. p. 1.

2. The Witneſſes againſt them were ſeldom depoſed on oath, but their bare complaints beleeved.
3. Many of the Complainers were factious people (thoſe moſt accuſing their Sermons who leaſt heard them) and who ſince have deſerted the Church, as hating the Profeſſion of the Miniſtery.
4. Many were charged with delivering falſe-Doctrine, whoſe poſitions were found, at the leaſt diſputable. Such thoſe accuſed for preaching that Baptiſm Wafheth away Original ſin, which the moſt Learned, and honeſt in the Aſſembly in ſome ſenſe will not deny, namely, that in the Children of God it cleanſeth the condemning, and final peaceable commanding power of Original ſin, though the ſtain and blemiſh thereof doth ſtill remain.
5. Some were merely outed for their affections to the Kings cauſe, and what was malignity at London, was Loyalty at Oxford.

Yea many moderate men of the Oppoſite Party, much bemoaned ſuch ſeverity, that ſome Clergie-men, blameleſs for life, and Orthodox for Doctrine, were only ejected on the account of their faithfulneſs to the Kings Cauſe. And as much corruption was let out by this Ejection (many Scandalous Miniſters deſervedly puniſhed) ſo at the ſame time the veins of the Engliſh Church were alſo emptied of much good blood (ſome inoffenſive Paſtours) which hath made her Body Hydropical ever ſince, ill humors ſucceeding in the room, by reaſon of too large and ſuddain evacuation. But others of a more violent temper excuſed all, the preſent neceſſity of the Cauſe requiring it. All Pulpits in the Parliament quarters muſt be made like the whole earth before the building of Babel, of one language, and of one speech, or else all may be destroyed by the mixture of other Doctrines. And better a mischief to few, then an inconvenience to all. Safer that some (suppose unjustly) suffer, then that the success of the whole cause should be endangered.

Anno Dom. 1643. Anno Regis Carol 19.

The first Century why without a second.

33. Then came forth a Book called the First Century, containing the names of an hundred Divines sequestred for their faults with a promise of a second, which to my knowledge never came forth. Whether because the Author of the former was sensible that the subject was generally odious, or because the death of Mr White, Licenser thereof, prevented any addition, or whether because disswaded from the Designe, suspecting a retaliation from Oxford. Sure I have been informed, that when some solicited his Majesty for leave to set forth a Book of the vicious lives of some Parliament Ministers, His Majesty blasted the designe, partly because recrimination is no purgation, partly least the Publick enemy of the Protestant Religion should make an advantage thereof.

Nov. 19.

Vacant livings how supplied.

34. To supply the vacant places, many young Students (whose Orders got the speed of their Degrees) left the Universities. Other Ministers turned Dualists and Pluralists, it being now charity, what was formerly covetousness, to hold two or three Benefices. These could plead for themselves, the practice of * Mr Sanders the Martyr, who held two Livings at good distance, because he could not resigne one but into the hands of a Papist, as these men would not surrender them to Malignants. Many Vicaridges of great Cure, but small value were without Ministers, (whilst rich matches have many Suitors, they may die Virgins that have no portions to prefer them) which was often complained of, seldom redressed, it passing for a currant maxime, it was safer for people to fast then to feed on the poyson of Malignant Pastours.

* Fox Act. & Mon. p. 1494. in An. 1555.

Dissenting Brethren first appear in the Assembly.

35. Let us now look a little into the Assembly of Devines, where we shall not finde them (as we might justly expect) all of one tongue and of one language, there being some not concurring with the major part, and therefore stiled Dissenting Brethren. I know the Scotch Writers call them of the Separation, but because mollifying terms are the best Poultesses to be applyed to the first swellings of Church-differences, we decline these words of distast. They are also commonly called Independents, though they themselves (if summoned by that name) will return no Vous avez thereunto, as to a word odious and offensive in the common sound and notation thereof. For Independency taken for absolute subsistence

Without relation to { 1 God, 2 King or State, 3 Other Churches, 4 Particular Christians } is { Prophane & Blasphemous, Seditious and Treacherous, Proud and Ambitious, Churlish and Uncharitable. }

These Dissenting Brethren or Congregationalists were but five in the Assembly, though many more of their judgements dispersed in the land.

1 Namely, Thomas Goodwin bred first in Christs-Col. then fellow of Katherine Hall in Cambridge. } all three still alive.
2 Philip Nye, who had his education in Oxford. }
3 William Bridge, fellow of Emanuel Colledg in Cambridge. }
4 Sidrach Simson, of Queens Col. in Cambridge, both deceased.
5 Jeremiah Burroughs, of Emanuel }

It

Anno Regis Carol 19. Anno Dom. 1643.

It is our unhappiness, that in writing their story, we have little save what we have collected out of the writings of pens professedly engaged against them, and therefore the less credit is to be given thereunto However in this Narration there is nothing of my own, so that if any falsehoods therein, they must be charged on their account whom the Reader shall behold cited in the margin. Otherwise I confess my personal respects to some of the afore named dissenters, for favours received from them.

36. Some ten years since the sinful corruptions (to use their own [a] language) of the worship and government in this Church, taking hold on their consciences, unable any longer to comport therewith, they deserted their Native Country. This we beleeve the true cause of their departure, not what [b] some suggest, that one for debt, and another for danger (to answer some ill interpreted words concerning the Scots) were forced to forsake the Land. And although I will not say they left not an hoof of their Estates behinde them here, they will confess they conveyed over the most considerable part thereof. Many wealthy Merchants and their families went over with them, so that of all Exiles (for so they stile themselves) these may seem most like Voluntary Travellers for good company, though of all Travellers most like to Exiles.

The cause of their first departing the land.

a Apostolical narration p. 1.

b Mr Edwards in his Answer to the Apol. Narr.

37. Their reception beyond the seas in Holland was faire and civill, where the States (who though they tolerate, own not all Religions) were interpreted to acknowledge them and their Churches by many signs of their favour. First,

Are kindly entertained in Holland.

By granting them their own Churches to assemble in for Divine Worship, where their own Country men met also the same day (but at different hours) for the same purpose.

By permitting the ringing of a [c] Bell to call people to their Publick meetings, which loudly sounded the States consent unto them, as not allowed to such clandestine Sects, which shelter themselves rather under the permission, then Protection thereof.

c Apol. Nar. pag. 7.

By assigning a full and liberal maintenance annually for their Ministers, as also wine for their Communions.

Nor can there be a better evidence of giving the right hand of Fellowship then to give the full hand of liberality. A moitie of this people fixed at Rotterdam where they landed, the other travelled up higher for better aire to Wiarden, and thence, soon after removed to Arnhein, a sweet and pleasant City. No part of Holland (largely [d] taken) affording more of England therein, resembled in their letters to their Friends to Hertford, or Bury in Suffolk.

d Otherwise Arnhein is in Gelderland.

38. Then fall they to consult of Church-Discipline, professing themselves a mere tabula rasa, with Virgin judgements, longing only to be married to the truth. Yea they looked upon the word of Christ (Reader, it is their own [e] expression) as unpartially and unprejudicedly, as men made of flesh and blood are like to in any juncture of time that may fall out, the place they were in, the condition they were in, and company they went with, affording no temptation to byasse them any way.

How qualified to finde out the truth.

e Apol. Nar. pag. 3.

39. And first they lay down two grand ground-works, on which their following Fabrick was to be erected.

Their two chief ground-works.

1. Only to take what was held forth in Gods word, leaving nothing to Church-practice, or humane prudence, as but the Iron legs and Clay toes of that Statue, whose head and whole body ought to be of pure refined Gold.

2. As to make their present judgement binding unto them for the future.

Their

Anno Dom. 1643. Anno Regis Caroli 19.

Their adversaries cavil hereat, as a reserve able to rout all the Armys of Arguments which are brought against them, that because one day knocketh another, they will not be tyed on Tewsday morning, to maintain their Tenents on Munday night, if a new discovery intervene.

Coordination of Churches.

40. In pursuance of these principles they pitched on a middle way (as generally the posture of truth) betwixt Presbytery, as too regardes, imperious, and conclusive, and Brownisme, as too vage, loose, and uncertain. Their main platform was, that Churches should not be subordinate, Parochial to Provincial, Provincial, to National, (as Daughter to Mother, Mother to Grandmother,) but Coordinate, without Superiority, except Seniority of Sisters, containing no powerfull influence therein. Thus the Church formerly like a Chain with links of dependency on one another, should hereafter become like an heap of rings, each entire in it self, but (as they thought) far purer then was ever seen before.

The manner of their Church-service. a Apol. Nar. pag. 8.

41. The manner of their Church-service, according to their own [a] relation, was performed in form following.

1. Publick and solemn prayers for Kings and all in Authority.
Reading the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament with exposition thereof on occasion.
Administration of the two Sacraments, Baptisme to Infants, and the Lords Supper.
Singing of Psalms, and collection for the Poor every Lords-day.
For Publick Officers they had Pastors, Teachers, and Ruling Elders (not Lay but Ecclesiastick persons) and Deacons.

b Apol. Nar. pag. 9.

As for Church-censures, they resolved only on Admonition and Excommunication, the latter whereof was never handselled in their [b] Church, as no reason that the rod (though made) should be used where the Children are all quiet and dutifull. Synods they account usefull, and in some cases necessary, yet so that their power is but Official, not Authoritative, whereby they may declare the truth, not enjoyn obedience thereunto. Or take it in the language of one of their Grandees. [c] Actus regiminis à Synodis debent porrigi non peragi, the latter belonging to the liberty of several Congregations. Their Adversaries object, that none can give in an exact account of all their opinions, daily capable of alteration and increase. Whilst such Countries, whose unmoveable Mountains, and stable Valleys keep a fixed position, may be easily surveyed, no Geographer can accurately describe some part of Arabia, where the flitting sands d[illegible] with the winds have their frequent removals; so that the Traveller [illegible] hole at his return, where he left a hill at his departure. Such [illegible]inty of these Congregationalists in their judgements, only they plea[illegible]selves, it is not the winde of every [d] Doctrine, but the Sun of the Truth which with its New lights makes them renounce their old, and embrace new resolutions.

c Responsio Jo. Norton. pag. 114.

d Mr Cotton his preface to Mr Norton Book. are always for new lights. d Eph. 4. 15.

42. Soon after a heavie Schism happened in the Church of Roterdam, betwixt Mr Bridge, and Mr Simson, the two Pastors thereof. Insomuch, that the latter rent himself saith one [e] from Mr Bridge his Church to the great offence thereof, though more probable, as another [f] reporteth, Mr Simson dismissed with the consent of the Church. However many bitter letters passed betwixt them, and more sent over to their Friends in England full of invectives, blackness of the tongue always accompanying the paroxismes of such distempers. Their Presbyterian Adversaries make great use hereof to their disgrace. If such Infant Churches, whilst their hands could scarce hold any thing fell a scratching [illegible] feet spurning and kicking one another, before

A Schism in Roterdam Church. e Mr Edwards Antipha. p. 35. f Mr John Goodwin in answer to Mr Edwards pag. 238. g pag. 245.

[illegible] in that tongue

[illegible] at Fe

before they could well goe alone, how ſtubborn and vexatious would they be when arrived at ripe years.

43. This Seaſm was ſeconded with another in the ſame Church, wherein they depoſed one of their Miniſters (Mr Ward I conceive his name) which was beheld as a bold and daring deed, eſpecially becauſe herein they conſulted not their Sister-Church at Arnhein, which publickly was profeſſed mutually to be done in caſes of concernment. Here the Presbyterians triumph in their conceived diſcovery of the nakedneſs and weakneſs of the Congregationall way, which for want of Eccleſiaſtical Subordination is too ſhort to reach unto redreſs to ſuch grievances. For ſeeing par in parem non habet poteſtatem, Equalls have no power over their Equalls, the agrieved party could not right himſelf by any appeal unto a Superior. But ſuch conſider not the end, as well as the beginning of this difference, wherein the Church of Arnhein interpoſing (not as a Judge to puniſh Offenders, but as a Brother to check the failings of a Brother) matters were ſo ordered, (that Mr Ward was reſtored to his place, when both he and the Church had mutually confeſſed their ſinful carriage in the matter, but enough, (if not too much hereof) ſee we every thing put in a Pamphlet is not fit to be recorded in a Chronicle.

A ſecond Schiſm in the ſame Church.

a Apol. Nar. pag. 21.

44. More concord crowned the Congregation at Arnhein, where Mr Goodwin and Mr Nye were Paſtors, wherein beſides thoſe Church-Ordinances formerly mentioned, actually admitted and exerciſed, ſome others ſtood Candidates, and fair Probationers on their good behaviour, namely, if under Tryal they were found convenient; Such were

The practice of Arnhein Church.

1. The b Holy Kiſs.
2. Prophe ſying c when Private Chriſtians at fit times made publick uſe of their parts and gifts in the Congregation.
3. Hymns d and, which if no better Divinity then Muſick, might much be ſcrupled at.
4. Widdows e as Eſſential She-Miniſters in the Church, which if it be ſo, our late Civil-Wars in England have afforded us plenty for the place.
5. Anointing of dying people, as a ſtanding Apoſtolical f Ordinance.

b 1 Cor. 16. 20.
c 1 Cor. 14.
d Eph. 5. 19. & Col. 3. 16.
e 1 Tim. 5. 9.
f James 5. 14.

45. Other things were in agitation, when now the news ariveth, that the Parliament ſiting at Weſtminſter had broken the yoak of Ceremonies, and proclaimed a year of Jubilee to all tender conſciences. Home then they haſted with all convenient ſpeed: For only England is England indeed, though ſome parts of Holland may be like unto it. Over they came in a very good plight and Equipage, which the Presbyterians (and thoſe I aſſure you are quick-ſighted when pleaſed to prie) took notice of. Not a hair of their head ſinged, nor any ſmell of the fire of perſecution upon their Clothes. However they were not to be blamed, if ſetting their beſt foot forward in their return, and appearing in the handſomeſt and chearfulleſt faſhion for the credit of their cauſe, and to ſhow that they were not dejected with their ſufferings.

The five Exiles return home.

46. Preſently they fall upon gathering of Congregations, but chiefly in or about the City of London. Trent may be good, and Severn better, but oh the Thames is the beſt for the plentifull taking of fiſh therein. They did pick (I will not ſay ſteal) hence a Maſter, thence a Miſtreſs of a Family, a Son out of a Third, a Servant out of a Fourth Pariſh, all which met together in their Congregation. Some prevented calling by their coming, of OLD Pariſhioners to become NEW Church-Members, and ſo forward were they of themſelves, that they needed no force to compell, nor art to perſwade them. Thus a new Inne never wanteth Gueſts at the firſt ſetting up, eſpecially if hanging out a fair Signe, and promiſing more cleanneſs and neatneſs then is in any of their Neighbours.

Gather Churches in England.

47. The

The Presbyterians offended.

47. The Presbyterians found themselves much agrieved hereat. They accounted this practise of the Dissenting Brethren but Ecclesiastical felonie, for at the best, that they were but Spiritual Interlopers for the same. They justly feared (if this fashion continued) the falling of the Roof, or foundring of the Foundations of their own Parishes, whence so many Corner Stones, Pillars, Rafters, and Beams, were taken by the other to build their Congregations. They complained that these new Pastors though slighting Tithes and set maintenance, yet so ordered the matter by gathering their Churches, that these gleanings of Ephraim became better then the Vintage of Abi-ezer.

Dissenting Brethren crave a Toleration.

48. Not long after when the Assembly of Divines was called, these five Congregationalists were chosen members thereof, but came not up with a full consent to all things acted therein. As accounting that the pressing of an exact occurrence to the Presbyterian Government, was but a kinde of a Conscience-Prison, whilst accurate conformity to the Scotch Church was the very Dungeon thereof. A regimine ecclesiastico (say * they) uti nunc in Scotia viget longius distamus, quippe quod (ut nobis videtur) non tantum à scripturis, sed ab ecclesiarum reformatarum suorumque Theologorum sententijs (qui sub Episcoporum tyrannide diu duriterque passi sunt) plurimum distet. No wonder therefore if they desired a Toleration to be indulged them, and they excused for being concluded by the Votes of the Assembly.

* In their epistle to the Reader prefixed to Mr Nortons book.

Opposed by others.

49. But the Presbyterians highly opposed their Toleration, and such who desired most ease and liberty for their sides when bound with Episcopacy, now girt their own government the closest about the consciences of others. They tax the Dissenting Brethren for Singularity, as if these men (like the five senses of the Church) should discover more in matter of Discipline then all the Assembly besides, some moving their ejection out of the same, except in some convenient time they would comply therewith.

But favoured by the Parliament

50. Hopeless to speed here, the Dissenters seasonably presented an Apologetical narrative to the Parliament, stiled by them the most sacred refuge or Asylum [a] for mistaken and misjudged innocence. Herein they petitioned Pathetically for some favour, whose conscience could not joyn with the Assembly in all particulars, concluding with that pittifull close (enough to force tears from any tender heart) that they [b] pursued no other interest or designe, but a subsistence (be it the poorest and meanest) in their own land, as not knowing where else with safety health and livelihood to set their feet on earth, and subscribed their names.

[a] Apol. Nar. pag. 2.
[b] Ib. p. 31.

Thomas Goodwin. Sidrach Simson.
Philip Nye. Jeremiah Burroughes. William Bridge.

If since their condition be altered and bettered, that they (then wanting where to set their feet) since lie down at their length in the fat of the land, surely they have returned proportionable gratitude to God for the same. Sure it is that at the present these Petitioners found such favour with some potent persons in Parliament, that they were secured from farther trouble, and from lying at a posture of defence, are now grown able not only to encounter but invade all opposers; yea to open and shut the dore of preferment to others, so unsearchable are the dispensations of Divine Providence in making suddain and unexpected changes, (as in whole nations) so in private mens estates, according to the Counsel of his will.

New-England Churches Congregationalists.

51. Such as desire further instruction in the Tenents of these Congregationalists, may have their recourse to those many Pamphlets written pro and con thereof. The worst is, some of them speak so loud, we can scarce understand

Anno Regis Caroli 19. Anno Dom. 1643. understanding what they say, so hard is it to collect their judgements, such the violence of their passions. Only I will adde, that for the main, the Churches of New-England are the same in Discipline with these Dissenting Brethren.

52. Only I will add, that of all the Authors I have perused concerning the opinions of these Dissenting Brethren, none to me was more informative, then Mr John Norton, (One of no less learning then modesty) Minister in New-England in his answer to Apollonius Pastor in the Church of Middleborrough.

The rest referred to Mr Nortons book.

20. 1644. 53. Look we now again into the Assembly of Divines, where we finde Dr Cornelius Burges, and Mr Herbert Palmer the Assessors therein, and I am informed by some (more skilfull in such niceties then my self) that Two at the least, of that Office, are of the Quorum Essential to every lawfull Assembly. But I miss Dr William Twiss their Prolocutor lately deceased; He was bred in New-Colledge in Oxford, good with the Trowell, but better with the Sword, more happy in Polemical Divinity, then edifying Doctrine. Therefore he was [a] chosen by the States of Holland to be Professor of Divinity there, which he thankfully refused. Mr Charles Herle Fellow of Exeter Colledge of Oxford succeeded him in his place, one so much Christian, Scholer and Gentleman, that he can unite in affection with those who are disjoyn'd in judgement from him.

Mr Herle succeedeth Prolocutor to Dr Twisse.

a See his dedication to them in his book called Vindiciæ gratiæ.

54. The Assembly met with many difficulties, some complaining of Mr Selden, that advantaged by his skill in Antiquity Commonlaw, and the Oriental tongues, he imployed them rather to pose then profit, perplex then inform the members thereof, in the fourteen queries he propounded. Whose intent therein was to humble the Jure-divino-ship of Presbytery, which though Hinted and Held forth, is not so made out in Scripture, but being too Scant on many occasions it must be peeced with prudential Additions. This great Scholer, not over loving of any (and lest of these) Clergie-men, delighted himself in raising of scruples for the vexing of others, and some stick not to say, that those who will not feed on the flesh of Gods-word cast most bones to others, to break their teeth therewith.

Mr Seldens puzling Queries.

55. More trouble was caused to the Assembly by the Opinions of the Erastians, and it is worth our enquiry into the first Author thereof. They were so called from Thomas Erastus a Dr of Physick, born at Baden in Switzerland, lived Professor in Hidelbridge, and died at Basil about the year one thousand five hundred eighty three. He was of the Privie Counsel to Frederick, the first Protestant Prince Palatine of that name, and this Erastus (like our Mr Perkins) being [b] lame of his right, wrote all with his left hand, and amongst the rest, one against Theodor. Beza, de Excommunicatione, to this effect, that the power, and excommunication in a Christian State, principally resides in secular power as the most competent Judge, when and how the same shall be exercised.

Erastians why so called, and what they held.

b Thuanus in Obit. vir. illustr. Anno 1583.

56. Mr John Coleman a modst and learned man, beneficed in Lincolnshire, and Mr John Lightfoot, well skilled in Rabinical Learning were the chief members of the Assembly, who (for the main) maintained the tenents of Erastus. These often produced the Hebrew Original for the power of Princes in ecclesiastical matters. For though the New Testament be silent of the Temporal Magistrate, (Princes then being Pagans) his intermedling in Church-matters, the Old is very vocal therein, where the Authority of the Kings of Judah, as nursing fathers to the Church is very considerable.

The Erastians in the Assembly.

57. No wonder if the Prince Palatine (constantly present at their debates) heard the Erastians with much delight, as wellcoming their Opinions for Country sake, (his Natives as first born in Hidelbridge) though otherwise in his own judgement no favourer thereof. But other Parliament men listned very favourably to their Arguments (Interest is a good quickner of Attention)

Favourably listned to.

hearing their own power enlarged thereby, and making use of their Erastian for a Check, to such who prelled conformity to the Scotch Kirke in all particulars. Anno Dom. 1644. Anno Regni Caroli 20.

The Assembly shrewdly checkt.

58. Indeed once the Assembly stretched themselves beyond their own line, in medling with what was not committed by the Parliament, to their cognizance and consultation, for which they were afterward kept down, and tied up with a shorter tedder. For though the wise Parliament made use of the Presbyterian zeal and activity, for the extirpation of Bishops, yet they discreetly resolved to hold a strickt hand over them; as not coming by their own power to advise, but called to advise with the Parliament. Nor were they to cut out their own work, but to make up what was cut to their own hands, and seeing a Præmunire is a rod, as well for a Presbyter, as a Prelate (if either trespass on the state by their over activity) though they felt not this rod, it was shewed to them, and shak'd over them, and they shrewdly and justly shent for their over-medling, which made them the wiser and warier for the time to come.

The Scotch discipline in vain strived for.

59. Indeed the major part of the Assembly endeavoured the setling of the Scotch Government in all particulars, that though Tweed parted their Countries, nothing might divide their Church Discipline, and this was laboured by the Scotch Commissioners with all industry and probable means to obtain the same; But it could not be effected, nor was it ever setled by Act of Parliament. For as in Heraldry the same seeming Lions in colour and posture, rampant and langued alike,) are not the selfe-same, if the one be armed with nails and teeth, the other deprived of both, so cannot the English be termed the same with the Scotch-Presbytery, the former being in a manner absolute in it self, the latter depended on the State in the Execution of the power thereof.

Coercive power kept in the Parliament.

60. Insomuch that the Parliament kept the Coercive power in their own hands, not trusting them to carry the KEYS AT THEIR GIRDLE, so that the power of excommunication, was not intrusted with them, but ultimately resolved into a Committee of eminent persons of Parliament, whereof Thomas Earl of Arundel (presumed present because absent with leave beyond the seas) is the first person nominated.

Uxbridge fruitless Treaty.

61. A Treaty was kept at Uxbridge betwixt the Commissioners of the King and Parliament, many well meaning people promising themselves good success thereby, whilst others thought this Treatie was born with a dying countenance, saying there wanted a third to interpose to make their distances up by powerfull perswasion, no hope of good in either without condescention in both parties. One may smile at their inference, who presumed that the Kings Commissioners, coming to Uxbridg, two parts of three to meet those of the Parliament, would proportionably comply in their yieldings. A weak Topical conjecture, confuted by the formerly going of the Parliaments Commissioners clean through to Oxford, and yet little condescention to their propositions. 1644 Feb. 5.

Mr Love's indiscretion.

62. Here Mr Christopher Love (waiting on the Parliament Commissioners in a general relation) gave great offence to the Royalists in his Sermon, shewing the impossibility of an agreement, such the dangerous errors, and malicious practises of the opposite party; many condemned his want of charity, more of discretion in this juncture of time, when there should be a cessation from invectives for the time being. But mens censures must fall the more lightly upon his memory, because since he hath suffered, and so satisfied here for his faults in this or any other kinde.

The conference of Divines.

63. with the Commissioners on both sides, certain Clergie-men were sent in their presence to debate the point of Church-government.

For

Anno Regis Carol 20. Anno Dom. 1644.

For the King.	For the Parliament.
Dr Steward Shelden Benjamin Laney Henry Hammond Henry Ferne	Mr Steven Marshall. Mr Richard Vines.

These, when the Commissioners were at leasure from civil affairs, were called to a conference before them.

64. Dr Laney proffered to prove the great benefits which had accrewed to Gods Church in all Ages by the Government by Bishops, but the Scotch-Commissioners would in no wise heare him, whereupon the Doctor was contentedly silent. Some discourses rather then disputes passed betwixt Dr Steward, and Mr Marshal, leaving no great impressions in the memories of those that were present thereat. Dr Laney might not be heard.

65. Only Mr Vines was much applauded by his own party, for proving the sufficiency of ordination by Presbiters, because Ministers made by Presbyterian Government in France and the Low-Countreys, were owned and acknowledged by our Bishops for lawfully ordained for all intents and purposes, both to Preach and Sacramentize, and no reordination required of them. Thus the goodness of Bishops in their charity to others, was made use of against themselves, and the necessity of the Episcopal function. An argument ad homines if not ad causas.

66. To return to the Assembly; the Monuments which they have left to posterity of their meeting, are chiefly these, Articles of Religion drawn up by them, and a double Catechism, one the lesser, the other the greater, whereof at first very few were printed for Parliament men, meaner folk not attaining so great a Treasure, besides their Directory whereof hereafter. Books made by the Assembly.

67. As for the conclusion of this Assembly it dwinled away by degrees though never legally dissolved. Many of them after the taking of Oxford returning to their own cures, and others living in London absented themselves, as disliking the managing of matters. Such as remained, (having survived their great respect) and being too few to maintain the dignity of an Assembly, contented themselves with the notion of a Committee, chiefly employed to examine their abilities, and good affections, who were presented to livings. Till at last as in Philosphy, accidentia non corrumpuntur, sed desinunt, they vanish with the Parliament, and now the execution of the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury comes next under our pen, whose triall being most of civill concernment. is so largely done in a book of that subject, that by us it may be justly omitted. The Assembly rather sinketh then endeth.

21. 1645. Jan. 10. 68. Next followed the execution of the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, Sherif Chambers of London, bringing over night the warrant for the same, and acquainting him therewith. In preparation to so sad a work, he betook himself to his own, and desired also the prayers of others, and particularly of Dr Holdsworth fellow prisoner in that place for a year and half; though all that time there had not been the least converse betwixt them. On the morrow he was brought out of the Tower to the Scaffold, which he ascended with a chearfull countenance, (as rather to gain a Crown, then lose an Head) imputed by his friends to the clearedness, by his foes to the searedness of his Conscience. The Beholders that day were so divided betwixt Bemoaners and Insulters, it was hard to decide which of them made up the major part of the company. The Arch-Bishop prepares for death.

And preacheth his own funeral sermon.

69. He made a Sermon-Speech, taking for his Text the two first verses of the 12. Chap. of the Epistle to the Hebrews. Let us run with patience the race which is set before us; Looking unto Jesus the Author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him, endured the Cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God. Craving leave to make use of his notes, (for the infirmity of his aged memory) he dilated thereon about half an hour, which discourse, because common, (is publickly printed) we hear forbear to insert. For the main, He protested his own innocence and integrity, as never intending any subversion of Laws and Liberty, no enemy to Parliaments (though a misliker of some miscarriages) and a Protestant in Doctrine and Discipline, according to the established laws of the land. Speech ended, He betook himself awhile to his prayers, and afterwards prepared himself for the fatal stroak.

Questioned about the assurance of his salvation and dieth.

70. S^r John Clotworthy (a member of the House of Commons) being present interrogated him concerning his assurance of Salvation, and whereon the same was grounded. Some censured this interruption for uncivill and unseasonable, as intended to ruffle his soul with passion, just as he was fairly folding it up, to deliver it into the hands of his Redeemer. But the Arch-Bishop calmly returned, that his assurance was evidenced unto him by that inward comfort which he found in his own soul. Then lying down on the block, and praying Lord receive my Soul, the Executioner dexterously did his office, and at one blow severed his Head from his Body. Instantly his face (ruddy in the last moment) turned white as ashes, confuting their falsehoods, who gave it out that he had purposely painted it, to fortifie his cheeks against discovery of fear in the paleness of his complexion. His corps were privately interred in the Church of Alhallows Barking without any solemnity, save that some will say, He had, (in those dayes) a fair Funeral, who had the Common-Prayer read thereat.

His birth in Reading, breeding in Oxford.

71. He was born Anno 1573 of honest parents at Reading in Bark-shire, a place, for the position thereof, almost equally distanced from Oxford the Scene of his breeding, and London the principal stage of his preferment. His Mother was Sister to S^r William Web, (born also at Reading) Salter, and Anno 1591 Lord Major of London. Here the Arch-Bishop afterwards built an Almshouse, and endowed it with two hundred pounds per annum, as appeareth by his own Diary, which if evidence against him for his faults may be used as a witness of his good works. Hence was he sent to S^t Johns Colledge in Oxford, where he attained to such eminency of learning, that * one since hath ranked him amongst the greatest Scholers of our Nation. He afterwards married Charls Blunt Earl of Devon-shire to the Lady Rich, which proved (if intended an advantage under his feet, to make him higher in the notice of the world) a covering to his face, and was often cast a rubb in his way, when running in his full speed to preferment, till after some difficulty, his greatnesse at the last made a shift to stride over it.

* Dr Heylin in his last Edition of his Microcosm.

He chargeth thorough all Church preferments.

72. In some sort He may be said to have served in all offices in the Church, from a Common-Souldier, to a kinde of General therein. There was neither Order, Office, Degree, nor Dignity in Colledge, Church or University, but he passed thorough it.

1. Order, Deacon, Priest, Bishop, Arch-Bishop.
2. Office, Scholer, Fellow, President, of S^t Johns Colledge, Proctor, and Chancellor of Oxford.
3. Degree, Batchelor, and Master of Arts, Batchelor and Doctor of Divinity.
4. Dignity, Vicar, Prebendary of Stanford, Parson of Ibstock, Prebendary of Westminster, Arch-Deacon of Huntington, Dean

Anno Regis Carol. 21. Anno Dom. 1645.

Dean of Colchester, Bishop of S^t Davids in Wales, Bath and Wells, and London, in England, and finally Arch-Bishop of Canterbury.

It was said of D^r George Abbot, his Predecessor, that he suddenly started to be a Bishop, without ever having Pastoral charge, whereas this man was a great Traveller in all Climates of Church preferment, sufficient to acquaint him with an experimental knowledge of the conditions of all such persons who at last were subjected to his Authority.

73. He is generally charged with Popish inclinations, and the story is commonly told and beleeved, of a Lady (still alive) who turning Papist, and being demanded of the Arch-Bishop the cause of her changing her religion, tartly returned, My Lord it was because I ever hated a crowd. And being desired to explain her meaning herein, I perceived (said she) that your Lordship and many others, are making for Rome as fast as ye can, and therefore to prevent a press, I went before you. Be the tale true or false, take Papist for a Trent-Papist, embracing all the derisions of that councel, and surely this Arch-Bishop would have been made Fewel for the Fire, before ever of that perswasion. Witness his book against Fisher, wherein he giveth no less account of his sincerity then ability to defend the most dominative points wherein we and the Papists dissent.

Charged unjustly to be a Papist.

74. However most apparent it is by severall passages in his life, that he endeavoured to take up many controversies betwixt us and the Church of Rome, so to compremise the difference, and to bring us to a Vicinity, if not Contiguity therewith, an impossible designe (if granted lawfully) as some every way his equals did adjudge. For composition is impossible with such, who will not agree except all they sue for, and all the charges of their suite be to the utmost farthing awarded unto them. Our reconciliation with Rome is clogged with the same impossibilities: She may be gone to, but will never be met with, such her Pride or as Peevishness, not to stir a step to obviate any of a different Religion. Rome will never so farr un-Pope it self, as to part with her pretended Supremacy and Infallibility, which cuts off all possibility of Protestants Treaty with her, if possibly without prejudice to Gods glory and the truth, other controversies might be composed. Which done, England would have been an Island as well in Religion, as Scituation cut off from the continent of Forraign Protestant Churches, in a singular posture by it self, hard to be imagined, but harder to be effected.

Yet endeavouring a reconciliation betwixt Rome and England.

75. Amongst his humane frailties, choler and passion most discovered it self. In the Star-Chamber (where if the crime not extraordinary, it was fine enough for one to be sued in so chargable a Court) He was observed always to concur with the severest side, and to infuse more vineger then oyle into all his censures, and also was much blamed for his severity to his Predecessor easing him against his will, and before his time, of his jurisdiction.

Over-severe in his censures.

76. But he is most accused for over-medling in State-matters, more then was fitting, say many, then needfull, say most, for one of his profession. But he never more overshot himself, then when he did impose the Scotch Liturgie, and was αλλοτριο-αρχιεπισκοπὸς over a free and forrain Church and Nation. At home, many grumbled at him for oft making the shallowest pretence of the Crown deep enough (by his powerfull digging therein) to drown the undoubted right of any private Patron to a Church-living. But Courtiers most complained, that he persecuted them, not in their proper places, but what in an ordinary way he should have taken from the hands of inferior officers, that He with a long and strong Arm reached to himself over over all their heads. Yet others plead for him, that he abridg'd their bribes not fees, and it vexed them that He ſtruck their fingers with the dead-palſie, ſo that they could not (as formerly) have a feeling for Church Preferments.

Over-medling in State matters.

Conſcientious in keeping a Diary.

77. He was conſcientious according to the principles of his devotion, witneſs his care in keeping a conſtant Diary of the paſſages in his life. Now he can hardly be an ill huſband, who caſteth up his receipts and expences every night, and ſuch a ſoul is, or would be good, which [illegible] daily Scrutiny of his own actions. But ſuch who commend him [illegible] making, condemn him in keeping ſuch a Diary about him in ſo dangerous days. Eſpecially he ought to untongue it from talking to his prejudice, and ſhould have garbled ſome light trivial and joculary paſſages out of the ſame. Whereas ſure the omiſſion hereof argued not his careleſſneſſe but confidence, that ſuch his privacies ſhould meet with that favour of courſe, which in equity is due to writings of that nature.

Temperate and chaſt.

78. He was temperate in his diet, and (which may be preſumed the effect thereof) chaſt in his converſation. Indeed in his Diary, he confeſſed himſelf lapſed into ſome ſpecial Sin with E. B. for which He kept an Anniverſary Humiliation. Indeed his * Adverſary makes this note thereon, Perchance he was unclean with E. B. which is but an uncharitable ſuſpition. Now an exact Diary is a window into his heart who maketh it, and therefore pitty it is any ſhould look therein, but either the friends of the party, or ſuch ingenious foes as will not, (eſpecially in things doubtfull) make conjectural comments to his diſgrace. But, be E. E. male or female, and the ſin committed, of what kinde ſoever, his fault whiſpers not ſo much to his ſhame, as his ſolemn repentance ſounds to his commendation.

* Mr Prin in the breviate of his life. pag. 30.

An enemy to gallantry in Clergie-mens cloaths.

79. He was very plain in apparrel, and ſharply checkt ſuch Clergymen whom he ſaw goe in rich or gaudy cloaths, commonly calling them of the Church-Triumphant. Thus as Cardinal Woolſy is reported the firſt Prelate, who made Silks, and Sattens faſhionable amongſt clergy-men; ſo this Arch-Biſhop firſt retrenched the uſual wearing thereof. Once at a Viſitation in Eſſex, one in Orders (of good eſtate and extraction) appeared before him very gallant in habit, whom Dr Laud (then Biſhop of London) publickly reproved, ſhewing to him the plainneſs of his own apparrel. My Lord (ſaid the Miniſter) you have better cloaths at home and I have worſe, whereat the Biſhop reſted very well contented.

Not partial to his kindred.

80. He was not partial in preferring his kindred, except ſome merit met in them with his alliance. I knew a near kinſman of his in the Univerſity, Schollar enough, but ſomewhat wilde and lazie, on whom it was late before he reflected with favour, and that not before his amendment. And generally perſons promoted by him were men of learning and abilities, though many of them Arminians in their judgements, and I beleeve they will not be offended with my reporting it, ſeeing moſt of them will endeavour to juſtifie and avouch their opinions herein.

No whit addicted to covetouſneſs.

81. Covetouſneſs He perfectly hated, being a ſingle man and having no project to raiſe a name or Family, he was the better enabled for publick performances, having both a price in his hand, and an heart alſo to diſpoſe thereof for the general good. S[t] Johns in Oxford, wherein he was bred, was ſo beautified, enlarged, and enriched by him, that ſtrangers at the firſt ſight knew it not, yea, it ſcarce knoweth it ſelf, ſo altered to the better from its former condition. Inſomuch that almoſt it deſerveth the name of Canterbury-Colledge, as well as that which Simon Iſlip founded, and ſince hath loſt its name, united to Chriſt-Church. More buildings he intended, (had not the ſtroke of one Axe hindred the working of many hammers) chiefly on Churches, whereof the following paſſage may not impertinently be inſerted.

Anno Regis Caroli 21. Anno Dom. 1645.

81. It happened that a Visitation was kept at S^t Peters in Corn-hill, for the Clergy of London. The Preacher discoursing of the painfulness of the Ministerial Function, proved it from the Greek deduction of Διάκονος or Deacon, so called from κόνις dust, because he must laborare in avena in pulvere, work in the dust, doe hard service in hot weather. Sermon ended, Bishop Lind proceeded to his charge to the Clergy, and observing the Church ill repaired without, and slovenly kept within, I am sorry (said He) to meet here with so true an Etymologie of Diaconus, for here is both dust and dirt too, for a Deacon (or Priest either) to work in. Yea it is dust of the worst kind, caused from the want of care of this ancient house of God, so that it pitieth his * servants to see her in the dust. Hence he took occasion to press the repairing of that, and other decayed places of divine worship, so that from this day we may date the generall mending, beautifying and adorning of all English Churches, some to decency, some to magnificence, and some (if all complaints were true) to superstition.

The grand cause of the repairing of Churches.

* Psal. 102. 14.

82. But the Church of S^t Pauls, (the only Cathedral in Christendom dedicated to that Apostle) was the master piece of his performances. We know what * one Satyrically said of him, that he pluckt down Puritans, and Presbytery, to build up Pauls and Prerogative. But let unpartial Judges behold how he left, and remember how he found that ruinous fabrick, and they must conclude that (though intending more) he effected much in that great designe. He communicated his project to some private persons, of taking down the great Tower in the middle, to the Spurrs, and rebuild it in the same fashion, (but some yards higher) as before. He meant to hang as great and tuneable a ring of bels, as any in the world, whose sound advantaged with their height and vicinity of the Thames, must needs be loud and melodious. But now he is turned to his dust, and all his thoughes have perished, yea that Church, formerly approached with due reverence, is now entred with just fear, of falling on those under it, and is so far from having its old decays repaired, that it is daily decayed in its new reparations.

Principally of S. Pauls.

* Lord F.

83. He was low of Stature, little in bulk, cheerful in countenance, (where gravity and quickness were well compounded) of a sharp and piercing eye, clear judgement, and (abating the influence of age) firme memory. He wore his hair very close, and though in the beginning of his greatness, many measured the length of mens strictness by the shortness of their hair, yet some will say, that since out of Antipathy to conform to his example, his opposites have therein indulged more liberty to themselves. And thus we take our leave of him, whose estate, (neither so great as to be envied at, nor so small as to be complained of) he left to his heir and Sisters Son S^r John Robinson Merchant of London, though he first to compound with [illegible] before he could peaceably enjoy the same.

His personal character.

84. [illegible] with this Arch-Bishop, died another Diotrephes, (though of a different temper, no less esteemed amongst men of his own perswasion, viz. [illegible] who (in the midst of troublesome times) quietly withdrew himself to heaven. He was born at Shotledge in Cheshire (the youngest of seven children) bred in Jesus Colledge in Cambridge, and at his first Commencement he was so facetiously solid (mild, yet sweet [illegible] brought forth before grasted with grace) that Oxford-[illegible] courted him home with them, and would have planted [illegible] there, but he declined it.

The blush and breeding of Mr Dod.

85. He was a Pious Nonconformist, not loving any one the worse for [illegible] about Ceremonies, but all the better for their unity of affections in [illegible] and Vnderth. He used to retrench some hot spirits when [illegible], telling them how God under that government had given many [illegible] to the Gospell, and that godly men might comfortably [illegible] under which learning and religion had so manifest

One peaceable in our Israel.

[illegible] the [illegible] ontril
[illegible] affionat
[illegible] in m
[illegible] cone

fest an Improvement. He was a good Decalogist, and is conceived to study ing day (how roughly soever used by the opposite party) to stick to his own judgement of what he had written on the fifth Commandement, of Obedience to lawful Authority.

Improveth all to piety.

87. Some riotous Gentlemen casually coming to the [illegible]le of St Anthony Cope in Hanwell were half-starved in the midst of a feast, because refraining from swearing (meat and drink to them) in the presence of Mr Dod; of these one after dinner ingeniously professed, that he thought it had been impossible for himself to forbear oaths so long a time. Hereat Mr Dod (the flame of whose zeal turned all accidents into fuel) fell into a pertinent and seasonable discourse, (as more better at occasionals,) of what power men have more then they know of themselves to refrain from sin, and how active Gods restraining grace would be in us to bridle us from wickedness, were we not wanting to our selves.

Youth will away. * Judg 16.20.

83. Being stricken in years, he used to compare himself to Samson when his hair was cut off. I rise saith he in a morning as Samson did and [illegible] *I will go out as at * other times, goe, walk, work, [illegible] young man. But alas! he quickly found an alteration, and so do I, [illegible] stoop to age, which hath clipt my hair and taken my strength away.*

God seen at the first hand in nature, but at the second in art.

89. Being at Holdenby, and invited by an Honourable person to see [illegible] stately house built by Sr Christopher Hatton, (the Masterpiece of [illegible] Architecture in that age) he desired to be excused, and to sit still looking on a flower which he had in his hand. In this Flower (saith he) I can see my God, more in all the beautiful buildings in the world. And at this day as his flower is long since withered, That magnificent Pile (that fair flower of Art) is altogether blasted and destroyed.

An innocent deceiver. * In a list written by Mr Clark.

90. It [illegible] he was but courtly used of the Cavaliers, who (they say) plund[illegible] his linnen * and houshold-stuff, though (as some tell me) if so disp[illegible]ght have redeemed all for a very small matter. However the good man [illegible] remembred his old maxime, Sanctified affliction are good Promotions, and I have been credibly informed, that when the souldiers brought down his sheets out of the Chamber, into the room where Mr Dod sate by the fire side; He (in their absence to search after more) took one [illegible] and clapt them under his Cushion whereon he sat, much pleasing himself after their departure that he had (as he said) plundred the plunderers, and by a lawfull felony saved so much of his own to himself.

Excellent Hebrician.

91. He was an excellent scholer, and was as causlesly accused, as another John, of his name (Mr John Fox I mean) for lacking of latin. He was also an exquisite Hebrician, and with his society and directions in one Vacation taught that tongue [illegible] John Gregorie that rare Linguist, and Chaplain of Christs-Church [illegible]ed him but one * year, and now they both together praise God [illegible]ge, which glorified Saints and Angels use in heaven.

* Dying at Katlington, Mar. 14. 1646. and was buried in Christ-Church Oxford. Farewell old Puritan.

92. He was buried [illegible]sby in Northampton-shire, with whom the Old Puritan may seem to expire, and in his grave to be interr'd. Humble, Meek, Patient, Hospital, Charitable as in his censures of, so in his alms to others. Would I could truly say but half so much of the next Generation.

SECT.

Section X.

To the right Worshipful Roger [illegible] Esq; High Sheriffe of Buckingham-[illegible]re.

SEa-men observe, that the water is the more troubled the nearer they draw on to the Land, because broken by repercussion from the Shore. I am sensible of the same danger, the nearer I approach our times, and the End of this History.

Yet fear not Sr, that the least wrong may redound to You, by my indiscretion in the writing hereof; desiring You only to Patronize what is acceptable therein, and what shall appear otherwise, is left on my account to answer for the same.

Anno Regis Carol. 21. Anno Dom. 1645.

1. YOu may know, that amongst the most Remarkables, effected by the Assembly of Divines, the compiling of the Directory was one, which although composed in the former yeare, yet because not as yet meeting with universal Obedience, it will be seasonable enough now to enter on the consideration thereof. The Parliament intending to abolish the Liturgie, and loath to leave the Land altogether at a loss, or deformity in publick service, imployed the Assembly in drawing up a model of Divine worship. Herein no direct forme of Prayer Verbis conceptis was prescribed, no outward or bodily worship enjoyned, nor people required in the Responsals (more then in Amen) to bear a part in the Service, but all was left to the discretion of the Minister, not enjoyned what, but directed to what purpose, he ought to order his devotions, in publick-prayer and administring Sacraments.

The Directory drawn up by the Assembly.

To which the dissenting Brethren at last assent.

2. The dissenting Brethren (commonly call'd Independents) were hardly perswaded to consent to a Directory. Even libera custodia, (though it be the best of Restraints) is but a restraint; and they suspected such a Directory would (if inforced) be an infringing of the Christian-liberty. However, they consented at last, the rather because a Preface was prefixed before it, which did much moderate the matter, and mitigate the rigorous imposition thereof.

A discreet and charitable Preface.

3. In this preface, respectful terms are (no less discreetly than charitably) afforded to the first compilers of the Liturgie, allowing them wise and pious, in redressing many things which were vain, erroneous, superstitious, and idolatrous, affirming also, that many Godly and Learned men of that age, rejoyced much in the Liturgie at that time set forth; But adding withall, that they would rejoyce more, had it been their happiness to behold this present reformation, they themselves were perswaded, that these first Reformers (were they now alive) would joyn with them in this work of advancing the Directory.

The Directorie inforced by ordinance of Parliament.

4. The Assemblie-work of the Directorie thus ended, the Lords and Commons began therewith, prefixing an Ordinance thereunto (made much up of forms of repeal) laying down the motives inclining them to think, the abolishing of the Common-Prayer, and establishment of this Directory necessary for this Nation. First, the consideration of the many inconveniences risen by that book in this Kingdom. Secondly, their Covenant-Resolution to reform Religion according to Gods word and the best reformed Churches. Thirdly, their consulting with the learned, pious, and reverend Divines for that purpose.

A good price if well paid.

5. The Benefit of Printing the Directorie was bestowed on Mr Rowborough, and Mr Byfield Scribes to the Assembly, who are said to have sold the same for some hundreds of pounds. Surely the Stationer who bought it, did not with the dishonest * Chap-man, first decry the worth thereof, and then boast of his penniworth. If since he hath proved a loser thereby, I am confident, that they who sold it him, carried such a Chancery in their bosoms, as to make him fair satisfaction.

* Pro. 20. 14.

A Second Ordinance to back the former.

6. Now because it was hard to turn people out of their old track, and put them from a beaten path, (such was, call it constancy or obstinacy, love or doting, of the generality of the Nation, on the Common-Prayer) the Parliament found it fit, yea necessary to back their former Ordinance with a second, dated twenty third of August 1645. And entitled an Ordinance of the Lords and Commons for the more effectual putting in execution the Directorie &c. Wherein directions were not only given for the dispersing and publishing of the Directory, in all Parishes, Chappelries, and Donatives, but also for the calling in, and suppressing of all books of Common-Prayer, and several forfeitures and penalties to be levied and imposed upon conviction before justices of Assize, or of Oyer and terminer, &c.

The Kings Proclamation contrary to the Parliaments Ordinance.

7. But in opposition hereunto, the King at Oxford set forth a Proclamation (bearing date the thirteenth of November 1645.) enjoyning the use of Common-Prayer according to the Law, notwithstanding the pretended ordinances for the new Directory. Thus as the waves, commanded one way by the Tide, and countermanded another with the wind, know not which to obey; so, people stood amused betwixt these two forms of service, line upon line, * precept upon precept, being the easiest way to edifie, whilst line against line, precept against precept, did much disturb and distract.

* Isa. 28. 10.

Arguments pro and con. to the Directory.

8. The King and Parliament being thus at difference, no wonder if the pens of the Chaplains followed their Patrons, and engaged violently pro and con in the controversy. I presume it will be lawful and safe for me, to give in a breviat of the Arguments on both sides, reserving my private opinion to my self, as not worthy the readers taking notice thereof; for as it hath been permitted in the height and heat of our Civil war, for Trumpeters and Messengers, to have fair and free passage on both sides, pleading the

Priviledge

Anno Regis Carol. 21. Anno Dom. 1645.

Priviledge of the publick faith, provided they do not intereſt themſelves like parties, and as ſpies forfeit the protection, ſo ſubjecting themſelves juſtly to the ſevereſt puniſhment: So Hiſtorians in like manner in all ages have been permitted to tranſmit to poſterity an unpartial account of actions, preſerving themſelves Neuters in their indifferent relations.

Againſt the Liturgie.

1. Sad experience hath made it manifeſt, that the Liturgie uſed in England, (notwithſtanding the religious intentions of the compilers thereof) hath proved an offence to many godly people.

2. Offence thereby hath alſo been given to the reformed Churches abroad.

3. Mr Calvin himſelf diſliked the Liturgie, in his letter to the Lord Protector; charitably calling many things therein tolerabiles ineptias.

4. The Liturgie is no better, then confining of the Spirit, tying it to ſuch and ſuch words, which is to be left alone to its own liberty, uſe praying, and have praying, the extemporary gift is improved by the practice thereof.

5. It being a compliant with the Papiſts, in a great part of their Service, doth not a little confirm them in their Superſtition and Idolatry.

6. It is found by experience that the Liturgie hath been a great means to make an idle and an unedifying Miniſtry.

For the Liturgie.

1. Such offence (if any) was taken, not given, and they muſt be irreligious miſtakes which ſtand in oppoſition to ſuch religious intentions.

2. No forrain Church ever in print expreſſed any ſuch offence, and if ſome particular man have diſliked it, as many and as eminent have manfeſted their approbation thereof.

3. Mr Calvin is but one man. Beſides, he ſpake againſt the firſt draught of the Liturgie, Anno 1. of King Edw. the ſixth, which afterwards was reviewed in that Kings Reign, and again in the firſt of Queen Elizabeth.

4. The ſame charge lieth againſt the Directorie, appointing though not the words to be prayed with, the matter, to be prayed for. Poor liberty to leave the ſpirit only to ſupply the place of a Vocabulary, or a Copia Verborum. And ſeeing Senſe is more conſiderable then Language, the preſcribing thereof reſtraineth the Spirit as much, as appointing the words of a prayer.

5. It complieth with the Papiſts in what they have retained of Antiquity, and not what they have ſuperadded of Idolatry, and therefore more probably may be a means of converting them to our Religion, when they perceive us not poſſeſſed with a Spirit of oppoſition unto them, in ſuch things wherein they cloſe with the Primitive Times.

6. The Uſers of the Liturgie have alſo laboured in Preaching, Catechiſing, and ſtudy of Divine Learning. Nor doth the Directorie ſecure any from Lazineſs, ſeeing nothing but Lungs and ſides may be uſed in the delivery of any extemporary prayer.

Anno Dom. 1645. Anno Regis Caroli 21.

Against the Liturgie.	For the Liturgie.
7. It is tedious to the people with the unneceſſary length, taking up an hour at leaſt, in the large and diſtinct reading thereof.	7. Some obſervers of the Directorie, to procure to their parts and perſons the repute of ability and piety, have ſpent as much time, in their extemporary devotions.
8. Many Ceremonies, not only unprofitable but burthenſome are therein impoſed on peoples conſciences.	8. This is diſproved by ſuch who have written volums in the vindication thereof. But grant it true, not a total abſolution, but a reformation therof may hence be inferred.
9. Diverſe able and faithful Miniſters, have by the means of the Liturgie been debar'd the exerciſe of their Miniſtry, and ſpoiled of their livelihood, to the undoing of them and their family.	9. The Directorie, if enforced to ſubject the refuſers to penalties, may ſpoil as many, and as well deſerving of their Miniſtry, and livelihood.

Such as deſire to read deeper in this Controverſie, may have their recourſe to the manifold Tractats written on this ſubject.

A query for conſcience ſake.

9. But leaving theſe diſquiets, the Common-Prayer daily decreaſed, and Directorie by the power of Parliament was advanced. Here ſome would fain be ſatisfied, whether the Aboliſhing of the main body of the Common-Prayer extendeth to the prohibition of every expreſſion therein, (I mean not ſuch which are the numerical words of Scripture, whereof no queſtion) but other ancient paſſages, which in the Primitive Times, were laudably (not to ſay neceſſarily) put in practice.

A word in due ſeaſon.

10. I know a Miniſter who was accuſed for uſing the Gloria Patri (conforming his practice to the Directorie in all things elſe,) and threatned to be brought before the Committee. He pleaded the words of Mr Cartwright in his defence, * confeſſing the Gloria Patri founded on juſt, cauſe that men might make their open profeſſion in the Church of the Divinity of the Son of God, againſt the deteſtable opinion of Arrius and his Diſciples. But now (ſaith he) that it hath pleaſed the Lord to quench that fire, there is no ſuch cauſe why theſe things ſhould be uſed. But ſeeing, (ſaid the Miniſter) it hath pleaſed God for our ſins to condemn us to live in ſo licentious an age, wherein the Divinity both of Chriſt and the Holy-Ghoſt is called frequently and publickly into queſtion, the ſame now (by Mr Cartwrights judgement) may lawfully be uſed, not to ſay can well be omitted. I remember not that he heard any more of the matter.

* His reply againſt Whitgift. p. 107. Sect. 4.

A farewell to the ſubject.

11. It is now high time to take our farewel of this tedious ſubject, and leave the iſſue thereof to the obſervation of Poſterity. The beſt Demonſtration to prove, whether Daniel and his Fellows (the Children of the Captivity) ſhould thrive better by plain pulſe (to which formerly they had been uſed) or the new diet of diverſe and dainty diſhes, was even to put it to the Trial of ſome * dayes experiment, and then a Survey taken of their Complexions, whether they be impaired or not; ſo when the Directorie hath been practiſed in England ninty years (the world laſting ſo long) as the Liturgie hath been, then Poſterity will be the competent Judge, whether the Face of Religion had the more lively, healthful, and chearful looks, under the one, or under the other.

* 1 Dan. 1. 13.

12. The

Anno Regis Caroli 21. Anno Dom. 1645.

12. The next news engroſſing the talk of all tongues, was about Dr Williams Arch-Biſhop of York, no leſs ſuddenly than ſtrangely metamorphoſed, from a zealous Royaliſt into an active Parliamentarian; being to relate the occaſion thereof, we will enter on the brief hiſtory of his life, from the cradle to the grave, repeating nothing formerly written, but only adding thereunto. Arch-Biſhop Williams ſtrangely altered.

13. None can queſtion the gentility of his extraction, finding him born at Aberconway in Carnarvon-ſhire in Wales; of a family rather ancient than rich. His Grandfather had a good eſtate, but aliened (it ſeems) by his heirs, ſo that this Doctor, when Lord-Keeper, was fain to repurchaſe it. Surely it was of a conſiderable value, becauſe he complaineth in his * letter to the Duke (who encouraged him to the purchaſe) that he was forced to borrow money, and ſtood indebted for the ſame. Born in Wales of good parentage.

* Cabala pag.

14. He was bred in St Johns College in Cambridge, to hold the ſcales even with St Johns in Oxford, wherein Arch-Biſhop Laud had his education. Dr Gwin was his tutor, his chiefeſt, if not his only eminency, and afterwards the occaſion of his preferment. For as this Tutor made his Pupil Fellow; this Pupil made the Tutor Maſter of the Colledge. Next was Mr Williams made Proctor of the Univerſity, excellently performing his Acts for the place in ſo ſtately a poſture, as rather but of duty, thereby to honour his Mother-Univerſity, than deſire to credit himſelf, as taking it only in his paſſage to an higher employment. Bred in Saint Johns, and Proctor of Cambridge.

15. He was Chaplain (or Councellor ſhall I ſay?) to Thomas Egerton Lord Chancellor, who imparted many myſteries of that place unto him. Here an able Teacher of State met with as apt a Scholar, the one not more free in powring forth, then the other capable to receive, firm to retain, and active to improve what was infuſed into him. So dear was this Doctor to his Patrone, that this Lord dying on his death-bed, deſired him to chooſe what moſt acceptable legacy he ſhould bequeath unto him. Dr Williams, waving and ſlighting all mony, requeſted foure Books, being the collections of the Lord his induſtry, learning, and experience, concerning The Lord Egerton his boon to this his Chaplain.

1. The Prerogative Royall.
2. Privuledges of Parliaments.
3. The proceedings in Chancery.
4. The power of the Starr-Chamber.

Theſe were no ſooner aſked then granted; and the Doctor afterwards copied out theſe foure Books into his own brains. Books which were the foure elements of our Engliſh State, and he made an abſolute Maſter of all the materials, that is, of all the paſſages therein, ſeeing nothing ſuperfluous was therein recorded.

16. By the Duke of Buckingham (whom he had married to the daughter of the Earle of Rutland) he preſented theſe Books to King James. Then did His Majeſty firſt take notice of his extraordinary abilities, ſoon after preferring him by the Dukes mediation, to the Deanry of Weſtminſter, Biſhop of Lincolne, and Keepers place of the Great Seal, till he loſt the laſt in the firſt of King Charls, as hath formerly been related. The means of his ſpeedy and great preferment.

17. I dare confidently avouch what I knowingly ſpeak, that the following paſſage was the motus primò primus of the breach betwixt him and the Duke. There was one Dr Theodore Price a Welſh man, highly beloved both by Biſhop Williams and Bp Laud, ſo that therein the rule did not hold, Thoſe that agree in one third agree among themſelves; theſe two Prelates mutually mortal enemies meeting in the love of this Doctor. Now the Archbiſhoprick of Armagh in Ireland falling vacant, Biſhop Williams moved the Duke for Dr Price, his country man: to whom the Duke anſwered, that King The original breach betwixt the Duke and Lord Keeper.

Anno Dom. 1645. Anno Regis Carol. 21.

King James had by promiſe fore-diſpoſed the place on the Biſhop of Meath, Dr James Uſher, one whoſe deſerts were ſufficiently known. Not ſatisfied herewith, Biſhop Williams by his own intereſt endeavoured to bring Dr Price into the place. The Duke underſtanding that he, who formerly profeſſed a ſubordination to, at the leaſt a concurrence with his deſires, ſhould now offer to conteſt with him, reſolved, that ſeeing the Lord-Keeper would not own himſelf to ſtand by his love, the world ſhould ſee he ſhould fall by his anger; and this miniſtred the firſt occaſion to his ruine. And when once the Alarum was ſounded of the Dukes diſpleaſure, no Courtier ſo deaf and drowſie, but did take the ſame; And all things concurred to his diſadvantage. This is that Dr Theodore Price, who afterwards died a profeſſed Catholick, reconciled to the Church of Rome.

Not contented with his own wiſh. * Cabala, or Scrinia Sacra part. 1 p. 59.

18. Yet after his reſigning the Seal, faire preferment was left unto him, could he have confined his large heart thereunto. I meet with a paſſage in a * letter from this Lord-Keeper to the Duke, wherein he profeſſeth calling God to witneſs, that the Lord-Keeper (troubled with many miſeries wherewith ſuddain greatneſs is accompanied) envied the fortunes of one Dr Williams, late Dean of Weſtminſter. Be this a truth or a complement, what he formerly envied now he enjoyed, returned to a plentifull privacie; not only of the Deanry of Weſtminſter, but Biſhoprick of Lincoln, which he held with the ſame. But alaſs, when our deſires are forced on us by our foes, they do not delight but afflict. The ſame ſtep is not the ſame ſtep, when we take it aſcendendo in hopes to higher preferment, and when we light upon it deſcendendo, or are remitted unto it as falling from higher advancement. The Biſhop is impatient for being leſs than he had been; and there wanted not thoſe ſecret enemies to improve his diſcontents to his disgrace, almoſt deſtruction, as fining in the Star-Chamber, and long impriſoning in the Tower.

Enlarged out of the Tower and made Arch-Biſhop of York.

19. Now came that Parliament ſo much wiſhed for, that many feared it would never begin, and afterwards (oh the mutability of deſires, or change of things deſired!) the ſame feared it would never have an end. Then is Biſhop Williams ſent for out of the Tower, brought to Parliament, advanced to the Arch-Biſhoprick of York, and is the Anteſignanus of the Epiſcopal party, to defend it in the Houſe of Lords (as beſt armed with his power and experience) againſt a volly of affronts and oppoſitions. 1640.

His pleaſant anſwer to the King.

20. Once when His Majeſty ſaw him earneſt in the defence of Epiſcopacy then oppoſed by Parliament, My Lord (ſaith the King) I commend you that you are no whit daunted with all diſaſters, but are zealous in defending your Order. Pleaſe it your Majeſty (returned the Arch-Biſhop) I am a true Welſhman, and they are obſerved never to run away, till their Generall do firſt forſake them. No fear of my flinching whileſt your Highneſs doth countenance our cauſe. But ſoon after he was impriſoned about the Biſhops Proteſtation to the Parliament, and with great difficulty obtained his liberty, as was afore obſerved.

Retires into North-Wales and ſinks by degrees into diſfavour.

21. Retiring himſelf into North-Wales (where his birth, eſtate, alliance, but chiefly hoſpitality did make him popular) he had a great, but endeavoured a greater influence on thoſe parts. It gave ſome diſtaſt, that in all conſultations he would have his adviſe paſs for an oracle, not to be conteſted with, much leſs controled by any. But vaſt the difference betwixt his Orders in Chancery, armed with power to enforce obedience, and his counſell here, which many Military men (as in their own element) took the boldneſs to contradict; Buff-coats, often rubb'd and grated againſt this Prelats ſilk Caſſock, which (becauſe of the ſofter matter) was the ſooner fretted therewith. Indeed he endeavoured as much as might be to preſerve his country from taxes (an acceptable and ingratiating deſigne with the people) but ſometimes inconſiſtent with the Kings preſent and preſſing neceſſities. All his words and deeds are repreſented at Oxford (where his Court-

Anno Regis Carol 21. Anno Dom. 1645.

Court-interest did daily decline) to his disadvantage, and some jealousies are raised of his cordialness to the Royal Cause.

22. At last some great Affronts were put upon him (increased with his tender resenting of them,) being himself (as I have been informed) put out of Commission, and another placed in his room. A disgrace so much the more insupportable to his high Spirit, because he conceived himself much meriting of his Majesty, by his loyalty, industry, ability, and expence in his Cause, who hitherto had spared neither care nor cost in advancing the same, even to the impairing of his own estate. Incensed with great affronts.

23. But now he entereth on a designe, which had I line and plummet, I want skill to manage them in measuring the depth thereof. He sueth to the Parliament for favour, and obtained it, whose General in a manner he becomes in laying siege to the Town and Castle of Abercon-way, till he had reduced it to their service, and much of the Town to his own possession. Takes a Commission from the Parliament.

24. And now Meruit sub Parliamento in Wallia is the wonder of all men. I confess he told his kinsman, who related it to me, that if he might have the convenience to speak with his Majesty but one half-houre (a small time for so great a task) he doubted not but to give him full satisfaction for his behaviour. Sure it is, those of the Royall Party, and his own Order, which could not mine into his invisible motives, but surveyed only the sad surface of his actions, condemn the same as irreconcileable with the principles he professed. And though hereby he escaped a Composition for his estate in Goldsmiths-Hall, yet his memory is still to compound (and at what rate I know not) with many mouths, before a good word can be afforded unto it; But these, perchance, have never read the well latined Apologie in his behalf. And although some will say, that they that need an Apologie come too near to fault, the word (as commonly taken) sounding more of excuse then defence, yet surely in its genuine notation, it speaks not guilt, but allwayes greatness of enemies and opposers. Condemned by all Royalists.

25. Of all English Divines since the Reformation, he might make the most experimental Sermon on the Apostles words, By honour and dishonour, by ill report and good report, though the method not so applyable as the matter unto him, who did not close and conclude with the general good esteem, losing by his last compliance his old friends at Oxford, and in lieu of them finding few new ones at London. Humane inconstancy.

26. Envie it self cannot deny, but that whithersoever he went, he might be traced by the footsteps of his benefaction. Much he expended on the repair of Westminster-Abby-Church, and his answer is generally known, when pressed by Bishop Laud to a larger contribution to S. Pauls, that he would not rob Peter to pay Paul. The Library of Westminster was the effect of his bounty, and so was a Chappel in Lincoln-Colledge in Oxford, having no other relation thereunto, than as the *name-sake of his Bishoprick: so small an invitation will serve to call a coming charity. At S. Johns in Cambridge he founded two Fellowships, built a fair Library, and furnished it with books, intending more, had his bounty then met with proportionable entertainment. But Benefactors may give money, but not gratefull minds to such as receive it. His acts of charity.

*I believe He also was Visitor thereof.

27. He was very chast in his conversation, whatsoever a nameless author hath written on the contrary: Whom his Confuter hath stiled, Aulicus Coquinaria, or, The Courtier out of the kitchin, and that deservedly for his unworthy writings, out of what Dripping-pan soever he licked this his sluttish intelligence. For most true it is, (as I am certainly informed from such who knew the privacies and casualties of his infancy,) this Arch-Bishop was but one degree removed from a Misogyniſt, yet to palliate his infirmity to noble females, he was most compleat in his courtly addresses. Purged from unjust aspersion.

28. He

A perfect Anti-Papist.

28. He hated Popery with a perfect hatred: and though oft declaring freedom and favour to imprisoned Papists, as a Minister of state, in obedience to his office; yet he never procured them any courtesies out of his proper inclinations. Yea, when Dr the new Bishop of Canterbury at the end of King James His Reign first arrived in England, he gave the Duke of Buckingham * advice (in case other circumstances conveniently concurred) that the Judges should presently proceed against him, and being thus out of the way, and the King cast the blame on Arch-Bishop Abbot, or himself, prepared (it seemeth) to undergo his Royal displeasure therein.

* Cabala part. 1. pag. 81.

Favour of some Non-conformists.

29. Not out of Sympathy to Non-conformists, but Antipathy to Bishop Land, he was favourable to some select persons of that opinion. Most sure it is, that in his greatness he procured for Mr Cotton of Boston a toleration under the Broad Seal, for the free exercise of his Ministry, notwithstanding his dissenting in Ceremonies, so long as done without disturbance to the Church. But as for this Bishop himself, he was so great an honourer of the English Liturgie; that of his own cost, he caused the same to be translated into Spanish, and fairely printed, to confute their false conceit of our * Church, who would not beleeve, that we used any Book of Common Prayer amongst us.

* Cabala part. 1. pag. 79.

The character of his person.

30. He was of a proper person, comely countenance, and suitable complexion, having a stately garbe and gate by nature, which (suppose him prouder then he should be) made him mistaken prouder then he was. His head was a well filled Treasury, and his tongue the faire key to unlock it. He had as great a memory as could be reconciled with so good a judgement; so quick his parts, that his extempore-performances equalled the premeditations of others of his profession. He was very open, and too fast in discourse, disdaining to lie at a close guard, so confident of the length and strength of his weapon.

His favoury speech.

31 Thus take we our farewell of his memory, concluding it with one of his speeches (as savourie I beleeve as ever any he uttered) wherein he expressed himself to a grave Minister coming to him for Institution in a living. I have (saith he) passed through many places of honour and trust, both in Church and State, more then any of my Order in England this seventy years before. But were I but assured that by my preaching I had converted but one soul unto God, I should take therein more spiritual joy and comfort, than in all the honours and offices which have been bestowed upon me.

His death on our Lady-day.

32. He died as I take it, Anno 1649. Sure I am on the 25. of March, leaving a leading case (not as yet decided in our Law) whether his half years rents (due after Sunrise) should goe with his Goods and Chattels, unto his Executor, or fall to his Heir; The best was, such the Providence of the Parties concerned therein, that before it came to a Suite they seasonably compounded it amongst themselves.

A list of Parliament Ordinances touching Religion.

33. Come we now to present the Reader with a List of the principal Ordinances of the Lords and Commons, which respected Church-matters. I say principal, otherwise to recite all, (which wear the countenance of an Ecclesiastical Tendency, some of them being mingled with civil affairs) would be over-voluminous. Yea I have heard, that a great * Antiquary should say, that the Orders and Ordinances of this Parliament in bulke and number, did, not only equall, but exceed all the Laws and Statutes, made since the Conquest, it will be sufficient therefore to recite Titles of those most material, going a little backward in Time, to make our History the more entire.

* Sr. Simons D'ewes.

Die Martis Augusti. 19. 1645.

Directions of the Lords and Commons (after advice had with the Assembly of Divines) for the election and chusing of Ruling Elders, in all the Congregations under the Classical Assemblies for the City of London and Westminster, and the several Countries of the Kingdom. For the speedy setling of the Presbyteriall Government.

Anno Dom. 1645.

Die Lunæ. Oct. 20. 1645.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons together with Rules and Directions concerning suspension from the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, in cases of Ignorance and Scandal. Also the names of such Ministers and others that are appointed Elders and Judges of the ability of Elders in the twelve Classes with the Province of London.

Die Sabbathi March 14. 1645.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons for keeping of scandalous persons from the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, the enabling of the Congregation for the choosing of Elders, and supplying of defects in former ordinances and directions of Parliament concerning Church Government.

Die Veneris June 5. 1646.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons for the present setling (without further delay) of the Presbyterial Government in the Church of England.

Die Veneris August 28. 1646.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons for the Ordination of Ministers by the Presbyteries within their respective bounds, for the several Congregations in the Kingdom of England.

Die Sabbathi Jan. 29. 1647.

An Ordinance of the Lords and Commons for the speedy dividing and setling of the several Counties of this Kingdom into distinct Classical Presbyteries, and Congregational Churches.

An order for the fift part for Ministers Wives and Children.

14. Great was the clamorous importunity of the Wives and Children of [illegible] ready to starve for want of maintenance. I had almost called them the Widows and Orphans of those Ministers, because having their Fathers not living to them, their Means were not living to their Fathers, and they were destitute of a livelihood. Indeed there was an Ordinance of Parliament made 1644, impowring their Commissioners in the Country to appoint means (not exceeding a fift part) to the Wives and Children of all sequestred Persons, but seeing Clergie-men were not therein specified by name, such who enjoyed their Sequestrations refused to contribute [illegible] Whereupon the House of Commons compassionately regarding the distresses of the foresaid complainers, made an Order more particularly to enjoyn the Clergy, and (seeing it is hard to come by) I receive it a charitable work, have to insert a Copy thereof.

Die Jovis. Nov. 11. 1647.

The Copy thereof.

That the Wives and Children of all such Persons as are or have been or shall be sequestred, by Order of either House of Parliament, shall be comprehended within the Ordinance, that deals with a fift part for Wives and Children, and shall have their fift part [illegible] and the Committee of Lords and Commons for sequestration, and the Committee for plundered Ministers, and all other Committees are required to take notice hereof, and yield Obedience hereunto accordingly.

H. Elsing Clericus Parliamenti Domus Communis.

Several ways endeavoured to frustrate this order.

35. But Covetous passe will wriggle it self out at a small hole. Many were the Evasions whereby such Clergie-men possest of their livings do frustrate and defeat the effectual paiment of the fift part to the aforesaid wives and Children. Some of which starting-holes we will here present, not to the end that any should unjustly hide themselves herein, but that for the future they may be stopped up, as obstructing the true performance of the Parliaments intended Curtesie.

First evasion.

36. First they plead that Taxes being first deducted, Tythes are so hardly paid, they cannot live and maintain themselves if they must still pay a fift part out of the remainder. Such consideration, if themselves cannot live on the whole Grist, how shall the Families of such sequestred Ministers subsist on the Tole.

Second evasion.

37. Secondly, if the forelaid Minister had [illegible] without Children, or Children without a wife, or but one Child, they deny paiment, as not within the Letter (though the Equity) of the Order; though one Child is as unable to live on nothing, as if there were many more.

Third evasion.

38. Thirdly, if the sequestred Minister hath any temporal means of his own, or since his sequestration hath acquired any place wherein he officiateth (though short of a comfortable subsistence) they deny paiment of a fift part unto him.

Fourth Evasion.

39. Fourthly, they affright the said sequestred Minister, threatning to new article against him for his former faults. Whereas, had he not been reputed a malignant, not a fift part, but all the five parts were due unto him.

Fift Evasion.

40. Fiftly, many who have livings in great Towns (especially Vicarages) disclaim the receiving of any Benefits in the nature of Tithes, and accept them only in the notion of Benevolence. Then they plead nothing due to the sequestred Minister, out of the free gratuities which only are bestowed upon them.

Sixt Evasion.

41. Sixtly, they plead, that nothing can be demanded by vertue of the said Ordinance, longer then the sitting of the said Parliament which made it, which long since is dissolved; now though this be but a dilatory plea, (themselves enjoying the foure parts by vertue of the same Order) yet though it doth not finally blast, it doth much set back the fift part, and whilst the same groweth, the Ministers Wives and Children starve.

Seventh Evasion.

42. Lastly, of late, since the setting forth of the Proclamation that all who disquiet their peaceable possession, who are put into livings by the Parliaments Order, should be beheld as enemies to the State. Such sequestred Ministers who only sue the refusers to pay the fift part unblameable in all things else, are threatned (though they humbly conceived contrary to the true intent of the Proclamation) with the foresaid penalty if they desist not in their suite. Many more are their subterfugies (besides vexing their wives with the tedious attendance to get Orders on Orders) so that as one truly and sadly said, the fifts are even paid at sixes and sevens.

Remember the Poor.

43. I am sorry to see the pittiful and pious intentions of the Parliament, so abused and deluded by the indirect dealings of others, so that they cannot attain their intended ends, for the relief of so many poor people, seeing no doubt therein, they desired to be like the best of beings, who as closely applieth his lenitive, as corrasive plasters, and that his mercy may take as true effect as his justice. Sure if the present Authority (when at leisure from higher imployment) shall be pleased to take the groans of these poor souls into its consideration, the voice of their hungry bowels will quickly be turned to a more pleasant tune, from barking for food, to the blessing of those who procured it. Not let any censure this a digress from my History, for though my estate will not suffer me with * Job to be eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame, I will endeavour what I can to be a Tongue for the Dumbe.

* Job. 29.15.

SECT.

SECTION XI.

To the Noble Lady Elianor Roe, relict to the Honorable Sr. Thomas Roe.

Madam,

I finde that my name-sake * Thomas Fuller was Pilot in the ship called the Desire, wherein Captain Cavendish furrounded the world.

* Hackluits voyages 3. part pag. 825.

Far be it from me to compare these my weak undertakings to his great adventures. Yet I may terme this my Book the Desire, as wherein I desire to please, and profit all, justly to displease none. Many rocks and storms have I passed by Gods blessing, and now am glad of so firme an Anchorage, as a Dedication to your Ladiship.

I believe Madam none of your Sex in our Nation, hath travelled farther then your self. Yet this Section of our History, may afford you a rarity not seen before. I know you have viewed the Tombe of St. Polycarpus, but here the Herse is presented unto you of one, whose death cannot be paralell'd in all particulars,

Anno Regis. Carol. 24. Anno Dom. 1648.

1. LAtely certain Delegates from the University of Oxford pleaded their Priviledges before the Committee of Parliament, that they were onely Visitable by the King, and such who should be deputed by him. But their allegations were not of proof against the Paramount power of Parliament, the rather because a passage in an Article at the Rendition of Oxford, was urged against them, wherein they were subjected to such a visitation. Whereupon many Masters were ejected their Places, new Heads of Houses made, and soon after new Houses to those Heads, which produced great alteration.

Great alterations by the Visiters in Oxford.

Anno Dom. 1648. Anno Regis Caroli 24.

Clergiemen meeting in the Isle of Wight.

2. Come we now to the Church-part of the Treaty in the Isle of Wight, as the sole Ecclesiastical matter remaining; Here appeared of the Divines chosen by the King, James Usher Arch-Bishop of Armagh, Brian Duppa Bishop of Salisbury, Doctor Sanderson, Doctor Sheldon, Doctor Henry Ferne; As for Doctor Brounrig Bishop of Exeter, (when on the way) he was remanded by the Parliament, because under restraint, and it was reported that D. Prideaux Bishop of Worcester wanted (the more the pitty) wherewith to accommodate himself for the journey. Mr Steven Marshall, Mr Joseph Caryll, Mr Richard Vines, and Mr Lazarus Seaman, were present there by appointment from the Parliament.

All matters managed in writing.

3. It was not permitted for either side, personally to speak, but, partly to prevent the impertinencies of orall debates; partly that a more steddy aime might be taken of their mutual Arguments, all things were transacted in scriptis; His Majesty consulted with his Chaplains when he pleased; The Kings Writings were publickly read before all, by Mr Philip Warwick, and Mr Vines read the Papers of his Fellow-Divines, the substance whereof we come here to present.

The effect of his majesties first paper.

4. His Majesty began, the effect of whose first Paper was to prove, that the Apostles, in their own persons, by Authority [a] derived from Christ exercised their power in Ordinations, giving Rules and Censures. Obj. 2.

[a] Joh. 20. 21.

[b] Tit. 1. 5.

2. That Timothy and [b] Titus, by Authority derived from the Apostles, did or might actually exercise the same power, in the three Branches specified.

3. That the Angels of the seven Churches, Rev. 2. 3. were so many personæ singulares of such as had a Prelacy, as well over Pastors as People.

From the premises, his Majesty inferred, that our Bishops succeed to the function of the Persons afore named. The rather because the same plainly appeareth out of the History of the Primitive Church, the writings of Ignatius and other ancient Authors. In conclusion his Majesty desired to be satisfied from them, what were the Substantials of Church-government, appointed by Christ and his Apostles, and in whose hands they are left, and whether they binde to a perpetual observation thereof; or may upon occasion be altered in whole or in part.

The Parliament-Divines answer thereunto.

5. The next day the Parliament-Divines put in their Answer to the Kings Paper, wherein they confessed, that the places of Scripture cited by him, proved in those Persons by him named, a power respectively to do the three things specified. But they utterly denied that the foresaid Persons were Bishops as distinct from Presbyters, or exercised the Government in that sense. Obj. 3.

1. To the Instance of the Apostles they answered, that they had an extraordinary calling, and so nothing thence can be inferred to prove modern Bishops.

[f] 2 Tim. 4. 5.

2. That Timothy and Titus, were Evangelists, and the [f] first is expressly so termed, nor could they be Bishops, who resided not in one Diocess, but often removed from place to place.

3. That the denomination of the Angels of the Churches, being Allegorical no firme Argument can be taken thence, nor weight laid thereon. Besides, those Epistles of S. John, though directed to One, were intended to the whole body of the Church.

They

Anno Regin. Elizæ. 24. Anno Dom. 1648.

They denyed that the Apoſtles were to have any ſucceſſours in their Office, affirming but two ſtanding Officers, in the Church; Preſbyterians, Deacons. They cited Philippians 1. 1. 1 Tim. 3. 8. for the proof thereof; where there is no mention of Biſhops as diſtinct from Preſbyters, but of the two Orders only, of Biſhops or Preſbyters, and Deacons.

6. As for the ſucceeding ages to the Apoſtles, ſeeing Scripture reacheth not unto them, they can but beget a humane Faith, which is uncertain and fallible; Beſides, ſuch the darkneſs of thoſe Times, in reſpect of Church-Hiſtory that little certainty can be thence extracted; Yet it appeareth in Clement himſelf, that he uſeth the ſame word for Biſhop and Preſbyter; and as for Ignatius his Epiſtles, little credit is to be given unto them.

7. Laſtly, there is a great difference between Primitive Epiſcopacy and the Preſent Hierarchie, as much enlarged in their Power, and Priviledges by many Temporal acceſſions, whereof no ſhaddow or pretence in Scripture. In concluſion, they humbly beſought his Majeſty, to look rather to the Original of Biſhops, in holy Writ, then to their ſucceſſion in Humane Hiſtory.

8. As to the point of Subſtantials in Church Government, appointed by Chriſt, (wherein his Majeſty deſired ſatisfaction) the return was ſhort and generall, that ſuch Subſtantials were in the Scripture, not deſcending to any particulars. Whether out of policy, foreſeeing it would Miniſter matter of more debate, or obedience to the Parliament, as aliene from the work they were deſigned for, who were only to oppoſe Epiſcopacy, as qualified in the Bill preſented to his Majeſty.

Octo. 6. 9. Three days after, the King gave in his anſwer, to this firſt paper of the Divines. Wherein he acknowledged, that the word Epiſcopus, (denoting an Overſeer in the generall ſenſe,) agreeth as well to Preſbyters, as Miniſters, in which reſpect they are ſometimes in Scripture confounded, both meeting in the joynt-function of overſeeing Gods Flock. But ſoon after Common uſage, (the beſt Maſter of words) appropriated Epiſcopus to the Eccleſiaſtical Governor, leaving Preſbyter to ſignifie the Ordinary Miniſter, or Prieſt, as in the antient Fathers, and Councils doth plainly appear.

The Kings rejoynder to the Parliament Divines.

10. As to the Extraordinarie Calling of the Apoſtles, he confeſſed their Unction extraordinary, conſiſting in their miraculous gifts, which ſoon after ceaſed when Churches were planted, but he urged their miſſion to govern and teach; to be ordinary, neceſſary, and perpetual in the Church, the Biſhops ſucceeding them in the former, the Preſbyters in later Function.

11. Their Evaſion that Timothy and Titus were Evangeliſts, and not Biſhops, is clearly refuted by Scultetus, Gerard, and others, yea (as his Majeſty is informed) is rejected, by ſome rigid Preſbyters, as Gilleſpee, Rotherford &c. Beſides, that Timothy and Titus were Biſhops, is confirmed by the conſentient Teſtimony of Antiquity, (S. Hierome himſelf recording them made by S. Pauls Ordination) as alſo by a Catalogue of twenty ſeven Biſhops of Epheſus, lineally ſucceeding from Timothy, as is avouched by D. Reinolds againſt Hart.

12. If the Angels mentioned in the Revelations, were not ſingular perſons, who had a Prelacy over the Church, whether were they the whole Church, or ſo many individual Paſtors therein, or the whole Colledge of Preſbyters, or ſingular Preſidents of thoſe Colledges; for into ſo many opinions theſe few are divided amongſt themſelves, who herein divide themſelves from the ancient Interpretation of the Church Government.

13. Concerning Ages ſucceeding the Apoſtles, his Majeſty confeſſeth it but a humane Faith, which is begotten on humane Teſtimonies, yet ſo that in matter of Fact, it may be infallible, as by the Credit of Hiſtory we infallibly know that Ariſtotle was a Greek Philoſopher.

14. The objected obſcurity of Church-Hiſtory, in primitive Times, is a ſtrong Argument for Epiſcopacy, which notwithſtanding the darkneſs of those times, is so clearly extant by their unquestionable Catalogues. Anno Dom. 1648. Anno Regni Caroli 24.

thoſe

15. It is plain out of Clement, elsewhere, even by the Confession of * one (not suspected to favour the Hierarchie) that he was accounted a Bishop as distinct from a Presbyter. As for Ignatius his Epistles, though some out of partial disaffection to Bishops, have indeavoured to discredit the whole Volume of them without regard of Ingenuity or Truth; yet sundry of them attested by antiquity, cannot with any forehead be denied to be His, giving Testimony of the Prelacy of a Bishop above a Presbyter.

* Vedelius exc. 8. In. Ignat. cap. 3.

16. As for the difference between Primitive Episcopacy and present Hierarchie, his Majesty did not conceive that the Additions granted by the favour of his Royall Progenitors for the enlarging of the power and priviledges of Bishops, did make the Government substantially to differ from what it was, no more then Arms and Ornaments make a body really different from it self, when it was naked and devested of the same.

17. Whereas they besought his Majesty, to look rather to the Original, then succession of Bishops, he thought it needful to look at both, the latter being the best Clue in such intrinsick cases to finde out the former.

18. Lastly, he professed himself unsatisfied in their answer, concerning the perpetual and unalterable substantials of Church Government, as expecting from them a more particular resolution therein, then what he had received.

The return of the Parliament Divines to the King.

19. Eleven dayes after the Parliament Divines put in their answer to his Majesties last paper: Herein they affirmed, they saw not by what warrant this Writ of partition of the Apostles office was taken forth; that the Governing part should be in the hands of the Bishops; the Teaching and Sacramentizing in the Presbyters, Scripture making no such Inclosure or Partition-wall. Besides, the challenge of Episcopacy is grown to more then it pretended to in ancient times; some * Fathers acknowledging that Bishops differed from Presbyters, only in matter of Ordination.

Oct. 27.

* S. Chrysost. S. Hieron and of modern, Bp. Bilson.

20. The Abetters, say they, of this challenge, that they might resolve it at last into Scripture, ascend by the scale of succession going up the River to finde the head, which like the head of Nile cannot be found. Such who would carry it higher, endeavour to impe it into an Apostolical Office, and at last call it a Divine institution, not by force of any expres precept, but implicite practise of the Apostles.

21. They also returned that his Majesties definition of Episcopal Government, is extracted out of the Bishops of later date then Scripture-times.

21. Concerning the Ages succeeding the Apostles. However Episcopal Government was generally current, yet the superscription thereof was not judged Divine, by some of those which were themselves Bishops, or lived under that Government.

22. As they firmly believed, (as to matter of fact) that Chrysostome and Augustine were Bishops, as that Aristotle was a Philosopher, so they would rather call such a beleef (grounded upon humane Testimonies uncontroled) certain than infallible.

23. The darkness of the History of the Church in the times succeeding the Apostles, had an influence on the Catalogue-makers, who derived the Series of the succession of Bishops, taken much from tradition and Reports. And it is a great blemish of their Evidence, that the nearer they come to the Apostles times (wherein this should be most clear to establish the succession firme at the first) they are most doubtfull and contradictory one to the other.

24. They granted that a succession of men to feed and govern those Churches which by Ecclesiastical Writers, in compliance with the language of their own times, were called Bishops, but not distinct from Presbyters. So that if

Anno Regis Caroli 14. Anno Dom. 1648.

if such a succession from the Primitive times, Seriatim were proved, they would either be found more then Bishops, as Apostles and extraordinary persons; or less, as meerly first Presbyters, not having the three Essentials to Episcopal Government insisted on by his Majesty.

25. As for Ignatius, he cannot distinctly be known in Ignatius his Epistles, such their Insincerity, adulterate mixture, and Interpolations, and take him in gross, he is the Patron of such Rites, as the Church in that Age never owned.

26. They professed, that in their last Answer, they related not to a School-Nicety, Utrum Episcopatus sit Ordo vel Gradus, the question being stated by Popish Authors, to whom they had no Eye or Reference.

27. They humbly moved His Majesty, that the Regiments of Humane Testimonies on both sides might be discharged the field, and the point of dispute tried alone by dint of holy Scripture.

28. They honoured the pious intentions, and Magnificence, of his royal Progenitors, acknowledging the Ornamental Accessions to the Persons made no Substantiall change in the Office; but still is remained to be proved that Primitive Episcopacy, and Present Hierarchie are the same.

29. They affirmed also that the power of Episcopacy under Christian and Pagan Princes, is one, and the same, though the exercise be not; but acknowledging the subordination thereof, to the soveraign power with their accountableness to the Laws of the Land.

30. They conclude with thanks to his Majesties condescension in vouchsafing them the Liberty and Honour in examining his learned reply, praying God that a Pen in the hand of such Abilities, might ever be employ'd in a subject worthy thereof.

31. Some dayes after, his Majesty returned his last paper, wherein he not only acknowledgeth the great pains of these Divines to informe his judgement, according to their perswasions, but also took especiall notice of their Civilities of the Application, both in the beginning and body of their Reply.

32. However he told them they mistook his meaning when they—— of a Writ of Partition, as if his Majesty had cantoned out the Episcopal Government, one part to the Bishops, another to the Presbyterians alone, whereas his meaning was that the Office of teaching is common to both alike, but the other of Governing peculiar to Bishops alone.

33. I know not what Truth there was in (and by consequence what Truth is to be given to) their intelligence, who have reported and printed that in Order of a pacification his Majesty condescended. Tanta fides, quantus Author.

1. That the Office of Ordination for the space of three years, should not be exercised by the Bishops without the assent of the Presbyterie, and if this did not please;
2. That it should be suspended until twenty of his own Nomination, consulting with the Synod, (assembled by the appointment of the Houses) should determine some certainty, touching some Ecclesiastical Government.
3. That in the mean time, the Presbyterie should be setled for experiment-sake.
4. That though he would not suffer Bishops Lands to be sold, and alienated from the Church, yet he permitted them to be Let out for ninety nine years, paying a small price yearly in Testimony of their Hereditary Rights for the maintenance of Bishops.
5. That after that time expired, they should return to the Crown, to be employed for the use of the Church.

Here

Here some presumed to know his Majesties intention, that he determined with himself, in the interim to redeem them, by their own Revenues, and to refund them to Ecclesiastical uses, which is proportionable to his * large heart, in matters of that nature. Anno Dom. 1648. Anno Regis Caroli 24.

* For he gave the Duke of Richmond, the entire revenues of the Arch-bishoprick of Glascough in Scotland, to hold them until he should furnish him with lands of the same value, expressing then his resolution to restore them to the Church.

34. * Many now did hope for a happy Agreement betwixt the King and Parliament, when Divine Providence, (whose wayes are often above Reason, but never against Right) had otherwise ordered it; and seeing it was Gods will, it shall be ours to submit thereunto. Oh what can * a day bring forth! especially some pregnant day in the Crisis of Matters, producing more than what many barren years before beheld. The Kings person is seized on, and brought up to London, arraign'd before a select Committee for that purpose, indicted, and upon his refusal to own their Authority, finally condemned. But these things belong to the Historian of the state, and this subject in it self is not so amiable and tempting, as to invite us to trespas in the property of others, in Courting the prosecution thereof.

* The King fetch'd from the Isle of Wight and condemned at London.

35. * My Cue of entrance is to come in, where the State-writer doth go out, whose Pen hath alwayes followed the Confessors, into the Chambers of dying people; and now must do its last Devoire to my gracious Master, in describing his pious death, and Solemn Burial.

* Prov. 27. 1.

36. * Having received in himself the sentence of death, D^r Juxon, Bishop of London, preached privately before Him, at S. James on the Sunday following; his text Romans 2. 16. In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my Gospel. Jan. 28. Sund.

* Extremum hunc concede mihi.

* He heareth the last sermon.

37. Next Tuesday being the day of His dissolution, in the morning alone He received the Communion, from the hands of the said Bishop. At which time he read for the second lesson, the 27^th Chapter of S. Matthew, containing the history of the death and passion of our Saviour. Communion ended, the King heartily thanked the Bishop for selecting so seasonable, and comfortable a portion of Scripture, seeing all humane hope and happiness is founded on the sufferings of our Saviour. The Bishop modestly disavowed any thanks due to himself, it being done merely by the direction of the Church of England, whose Rubrick appointeth that Chapter the second morning-lesson for the thirtieth of January. Jan. 30. Tues.

And receives the Communion.

Is patient when affronted.

38. His houre drawing nigh, He passed thorough the Parke to White-Hall. As He alwayes was observed to walk very fast, so now He abated not any whit of His wonted pace. In His passage a sorry fellow, (seemingly some mean Citizen,) went abrest along with Him; and in an affront, often stared His Majesty in the face, which caused Him to turn it another way. The Bishop of London (though not easily angred) was much offended hereat, as done out of despiteful designe, to discompose Him before His death, and moved the Captain of the guard, he might be taken away, which was done accordingly.

His last question.

39. Entring on the floore of death, He asked of Collonel Tomlingson who attended there, whether He might have the liberty to dispose of His own body, as to the place and manner of the burial thereof? The Collonel answered that he could give his Majesty no account at all therein.

And Speech falsely printed.

40. His Majesty held in his hand a small piece of paper, some four inches square, containing heads whereon in His speech He intended to dilate; and a tall souldier looking over the Kings shoulders read it, as the King held it in His hand. As for the speech which passeth in print for the Kings, though taken in short-hand, by one eminent therein, it is done so defectively, it deserveth not to be accounted His speech, by the testimony of such as heard it. His speech ended, He gave that small paper to the B^p of London.

Trouble well prevented.

41. After His death, the officers demanded the paper of the Bishop; who, because of the depth of his pocket, smallness of that paper, and the mixture of others therewith, could not ſo ſoon produce it as was required. At laſt he brought it forth, but therewith the others were unſatisfied (jealouſie is quick of grouth) as not the ſame which His Majeſty delivered unto him. When preſently the ſouldier, whoſe rudeneſs (the bad cauſe of a good effect) had formerly over-inſpected it in the Kings hand, atteſted this the very ſame paper, and prevented farther ſuſpicions, which might have terminated to the Biſhops trouble.

Anno Regis Carol. 24. Anno Dom. 1648.

Feb. 7. wednesday. 42. On the Wedneſday ſennight after, His Corpſe embalmed, and coffined in lead, was delivered to the care of two of His ſervants, to be buried at Windſor. The one Anthony Mildmay, who formerly had been His Sewer, as I take it: the other John Joyner, bred firſt in His Majeſties Kitchin, afterwards a Parliament-Captain, ſince by them deputed (when the Scots ſurrendred His perſon) Cook to His Majeſty. This night they brought the Corpſe to Windſor, and digged a grave for it in S. George his Chappel, on the South ſide of the Communion-Table.

His Corpſe carried to Windſor.

8. Thurſday. 43. But next day the Duke of Richmond, the Marqueſs of Hertford, the Earles of South-Hampton, and Lindſey (others, though ſent to, declining the ſervice, ſo far was their feare above their gratitude to their dead Maſter) came to Windſor and brought with them two Votes, paſſed that morning in Parliament; Wherein the ordering of the Kings buriall, for the form and manner thereof, was wholy committed to the Duke of Richmond, provided, that the expence thereof exceeded not five hundred pounds. Coming into the Caſtle, they ſhewed their Commiſſion to the Governor Colonel Wichcot, deſiring to interr the Corpſe, according to the Common-Prayer-Book of the Church of England. The rather, becauſe the Parliaments total remitting the manner of the Buriall to the Dukes diſcretion, implied a permiſſion thereof. This the governor refuſed, alledging, it was improbable that the Parliament would permit the uſe of what ſo ſolemnly they had aboliſhed, and therein deſtroy their own Act.

The Lords follow after it.

44. The Lords returned, that there was a difference betwixt deſtroying their own act, and diſpenſing with it, or ſuſpending the exerciſe thereof. That no power ſo bindeth up its own hands, as to diſable it ſelf in ſome caſes, to recede from the rigour of their own acts, if they ſhould ſee juſt occaſion. All would not prevaile, the Governour perſiſting in the negative, and the Lords betook themſelves to their ſad employment.

The Governors reſolution.

45. They reſolved not to interre the Corpſe in the grave which was provided for it, but in a Vault, if the Chappel afforded any. Then fall they a ſearching, and in vain ſeek for one in King Henry the eighth His Chappel (where the tombe, intended for Him by Cardinal Wolſey, lately ſtood) becauſe all there was ſolid earth. Beſides, this place at the preſent, uſed for a Magazine, was unſuiting with a ſolemn ſepulture. Then with their feet they tried the Quire, to ſee if a ſound would confeſs any hollowneſs therein, and at laſt (directed by one of the aged poore Knights) did light on a Vault in the middle thereof.

The Lords with much ſearching finde a vault.

46. It was altogether darke (as made in the middeſt of the Quire) and an ordinary man could not ſtand therein without ſtooping, as not paſt five foot high. In the midſt thereof lay a large leaden coffin (with the feet towards the Eaſt) and a far leſs on the left ſide thereof. On the other ſide was room, neither to ſpare nor to want, for any other coffin of a moderate proportion.

The deſcription thereof.

47. That one of the Order was buried there, plainly appeared by perfect pieces of purple-velvet, (their proper habit) remaining therein. Though ſome pieces of the ſame velvet were fox-tawnie, and ſome cole-black (all eye of purple being put out therein,) though all originally of the ſame cloath, varying the colour, as it met with more, or leſs moiſture, as it lay in the ground.

One of the Order buried therein.

Presumed to be K. Henry the eight.

48. Now a concurrence of presumptions concluded this great Coffin to contain the Corpse of King Henry the eighth, though there was neither Armes, nor any inscription to evidence the same.

See it in the end of K. Henry His Reign.

1. The place exactly corresponds to the designation of His burial, mentioned in His last Will and Testament.
2. The small Coffin, in all probability was His Queens, Jane Seymour (by whom in His Will He desired to be buried) and the room on the other side seems reserved, for His surviving Wife, Queen Katherine Parr.
3. It was never remembred, nor recorded, that any Subject of that Order, was interred in the body of that Quire, but in by-Chappels.
4. An herse stood over this vault, in the dayes of Queen Elizabeth, which (becaufe cumbering the passage) was removed in the reign of King James.

I know a tradition is whispered from mouth to mouth, that King Henry's body was taken up, and burned in the reign of Queen Mary, and could name the Knight (Her Privie-Councellor, and then dwelling not far off) that ordered to be employed in this inhumane action. This prevailed so far on the Lord Herberts belief, that he closeth his History of King Henry the eighth with these suspicious words. To conclude, I wish I could learn His present grave. But there is no certainty hereof, and more probable that he quietly was reposed. The lead-coffin, being very thin was at this time casually broken, and some yellow dust, altogether sentless, like powder of gold, taken out of it (conceived some efficacious gumms wherewith He was embalmed) which the Duke caused to be put in again, and the Coffin closed up.

The leaden inscription on His Coffin.

49. The Vault thus prepared, a scarfe of lead was provided of some two foot long, and five inches broad, therein to make an inscription. The Letters the Duke himself did delineate, and then a workman called them out with a Chesil. It bare some debate, whether the letters should be made in those concavities to be cast out, or in the solid lead between. The latter was concluded on, because such vacuities are subject to be filled up with dust, and render the inscription less legible, which was

KING CHARLES 1648.

The Plummer souldred it to the Coffin, about the brest of the Corpse within the same.

The Corpse deposited.

50. All things thus in readiness, the Corpse was brought [illegible] being borne by the souldiers of the Garrison. Over it a [illegible] cloth, the foure labels whereof the foure Lords did support. [illegible] of London stood weeping by, to tender that his service [illegible] not be accepted. Then was It deposited in silence and [illegible] vacant place in the vault (the herse-cloth being cast [illegible] after it) [illegible] of the clock in the afternoone; and the Lords that night (though [illegible] turned to London.

FINIS.

